A social security beneficiary under age 70 with earnings in excess of certain thresholds is subject to a $1 reduction in benefits for every $2 earned over the exempt amount. The annual exempt amount under the earnings test is lower for beneficiaries under age 65 than for those 65-69. In 1988, the exempt amount for those under age 65 is $6,120, and the age 65-69 exempt amount is $8,400. The higher exempt amount is applicable in the year a beneficiary reaches age 65.

If a beneficiary dies, the annual exempt amount applicable at the time of death is prorated based on the number of months that he or she lived during the year. In addition, the lower exempt amount applies if a beneficiary dies before his or her birthdate in the year the beneficiary would have turned 65. Thus, overpayments can occur when beneficiaries die unexpectedly and the thresholds on earnings are lower than anticipated.

House Bill

The annual exempt amount would not be prorated in the year of death. In addition, the higher annual exempt amount for beneficiaries age 65-69 would apply to people who die before their birthdate in the year that they otherwise would have attained age 65.

The provision would be effective with respect to deaths after the date of enactment.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Report

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. Phase-out of reduction in "windfall" benefit

Present Law

Under the "windfall" benefit provision of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, social security benefits are generally reduced for workers who also have pensions from work that was not covered under social security (e.g., work under the Federal Civil Service Retirement System). Under the regular, weighted benefit formula, benefits are determined by applying a set of declining percentages to average indexed monthly earnings. For workers who reach age 62 in 1988, a worker's basic benefit is equal to 90 percent of the first $319 of average indexed monthly earnings, 32 percent of earnings from $319 through $1,922, and 15 percent of earnings above $1,922. The formula applicable to those with pensions from noncovered employment substitutes a rate of 40 percent for the 90-percent rate in the first bracket. (The second and third factors of the formula remain the same.) The resulting reduction in the worker's social security benefit is limited to one-half the amount of the noncovered pension. The new law is being phased in over a 5-year period, beginning with those persons first eligible for social security benefits in 1986.

Workers who have 30 years or more of substantial social security coverage are fully exempt from this treatment. For workers who have 26-29 years of coverage, the percentage in the first bracket in the formula increases by 10 percentage points for each year over 25, as illustrated below:

Years of social security coverage	First factor in formula (percent)
25 or fewer	40
29	80
30 or more	90

House Bill

The years of social security coverage required in order for an individual to be exempt from the windfall benefit formula would be lowered from 30 to 25 years. Similarly, the years of coverage at which the formula gradually takes effect would be scaled back, as illustrated below:

Years of social security coverage	First factor in formula (percent)
20 or fewer	40
23	70
24	80
25 or more	90

The provision would be effective for benefits payable for months after December 1988.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except that the reduction would be phased out in five percent increments between 20 and 30 years of coverage, as follows:

Years of social security coverage	First factor in formula (percent)
20 or fewer	40
23	55
24	60
25	65
26	70
28	80
30 or more	90

4. Denial of benefits to individuals deported or ordered deported on the basis of association with the Nazi government of Germany during World War II

Present Law

People who are deported for violating specified provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act lose their social security benefits. The list of provisions for which people are denied benefits does not, however, include paragraph 19 of that Act. Paragraph 19, which was added to the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1978, pertains to people deported for certain activities in association with the Nazi government of Germany during World War II.

House Bill

Benefits to individuals deported as Nazi war criminals under paragraph 19 of the Immigration and Nationality Act would be terminated.

The provision would apply only in the case of deportations occurring and final orders of deportation issued, on or after the date of enactment, and only with respect to benefits beginning on or after such date.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference Amendment

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

5. Modification in the term of office of public members of the Social Security Boards of Trustees

Present Law

The Boards of Trustees of the Social Security Trust Funds are composed of the Secretaries of the Treasury, Labor, Health and Human Services, and two members of the public. The members of the public are nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The law specifies that their term of service is for four years, but is otherwise silent on the length of term for a public member appointed to fill a vacancy before the end of his or her term. The law is likewise silent on whether a public member is permitted to serve after the expiration of his or her term until a successor has taken office.

House Bill

A public member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring before the end of a term would be appointed only for the remainder of such term. A public member, whether appointed for a full term or appointed to fill an unexpired term, would be permitted to serve after the expiration of that term until a successor had taken office.

The provision would be effective upon enactment.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is similar to the House bill, except that a trustee could serve beyond the expiration of his or her term only until the earlier of the issuance of the next report of the Boards of Trustees or the date on which a successor takes office.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

6. Continuation of disability benefits during appeal

Present Law

A disability insurance beneficiary who is determined to be no longer disabled may appeal the determination sequentially through three appellate levels within the Social Security Administration (SSA): a reconsideration, usually conducted by the State Disability Determination Service that rendered the initial unfavorable determination; a hearing before an SSA Administrative Law Judge (ALJ); and a review by a member of SSA's Appeals Council.

The beneficiary has the option of having his or her benefits continued through the hearing stage of appeal. If the earlier unfavorable determinations are upheld by the ALJ, the benefits are subject to recovery by the agency. (If an appeal is determined to be in good faith, benefit repayment may be considered for waiver.) Medicare eligibility is also continued, but medicare benefits are not subject to recovery.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 extended this provision for one year. The Act authorized the payment of interim benefits to persons in the process of appealing termination decisions made before January 1, 1989. Such payments may continue through June 30, 1989 (i.e., through the July 1989 check).

House Bill

The period in which disability benefits may be paid, and medicare eligibility continued, while an appeal is in progress would be extended for one additional year. Upon application by the beneficiary, benefits would be paid while an appeal is in progress with respect to unfavorable determinations made on or before December 31, 1989, and would be continued through June 1990 (i.e., through the July 1990 check).

The provision would be effective with respect to unfavorable decisions made on or before December 31, 1989.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

7. Extend social security exemption for members of certain religious faiths

Present Law

Self-employed workers may claim an exemption from social security coverage if they are members of a religious sect or division that is conscientiously opposed to the acceptance of public or private insurance benefits, if they have waived all benefits under Titles II and XVIII, and if the sect or division has been in existence since December 31, 1950, and provides for the care of its dependent members (e.g., the Amish). Employees who belong to such religious sects, however, are required to participate in social security.

House Bill

The provision would extend the current-law treatment of the self-employed to their employees in cases where both the employee and the employer are members of a qualifying religious sect or division. The optional exemption would apply to both the employer and employee portion of the tax.

The provision would apply to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1989.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

8. Blood donor locator service

Present Law

Government agencies may require individuals to furnish social security numbers (SSNs) only for certain specified purposes. States are authorized to require SSNs to administer tax, public assistance, drivers' license and motor vehicle registration laws.

House Bill

States or authorized blood donation facilities (those licensed or registered with the Food and Drug Administration, such as the Red Cross) would be permitted to require donors to furnish SSNs. The Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) would be required to establish and operate a Blood Donor Locator Service, under the direction of the Commissioner of Social Security, to be used to obtain and transmit the most recent mailing address of any blood donor whose blood shows that he or she may be carrying the virus for acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS), for the sole purpose of informing the blood donor of the possible need for medical care and treatment.

The provision would permit access to the address information only to State agencies and blood donation facilities meeting requirements for confidentiality and security.

The Secretary of HHS would be required to establish the Blood Donor Locator Service no later than 180 days after the date of enactment.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

9. Payment of lump-sum death benefits to legal representatives of widows and widowers who die before receiving payment

Present Law

A lump-sum death payment of $255 is payable on the death of an insured worker to a surviving spouse who is living with the worker at the time of the worker's death. If there is no such spouse, then the benefit is payable to a surviving spouse who is eligible for benefits as a widow(er), mother, or father at the time of the worker's death. If there is no eligible spouse, the lump-sum death payment is payable to a child of the deceased worker who was eligible to receive benefits on the deceased's earnings record at the time of the worker's death. If the widow(er) dies before making application for the lump-sum payment or before negotiating the benefit check, no lump-sum death benefit is payable.

House Bill

The provision would permit the legal representative of the estate of a deceased widow(er) to claim the lump-sum payment in cases in which the otherwise eligible widow(er) dies before having both received and negotiated such payment. Where the legal representative of the estate is a State or political subdivision of a State, the lump-sum benefit would not be payable.

The provision would be effective with respect to deaths of widow(er)s occurring on or after January 1, 1989.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House provision.

10. Requirement of social security number as a condition for receipt of social security benefits

Applicants for social security benefits are not required to have social security numbers (SSNs) in order to receive benefits. The absence of an SSN for auxiliary and survivor beneficiaries hampers monitoring which might detect duplicate benefit payments, unreported earnings, or entitlement to other benefits.

The SSA currently requests that applicants voluntarily provide their SSNs. Under Federal law, recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income, and Veterans' Assistance benefits are currently required to provide their SSNs in order to receive benefits under those programs.

House Bill

Individuals would be required to have an SSN in order to receive social security benefits. Those lacking an SSN would be required to apply for one. Beneficiaries currently on the rolls would not be subject to this requirement.

The provision would be effective with respect to benefit entitlements commencing after the sixth month following the month of enactment.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

11. Substitution of certificate of election for application to establish entitlement for certain reduced widow's and widower's benefits

Present Law

An individual who (1) is receiving a combination of a reduced spouse's benefit and either retirement or disability benefits on his or her own record and (2) is between the ages of 62 and 65 when his or her spouse dies, must file an application to receive reduced widow(er)'s benefits.

Those who are over age 65 when the worker dies and who are receiving spouses' benefits or those age 62-65 when the worker dies who are not entitled to their own retirement or disability benefits may receive reduced widow(er)s' benefits by filing a certificate of election rather than an application.

An application for a reduced widow(er)'s benefit is generally not effective for months before the month of filing. Thus, a break in entitlement could occur if the application were not filed in a timely fashion.

House Bill

An individual who is receiving both a reduced spouse's benefit and a retirement or disability benefit and who is between the ages of 62 and 65 when his or her spouse dies, could receive a reduced widow(er)'s benefit by filing a certificate of election. A certificate of election would be effective for up to 12 months before it is filed.

The provision would be effective with respect to benefits payable based on the record of individuals who die after the month of enactment.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

12. Calculation of windfall benefit guarantee amount based on pension amounts payable in the first month of concurrent entitlement rather than concurrent eligibility

Present Law

Under the windfall benefit provision, a special formula is used to compute the social security benefits of workers who are also eligible for pensions based on noncovered employment. The "windfall guarantee" assures that the resulting reduction in the social security benefit will not exceed one-half of the amount of the noncovered pension. The amount of the noncovered pension used in this calculation is the amount payable in the first month the individual is eligible for both the pension and social security (i.e., the first month he or she could receive both of these benefits if he or she applied for them—the month of "concurrent eligibility"). This amount is used regardless of whether the individual actually receives (i.e., is entitled to) the benefits at that time.

To compute an individual's benefits, the Social Security Administration must ask the individual's pension administrator to determine the pension amount that would have been payable at the date of first concurrent eligibility for both the pension and social security (usually age 62) regardless of the pension amount which the person will actually receive upon entitlement. Processing delays and errors can occur when pension administrators make this fictitious computation of the pension amount.

House Bill

The amount of the pension considered when determining the windfall guarantee would be the amount payable in the first month of concurrent entitlement to both social security and the pension from noncovered employment.

The provision would be effective for benefits based on applications filed after the month in which this Act is enacted.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

13. Consolidation of reports on continuing disability reviews

Present Law

The Secretary of Health and Human Services is required to make two types of reports on continuing disability reviews to the Senate Committee on Finance and House Committee on Ways and Means. The first is a semiannual report on the results of continuing disability reviews. The second is an annual report on the appropriate number of disability cases to be reviewed in each State.

House Bill

The frequency of the report on the results of continuing disability reviews would be changed from semiannual to annual.

The provision would be effective with respect to reports required to be submitted after the date of enactment.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment. The conferees intend this change to allow the two reports on continuing disability reviews to be consolidated into one annual report to the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means. The conferees also intend that this report remain separate from the Social Security Administration's Annual Report to the Congress.

14. Exclusion of employees separated from employment before January 1, 1989, from rule including as wages taxable under FICA certain payments for group-term life insurance

Present Law

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 required the cost of employer-provided group-term life insurance to be included in wages for FICA tax purposes if it is includible for income tax purposes. Under current law, it is includible for income tax purposes to the extent that coverage exceeds $50,000.

House Bill

Group-term life insurance provided to individuals who separated from service before January 1, 1989 would be excluded from FICA tax.

The provision would be effective with respect to separations from service before January 1, 1989.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

15. Treatment of earnings of corporate directors

Present Law

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (OBRA) of 1987 provides that corporate directors' earnings shall be treated as received when earned, regardless of when actually paid, for purposes of both the social security tax and the social security retirement test. Prior to OBRA, because corporate directors' earnings were treated as self-employment income, directors were able to defer the impact of FICA taxation and avoid benefit reductions from the retirement test by deferring receipt of earnings until reaching age 70.

House Bill

The portion of the 1987 OBRA provision that treats directors' earnings as received when earned, and thus taxable for social security purposes, would be repealed. Directors' earnings would be treated as received when earned only for purposes of the social security retirement test.

The provision would be effective as if it had been included in OBRA of 1987 at the time of its enactment.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House provision.

16. Clarification of applicability of government pension offset to certain Federal employees

Present Law

Social security benefits payable to spouses of retired, disabled, or deceased workers are reduced to take account of any public pension the spouse receives as a result of work in a government job not covered by social security. The amount of the reduction is equal to two-thirds of the government pension.

Generally, Federal workers hired before 1984 are part of the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) and are not covered by social security. Most Federal workers hired after 1983 are covered by the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986 (FERS), which includes coverage by social security. The FERS law provided that workers covered by the CSRS could, from July 1, 1987 through December 31, 1987, make a one-time election to join FERS. Because the law generally provides that the offset does not apply to workers whose government job is covered by social security on the last day of the person's employment, a CSRS employee who switched to FERS during this period immediately became exempt from the government pension offset. This exemption, however, was only available if the election to change to FERS actually took effect prior to the date of the individual's retirement. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (OBRA) of 1987 provided that employees who elect to join FERS during any election period which may occur after 1987 would be exempt only if they have five or more years of Federal service covered by social security after June 30, 1987.

House Bill

The House bill would provide that any employee who elected FERS on or before December 31, 1987 would be exempt from the government pension offset even if that person retired from government service before their FERS coverage became effective.

In addition, the provision would make it clear that the 1987 OBRA provision applies not only to Federal employees who join FERS by electing to become subject to chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, but also to foreign service employees who join FERS by electing to become subject to chapter 22 of title 1, United States Code.

The provision would be effective as if it had been included in OBRA of 1987 at the time of its enactment.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

17. Clarification regarding social security coverage for certain civil servants

Present Law

(1) The Social Security Amendments of 1983 provided mandatory social security coverage for presidential appointees as well as the President, Members of Congress, Federal judges, and certain executive level civil servants. However, section 205(p) of the Social Security Act provides that the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) shall accept the determination of the head of a Federal agency as to whether a Federal employee has performed service, as to the periods of such service, and as to the amount of remuneration which constitutes wages. The Office of Personnel Management (OPM) has interpreted this section to mean that a Federal agency may determine whether or not an employee's service constitutes social security covered employment. Because the civil service statute permits career Senior Executive Service (SES) employees to retain their pay, rank, and retirement plan when they move to a presidential appointment, OPM has interpreted section 205(p) to mean that such individuals may avoid social security coverage despite the coverage provisions of the 1983 Social Security Amendments (while retaining coverage under the old Civil Service Retirement System).

(2) When an individual accepts a mandatorily covered Federal job and subsequently returns to his or her previous job or another noncovered Federal job, he or she loses social security coverage.

House Bill

(1) The House bill would clarify that the Secretaries of HHS and Treasury, not the head of any other Federal agency, have the authority to make the final determination as to whether an individual's services constitute social security covered employment, including those of presidential appointees.

(2) In addition, the House bill would clarify that any civil servant who becomes covered by social security as a result of taking a mandatorily covered Federal job would retain social security coverage in any subsequent Federal job.

The first provision would be effective with respect to determinations relating to service commenced in any position on or after the date of enactment; the second provision would be effective with respect to service performed on or after the date of enactment in a position mandatorily covered by social security.

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

18. Technical corrections in OASDI provisions

Present Law

There are miscellaneous minor and technical errors in the current OASDI provisions.

House Bill

The House bill makes minor and technical revisions in OASDI provisions.

The provisions generally would be effective upon enactment, except for certain provisions that would be effective as if included in the relevant public law at the time of its enactment.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment includes similar minor and technical revisions.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment with technical changes.

19. National Academy of Social Insurance

Present Law

No provision.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment provides a Federal charter for the National Academy of Social Insurance (a tax-exempt corporation, organized and incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia), with the objects and purposes of: (1) promoting an informed and nonpartisan study of, and education with respect to, social insurance; (2) bringing together experts with diverse backgrounds to consider social insurance in a interdisciplinary way; (3) assisting in the development of social insurance scholars and administrators; (4) encouraging research and studies on topics of relevance to social insurance; and (5) sponsoring seminars and other public meetings.

The National Academy of Social Insurance is to report on its activities to Congress annually.

The provision would be effective upon enactment.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate provision.

20. Exemption from FICA tax for certain agricultural workers

Present Law

Cash wages paid by an employer to an employee for agricultural labor in any calendar year are subject to FICA tax if (1) the employee received cash remuneration of at least $150, or (2) the employer pays more than $2,500 to all employees for such agricultural labor during the taxable year.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Under the Senate amendment, wages paid to an employee who receives less than $150 in annual cash remuneration by an agricultural employer would not be subject to FICA tax even if the employer pays more than $2,500 in the year to all employees, provided the employee: (1) is employed in agriculture; (2) is a hand harvest laborer; (3) is paid on a piece-rate basis; (4) is paid piece-rates in an operation which has been, and is customarily and generally recognized as having been paid on a piece-rate basis in the region of employment; (5) commutes daily from his or her permanent residence to the farm on which he or she is so employed; and (6) has been employed in agriculture less than 13 weeks during the preceding calendar year. These criteria are the same as those specified in section 13(a)(6)(C) of the Fair Labor Standards Act. The remuneration paid to employees exempt under this provision would nevertheless count toward the $2,500 test for purposes of determining the coverage of employees who do not meet the conditions for exemption under this provision.

The provision would be effective as if included in the amendments made by section 9002 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (i.e., for remuneration for agricultural labor paid after December 31, 1987.)

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with technical modifications.

21. Certain employer pension contributions not included in FICA wage base

Present Law

The 1983 Social Security Amendments provided that the payment by a State or local employer of employee contributions under a State or local retirement plan would be treated as wages subject to employment taxes (FICA and FUTA). The Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 modified this provision to allow the exclusion from wages for employment tax purposes of any amounts paid by a State or local employer of employee contributions pursuant to a State "pick-up" plan unless the pickups were made pursuant to a salary reduction agreement. On the basis of the 1984 Act, some States established pick-up plans after obtaining letter rulings from the Internal Revenue Service to the effect that the pickups would not be considered wages for employment purposes. A subsequent review of the issue, in the light of statement of managers language in the conference report on the 1984 Act, led the Internal Revenue Service to reverse its position and to revoke the earlier letter rulings. In revoking the earlier letter rulings, the IRS indicated that the States affected could apply for relief from liability for employment taxes on the pickups with respect to the retroactive period prior to the revocation of the letter ruling.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment would relieve State or local governments from FICA tax liability for employer "pickups" subsequent to the effective date of the 1984 Act to the extent that the State did not pay the FICA taxes in good faith reliance on a letter ruling of the Internal Revenue Service.

The relief would apply only to pickups for which FICA taxes were not paid and only for the period ending with the earlier of the date of enactment of this provision or the receipt by the State or local government from the IRS of a notice of revocation of the letter ruling.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with technical modifications.

22. Required use of consumer price index for urban consumers by Federal officers or agencies in determining certain cost-of-living increases

Present Law

In determining cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs) in amounts of benefits or allowances in several Federal programs (including Social Security, supplemental security income (SSI), and railroad retirement), the administering agency uses the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, i.e., CPI-W. With respect to Social Security, SSI, and railroad retirement, COLAs are based on the percentage change in the CPI-W, measured from the average of the third quarter of one year to the average of the third quarter of the succeeding year.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Any Federal officer or agency that administers a Federal program that provides benefits or allowances which are adjusted periodically in consonance with the consumer price index would be required to use the Consumer Price Index for Urban Consumers, i.e., CPI-U.

The provision would not apply to a COLA formula which has been negotiated between any private or public (i.e., State or local government) employer and any labor union or employee association, nor to present or future actions relating to rights, benefits, or obligations between individuals, businesses, and State and local governments.

The provision would apply to any Federal cost-of-living adjustment payable in any month beginning on or after December 1, 1989.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate provision.

23. Report regarding disability applications involving AIDS related complex (ARC)

Present Law

No provision.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Department of Health and Human Services would be required to report to the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Finance concerning applications for social security disability benefits by persons with AIDS related complex (ARC).

The report would indicate the number of applications approved, denied (by reason for denial), and reversed on appeal for fiscal years 1988, 1987, and, to the extent feasible, 1986. Denial and allowance rates would be provided on a State and regional basis to the extent feasible. The report would also describe the criteria, guidelines and other information used to determine the eligibility of applicants suffering from ARC (including copies of relevant SSA documents), as well as information on any modifications in these criteria and guidelines which are under consideration. The cost of benefits for such persons during the years in question and projected costs for the coming three years would also be reported. Finally, a report would be required on what arrangement, if any, exists for coordination between the Social Security Administration and State disability insurance programs to make individuals with ARC aware of the benefits which may be available to them under Federal and State programs.

The provision would be effective upon enactment and the required report due no later than six months thereafter.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. Public Assistance Provisions

1. Moratorium on emergency assistance and AFDC special needs regulations

Present Law

States may operate an emergency assistance program for needy families with children (whether or not eligible for AFDC), if the aid is needed to avoid the child's destitution or to provide living arrangements in a home for the child. The law authorizes 50-percent Federal matching funds for emergency assistance "furnished for a period not in excess of 30 days in any 12-month period." Current regulations state that Federal matching funds are available for emergency assistance "which the State authorizes during one period of 30 consecutive days in any 12 consecutive months, including payments which are to meet needs which arose before such 30-day period or are for such needs as rent which extend beyond the 30-day period."

Current AFDC regulations also allow States to include in their standards of need provision for meeting "special needs" of applicants and recipients. The State plan must specify the circumstances under which such payments will be made.

On December 14, 1987, the Department of Health and Human Services published in the Federal Register a proposed regulation that would have restricted use to AFDC emergency assistance funds for homeless families and limited States' authority to make payments for special needs to AFDC recipients. The proposed rules would have prohibited emergency assistance to cover needs over a period in excess of 30 days per year (permitting aid only "to meet the actual expense of needs in existence" during the 30-day period). The proposed rules also would have forbidden the States to include in their standard of need, as a special or basic need, an amount for shelter varied according to the type of housing (for example, house vs. hotel).

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203) established a moratorium under which the Secretary of Health and Human Services was directed not to implement the proposed regulations or otherwise modify current policy regarding the subject of those regulations before October 1, 1988.

House Bill

No provision in H.R. 4333. (A separate House-passed bill—H.R. 4352—has a provision identical to the Senate amendment.)

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment extends the moratorium on changing current policy regarding emergency assistance and special needs for homeless families to October 1, 1989.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

2. Disregard of certain housing assistance for SSI recipients

Present Law

Under the SSI program, assistance is provided to needy, aged, blind, and disabled persons to bring their income up to certain amounts set in Federal and State law. In determining eligibility and benefit amount, all income of an individual is taken into account unless it is specifically excluded by law.

For SSI purposes, housing aid provided under the United States Housing Act of 1937 is excluded from consideration as income or resources. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-242) transferred the authorization of housing assistance for the nonelderly disabled from the United States Housing Act of 1937 to the Housing Act of 1959, effective for projects developed and contracts made with funds appropriated after enactment. P.L. 100-242 did not, however, specifically exclude the consideration of this assistance as income or resources to SSI applicants or recipients under the newly-amended Housing Act of 1959.

House Bill

The House bill amends section 1612(b) of the Social Security Act to exclude from consideration as income or resources of SSI applicants or recipients assistance provided for housing under the United States Housing Act of 1937, the National Housing Act, section 101 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965, Title V of the Housing Act of 1949, and section 202(h) of the Housing Act of 1959.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

3. Moratorium on AFDC quality control sanctions

Present Law

Current law prescribes fiscal sanctions (withholding of some program matching funds) for State AFDC payment error rates that exceed tolerances. The law sets the tolerance level at 3 percent for the 50 States and the District of Columbia; regulations set the level at 4 percent for Guam, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico. Fiscal sanctions have been assessed for past erroneous excess payments, but not collected. The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (P.L. 99-272) prohibits the Department of Health and Human Services, until July 1, 1988, from reducing AFDC payments to States for excess errors identified by the AFDC quality control system. COBRA also required that two studies be undertaken (by the National Academy of Sciences and the Secretary of Health and Human Services) to examine how best to operate the quality control system so as to improve program administration and provide reasonable data on which to base sanctions. Both studies were completed in early 1988.

House Bill

The House bill extends the moratorium on collection of quality control disallowances for 1 year, until July 1, 1989, and requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to submit recommendations for improving the quality control system by February 15, 1989.

The House bill provides that during the moratorium:

(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the States shall continue to operate the AFDC quality control systems and to calculate error rates (maintaining the waiver request and review processes).

(2) The Departmental Grant Appeals Board shall continue to review disallowances (for fiscal year 1981 and thereafter) and to hear appeals, but collection of disallowances owed as a result of Board decisions "shall not occur."

The provision is effective on July 1, 1988.

Senate Amendment

No provision in H.R. 4333. (However, a similar extension of the moratorium to July 1, 1989, is included in H.R. 1720, the Family Support Act of 1988, P.L. 100-485.)

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., does not include the provision, as it is included in P.L. 100-485).

4. AFDC foster care independent living initiatives

Present Law

The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (P.L. 99-272) authorized funds on an entitlement basis for State independent living programs, for fiscal years 1987 and 1988, to help AFDC foster care children aged at least 16 make the transition to independence.

Eligible are children receiving assistance under the Title IV-E foster care program, which provides Federal aid for foster care maintenance payments. Title IV-E assistance is limited to those foster care children who would have been eligible for AFDC before they were removed from their home and placed in foster care.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services is required to submit a report on the program to Congress by July 1, 1988. States are required to submit reports on their programs to the Secretary not later than March 1988. The law provided $45 million in entitlement funds for the program in each of the two fiscal years (1987 and 1988), but States did not begin receiving funds until July 1987.

House Bill

The House bill extends authority for State independent living initiatives for foster care children for 1 year, through fiscal year 1989, with funding of $45 million.

The House bill also makes the following changes:

(1) Permits States to spend fiscal year 1987 carry-over funds in fiscal year 1989.

(2) Permits States to use program funds for services for two additional groups of children: any or all children in foster care who are at least age 16 (including those not receiving maintenance payments under Title IV-E) and, for up to 6 months after foster care payments or foster care ends, for children previously in foster care and whose care or payments ended on or after they attained age 16.

(3) Prohibits use of program funds for provision of room and board.

(4) Modifies the definition of case review under Title IV-E to clarify that the 18-month dispositional hearing must include a determination of the services needed to assist a child who has reached 16 make the transition from foster care to independent living.

(5) Requires each State to submit a report on the program by January 1, 1989 to the Secretary of HHS. Requires the Secretary to report to Congress on the program by March 1, 1989.

The authority for States to include non-AFDC foster care children in the independent living program and the prohibition on use of funds for room and board are effective on enactment. The remaining provisions are effective on October 1, 1988.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill, with the proviso that the funds have been appropriated. (Appropriations have been enacted for fiscal year 1989.)

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, modified to require States to submit a report to the Secretary by February 1, 1989 rather than January 1, 1989.

C. Provision Regarding Report of National Commission on Children: Delay in Commission's Reporting Date

Present Law

The National Commission on Children, authorized under the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203), is required to study and issue a final report by March 30, 1989 (and an interim report on September 30, 1988) with recommendations regarding health of children, social and support services for children and their parents, education, income security, and tax policy. The Commission is composed of 36 members, with 12 members each appointed by the President, the President pro tempore of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House. No fiscal year 1988 funds were appropriated for the Commission.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Because of the delay in funding for the Commission, the Senate amendment postpones the reporting dates for 1 year. Thus, the interim report would be due September 30, 1989, and the final report would be due March 31, 1990.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, modified to require an interim report by March 31, 1990, and a final report by September 30, 1990.

D. Unemployment Compensation Provisions

1. Due dates for self-employment demonstration projects for unemployment compensation beneficiaries

Present Law

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203) authorized demonstration projects in three States to make available "self-employment allowances" that unemployment compensation claimants could use to set up a business. The allowances are equal in amount and duration to the participant's regular or extended unemployment compensation benefits; but participants are not subject to the usual requirement that they be available to work for another employer.

Current law requires two reports to Congress on these projects. An interim report is due no later than 2 years after the date of enactment (December 21, 1987), and a final report is due no later than 4 years after enactment.

House Bill

The House bill extends the due dates for reports on the projects. It requires the interim report to be submitted no later than 3 years after the date of enactment of P.L. 100-203 (i.e., by December 21, 1990); the final report, no later than 6 years after enactment of P.L. 100-203 (i.e., by December 21, 1993).

Senate Amendment

No provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. Exemption of certain religious schools from Federal unemployment tax

Present Law

Section 3304(a)(6)(A) of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) requires States to cover under their unemployment compensation law certain nonprofit organizations. There are two exceptions from this required coverage, for services performed in the employ of: (1) a church, or convention, or association of churches; or (2) an organization which is operated primarily for religious purposes and which is operated, supervised, controlled or principally supported by a church or convention or association of churches.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The provision amends the Internal Revnue Code to provide another exception from mandatory participation for service performed in the employ of an elementary or secondary school which meets certain requirements. To qualify for such exemption, the elementary or secondary school must be: (1) operated primarily for religious purposes, (2) described in section 501(c)(3), and (3) exempt from tax under section 501(a). The provision applies to services performed after December 31, 1988.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill (i.e., no provision).

E. Medicare and Medicaid Amendments

1. Medicare provisions

Present Law

Title XVIII of the Social Security Act is the basic statutory authority for the Medicare program.

Title XVIII has recently been amended by provision of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 (OBRA 86), the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (OBRA 87), and the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment contains several minor and technical amendments to the authority for the Medicare program.

Provisions Relating to Part A of Medicare

(a) The provision of the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988 regarding payment for hospitals exempt from the prospective payment system would be clarified.

(b) The provision of OBRA 87 regarding revision of standards for including a rural county in an urban area would be amended.

(c) The provision of the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988 regarding demonstration projects with respect to chronic ventilator-dependent units in hospitals would be amended to clarify that the Secretary is required to conduct at least five demonstration projects for at least three years each.

(d) The provision of OBRA 87 regarding personnel policy for Prospective Payment Assessment Commission employees would be amended to clarify that the provision of OBRA 87 is effective only for employees hired on or after December 22, 1987. Employees hired before that date could make a one-time election to be covered by the OBRA 87 policy or by policies previously in effect.

Provisions Relating to Parts A and B of Medicare

(a) Any HOM with increased costs due to the recent clarification of the benefit eligibility criteria for extended care would be allowed to submit a revised adjusted community rate for 1988.

(b) The provision of OBRA 86 regarding a program of research on patient outcomes would be amended to increase the authorization for fiscal year 1989 to $10 million and to provide an authorization of $20 million for fiscal year 1990 and of $30 million for fiscal year 1991.

(c) The provision of OBRA 87 regarding rural health policy would be amended to require a grant program on rural health, to authorize $3 million per year for each of fiscal years 1989, 1990, and 1991, and to create a national committee on rural health.

Provisions Relating to Part B of Medicare

(a) Clinical labs would be offered an option of being paid on a per mile or a flat fee basis for specimen collection costs.

(b) The provision of OBRA 86 providing budget neutrality for the fee schedule for certified registered nurse anesthetists would be clarified by specifying that the comparison between payment levels under the fee schedule and the 1986 reimbursement rules for payment of medical direction and CRNA services should take coinsurance into account on both sides of the equation.

(c) The provision of OBRA 87 providing coverage for certified nurse midwife services would be clarified to indicate that coverage is not limited to services provided during the maternity cycle.

(d) The provision of OBRA 87 providing coverage for services provided by psychologists in community mental health centers would be extended to services necessarily provided off-site as part of a treatment plan.

(e) The amendment would authorize payment for registered nurses providing services as surgical assistants subject to several conditions.

(f) Medicare policies regarding certification of physical therapy and occupational therapy providers would be amended.

(g) The moratorium on competitive bidding demonstrations for clinical lab services extended in OBRA 87 would be extended for an additional year.

(h) The Secretary would be authorized to pay for a medical escort or attendant on commercial air flights where such flights are covered as ambulance services.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment as follows:

Provisions Relating to Part A of Medicare

(a) The authority for disproportionate share payments is extended to September 30, 1995.

(b) The provision of OBRA 87 regarding continuation of bad debt recognition is clarified.

With respect to criteria for what constitutes a reasonable bad debt collection effort, the conferees are concerned about recommendations made by the Inspector General of HHS subsequent to August 1, 1987, and actions which may be taken by the Secretary in response to those recommendations, regarding the bad debt collection policies followed by certain hospitals.

The Inspector General's recommendations, for example, recommendations concerning the extent of documentation required to demonstrate indigency and the provider's responsibility regarding a decision to use a collection agency for Medicare bad debt, appear to create requirements in addition to those in the Secretary's regulations, the decisions of the Provider Reimbursement Review Board, and relevant program manual and issuances.

The actions taken in response to the Inspector General's recommendations may have the effect of violating the prohibition on changes in policy if the Secretary's response results in the retroactive disallowance of bad debt payments claimed by the hospitals.

The conferees wish to clarify that the Congress intended that the actions of fiscal intermediaries occurring prior to August 1, 1987 to approve explicitly hospital's bad debt collection practices, to the extent such action by the fiscal intermediary was consistent with the regulations, PRRB decisions, or program manuals and issuances, are to be considered an integral part of the policy in effect on that date, and thus not subject to change.

However, the conferees do not intend to preclude the Secretary from disallowing bad debt payments based on regulations, PRRB decisions, manuals, and issuance is in effect prior to August 1, 1987.

(c) The provision of OBRA 87 regarding revision of standards for including a rural county in an urban area is amended to require that if the application of the new standards results in a reduction in the wage index for an urban area, the Secretary shall compute wage indices separately for the original urban counties and for the rural counties added as a result of the provision. If the application of the OBRA 87 provision causes a reduction in the wage index for rural areas, the Secretary shall compute the wage index for the affected rural areas as if the OBRA 87 provision had not been enacted. The amendment applies to discharges occurrring on or after October 1, 1989 and before October 1, 1991.

The conferees recognize that certain area hospital wage indices for fiscal year 1989 will be reduced as a result of the OBRA 87 provision. The conferees also recognize, however, the administrative difficulty of requiring that the Secretary implement the amendment described above in fiscal year 1989. For this reason, the amendment requires that the Secretary report to Congress within 60 days on administrative and legislative alternatives that insure that payments in fiscal year 1989 to hospitals in urban and rural areas where wage indices were adversely affected by OBRA 87 are not less than they would have been without the OBRA 87 provision.

The conferees intend that the Secretary will develop and report on approaches for fiscal year 1989 that use existing administrative authority (such as the authority under section 1886 (d)(5)(c)(iii) or legislative approaches. The conferees expect that the Secretary will focus on approaches that can be implemented as early as possible in fiscal year 1989 and are consistent with the intent of the conference agreement for fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

The conferees expect that the Secretary's report will include information on the impact of the alternatives on providers and on aggregate Medicare costs as well as data on the number of discharges and changes in payment to hospitals affected (positively and negatively) by the enactment of the OBRA 87 provision.

The conferees direct that the Secretary, in developing alternatives, consider particularly the special circumstances of hospitals located in redesignated counties for which a separate wage area is created as a result of the enactment of this provision and for which the resulting wage index is well below the statewide rural wage index. Hospital wages in some redesignated counties are as little as eighty percent of statewide rural wages. The conferees expect that the Secretary will develop alternatives that will minimize the effect of this provision on payment to these hospitals.

ProPAC is directed to study and report to the Congress within nine months of enactment on methodologies to adjust payments to hospitals affected by the OBRA 87 provision in fiscal year 1989.

(d) The provision of the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988 regarding demonstration projects with respect to chronic ventilator-dependent units in hospitals is amended to clarity that the Secretary is required to conduct at least five demonstration projects for at least three years each.

(e) The provisions of OBRA 87 regarding personnel policy for commission employees is amended to clarify that with respect to the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, the provision of OBRA 87 is effective only for employees hired on or after December 22, 1987. Personnel hired before this date would have the option to elect to continue under previous personnel policies under a one-time election made within 60 days after enactment.

Provisions Relating to Parts A and B of Medicare

(a) The Secretary is required to establish graduate nursing education demonstration programs in five hospitals, under which the reasonable costs of education under the program will be allowable costs under Medicare. The Secretary is also required to establish one joint undergraduate nursing education program and to include reasonable costs of education under the program as allowable costs under Medicare. These costs would include salaries, supervision, and classroom costs. The conferees note that the provision should not be construed as affecting generally the proper treatment of these expenses under current law.

(b) The provision of OBRA 87 regarding assignment of members of HIP Health Maintenance Organization and treatment of Michigan Blue Care HMO Network under 50 percent rule are repealed.

(c) The authorization of appropriations for a program of research on patient outcomes of selected medical treatments and surgical procedures is increased to $10 million for fiscal year 1989, and authorizations are provided in the amount of $20 million for fiscal year 1990 and $30 million for fiscal year 1991.

(d) The reporting deadline for the United States Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care is extended until six months after funds are appropriated for the Commission.

Provisions Relating to Part B of Medicare

(a) The conference agreement includes the Senate provision regarding payment for specimen collection fees with an amendment.

The Secretary would be required to provide for payment of specimen collection charges for certain labs on a per mile basis. The Secretary would also be required to submit a report to Congress by May 1, 1989 concerning reimbursement of specimen collection fees.

(b) The conference agreement includes the Senate amendment regarding the fee schedule for services provided by certified registered nurse anesthetists.

The amendment clarifies the budget neutrality provision by specifying that the comparison between payment levels under the fee schedule and the 1986 reimbursement rules for payment of medical direction and CRNA services should take coinsurance into account on both sides of the equation.

(c) The conference agreement includes the Senate amendment with modifications. Rules regarding coverage of pyschologists services provided in a community mental health center would be clarified to specify that such services would also be covered if necessarily provided off-site due to physical or mental impairment or similar reason.

(d) The conference agreement includes the Senate amendment regarding Medicare certification of physical therapy and occupational therapy providers.

(e) An addition would be made to the list of statutory responsibilities for the Physician Payment Review Commission. The Commission would be required to make recommendations for moderating the rate of increase in total Part B payment per capita and in the use of services under Medicare B in its annual report to Congress.

(f) The conference agreement includes the Senate amendment which extends the current moratorium on competitive bidding demonstrations for clinical lab services for an additional year.

(g) The conference agreement includes the Senate provision regarding payment for medical escort or attendant services with modifications.

The Secretary would be authorized to pay for such services on commercial air flights where such flights are covered as ambulance services under regulations currently in effect. This authorization would be in effect for a five-year period.

2. Medicaid provisions

a. Delay in issuance of final regulations concerning the use of voluntary contributions and provider-paid taxes by States to receive Federal matching funds

Present Law

The Medicaid program is a Federal-State program under which Federal funds are available to match State expenditures to purchase specified medical services on behalf of eligible individuals. Current regulations allow States to use as State expenditures for purposes of receiving Federal matching payments funds donated from private sources that are transferred to the State Medicaid agency, are under the agency's administrative control, and do not revert to the donor's facility or use unless the donor is a non-profit organization and the Medicaid agency, of its own volition decides to use the donor's facility. Some States also use funds that are generated from taxes on health care providers to draw Federal matching funds.

In the President's proposed budget for FY 1989, the Administration indicated that it would issue regulations to limit the use of donated funds to draw down Federal matching payments. The regulations have not yet been published.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Prohibits the Secretary of HHS from issuing final regulations that change the policy governing the use of donated funds or the use of revenues generated from provider taxes until after February 15, 1989. Proposed regulations could be published before that date.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification. The moratorium would extend until May 1, 1989.

Effective Date

Date of enactment.

b. Medicaid long-term care waiver program

Present Law

Section 1915(d) of the Social Security Act provides States an option to receive Federal Medicaid funding for nursing facility and home and community-based services for eligible elderly, subject to an aggregate limit. The limit is currently tied to the State's expenditures for such services during a base year, adjusted to take into account growth in the elderly population and increases in the cost of services, subject to a limit of 7 percent. However, the base year amount is not adjusted to take into account new mandated services or program expansions, such as the spousal impoverishment protections enacted in the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Provides that the base year amounts would be adjusted to take into account new services and program expansions mandated by Federal law, effective with respect to State expenditures beginning in waiver year 1989.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with technical modifications. Federal laws enacted after December 22, 1987, which increase aggregate Medicaid spending for either nursing facility services or home and community-based services would, at the request of the State and in close consultation with the State, be factored into the Secretary's determination of the aggregate limit for a particular waiver year or years.

The conference agreement also clarifies that, in calculating the aggregate limit for a particular waiver year, the Secretary is to apply the 7 percent adjustment to the number of years rounded to the nearest quarter of a year beginning after the base year and ending at the end of the waiver year. The following is an example of such a calculation where Year 1 is the base year, Year 3 is the first year the waiver is implemented and 7 percent is the lesser growth rate:

Year	Expenditures
1	$10,000,000
2	10,000,000
3	11,449,000
4	12,250,000
5	13,107,000

Effective Date

Waiver years beginning during or after FY 1989.

c. Extension of time period for submission of correction and reduction plans for certain intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded

Present Law

Section 9516 of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 allows an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded (ICF/MR) that is found by the Secretary of Health and Human Services to have substantial deficiencies that do not pose an immediate threat to the health or safety of residents under the Medicaid program to submit a 6-month plan of correction or a 36-month plan of reduction as an alternative to decertification. The Department of Health and Human Services did not issue regulations implementing the section until January 25, 1988. The provision is scheduled to sunset on April 6, 1989. The final regulations do not allow the use of the plan of reduction in the case of a facility that was subject to decertification because of failure to provide active treatment.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Provides that the option to submit a plan of correction or reduction would be available in any case where there was no immediate threat to the health or safety of the residents, including failure to provide active treatment. However, active treatment would have to be provided for residents who remain in the facility during the period covered by the plan of reduction. The sunset date would be extended to January 25, 1991.

The provision is effective on the date of enactment. It applies to any proceeding where there has not yet been a final determination by the Secretary of HHS as of the enactment of this Act.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification that the sunset date would be extended to January 1, 1990.

Effective Date

Date of enactment. Applies to any proceeding where there has not yet been a final determination by the Secretary of HHS as of the date of enactment of this Act.

d. Nursing facility decertification hearing procedures

Present Law

Section 1910 of the Social Security Act provides that a nursing facility that is a party to a decertification proceeding based on a Federal look-behind review may continue to participate in the Medicaid program while a hearing on the issue is pending. The Department of Health and Human Services has taken the position that evidence of compliance based on a later Federal or State survey may not be admitted at such hearing. Thus, a facility maybe terminated on the basis of noncompliance that has subsequently been corrected.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Provides that in a decertification proceeding, nursing facilities would be allowed to submit evidence of correction of deficiencies based on Federal or State surveys conducted after the initial finding of noncompliance. This provision would not apply in the case of intermediate sanctions. While the amendment allows the results of a subsequent survey to be admitted as evidence, such evidence does not prelcude a decertification finding. The Administrative Law Judge would also take into account the facility's record of noncompliance and the extent and likely duration of the compliance exhibited in such subsequent survey.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

e. Sense of the Senate urging Congress to act on Medicaid reform for people with disabilities

Present Law

No provision.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment includes a provision expressing the sense of the Senate with regard to Medicaid reform for people with disabilities:

(a) Findings.—The Senate finds that—

(1) the needs of people with disabilities are not adequately met in the Nation's existing health care system;

(2) there is no well-designed system of services for individuals needing long-term support with the except of limited services available through Medicaid;

(3) such services are still rooted in the medical model;

(4) the Nation's understanding of the needs and capabilities of people with disabilities has progressed and it has become clear that traditional medically oriented services provided through Medicaid are frequently inadequate and inappropriate.

(5) all people, regardless of disability, should have the opportunity to live, work, and pursue recreational activities in their communities;

(6) the Medicaid program should be changed from one that demands dependency to one that seeks to encourage personal growth and is tailored to the needs of each individual;

(7) the Congress should ensure the availability of a wide range of services and support for people with disabilities and the families of such people in a variety of residential settings;

(8) such services should be designed to meet the unique needs of each person rather than requiring an individual to "fit into" a service system or residential placement;

(9) it is time for Congress to consider seriously true reform of Medicaid services for people with disabilities;

(10) this issue has been the subject of serious debate in the Congress for the last 5 years and has been the subject of 4 hearings in the Committee on Finance of the Senate; and

(11) the Medicaid Home and Community Quality Services Act, S. 1673, has been introduced in the Senate to address the need for reform and has been cosponsored by 48 members of the Senate.

(b) Sense of the Senate.—It is the Sense of the Senate that—

(1) early in the 101st Congress Medicaid reform should be undertaken;

(2) such reform should ensure that services will be provided in a wide range of residential setting from in-home support to institution based care; and that independence, productivity and community integration should be our national goal for people with disabilities.

Conference Agreement

The Senate amendment expressed the sense of the Senate and was duly passed by the Senate, and it is not included in the conference agreement.

The conference agreement clarifies that individuals who, as of January 1, 1989, will be mandatorily eligible for coverage of their Medicare cost-sharing (qualified Medicare beneficiaries) are individuals who are entitled to Medicare, whose income meets specified standards, and whose resources do not exceed twice the amount allowed under the SSI program, whether or not they are otherwise eligible for Medicaid.

The conference agreement provides that, in calculating an optional premium for the second six months of transitional Medicaid benefits for the families who leave cash assistance due to earnings, a State must deduct the average monthly costs for necessary child care from gross monthly earnings.

The conference agreement clarifies that, in the case of a 1915(c) home and community-based services waiver that applies to individuals with a particular illness or condition, such as physically disabled individuals (who are at risk of institutional care), the Secretary must allow the State to determine the average per capita expenditure that would have been made in a fiscal year for those individuals separately from the expenditures for other individuals, whether or not those individuals are institutionalized prior to entering the waiver.

TRADE PROVISIONS

A. Iraqi Trade Sanctions

Present Law

No provision.

House Bill

The House bill contains no provision. However, the House passed H.R. 5337, a bill to impose sanctions against Iraq. The title of the bill is the "Sanctions Against Iraq Chemical Weapons Use Act". It states Congressional findings concerning the use of chemical weapons by the Government of Iraq against the Kurdish people and states that Iraq's use of such weapons is a gross violation of international law. The bill imposes certain immediate sanctions against Iraq, effective upon the date of enactment—a ban on exports and licenses for exports of certain munitions, items on the control list established pursuant to the Export Administration Act, and any chemical which the President determines may be used primarily in the production of chemical weapons.

H.R. 5337 also requires the President to impose "appropriate additional sanctions against Iraq" unless he certifies that the Government of Iraq is not using chemical weapons and has obtained reliable assurances that it will not do so in the future. The President is provided discretionary authority to impose the following additional sanctions: (1) prohibit or restrict imports of oil, oil products, or any other article grown, produced, or manufactured in Iraq; (2) prohibit or restrict the export of agricultural commodities and products and other goods and technology; (3) deny credits, credit guarantees, and other assistance; (4) oppose any loan or financial or technical assistance to Iraq by international financial institutions; (5) downgrade or suspend diplomatic relations between the United States and Iraq. The President must report to Congress periodically on the actions taken.

Contract sanctity for export controls imposed by H.R. 5337 is provided for contracts signed before September 15, 1988. For additional sanctions imposed by the President, contracts or agreements entered into before the President indicates his intention to impose sanctions (through notification of Congress or publication of a Federal Register notice) may not be prohibited or curtailed.

H.R. 5337 authorizes the President to waive the additional sanctions subject to the same certification requirement relating to Iraqi use of chemical weapons described above. It also contains provisions calling for certain multilateral actions; commending the Government of Turkey for accepting Kurdish refugees; and urging Presidential review of certain exports valued at over $50 million. The authorities of H.R. 5337, and any sanctions imposed under it, cease to have effect after June 30, 1991.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment is similar to H.R. 5337, but with certain modifications and additions. It imposes immediate sanctions, but adds an additional up-front sanction—a requirement that the United States oppose any loan or financial or technical assistance to Iraq by international financial institutions. (This sanction is a discretionary sanction in H.R. 5337.) It adds that the purpose of the amendment is to mandate U.S. sanctions against Iraq due to its use of chemical weapons in violation of international law.

Like H.R. 5337, the Senate amendment requires that the President impose appropriate additional sanctions (subject to the same waiver authority) but requires that he do so by December 31, 1988. In addition, the Senate amendment requires that the President, in imposing such additional sanctions, select one or more of the sanctions authorized in the amendment. The authorized sanctions, which are similar to the sanctions in H.R. 5337, are: (1) deny credits or credit guarantees through the Export-Import Bank; (2) prohibit or restrict the importation of one or more kinds of articles (which may include petroleum or any petroleum product) that are the growth, product, or manufacture of Iraq; (3) prohibit or substantially restrict exports to Iraq of goods and technology (excluding agricultural commodities and products); (4) use the President's constitutional authorities to downgrade or suspend diplomatic relations between the United States and Iraq.

The Senate amendment adds a requirement that by December 31, 1988, the President submit to Congress an assessment of whether the Government of Iraq, is respecting internationally recognized human rights, in particular the rights of the Kurdish minority in Iraq. The assessment is to be accompanied by a report containing detailed information about various aspects of Iraq's treatment of the Kurdish minority and steps which the United States has taken to promote Iraq's respect of internationally recognized human rights and to discourage practices which violate such rights. Other provisions of the Senate amendment are identical to H.R. 5337.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement contains no provision.

B. Other Trade Provisions

1. Trade technicals; certain tariff schedules

Present Law

The Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-418), enacted on August 23, 1988, created new trade law authorities and amended many of the trade, tariff, and customs laws.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Section 800V of the Senate amendment contains 17 amendments of a strictly technical drafting nature to Title I of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988 or to various trade laws amended by Title I of that Act. These amendments correct errors concerning subsection, paragraph, and other designations, cross-references, punctuation, and rates of duty. The amendments would be applied on date of enactment as if they took effect on August 23, 1988 (date of enactment of P.L. 100-418).

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with amendments (1) to make four additional technical amendments to the trade laws of a similar nature to the Senate amendment; and (2) to extend the following expiring and expired duty suspensions as found in the Appendix to the Tariff Schedules of the United States, Part 1-B: TSUS items 903.29, 906.30, 906.32, 906.38, 906.51, 906.53, 906.54, 906.99, 907.00, 907.03, 907.04, 907.06, 907.08, 907.16, 907.18, 907.22, 907.25, 907.42, 907.51, 907.65, 907.66, 907.68, 907.69, 907.76, 910.00, 911.50, and 912.13.

2. Limitation on CBI ethanol imports

Present Law

The Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988 permits five companies to import 20 million gallons each of ethanol that does not meet the rules of origin of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, as amended, in that the ethanol dehydrated in those plants is not fermented from vegetable matter grown in the region at plants located in the region.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

This Trade Act provision would be barred after enactment of this bill until the Secretaries of Agriculture, Energy, and the Treasury, acting jointly, certify that the domestic ethanol industry is not fully meeting domestic demand for ethyl alcohol and that imported ethanol is necessary to maintain adequate supplies for consumers.

The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill (i.e., no provision).

3. Foreign trade zones

Present Law

Section 3 of the Foreign Trade Zones Act, 19 U.S.C. 81(c), provides that when two or more products result from the manipulation or manufacture of merchandise in a foreign trade zone, the liquidated duties or taxes levied on those products are to be distributed according to each product's relative value at the time of separation.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Amends the Foreign Trade Zones Act to define the time of separation to be the entire manufacturing period; to define the price of the products, for purposes of computing relative values, as the average per unit value of each product for the manufacturing period; and, with regard to feedstocks for petroleum manufacturing, definition and attribution to products may be either in accordance with Industry Standards of Potential Production on a Practical Operating Basis or any other inventory control method approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

4. Study of U.S.-Japan trade and technology

Present Law

No provision.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment requires the Secretaries of Treasury and State and the U.S. Trade Representative jointly to conduct a study on possible frameworks for enhanced cooperation between the United States and Japan in the form of economic and security arrangements between the two countries. The final report on the study is to be submitted to the President and various Congressional committees by July 1, 1989, with an interim report by March 1, 1989. The amendment specifies numerous issues for consideration—e.g., tariffs, quotas, and other traditional subjects of a free trade area agreement; monetary and fiscal policies; anticompetitive practices and enforcement of antitrust laws. It establishes certain conditions for any frameworks negotiated—e.g., that they address mutual defense and sharing of the burden of defense; that they be consistent with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. It also sets forth consultation requirements with public and private sector representatives of the United States and Japan.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill (i.e., no provision).

5. GAO study on the Small Business Innovation Research Program

Present Law

Subsection (a) of section 6 of the Small Business Innovation Development Act of 1982 (15 U.S.C. 638, note) requires the Comptroller General, no later than December 31, 1988, to transmit to the appropriate committees of the House and Senate a report evaluating the effectiveness of certain phases of the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) Program. Section 8008 of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988 adds a requirement that the report by the Comptroller General also include recommendations concerning four specific potential changes to the SBIR Program.

House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Section 734 of the Senate amendment extends the due date for completion of the GAO report until July 1, 1989. The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a technical correction so that the extension applies only to the four additional issues mandated by the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988.

MANASSAS NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD PARK AMENDMENTS

Present Law

Manassas National Battlefield Park (the Park), designated in 1940 in Prince William County, Virginia, incorporates the battlefield where two significant Civil War battles were fought—First Manassas and Second Manassas. However, much of the battlefield of Second Manassas, including Stuart's Hill (location of Confederate General Robert E. Lee's headquarters and part of the William Center Tract immediately adjacent to the Park), has not been acquired as part of the Park. No major development occurred on the area, until a recent proposal was approved by the Prince William County Board of Supervisors to construct a mixed residential/nonresidential development on the William Center Tract. The proposed development would include a 1.2 million square foot shopping mall, major office space, and residential area.

House Bill

No provision in H.R. 4333. However, on August 20, 1988, the House passed a separate bill (H.R. 4526) requiring the acquisition of the approximately 600 acres adjacent to the Park and adding the area to the Manassas National Battlefield Park by legislative taking. H.R. 4526 also directs the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a study on the relocation of the roads in, and in the vicinity of, the Park; $30,000,000 is authorized for the study and the relocation of such roads.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment requires immediate acquisition of the area adjacent to the Manassas National Battlefield Park (south of U.S. Route 29, north of Interstate Route 66, east of Route 705, and west of Route 622), to be added to the Park by legislative taking. The United States is to pay just compensation to the owners of such property, and such payment is to be in the amount of the agreed negotiated value of the property or the valuation of the property awarded by judgment. The payment is to be made from the permanent judgment appropriation ("Claims and Judgments Fund") established under 31 U.S.C. 1304. (Other than this clarifying provision concerning the permanent judgment appropriation, the Senate amendment is the same as H.R. 4526 as passed by the House.)

The Secretary of the Interior is to work with the State and local governments to achieve scenic preservation of views from within the Park through zoning and other means the parties determine feasible.

The Secretary, in consultation with the Federal Highway Administration and State and local governments, is to conduct a study regarding the relocation of highways (known as Routes 29 and 234) in, and in the vicinity of, the Manassas National Battlefield Park. The study is to be completed within one year after the enactment of this Act. Appropriations of up to $30,000,000 are authorized for the study and the Federal share of the costs of relocating such highways. State and local governments are to provide 25 percent of the cost of the highway relocation from non-Federal sources.

The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

(The Senate amendment is the same as H.R. 4526 as reported on September 20, 1988, by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, S. Rept. 100-520.)

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE—RETURNING TO THE SENATE S. 2097, THE URANIUM MILL TAILINGS REMEDIAL ACTION AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1987

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House, and I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 603) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 603

Resolved, That the bill of the Senate S. 2097, The Uranium Mill Tailings Remedial Action Amendments Act of 1987, in the opinion of this House, contravenes the first clause of the seventh section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States and is an infringement of the privileges of this House and that such bill be respectfully returned to the Senate with a message communicating this resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, earlier this year, the Senate sent to the House S. 2907, the Uranium Revitalization, Tailings Reclamation and Enrichment Act of 1988. This legislation has been held at the desk pending action in the House. S. 2097 is identical to H.R. 4489 which was jointly referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. This bill would establish a Federal fund to assist in the financing of reclamation and other remedial action at currently active uranium and thorium processing sites and would increase the demand for domestic uranium. The fund would be financed in part by what are called mandatory fees which are equal to $22 per kilogram for uranium contained in fuel assemblies initially loaded into civilian nuclear power reactors during calendar years 1989-93. These mandatory fees which are imposed on licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors are the equivalent of excise taxes on the loading of uranium in a reactor. As such, this legislation is a revenue measure within the meaning of article I of the Constitution and should have originated in the House.

In addition, S. 2097 would impose charges on domestic utilities that use foreign-source uranium in new fuel assemblies loaded in their nuclear reactors. These charges represent a tariff on the use of foreign uranium, which is also a measure which should have originated in the House which is constitutionally given the right to originate tariff measures.

For these reasons, passage of this legislation by the Senate has infringed on the prerogative of the House to originate revenue measures and tariff measures, and should, therefore be returned to the Senate.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, the situation is as described by the distinguished chairman. This is a normal and necessary routine for the House to return this bill because it was sent to us contrary to the provisions of the Constitution.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the resolution.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE—RETURNING TO THE SENATE H.R. 1315, THE NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEARS 1988 AND 1989

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House, and I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 604) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 604

Resolved, That the amendment of the Senate to H.R. 1315, The Nuclear Regulatory Commission Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, in the opinion of this House, contravenes the first clause of the seventh section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States and is an infringement of the privileges of this House and that such bill be respectfully returned to the Senate with a message communicating this resolution.

□ 2230

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in August of this year, the Senate sent to the House H.R. 1315, which is a bill authorizing funds for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for fiscal years 1988 and 1989 and which contains an amendment which adds a new title IV called the Uranium Revitalization, Tailings Reclamation and Enrichment Act of 1988. This legislation has been held at the desk pending action in the House. Title IV of H.R. 1315 is virtually identical to H.R. 4975 and H.R. 4934 which were jointly referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. Title IV, among other things, would establish a Federal fund to assist in the financing of reclamation and other remedial action at currently active uranium and thorium processing sites and would assist the domestic uranium industry by increasing the demand for domestic uranium. The fund would be financed in part by what are called "mandatory fees" equal to $72 per kilogram of uranium contained in fuel assemblies initially loaded into civilian nuclear power reactors on or after January 1, 1988. These fees are paid by licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors and are in place until $1 billion has been raised. These "mandatory fees" are the equivalent of excise taxes on the loading of uranium in a reactor. As such, this legislation is a revenue measure within the meaning of article I of the Constitution and should have originated in the House.

For these reasons, passage of this legislation by the Senate has infringed on the prerogative of the House to originate revenue measures and should therefore, be returned to the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, the situation is exactly the same as with the previous bill. We should pass the blue-slip resolution.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the resolution.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4333, TECHNICAL AND MISCELLANEOUS REVENUE ACT OF 1988

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4333) to make technical corrections relating to the Tax Reform Act of 1986, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

(For conference report and statement, see prior proceedings of the House today.)

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report on H.R. 4333, now under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to pass the conference report on H.R. 4333, the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988. This bill includes many provisions of major importance to all Members of Congress.

The conference report allows farmers and other off-highway business users of diesel fuel to purchase the fuel without paying Federal excise taxes and applying for a refund. The conference report exempts for 2 years mutual fund shareholder expenses—so-called phantom income—from the 2-percent floor for miscellaneous itemized deductions.

It extends, with modifications, many expiring tax provisions, including the research and development tax credit, mortgage revenue bonds, the targeted jobs tax credit, the exclusion for employer-provided eduational assistance, the FSLIC provision for troubled thrift institutions and others. In addition, the conference report makes important technical corrections to the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and other recent legislation.

The conference report includes many other important provisions, such as allowing farmers to deduct currently their preproductive expenses of farm animals. This provision repeals the so-called heifer tax. Second, individual artists, writers, and photographers also could deduct currently the business expenses they incur in the production of their work.

As my colleagues know, the House passed H.R. 4333 on August 4, 1988, by a strong bipartisan vote of 380 to 25. The House-passed bill would have raised $7.5 billion over 3 years to finance the extensions. The diesel fuel exemption, and the many other provisions strongly supported by House Members. The Senate's bill would have raised only $3 billion over the same period. Consequently, the Senate's bill would have provided a short crazy quilt of extensions, some for 3 months, others for 4 or 6, and a few longer. The conference agreement generally extends the expiring provisions through 1989, consistent with the uniform extension policy of the House. The extension through 1989, rather than 1990, helped to reduce the overall size of the bill to approximately $4.2 billion.

The conference report also includes offsetting revenue increases, in order to keep the overall bill revenue neutral. The House-passed bill would have repealed the completed contract method of accounting which allows large defense contractors to delay paying tax on their long-term contracts for many years. This total repeal has passed the House on three separate occasions. The conference report increases the cutback from 70 percent to 90 percent and exempts single-family homebuilders from the provision.

The conference report also repeals the special rules that allow Alaska Native corporations to sell tax losses, thereby reducing the taxes of profitable corporations. It also restricts tax benefits from certain single premium life insurance policies. Both of these provisions include more generous transition relief than under the original House bill. The conference report also speeds up certain corporate estimated tax payments. Finally, the tax-exempt bond provisions of the House bill have been moderated to respond to concerns of many Members.

I would like to note that the conferees on H.R. 4333 were encouraged by Senator JACK DANFORTH of Missouri to include as broad as possible a research and development credit extension. The language included in the statement of managers expressing the conferees' concern about U.S. competitiveness in world commerce and awareness of the appropriateness of tax incentives in maintaining a competitive edge was included at the specific request of Senator DANFORTH. All conferees appreciate Senator DANFORTH's forceful and effective advocacy on behalf of these important incentives.

The bill also includes a number of other miscellaneous generic provisions that many House Members have requested. For example:

The bill broadens the innocent spouse relief available in certain situations. While the provision is intended to apply generically, the committee has been aware of the hardships caused by cases such as Ash versus Commissioner, and intends to overturn that decision, and provide relief in that and other similar situations.

I would also like to note a problem confronting the MacArthur Foundation. The Ways and Means Committee has not had an opportunity to address this situation since it was only recently brought to our attention. The problem involves the rules which require private foundations to liquidate excess business holdings.

I am hopeful that the IRS will be able to resolve this situation without the need for legislation. If not, the Committee on Ways and Means may look into this problem early next year with a view toward finding a resolution which carries out the original purpose of the private foundation rules on disposing of business assets in a manner flexible enough to accommodate situations such as that facing the MacArthur Foundation.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is long overdue. The House has passed similar bills on two separate occasions. The House passed many of these same provisions as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 and again this year as H.R. 4333. Regrettably, the economic budget summit agreement following the stock market crash forced deletion of most of these provisions last year. The technical corrections will be of great help to individual taxpayers, business planners, and tax practitioners. The extension of expiring provisions will preserve and more carefully target important tax incentives.

This conference report is a bipartisan, responsible package. The $4.2 billion in revenues are approximately $3 billion below the revenues contained in President Reagan's fiscal year 1989 budget proposals. Several of the President's substantive recommendations are also included.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank all of the members of the committee, particularly the ranking Republican, BILL ARCHER, for their hard work and cooperation in developing this legislation.

I urge all Members of the House to vote in strong bipartisan support for this essential legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report to accompany H.R. 4333, the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

At the outset, I'd like to commend the distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee for his leadership in assuring the bipartisan consideration of this bill at every step in the legislative process.

Without a doubt, that strong bipartisan spirit was a significant force in bringing about what I consider to be a very reasonable compromise of the issues as they emerged from the House and Senate earlier this year. From my personal vantage point, that compromise in some instances meant significant improvement. In others, to repeat a comment heard often around the conference table, it meant that I had to swallow hard.

Overall, however, I clearly believe that the compromises resulted in a stronger package than had existed in either the House or the Senate's versions of the bill.

The deletion of the provision to reduce the dividends receive deduction, for example, eliminated a major objection.

I was particularly pleased that we changed the "completed contract method of accounting" provisions under current law to exempt single family residential construction—thereby reducing the cost of homes.

While it's difficult to single out just a few provisons for special comment, there are several which are important to many members of this body.

Perhaps most importantly, the conference agreement makes needed technical corrections to the 1986 Tax Reform Act which will bring greater certainty to the ability of taxpayers to comply with the new law.

But it is more than just a bill to correct clerical errors in the 1986 bill. For example, the agreement establishes a long overdue Taxpayer Bill of Rights for Americans. While it is by no means the complete answer to the problems we are attempting to address in protecting the rights of taxpayers, it is a solid first step on which we can build in the future.

Another very important provision to thousands of Americans is the measure's repeal of the excise tax reporting and collection requirements for exempt off-road users of diesel fuel. In addition, it provides a much-needed exemption from the 20-percent cutback for the deductibility of employer provided meals on ships and offshore drilling rigs.

The Nation's agricultural areas will benefit from the repeal of the so-called "heifer tax" provisions which currently do not allow for the deduction of certain pre-productive expenses.

The bill provides artists and authors with relief from the complexity of the 1986 Tax Reform Act's new uniform capitalization rules—and extends for 2 years the exclusion of mutual fund expenses from the 2-percent floor on miscellaneous itemized deductions.

The agreement also provides a helping hand to the Nation's troubled thrift institutions through the extension of provisions which will help assure their return to solvency with the aid of FSLIC and the FDIC.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is revenue-neutral. It raises some revenues, but it gives them right back within the Tax Code to other needed beneficiaries.

We cannot here explore a laundry list of all the items of good that are in this bill, but I think it is a good package. I commend the chairman, I commend the staff, and I commend the members of the conference committee.

Mr. Speaker, I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Dingell], the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I commend my dear friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] for the good work he has done on this matter.

Mr. Speaker, my comments will not deal with the legislation in general but only with one small part which relates to the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act and to the Railroad Retirement Act. The bill contains the text of legislation reported last year by the Committee on Energy and Commerce and by the Committee on Ways and Means and passed by the House in H.R. 2167. Together with improvements made by the Senate, these amendments in railroad unemployment insurance and railroad retirement will impove the solvency of the system while bringing greater fairness to workers and management alike.

I believe that the gentleman from Illinois has exercised his usual outstanding leadership on this matter, and I commend him and thank him. Special credit does go to two of my colleagues on the Committee on Energy and Commerce. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Coats] has long been interested in this issue and has worked very hard to see that it received proper attention. The House owes him a vote of thanks for that. In like fashion, our colleague, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Slattery] made equally important and valuable contributions to this legislation.

These provisions of the bill to which I refer are supported by both rail labor and management, and it has taken us 4 years to get this point. The provisions, I would note for my colleagues, will also reduce the deficit.

Again, I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois, for yielding. I appreciate his cooperation in ensuring that this important measure for th rail industry has been included in the bill, and express to him my commendations and thanks.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Coats].

Mr. COATS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman of the committee for his long and hard work and his assistance with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Slattery] and myself in pursing this over a 4-year period of time. I believe it is an acceptable compromise, a workable compromise, and at the bottom line it is an improvement for those rail labor workers that has long been needed, and without the gentleman's assistance, it would not have been possible. I thank him for that.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Dorgan], who has helped immeasurably on the diesel tax provision.

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I shall not prolong the debate. The hour is late.

Let me make two observations. One, this is awfully good news for America's farmers. This repeals the diesel and heifer tax. It is important to have done this.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the efforts of the staff and the able chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Archer] on the Republican side.

Let me finally say that the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Daub], who will no longer be with us in the next session, played a very valuable role in repealing these two taxes. I think all of us should acknowledge that. I appreciate his efforts as well.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel], a highly regarded member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, it is often said in these Halls that a tax bill coming before us at the end of the session in large and complex form is always a safe no vote. It is impossible to know everything that is in it, and it is always better to be on the safe side.

However, in the case of this particular technical corrections act that that advice ought not be heeded. This bill deserves your strong support.

I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski], and the distinguished vice chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Archer].

There are too many necessary and useful items in this bill to let it pass with other than an affirmative vote by every Member in this House. To be sure, many of the problems have simply been deferred. We have only extended expiring provisions of the law for 1 year, and we will have to face the cost of extending them in the future. Some of the extra taxes which we have laid aside for the moment to finance those expirations may have to be considered in the future.

For myself, I believe the elimination of the dividends received deduction change in the House bill really removes the last major encumbrance to this bill.

There are many things in this bill that will not be perfect for every Member, but I think it is a safe and important and positive vote for each member of this House.

□ 2245

I hope the bill will be broadly supported.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield for three sentences to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Michel], the distinguished Republican leader.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, at the outset I want to pay a compliment to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski], the distinguished chairman for in these hectic closing days to bring us a bill that I would certainly hope would give us unanimous support in the House.

In addition to some of the provisions that the distinguished chairman, ranking member made up, one other provision I happen to think is very importnat with respect to allowing nonprofit cooperatives which have refinanced their REA loans to continue to be tax exempt. Present law threatens the future of some cooperative by subjecting them to Federal taxation if the refinancing benefits push them over a certain income level. This will make absolutely sure this does not happen.

I am deeply grateful to the members of the committee for including that in the technical amendments of the bill.

I urge support for the tax package we have before us here, because it addresses several problem areas of previous tax laws that have caused undue problems for many people.

First and foremost is the repeal of the diesel fuel tax collection requirement. This requirement, which required farmers and others to pay a diesel fuel tax and then file for a refund, is an example of the type of bureaucratic excess which causes Congress to be held in such low esteem. The repeal included in this package is good news for all off-highway users of diesel fuel who are exempt from payments of the tax, including farmers, barge operators, contractors, and others.

Another positive in the legislation is a provision which allows nonprofit cooperatives which have refinanced their REA loans to continue to be tax exempt. Present law threatens the future of such cooperatives by subjecting them to Federal taxation if the refinancing benefits push them over a certain income level.

Finally, I am disappointed that a provision pertaining to ethanol added in the Senate was not included in the final version. As you know, the trade bill allowed ethanol produced with cheap European wine to enter this country duty free if it is shipped through the Carribbean. This influx of cheap ethanol represents a threat to our domestic ethanol industry.

Language was added in the Senate to correct this abuse, but is not included in the final package. Those who chose not to include it must bear the responsibility for any deterioration in our domestic ethanol industry.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE].

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, the Ways and Means Committee has worked hard over the past 2 years to produce the best possible technical corrections bill. I believe we have reached a good compromise.

First of all, I wish to express my personal appreciation to Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI, who has been the dominant force behind this legislation. He has bent over backwards to cooperate and coordinate with the other body, and to protect the position of the House.

I also want to commend my colleague from Texas, the Honorable BILL ARCHER, our ranking minority member, who has been a strong factor in bringing the parties together to produce a bill.

Above all, I want to commend the excellent staff of the Ways and Means Committee and the Joint Committee on Taxation for another outstanding performance under pressure.

This agreement not only contains important technical corrections to tax legislation passed over the last 2 years, but it also includes a number of provisions that simplify the law or correct inequities in our present system. For example:

The agreement allows off-highway business users of diesel fuel to purchase diesel fuel from "producers" without payment of the excise tax. This means oil drillers, farmers, contractors, stone crushers, waterway operators and other off-highway users will not have to go through the burden of applying for a refund for taxes paid but which were not owed.

It repeals the requirement that governmental pension plans begin distribution of pension benefits at age 70½. This provision will resolve the funding dilemma State and local plans would have experienced had they been forced to allow workers to draw retirement benefits while also drawing a current salary and accruing new benefits.

The agreement exempts artists, photographers and other producers of creative works from the uniform capitalization rules, resolving the administrative nightmare and inequity caused by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Under this same section, we also corrected the so-called "heifer tax" problem.

It allows gasoline marketers to take over the refund process for State and local governments and school districts for purposes of the gasoline excise tax. This provision will help keep gasoline marketers competitive with their suppliers and it also will relieve many governmental users from the burden of applying for a refund for gasoline excise taxes paid but not owed.

The agreement also provides an interim solution for recipients of the Christa McAuliffe Fellowship so that they will not have to pay taxes on the portion of their fellowship which they use directly for their school projects.

The agreement also calls for the extension of a number of provisions that have already expired or will expire at the end of the year. These important provisions include extensions of the Research and Development tax credit and the university basic research tax credit, as well as the so-called Section 861 compromise relating to allocation of research and development expenses. The agreement also continues the mortgage credit certificate program, and renews expiring provisions related to financial assistance transactions and reorganizations of troubled thrifts.

In order to accommodate the revenue restraints of the agreement, all of the expiring provisions were modified to some degree. Nonetheless, they have been extended, keeping them alive and giving the next Congress the chance to thoroughly review them.

Finally, the agreement includes a strong—but workable—Taxpayers Bill of Rights that will protect taxpayers in their dealings with the Internal Revenue Service.

The agreement is not perfect, in my view. For instance, I am told that the other body refused to recede on its provision pertaining to the truck excise tax and remanufactured vehicles. In light of that, this is a provision I would encourage the Ways and Means Committee to watch closely because of its potential for abuse and excise tax evasion.

But overall, Mr. Speaker, this is a reasonable and equitable compromise which addresses many issues of importance to our constituents. I urge my colleagues to accept the compromise and adopt this agreement.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, my remarks will go less to the content of this particular bill than to the procedure. I have often been critical of leadership in this House, and I believe that when credit is due it ought to be given; first of all, to the staff of the Committee on Ways and Means, both the majority and minority staff. They not only work the usual long, hard hours, they are also extremely bright and diligent in making sure that when an idea is conceived it is carried in the law.

Let me also commend our newest ranking member, and fortunately for some time I guess we will have to continue to call our most senior members our ranking members. I would prefer another term, but until we can change the numbers in the House it is a ranking member. He has been, in my opinion, the role model for ranking members on our side in terms of not just participation but leadership.

Finally, let me address myself to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. I have said I am often critical of leadership in this House, but I have to stand here and tell my colleagues, as a model for leadership, although the Democrats are in the majority, the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, in terms of his ability to allow people to believe that they are participating in the process, not whether you win or lose, but whether you feel as though you made a difference, that you can participate and feel that you had your shot, that is what some other leaders in this House ought to learn from the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, and I salute his ability to lead the best committee in the House of Representatives.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. DAUB], who has played such a significant role in the committee during his time on the committee and who will be leaving us at the end of this Congress.

Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this Technical Corrections Act. It is comprehensive legislation and it is quality work by the Committee on Ways and Means in this House.

We have all heard the contents of the bill, the research and development and the educational assistance, the targeted jobs tax credit, mortgage revenue bond extenders, and compromises on a number of other items. Good work has been done on insolvent institutions for depositors and on Social Security and Railroad Retirement provisions, on pensions and COBRA, but more importantly, the key part of this bill for my colleagues is to recall that 2 years ago when we engaged in historic tax reform, the concurrent resolution, then called H.R. 4333, contained a number of provisions that were designed to smooth the transition from old law to new law, and we failed. We failed to pass that particular piece of legislation, to deliver the true promise of tax reform. Now is our chance to do that, and I urge my colleagues for that reason among others to support this legislation.

Finally, let me say my sincere congratulations to our ranking member, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER], for his new leadership. He is off to a fine start. And to our chairman of this committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], who has consistently demonstrated uncommon courage in his legislative skills, and common courtesy to all with whom he deals, I extend my sincere appreciation.

To my colleagues on the Committee on Ways and Means, my thanks to their dedication and for their friendship; to the staff, not only of our majority-minority my thanks for their hard work, and to the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation, I want to say a special thanks for their hard work and technical competence.

Lastly, to all of my colleagues in this House for their friendship, I salute all and look forward to your continuing friendship.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HENRY].

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, let me just point out one other aspect of this bill which I think will be of interest to many who have cosponsored numerous proposals along this line.

This conference report includes the college savings bond proposal. President Reagan, 4 years ago, threw this down to us on tax reform; 2 years ago he proposed to us in a State of the Union Address, a college savings bond program which would enable middle income Americans to easily save and invest for their young children and their grandchildren and their relatives, to pursue higher education.

Mr. Speaker, I praise and commend the committee for putting this proposal into the bill, a proposal that is endorsed in the Republican platform, is a key plank of Vice President BUSH's Presidential candidacy, and I commend the committee for its wisdom.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of this technical correction tax measure and am especially pleased that the 100th Congress will be able to include the protection of the Manassas National Battlefield Park as part of its accomplishments. The preservation and interpretation of the Battle of Second Manassas should have been accomplished years ago. We should be able to avoid such last minute crises in preservation as this one has been. I rise in support of S. 2238, the Technical Corrections Act. The Senate amended that legislation to include a slightly modified H.R. 4526, a bill to provide for the addition of approximately 600 acres to the Manassas National Battlefield Park. As you know, the land in question is part of the Second Battle of Manassas.

The Senate amended the bill language to make clear that the funding for the legislative taking of the William Center tract will come from the claims and judgments fund and not the land and water conservation fund. I support this change, as it reassures everybody that their particular park land acquisition efforts will not be affected by the protection of the Battlefield of Second Manassas. By passing this, and its becoming law, construction on the William Center tract—which is proceeding as we speak—will cease immediately and no further damage will be done to this historic land.

Just as the original battle was hard fought, so has today's battle to protect it been hard fought. You may recall that H.R. 4526 passed the House last August 10 by a vote of 307-98. I want to acknowledge the hard work of the bill's sponsors, our colleagues MIKE ANDREWS and BOB MZAREK, as well as the efforts of FRANK WOLF. I know that the individuals and organizations in the historic preservation community fought and worked hard to win this victory. There was a major coalition of people all working to save the battlefield, especially Annie Snyder and Betty Rankin of the save the battlefield coalition, Tersh Boasberg and Charlie Lord of Boasberg & Norton, Nellie Longsworth and the membership of Preservation Action, Jack Walter, Ian Spatz and Helen Hooper of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Harold Himmelman, Paul Pritchard, and Bruce Craig of the National Parks and Conservation Association, James McPherson, author of the Battlecry of Freedom and Jody Powell. I also want to thank the many, many others who contributed their time and efforts.

I think we have all seen how much adequate planning and funding is needed for protecting all our park resources. We need to know what must be protected and have the means to do it. I would prefer that we plan ahead and not have such battles as we have had on Manassas. In the 101st Congress, I will be considering the issues of general park protection further. In the meantime, I look forward to enactment of protection for Manassas National Battlefield Park. I urge passage of this legislation.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge my colleagues to vote for this tax bill. There are many provisions in this final compromise, and no doubt each of us can find items which we favor as well as oppose. Such is the nature of omnibus tax bills.

Our task in these situations it to make a judgment as to whether the good parts outweigh the provisions which we oppose. In this situation, I feel this bill overall is worthy of our support.

I say this because of two provisions in particular. One is the repeal of the so-called heifer tax, which has imposed an unfair burden on millions of farmers in Wisconsin and across the country. I am a sponsor of a bill to repeal this tax, and this bill includes a provision which accomplishes the purpose of my original proposal. Enactment of this bill will save farmers not only from having to pay added taxes solely as a result of a federally imposed accounting system that does not reflect the true costs incurred in raising livestock to production. Moreover, it ends a paperwork nightmare for farmers, many of whom have appealed to me for relief.

This repeal strikes a blow for the family farmer.

Similarly, the final bill includes a repeal of a totally inappropriate requirement that farmers and other off-road users of diesel fuel pay a tax they do not owe, and then file for a refund. This is simply wrong, and I proposed months ago that this be repealed. The bill follows my recommendation.

As we wind up the 100th Congress, it is fitting that we enact this tax corrections bill. It fixes many of the problems caused in 1986, and overall, it is a step forward. Next year, we must come back and make further refinements and corrections, but let us enact this bill now.

Mr. LELAND. Mr. Speaker, in recent days there was quite a bit of uncertainty as to whether we would adjourn before completing action on H.R. 4333, the Technical Corrections Act. Today I applaud the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committee for their determination resolving the differences in the House and Senate versions of the bill and bringing it before us for a final vote. It was no small task for the conferees to conclude consideration of this bill. The Technical Correction Act is not a simple piece of legislation, it addresses a variety of complicated tax policy issues.

In expressing my support for the conference agreement, I would like to particularly acknowledge the inclusion of language which provides the Internal Revenue Service [IRS] with needed flexibility in regulating charitable contributions by closely held corporations.

Each year, tons of food are distributed to million of low-income individuals and households through the more than 200 Second Harvest food banks. This national organization is primarily dependent upon the support of C corporation food contributions because existing appraisal and reporting requirements mandated by the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 virtually precluded donations from closely held corporations. I have been informed by the American Meat Institute, many of whose members are closely held corporations, that current regulations stand in the way of efforts to encourage its membership's support of Second Harvest through contributions of urgently needed food. in simple terms, poor people are losing access to tons of food that they critically need because of inflexible tax policy.

The conference agreement before us today remedies this situation by allowing the IRS to apply to closely held corporations, making donations to food banks eligible for the same limited disclosure requirements governing donations for C corporations. I believe this provision reflects responsiveness to the needs of the poor and not only supports, but encourages, private sector participation in strategies to alleviate hunger.

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4333, the Technical Corrections Act of 1988. Two provisions of this bill are especially important to my constituents: the repeal of the off-road diesel tax and the exemption from the "heifer tax".

Under current legislation, the diesel excise tax requires that a farmer pay 15.1 cents-per-gallon of diesel fuel to the highway trust fund tax only to have that same money later refunded by the Government. Cash raised by this tax serves as an interest-free loan to the Federal Government at an additional cost of $400 million to the farming industry. Another priority is the repeal of the heifer tax. The revenue increase would offset the cost of the repeal by lengthening farm structure depreciation schedules.

Many farmers and other users of road equipment have expressed their displeasure with this cumbersome Government refund. The Technical Corrections Act would abolish these unwarranted, unfair taxes and sensitively address the needs of the farmer. This bill does not alleviate present economic strain that this past summer's drought has on the agricultural community of Illinois, however, it does provide the U.S. Congress an opportunity to act constructively for the good of the farmer. By exempting the livestock producer while discouraging potential tax shelters, this legislation perfects the practical implementation of the orginal intent.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MOODY].

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this work product and commend the chairman of the committee.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the conference report on the bill, H.R. 4333.

The question was taken.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device and there were—yeas 358, nays 1, not voting 72, as follows:

NATIONAL ASPARAGUS MONTH

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 137) designating the month of May as "National Asparagus Month," with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Senate amendments:

Page 2, line 3, after "May" insert ", 1989,".

Amend the title so as to read: "Joint resolution designating the month of May, 1989, as 'National Asparagus Month'.".

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. WALKER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, can the gentleman explain to me what this is?

This is the National Asparagus Month resolution that came over from the Senate?

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, the gentleman is correct.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL COMMISSIONED CORPS OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE CENTENNIAL DAY

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 395) to designate January 4, 1989, as "National Commissioned Corps of the Public Health Service Centennial Day," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mrs. MORELLA. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, the minority has no objection to this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 395

Whereas the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service of the United States has compiled an exceptional record of service to the health of people of the United States and the world through concerted efforts at disease prevention, health promotion, environmental intervention, disease control, biomedical research, health care delivery, health program management, policy development, and implementation;

Whereas the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service has been instrumental in the achievement of many innovations and breakthroughs throughout the field of health care;

Whereas, because of diverse and varied training and background, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service have maintained a highly effective, mobile, and adaptive cadre of health and medical experts that have performed efficiently during emergencies, epidemics, and other adverse situations with courage, proficiency, and valor;

Whereas the officers of the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service have worked to eradicate diseases such as pellagra and smallpox and improved the health of mothers, children, and handicapped individuals through significant accomplishments such as the control of tuberculosis and the development of protective vaccines;

Whereas the officers of the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service have worked to increase the protection of consumer through the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) and the Mental Health Sysems Act (42 U.S.C. 9401 et seq.) and provided health care services for the Merchant Marine, the Coast Guard, the Bureau of Prisons, American Indians, and Native Alaskans;

Whereas on January 4, 1989, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service celebrates the completion of its first century of existence and begins its second century with the goal of further enhancing the health of the people of the United States through measures such as achieving a drug-free society and eradicating the disease of acquired immune deficiency syndrome: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That January 4, 1989, is designated as "National Commissioned Corps of the Public Health Service Centennial Day". The President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY LABORATORY COMPETITIVENESS ACT OF 1988

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration in the House of the bill (H.R. 5132) to amend the Federal Nonnuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974 to improve the transfer of technology or devices developed by the Department of Energy National Laboratories, and to improve interagency cooperation between the Department of Energy and other agencies with respect to technology transfer.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Tennessee?

Mr. LUJAN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do so just to take this time to ask the gentlewoman to give us some information on this particular bill, and I yield to the gentlewoman from Tennessee.

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, this bill contains a DOE technology transfer study so that we can improve the process of transferring technology from the national labs to the marketplace.

The second element of the bill is a superconductivity initiative for the DOE. High temperature superconductors offer great promise, but if we do not harvest the fruits of this research, certainly we will not reap the benefits.

Mr. Speaker, I thank Congressman LUJAN for all his hard work and cooperation in this bill H.R. 5132. Without his leadership as the ranking minority member on the committee, this could not have come to fruition. Congressman LUJAN has been a tireless ally in our efforts to forge a national energy policy, and his support will be sorely missed in the next Congress. I wish him well in all future endeavors. His presence in this body will leave a void that will take years to fill.

Mr. LUJAN. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MORRISON].

Mr. MORRISON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, we are delighted with the progress that we have made in the area of technology transfer. I support the positive action of the House on this measure.

Mr. LUJAN. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, let me take just one moment to congratulate the gentlewoman from Tennessee, because she has worked very, very hard, probably as hard as any Member—well, I know harder than any Member of this House to bring about this technology transfer legislation.

Technology transfer, I might tell this House, is so important, it is one of the things that in the last few minutes of this Congress is one of the bills that we should be taking up.

Mr. Speaker, this is my last day as an active voting Member of this Congress, and probably nothing is more important than the bill that the gentlewoman has brought before this House today.

I also want to congratulate the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], the chairman of the full committee.

Mr. Speaker, if I may, I would like to commend my colleague, Senator DOMENICI, who has worked very hard with the gentlewoman from Tennessee. Together they have worked this whole thing out.

Mr. Speaker, in this House the gentlewoman from Tennessee deserves full credit for what she has done.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUJAN. I yield to the gentlewoman from Ohio.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want simply to associate myself with the gentleman's remarks about the bill and with the gentleman's remarks about the gentlewoman from Tennessee as being one of the true leaders in the area of technology transfer.

We are very, very pround of that progress in bringing research into private industry, as witnessed by the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. I think what is good for Oak Ridge is certainly good for the country.

We are delighted with this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment in particular the distinguished gentlewoman from Tennessee for her wonderful work. She is one of the real leaders in technology transfer.

Mr. LUJAN. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I will not take very much time, but technology transfer is probably as important as any issue that we can discuss, because technology transfer from the laboratory to the private sector is what makes America great.

Again let me just congratulate the gentlewoman from Tennessee for diligence. If it had not been for her, six times this bill has died, and if it were not for the gentlewoman from Tennessee, it would never have come up.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUJAN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my remarks to the gentleman from New Mexico.

My understanding is that bills of a substantial nature tonight were going to be taken up under suspension.

The gentleman has come here under a unanimous-consent request, and as long as the gentleman has done so, can the gentleman tell us a little more about the bill than that it is important and that people have worked hard on it?

Mr. LUJAN. I certainly can, and I will be very happy to, if I may continue to reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

This bill as it started out had a lot of moneys involved in it, but as it has evolved over the years there is no money involved in it. It is a bill that forms a council. The council really exists already in terms of the people who are working on technonogy transfer within the laboratory. It adds no additional moneys, or very little additional moneys, I might say, because there is always expense in printing things and so on, but it is very, very little that is added to this bill.

It just kind of gives us an opportunity to take from the research in the laboratory some of the research and use it for the benefit of mankind.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, because of the gentleman's imminent departure, I will also depart from the normal routine and not press an objection, but the hour is getting late and we need a little discipline around here.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. LUJAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 5132

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Department of Energy Laboratory Competitiveness Act of 1988".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) domestic competitiveness can be greatly improved through scientific collaboration between United States industry and the Department of Energy laboratories;

(2) the Department of Energy laboratories must be perceived, within the constraints of national security relative to defense laboratories, as easily accessible in order for industry to seriously consider the laboratories as partners for collaborative research and development ventures;

(3) the Secretary of Energy should delegate increased management authority for technology transfer to the Managers of Operations Officies in order to ensure timely consideration of proposed cooperative research and development agreements;

(4) the Secretary of Energy retains full responsibility, oversight and control over Managers of Operations Offices who may be delegated increased management authority under this Act;

(5) the Department of Energy policy of disseminating computer software generated in its research programs has at times benefited foreign companies more than domestic companies;

(6) there should be simple, timely review procedure concerning proposed agreements to utilize or further develop computer software and other technology generated under Department of Energy research and development contracts, or developed with Department of Energy funding;

(7) the existing policy with respect to ownership of inventions at Department of Energy laboratories operated by universities and nonprofit contractors should apply to all products of research and development and should be extended to all Department of Energy laboratories contractors, consistent with existing legislative and executive branch directives.

(8) the Department of Energy laboratories have demonstrated successes in technology transfer, but the effort can be significantly enhanced if—

(A) industry becomes more aware of the laboratories' research and development projects and capabilities;

(B) technology transfer is considered a part of the laboratories' missions;

(C) the laboratories develop a better understanding of the potential needs of industry;

(D) industry collaborates with the laboratories early enough in the research and development process to detect any commercial potential in the products of research and development; and

(E) laboratories involved in national security work take special care to propose technology transfer activities that will not compromise classified data or involve, without express government approval, private entities in nuclear weapons and naval reactor research; and

(9) the Department of Energy laboratories should examine and implement new and innovative methods of communicating with private industry regarding the availability of laboratory user facilities and engaging in cooperative research and development opportunities.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

Section 9(m) of the Federal Nonnuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5908(m)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(3) by inserting at the end of thereof the following:

"(6) the term 'collaborative party' means a person who has entered into a cooperative research and development agreement with a Director of a laboratory pursuant to this section;

"(7) the term 'computer software' means recorded information, regardless of the form or media in which it may be recorded, including computer programs or documentation thereof;

"(8) the term 'cooperative research and development agreement' means any contract between a laboratory manager or operator and any Federal or non-Federal parties under which the laboratory manager or operator provides personnel services, facilities, equipment, or other resources toward the conduct of research and development efforts which would further the purposes for which the funds, used by the laboratory, were appropriated;

"(9) the term 'Director of a laboratory' means the Department of Energy employee, or the Department of Energy contractor's employee, located at the laboratory and heading the employees managing and operating any laboratory;

"(10) the term 'laboratory manager or operator' means (A) the contractor who has signed a laboratory management and operating contract with the Department of Energy (but only with respect to activities relating to such management or operation) or, (B) the Department of Energy, if the laboratory is Government owned and operated.

"(11) the term 'laboratory' means a facility or group of facilities owned or leased by the Department of Energy for energy research, development, or demonstration;

"(12) the term 'Manager of an Operations Office' means the employee responsible for heading a Department of Energy field office, which has responsibility for overseeing, or interacting with, one or more laboratories;

"(13) the term 'developmental property' means any invention, improvement, computer software, technical data, innovation, or prototype made as a result of the research and development activities conducted by a laboratory manager or operator, but does not include real property or such personal property that is not of an innovative nature and is used for the conduct of activities under the laboratory management and operating contract; and

"(14) the term 'technical data' means recorded information of an engineering or scientific nature regardless of the form or the media in which it may be recorded.".

SEC. 4. TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER AT THE LABORATORIES.

Section 9 of the Federal Nonnuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5908) is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(o) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) The Secretary of Energy shall promulgate through regulation, order, or directive—

"(A) model cooperative research and development agreements which are not subject to further approval under paragraph (2);

"(B) generic terms and conditions, which when included in negotiated (nonmodel) cooperative research and development agreements are not subject to further approval under paragraph (2); and

"(C) authority for any Director of a laboratory to enter into a cooperative research and development agreement which requires less than a specified level of Department of Energy funding, such level to be established by the Secretary.

"(2) The Secretary of Energy shall delegate, subject to the guidance and direction of the Secretary, to each Manager of an Operations Office authority to approve cooperative research and development agreements, or parts thereof, recommended by a Director of a laboratory under such Manager's oversight.

"(3)(A) Subject to paragraph (B), each Director of a laboratory may enter into model agreements promulgated by the Secretary under paragraph (1)(A), or other agreements under paragraph (1)(C), after programmatic approval of the activities under the agreement by the Manager of an Operations Office, or may negotiate cooperative research and development agreements subject to approval pursuant to paragraph (2).

"(B) Every cooperative research and development agreement concerning, in whole or in part, nuclear weapons or naval nuclear propulsion shall be subject to the approval of the Manager of an Operations Office, consistent with paragraphs (1)(A) and (1)(B), having oversight over the laboratory involved.

"(C) Any agreement described in subparagraphs (A) or (B) may provide for the disposition or use of property assigned or licensed to the laboratory manager or operator by third parties, or any property voluntarily assigned by such laboratory manager or operator's employees.

"(D) The Department of Energy shall have no rights in developmental property made by collaborative parties, at private or non-Department of Energy expense and independent of such agreement, during the term of any cooperative research and development agreement, unless such rights are specifically granted to the Department of Energy in such agreement, or are authorized for national security purposes under the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2011, et seq.).

"(4) Each Director of a laboratory shall, in negotiating cooperative research and development agreements, and in granting licenses or assignments to third parties (or in granting authority for such third parties to grant licenses or assignments with respect to developmental property subject to this Act) give preference to persons located in the United States who agree that any products embodying such developmental property produced through the use of such developmental property will be manufactured substantially in the United States. Exclusive rights to use any such developmental property shall be subject to the requirements of section 204 of title 35, United States Code.

"(5) The authorities and responsibilities delegated to a Manager of an Operations Office under this section shall, when the laboratory is managed or operated by Department of Energy employees, be delegated to the Director of the laboratory.

"(p) SPECIFIC AUTHORITY.—Each Director of a laboratory may negotiate and include provisions in any cooperative research and development agreement entered into pursuant to this section permitting the laboratory manager or operator—

"(1) to accept, retain, and use funds, personnel, services, and property from collaborative parties, and provide personnel, services, and property to collaborative parties;

"(2) to grant, or agree in advance to grant, to a collaborative party licenses or assignments, or options to developmental property made, in whole or in part, by an employee of a laboratory manager or operator under the cooperative research and development agreement; and

"(3) to the extent consistent with Department of Energy regulations, orders, and directives pertaining to conflict of interest, and to the extent consistent with laboratory programs and agreements in technology transfer, to permit employees or former employees of a laboratory manager or operator to participate in efforts to transfer to the private sector any developmental property such employees or former employees made while in the service of such laboratory manager or operator.

"(q) APPROVAL OF AGREEMENTS.—The Manager of an Operations Office may disapprove or require the modification of a cooperative research and development agreement pursuant to this section within 30 days after receipt of such agreement and recommendation from the Director of a laboratory. Such Manager shall set forth in writing the reasons for any such requirement of modification or disapproval, and shall make available to the appropriate Director of a laboratory a copy of such reasons. Such agreement shall be deemed binding on all parties upon—

"(1) approval of such Manager,

"(2) concurrence of such Manager, that such agreement has been appropriately modified;

"(3) the expiration of 30 days after receipt by such Manager of a modified agreement if the Manager does not disapprove such modification; or

"(4) if no modification is required or such Manager does not disapprove such agreement, upon the expiration of 30 days after the receipt by such Manager of such agreement and recommendation.

"(r) LIMIT ON AGGREGATE AMOUNT OF AGREEMENTS.—A laboratory manager or operator may not spend more than 20 percent of funds received from the Department of Energy in any fiscal year on cooperative research and development agreements entered into by the Director of a laboratory under this section, unless such expenditure is approved by the responsible Manager of an Operations Office.

"(s) RECORDS OF AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary of Energy shall, during the term of a cooperative research and development agreement, withhold from disclosure to the public any part of such agreement which contains proprietary information required under the agreement to be protected against public disclosure.

"(t) AGREEMENT CONSIDERATIONS.—A Director of a laboratory, in deciding what cooperative research and development agreements to recommend, and the Manager of an Operations Office, in deciding whether to approve such agreements, shall comply with section 11(c)(4) of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a(c)(4)).

"(u) DISPOSITION OF TITLE.—(1) Title to any invention or discovery made or conceived under any contract of the Department of Energy shall vest in the Department of Energy, except that developmental property shall vest as follows:

"(A) For developmental property made under a cooperative research and development agreement, or under a contract providing for full reimbursement of Department of Energy expenses, title shall vest in accordance with the terms of such agreement or contract.

"(B) For developmental property, other than developmental property described in subparagraph (A), made by a laboratory managed or operated by the Department of Energy, title shall vest in the Department of Energy, except that title shall vest in the individual maker of the developmental property in the same manner as inventions vest in an inventor under section 14 of the Stevenson-Wyder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710d).

"(C) For developmental property, other than developmental property described in subparagraph (A) or (B), made by a laboratory manager or operator, title shall vest in the laboratory manager or operator in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as title to inventions are vested in small business and nonprofit contractors under section 202 of title 35, United States Code, except that the Secretary may, until such time as the funding agreement is modified, utilize the authority under section 202 to restrict or retain title to developmental property.

"(2) No laboratory manager or operator who has received title to developmental property under this section shall utilize any royalties, or other direct profits, from the transfer of such developmental property out of the laboratory, for the benefit of such laboratory manager or operator, except as is authorized under section 202 of title 35, United States Code, or under sections 12 and 13 of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710b and 3710c), or as may be approved by the appropriate Manager of an Operations Office. All rights and obligations with respect to developmental property owned by a laboratory manager or operator pursuant to this Act shall transfer to the laboratory manager or operator who replaces such owner upon consummation of a replacement laboratory management and operating contract and initiation by the new laboratory manager or operator of activities under such contract.

"(3) Whenever a laboratory manager or operator makes developmental property to which the Department of Energy has determined to restrict or retain title pursuant to paragraph (1)(C), a request by a laboratory manager or operator for any or all of the Government's rights in such developmental property shall be considered in the same manner as title to inventions is considered under section 3131 of the Department of Energy National Security and Military Applications of Nuclear Energy Authorization Act of 1987, as amended (title I of division C of Public Law 99-661; 100 Stat. 4061), subject to the following:

"(A) The Director of a laboratory shall, in the request, report on the matters to be considered under section 3131(b).

"(B) The Secretary of Energy shall delegate the authorities and duties under section 3131, subject to the guidance and direction of the Secretary, to the Manager of an Operations Office having oversight over the requesting laboratory manager or operator. Such Manager shall set forth in writing the reasons for denial of any such request, which shall be available to the requesting laboratory manager or operator.

"(C) The Manager of an Operations Office may not use export control statutes or regulations as a basis for refusing a laboratory manager or operator's request for title.

"(D) Any report to Congress submitted under section 3131 shall also be forwarded to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and natural Resources of the Senate.

"(4)(A) When a laboratory manager or operator receives ownership rights under this section such ownership rights shall be subject to a royalty free license under which the United States, and its contractors, may use and reproduce such developmental property for United States governmental purposes other than for public dissemination of such developmental property.

"(B) When a collaborative party is to receive ownership rights to developmental property made under a cooperative research and development agreement, the Director of a laboratory and the collaborative party may negotiate, on the basis of fairness and equity, whether or not the United States and its contractors are to receive a royalty free license as described in subparagraph (A) for such developmental property.

"(v) PROTECTION OF PROPERTY.—(1) Any computer software technical data, or documentation thereof which is obtained or generated by a laboratory manager or operator shall be held in confidence and shall not be subject to public disclosure for a period of up to two years as determined by the Secretary if the Director of a laboratory (with the concurrence of the appropriate Manager of an Operations Office) determines that there is a reasonable expectation that disclosure of the technical data, computer software or documentation thereof could substantially inhibit its commercial application.

"(2) Technical data, computer software, or documentation thereof described in paragraph (1) may be held in confidence and not subject to public disclosure for a period specified in such agreement, not to exceed 7 years, if such data or software is obtained or generated under a cooperative research and development agreement.

"(3) Nothing in this section shall restrict or limit the ability of the United States, including any laboratory, to utilize developmental property owned, pursuant to this Act, by any laboratory manager or operator, whether such developmental property was made under a cooperative research and development agreement or otherwise.

"(w) LABORATORY MISSION AND PERFORMANCE.—(1)(A) All contracts to operate a laboratory shall contain terms and conditions consistent with this section. Such contracts shall include a provision making technology transfer a mission of the laboratories.

"(B) The Secretary of Energy shall include technology transfer as a factor in evaluating the performance of laboratory managers or operators.

"(2) The Secretary of Energy shall issue within 180 days after the date of enactment of this subsection a standard contract clause to implement this section in the contract for the management or operation of any laboratory.

"(x) MARCH-IN RIGHTS.—The Secretary of Energy may require the licensing to third parties of all developmental property owned by the laboratory manager or operator that is subject to the provisions of this Act in the same manner as provided under section 203 of title 35, United States Code.".

SEC. 5. INTERAGENCY COOPERATION.

The Secretary of Energy, in implementing the amendments made by sections 3 and 4, shall explore innovative ways to cooperate with other Government agencies, including the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The Department of Energy, in cooperating with any other Federal agency, shall minimize unnecessary duplication of programs, projects, and research facilities.

SEC. 6. INFORMATION TO CONGRESS.

Nothing in this Act shall diminish the responsibility of the Secretary of Energy to keep the Congress fully and currently informed, or the right of Congress to review and receive information with respect to any agreement, license, or developmental property subject to this Act.

SEC. 7. TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) Section 9(a) of the Federal Nonnuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5908(a)) is amended by striking "shall vest in the United States" and all that follows through the period at the end of that sentence, and inserting in lieu thereof "shall vest in accordance with subsection (u).".

(b) Section 152 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2182) is amended by striking "shall be vested in" and all that follows through the period at the end of that sentence, and inserting in lieu thereof "shall vest in accordance with section 9(u) of the Federal Nonnuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974.".

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MRS. LLOYD

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mrs. LLOYD:

Strike all after the enacting clause, and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Department of Energy Technology Incentive Act of 1988".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) Domestic competitiveness can be greatly improved through scientific collaboration between United States industry and the Department of Energy laboratories.

(2) The Department of Energy laboratories must be perceived, within the constraints of national security relative to defense laboratories, as easily accessible in order for industry to seriously consider the laboratories as partners for collaborative research and development ventures.

(3) The Secretary of Energy should delegate increased management authority for the transfer of technology developed in civilian programs to the Managers of Operations Offices in order to ensure timely consideration of proposed cooperative research and development agreements.

(4) The Secretary of Energy should delegate management authority for the transfer of technology developed in military programs only to the extent it is consistent with national security considerations.

(5) The Secretary of Energy retains full responsibility, oversight, and control over Managers of Operations Offices who may be delegated increased management authority under this Act.

(6) The Department of Energy policy of disseminating computer software generated in its research programs has at times benefited foreign companies more than domestic companies.

(7) There should be a procedure for timely review of proposed agreements to utilize or further develop computer software and other technology generated under Department of Energy research and development contracts, or developed with Department of Energy funding. Any review of agreements relating to military research should take into account relevant national security considerations.

(8) The Department of Energy laboratories have had successes in technology transfer, but the transfer, but the effort can be significantly enhanced if, with respect to civilian programs conducted in laboratories—

(A) industry becomes more aware of the laboratories' research and development projects and capabilities;

(B) technology transfer is considered a part of the laboratories' missions;

(C) the laboratories develop a better understanding of the potential needs of industry; and

(D) industry collaborates with the laboratories early enough in the research and development process to detect any commercial potential in the products of research and development.

(9) The Department of Energy laboratories should examine and implement new and innovative methods of communicating with private industry regarding the availability of laboratory user facilities and engaging in cooperative research and development opportunities.

(10) National security consideration require a case-by-case review of technologies developed as a result of military research before the Government relinquishes title.

SEC. 3. TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER STUDY.

The Department of Energy shall, consistent with the findings set forth in section 2, conduct a technology transfer study which:

(a) Describes the existing policies and procedures for technology transfer;

(b) Describes the achievements to date under existing policies and procedures; and

(c) Recommends changes or improvements that could be made in technology transfer and any legislative changes that may be necessary to achieve changes or improvement.

Documents prepared by Department of Energy National Laboratories pursuant to such study shall be made available to the appropriate Committees of the Congress upon request. The study shall be submitted to the Speaker of the House and the President pro tem of the Senate within six months after enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE HIGH-TEMPERATURE SUPERCONDUCTOR RESEARCH INITIATIVE.

The Secretary of Energy shall initiate and carry out a cooperative program of research on enabling high-temperature superconductor technology and on the practical applications of such technology (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Initiative').

SEC. 5. PARTICIPATION OF NATIONAL LABORATORIES.

(a) MISSION OF NATIONAL LABORATORIES.—The Secretary shall ensure that the National Laboratories participate in the Initiative, to the extent that such participation does not detract from the primary mission of any participating National Laboratory.

(b) AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary shall enter into such agreements with other Federal agencies, with U.S. private industrial or research organizations, or consortia, or with any college or university, as may be necessary to provide for the active participation of the National Laboratories in the Initiative.

(c) REQUIRED PROVISIONS.—The Initiative shall include provisions for one or more National Laboratories to conduct research and development activities relating to research on high-temperature superconductivity. Such activities may include research and development in associated technologies including thin film and bulk ceramic synthesis and processing and the characterization of physical, chemical, and structural properties in materials.

SEC. 6. FORMATION OF COUNCIL AND CENTERS FOR RESEARCH ON ENABLING TECHNOLOGIES.

(a) COUNCIL.—The Secretary of Energy shall form the Council for Research on Enabling Technologies (hereafter in this subtitle referred to as the Council) that shall be composed or representatives of appropriate government agencies, universities, and industry to provide advise to the Secretary insetting goals and strategies for the Initiative. The Council shall be assembled from existing Department of Energy advisory panels or committees, augmented where appropriate, and shall coordinate the advice with Office of Science and Technology Policy to insure that the Council's advice is consistent with the roles, missions, and activity of other Government agenices.

(b) COOPERATION RESEARCH CENTERS.—(1) The Secretary shall establish cooperative research centers in enabling technologies for high-temperature superconducting materials and applications (hereafter in this subtitle referred to as Centers) at one or more National Laboratories with appropriate university and private industry participants.

(2) The Centers shall be located at National Laboratories that demonstrate expertise in—

(A) high-temperature superconductivity research; and

(B) research in associated technologies including—

(i) thin film and bulk ceramic synthesis and processing; and

(ii) characterization of physical, chemical, and structural properties in materials.

(c) AVOIDANCE OF DUPLICATION.—The Council shall keep appraised of activities taking place at the existing Research Centers on Superconductivity and Superconductivity Pilot Centers. In carrying out the responsibilities of subsection (a), the Council shall recommend to the Secretary and such Centers measures to ensure that unnecessarily duplicative research or activities are not being carried out at these Centers.

SEC. 7. PERSONNEL EXCHANGES.

The Initiative may include provisions for temporary exchanges of personnel between any domestic firm or university referred to in this subtitle and the National Laboratories that are participating in the Initiative. The exchange of personnel may be subject to such restrictions, limitations, terms and conditions as the Secretary considers necessary in the interest of national security.

SEC. 8. OTHER DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY RESOURCES.

(a) AVAILABILITY OF RESOURCES.—The Secretary may make available to other departments or agencies of the Federal Government, and to any participant in research and development projects under the Initiative, any facilities, personnel, equipment, services, and other resources of the Department of Energy for the purpose of conducting research and development projects under the Initiative.

(b) Reimbursement.—The Secretary may make facilities available under this section only to the extent that the cost of the use of such facilities is reimbursed by the user except where normally such facilities are available to users without charge.

SEC. 9. BUDGETING FOR HIGH-TEMPERATURE SUPERCONDUCTIVITY RESEARCH.

(a) To the extent the Secretary considers appropriate and necessary, the Secretary, in preparing the research and development budget of the Department of Energy to be included in the annual budget submitted to the Congress by the President for fiscal years 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995, under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, shall provide for programs, projects, and activities that encourage the development of new technology in the field of high-temperature superconductivity.

(b) Budget Categories.—The programs, projects, and activities described in subjection (a) shall be included in the budget for general science and research activities of the Department of Energy, except, that any programs, projects, and activities that directly support and directly benefit the defense activities of the Department shall be included in the budget for atomic energy defense activities of the Department of Energy.

SEC. 10. COST-SHARING AGREEMENTS.

(a) Permitted Provisions.—The Secretary shall ensure that contracts for the operation of National Laboratories provide the director of each National Laboratory that is participating in the Initiative or the contractor operating any such National Laboratory the authority to receive funds under any cooperative research and development agreement entered into with a domestic firm or university under the Initiative.

(b) Considerations.—The director of each National Laboratory that is participating in the Initiative, in determining the type and extent of its laboratory participation in carrying out work for others, shall undertake such work only when facilities are available and when it would not interfere with Department of Energy programs, and such work shall be conducted in such a way as to not create a future detrimental burden on the National Laboratory.

(c) Limitations.—(1) An amount equal to not more than 10 percent of any National Laboratory's annual budget may be received from and under the Initiative in any fiscal year, except to the extent approved in advance by the Secretary.

(2) Under subsection (a) no National Laboratory may receive from any person more than $10,00,000 of non-appropriated funds, or the equivalent of such amount, under any cooperative research and development agreement entered into under the Initiative, except to the extent approved in advance by the Secretary.

SEC. 11. OVERSIGHT OF COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS RELATING TO THE INITIATIVE.

(a) Provisions Relating to Disapproval and Modification of Agreements.—The Secretary may review a cooperative research and development agreement for the purpose of disapproving or requiring the modification of the cooperative research and development agreement. Each such agreement shall provide a 90-day period within which the agreement may be disapproved or modified by the Secretary beginning on the date the agreement is submitted to the Secretary.

(2) Any determination made by the Secretary shall be made in writing.

(b) Record of Agreements.—Each National Laboratory shall maintain a record of all agreements entered into under this subtitle section and submit such record to the Secretary on an annual basis.

SEC. 12. AVOIDANCE OF DUPLICATION.

In carrying out the Initiative, the Secretary shall ensure that unnecessarily duplicative research is not performed at the research facilities of the Department of Energy (including the National Laboratories) that are participating in the Initiative.

Mrs. LLOYD (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important bill for the competitiveness of this country. It does contain a DOE technology transfer study so that we can improve the process of transferring the technology that we spend about $3 billion or $4 billion a year on to the marketplace.

Mr. Speaker, we produce many Nobel laureates, but we are producing few patents. We hope by this study that we can pave the way to the treasure trove of our federally funded technology on the shelf and see that we can develop the patents so that our competitors do not.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentlewoman from Tennessee [Mrs. Lloyd].

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

TITLE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MRS. LLOYD

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title amendment offered by Mrs. Lloyd: Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to improve the transfer of technology developed by the Department of Energy National Laboratories."

The title amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING THE CLERK TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN ENGROSSMENT OF H.R. 5132, DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY LABORATORY COMPETITIVENESS ACT OF 1988

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that in the engrossment of the bill, H.R. 5132, the Clerk be authorized to make technical and conforming changes as may be necessary to reflect the actions of the House in amending the bill, H.R. 5132, Department of Energy Laboratory Competitiveness Act of 1988.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE HAL DAUB

(Mr. KASICH asked and was permitted to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Speaker, I just would like to take this 1 minute to salute two retiring Members. One is the gentleman from Nebraska, Mr. Hal Daub, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, who I think has done just a fantastic job in the committee.

Mr. Speaker, it is not so important that I am speaking. I do, however, want to salute two of these retiring Members.

I want to say that the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Hal Daub] has been an outstanding member of the Ways and Means Committee. He has worked very well with people on both sides of the aisle. He is very articulate. He is very knowledgeable and he has done, I think, a fantastic job in the Congress. We are absolutely going to miss Hal and we wish him the best of luck as he goes into public retirement just for a short time, I am sure.

Also, Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to the gentleman from California, Mr. Dan Lungren, who I think is one of the sharpest parliamentarians in the House. He figures out ways to slip more of his ideas, constructive ideas and bills in, than I think anybody on the Republican side.

I am going to miss both of them, because as far as I am concerned, they are great examples for the younger Members of the House. I wish them both the best of luck.

THE SEVEN BLUNDERS OF THE THRIFT REGULATORY WORLD

(Mr. LEACH of Iowa asked and was permitted to address the House for one minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEACH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, the time has come for Congress to cease mincing words about thrift problems. The dilemma we are confronted with is of our own making. Too loose laws have led to too loose regulation which in turn has led to too loose banking practices. The overleveraging of other people's money by high-flying thrifts has put taxpayers on the line for billions of dollars of liabilities developed outside the normal budgetary process. Multibillion dollar obligations have been made by politicians refusing to stand up to special interest concerns and made larger by regulators preferring to buy time rather than spread ill winds through an industry strewn with ill will.

The statistics speak for themselves. A $1.3 trillion industry has a negligible capital base, negligible insurance fund, and negligible disincentive to take risks with taxpayer dollars. If the first quarter of 1988 is a guide, the industry is losing money at a $15 billion annual clip. The weak are getting weaker, with Congress facing the prospect of the largest private sector bail out in the history of the Republic.

Commentators like to suggest that regional problems—that is, a weak economy in the oil patch and on the farm—precipitated the savings and loan problem. Actually, there are more human culprits than abstract rationales. The root cause of the thrift problem is greed, the regulator-sanctioned capacity of highflyers to attract and overleverage other people's money because of receipt of Federal or State charters to take deposits backed by Federal insurance.

The quid pro quo—prudential investment and lending practices—has been ignored by a significant element of the industry because regulators followed the pandering exhortations of legislators at both the State and Federal level who have given too much power to too few to exercise too wantonly.

A classic example of egregious thrift power is the regulatory rule that allows savings and loans, but not banks, to put 300 percent of their capital in direct investments. Alleged representatives of the little guy have encouraged thrift investors to use Government insured deposits to speculate in real estate or the stock market rather than home loans.

If executive branch scandals—some have gone so far as to suggest the presence of a sleaze factor—may partisanly be ascribed to Republicans, thrift conflicts of interest can just as fairly be considered disproportionately Democratic. Such is the case because over the years in a battle for powers between savings and loan interests and commercial banks, thrift executives chose up sides with the Democrats, presumably on the assumption that bankers historically identified with the Republican Party. Just as large banks have come over time to be regulated less firmly than small ones, thrifts used their legislative power base within the dominant political party at both the State and Federal level to see to it that they would not become as forcefully regulated as commercial banks.

Compounding the problem of weak regulation and a weak capital base in the thrift industry is the epidemic of greed that seems to exist within a number of overextended institution in growth states. Thrift managers who are in a negative net worth situation understand that they have nothing to lose as they pay premiums to attract deposits insured by others. Hence, there is every incentive—through dividends, salaries, and perks—to live high on the hog today and make risk investments in the hope of striking gold tomorrow. Without stern regulatory oversight, imprudent circumstances are likely to breed more imprudent decisions.

The quandary regulators confront is the problem of how to rein in overextended institutions when their primary resource is an overextended insurance fund. Ingeniously, the short-term answer appears to be a government-backed Ponzi scheme: the issuance of Federal guarantees and long-term capital notes on a fund backed, in theory, by the Treasury. The undeniable effect of such guarantees and note issuances is taxpayer accountability for the printing press of a runaway Federal regulatory agency. But incredulously few in this conservative administration are crying foul; and few in this liberal Congress are prepared to act. No one desires to bite the bullet just now. Apparently the administration and Congress simply want to get out of town on election eve before the horses are out of the barn and a stampede commences.

The only way it can do this is to give license to the licentious. Even though well capitalized and well managed thrift institutions have had record profits in recent years, the "Dr. Jeckyll" third of the industry is so poorly managed that losses not only exceed the deposit insurance fund for thrifts but for banks as well. These losses are almost certainly likely to multiply unless regulators learn just to say "no." Otherwise, a $75 billion headache today could become a $150 billion migraine tomorrow.

The best antidote to public bailouts of individual institutions is the simple requirement that they be adequately capitalized and responsibly regulated.

Unless enormous real capital infusions are made by private sector investors, the only prudent regulatory guidance to the industry should be to shrink. As a representative of individual taxpayers and of an institution with primary responsibility for Federal spending decisons, my strongest admonition to regulators is to shut down the presses. Under today's circumstances where an industry is under water as extensively as this one, schemes that provide paper certificates to induce barely solvent thrifts to take over insolvent institutions stretch the constitutional and legal prerogatives of regulators.

What is needed is a new macroeconomic approach to pruning back, rather than the current micromanagement largess implied in certificated gift-giving. Failure of institutions to comply with growth restraints should lead to immediate removal of key officers and directors.

If thrift industry extravagances continue to be countenanced, the country and the financial community have to be prepared for the greatest jolt in public confidence since the depression. A run up of interest rates sparked either by Congress' inability to constrain the deficit or inflationary policies at the Federal Reserve Board could all too easily spark a run down in thrift industry spreads and assets. A cascade of thrift failure could have an avalanche effect on the economy leading to recession or, quite possibly, depression.

Of all the policy scandals of this Congress, failure to come to grips with the pressure group syndrome that precipitated the thrift overleveraging problem ranks second only to failure to discipline the Federal deficit monster. Despite the implications of interference with a free market, there is no substitute for prudent laws and regulation of financial institutions when the economy as a whole can be so dramatically affected by the decisions of a few.

In this context it is approriate that the seven blunders of the thrift regulatory world be examined and, hopefully, corrected.

1. ALLOWING DIRECT INVESTMENTS FOR THRIFTS

Presently, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board allows thrifts to take equity positions in real estate deals, play the commodity markets, invest in junk bonds and make other kinds of direct investments. Meanwhile, Federal regulators for banks prohibit their institutions from making any direct investment, with incidental exceptions. This discrepancy between the powers of the two principal financial industries is ironic in that the weaker is given a speculative green light while the stronger is more responsibly curbed. This discrepancy in regulation is no doubt one of the major reasons why the thrift industry is in such comparably desperate shape.

Studies done by the Bank Board itself conclude that most of the nontraditional investment powers, including the authority to make direct investments, have proven to be neither superior in return to traditional mortgage lending, nor do they appear to offer significant diversification benefits. One Bank Board study completed in the fall of 1986 found that a grossly disproportionate percentage of thrifts with high levels of direct investment have become FSLIC problems cases, and that those institutions making disproportionate direct investments have created disproportionate liabilities for the FSLIC. Still other studies have shown that it costs FSLIC more, whenever it must liquidate direct investments compared to traditional investments. The insurance corporation, for instance, pays 60 to 85 cents on the dollar on liquidated direct investments, in contrast with about 20 cents on the dollar for more traditional investments.

Aside from the cost to FSLIC of allowing direct investments, there are other fundamental philosophic concerns:

First, should deposit insurance be authorized to advance speculative investments?

Second, should thrift owners be given a competitive investment advantage over real estate developers and other entrepreneurs?

Third, should thrifts be given a competitive "powers" advantage over commercial banks?

The common sense answers to these questions would appear to be: "no," "no," "no."

2. ALLOWING THE GROWTH OF INSOLVENT THRIFTS

Insolvent thrifts are bleeding the industry dry with their predatory pricing for deposits and their investments in risky ventures. Given their broke status, they have every incentive to take risks with insured funds on the assumption that it's—heads they win if a risky investment pays off, and tails the taxpayer loses, if it doesn't.

In California, for instance, the thrift deposit base now exceeds that of the banking industry even though the capital base of many California savings and loans is negligible. Loose regulations stimulated excessive competitive leverage. If an individual or group, for instance, can put together $10 million today, it is possible to obtain a bank charter, in California with regulators allowing $150 million in deposits. With the same $10 million, a savings and loan can be chartered and allowed $2 billion in deposits—with the taxpayer potentially on the line if imprudent loans or spending practices develop.

Accordingly, I have been pressing to require through legislation that the Federal Home

Loan Bank Board prescribe regulations to constrain the growth and reduce the size of undercapitalized thrifts.

While Congress has opted for a legislative status quo, the Bank Board, to its credit, finally got the message and agreed last month to promulgate growth guidelines on the assets of troubled thrifts. While the Board's plan is not as comprehensive as I believe is warranted, it represents a departure from the growth in excess of inflation mandate Chairman Wall has hitherto been pushing. An industry which is losing $1 million an hour simply cannot be expected to grow its way to prosperity, unless its shape becomes so warped as to necessitate compensating Federal bailouts.

3. REGULATORY SPINELESSNESS—THE LINCOLN AND FCA CASES

Not only has the Bank Board been tardy, if not lax, in issuing appropriate regulatory guidelines, it has also capitulated to political pressures in removing thrift problem cases from the jurisdiction of regulators who attempt to crack down on speculative practices. In the case of Lincoln, the Board in an unprecedented step removed an institution from the regulatory jurisdiction of the San Francisco District, because that district objected to Lincoln's untraditional lending schemes. Just as Members of Congress should not be able to use the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as a Santa Claus for friends, thrift owners should not be allowed to use their institutions as private piggy banks.

In the case of FCA, the Board reportedly intends to grant a Federal charter, not out of a desire to apply standards stricter than California's historically loose ones, but because California's State regulator objected to granting extraordinary powers to FCA, including investment banking tie-ins which amount to illegal affiliate transactions under both Federal and State law. Not only is the banking industry not allowed such tie-ins, but the various committees of Congress in their futile efforts to craft expanded powers for the banking industry this year went to explicit lengths to preclude the very kinds of conflicts the Bank Board is endorsing in the FCA deal.

4. SINGLE SOURCE BIDDING

The FCA bidding process is anathema to good government. The Bank Board has given carte blanche to one bidder to negotiate a mulitbillion dollar deal. Perhaps because other bidders have been shut out, the powerful Bass family interests appear to have cast a minnow and landed a whale of a deal.

In separating out a good bank from a bad one, Bass interests have all the upside profit potential contained in the obtaining for free of quality assets while managing for a fee—that is, guaranteed profit—weaker assets. Such an arrangement leaves the Bank Board liable for all the weak assets and puts Bass in an insider position at a later time to purchase these discounted assets at favorable prices. The arrangement also provides for the establishment of a merchant bank, which is neither a subsidiary of the good or bad bank. This merchant bank is authorized a $1.5 billion line of credit at a highly preferential rate—equivalent to a home mortgage rate for what could in essence be a low quality junk bond. The merchant bank would be exempted from normal supervisory controls except in certain cosmetic contingencies.

Extraordinarily, a previous bidder was eliminated despite having committed more capital and having demanded no merchant bank risk. Whatever the merits of the contrasting bid that once was on the table and the allegations of FSLIC numbers gaming in favor of Bass, two facts stand out: the granting of negotiating exclusivity to Bass family interests prevented competition that could have reduced FSLIC costs; the good bank—bad bank arrangement leaves FSLIC totally vulnerable to bearing the costs of resolution of weak assets and leaves Federal insurers with a much more difficult job of selling off these assets in the future because no quid pro quo advantages will accrue to a purchaser and outsiders will not find as attractive the assets of the bad bank that the Bass interests will run as insiders.

5. PUTTING OFF PROBLEMS THAT SHOULD BE RESOLVED TODAY

With unexamined confidence the Bank Board asserts that deal making is cheaper than institution closing. A close look at the Southwest plan leads one to doubt this premise.

Under the Southwest Plan incentives are actually built in for acquirors of failed thrifts to manage assets poorly. Because there is full loss coverage on bad assets for 10 years, acquirors have no incentive to incur asset management and work-out expenses. In addition, the yield maintenance assistance is generous, if not rich. It typically begins at Texas cost of funds plus 275 basis points, declining over 10 years to 175 basis points. Given that well run thrifts hold their overhead expenses to approximately 100 basis points, a handsome profit is guaranteed, particularly on non-earning assets for which the yield subsidy is paid on the original book value.

These deals are not real resolutions of the problems. They are risk-free for the acquirors, but risk-incurring for FSLIC.

Acquirors candidly acknowledge that they do these deals because:

First, they make a risk-free profit by simply holding assets;

Second, even the risk of FSLIC defaulting on its obligation to them can be transferred to the Dallas Federal Home Loan Bank by using bad assets as collateral for loans;

Third, they have a very cheap "call" option on Texas real estate; and

Fourth, they can typically earn back their entire (minimal) capital contribution within the next few years of the 10-year contract.

It is increasingly clear that FSLIC has seriously underestimated the size of the problem in Texas and elsewhere and overestimated the amount of funds it will have to work with over the next 10 years. The chances of a near-term default by FSLIC on its obligations cannot be dismissed.

The future supervisory risk is also significant. The FSLIC forbearance from normal rules for acquirors—that is, reduced capital requirements and special accounting and regulatory forbearances—effectively bind the hands of future Bank Boards. Incentives have become built in for acquirors to take undue risks and pay high salaries and perks since minimal real capital has been invested.

The problems in Texas spin off to the entire Federal Home Loan Bank system because each of the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks has "joint and several" liability on their consolidated obligations. The liabilities caused by the provision of loans against artificially inflated collateral may expose the country to the excess of one over-banked, under-regulated State where the oil-based economy shows few signs of emerging from the doldrums. It also causes the FSLIC-assisted part of the industry to grow exactly where shrinkage would appear most in order. Liquidation may imply greater short-term infusions of real capital, but far smaller long-term liabilities for the taxpayer.

6. ACCOUNTING GIMMICKRY

In virtually all recent FSLIC-assisted deals, FSLIC has agreed (because of its capital loss and yield maintenance coverage on bad assets) to allow the acquiror to restore bad assets to their original book value. These write-ups capriciously increase the reported capital of the whole industry. For example, a Federal Home Loan Bank Board press release stated that the industry's regulatory capital "rose sharply" by $5.8 billion in August. In fact, the capital of the industry continued to fall. The $8 billion in assistance given by FSLIC in August (almost none of which was in cash) implies a $2.2 billion loss rather than gain of capital.

Stated simply, as FSLIC promises to provide cash it doesn't have, it writes up the reported capital of the thrift industry by the same amount. Americans are increasingly seeking corporal punishments for a variety of crimes and mischief. While stocks and pillories are outdated, a public spanking of Bank Board strategists would appear in order.

7. A ROSE MAY BE A ROSE, BUT FSLIC IS NOT CONGRESS

As of this date, FSLIC has issued nearly $13 billion in promissory notes to shore up the balance sheets of failed institutions and almost $8 billion in "assistance guarantees," which are open-ended commitments to protect acquirors of failed thrifts from certain losses entailed in their operation. Whether the full faith and credit of the Congress stands behinds these commitments is statutorily unclear. What is clear is that Bank Board responsibility for note and guarantee issuances cannot responsibly exceed non-Congressionally derived resources available to it. To the extent they do, the Bank Board presumes to take on constitutional authority reserved for Congress. The American people can accept the principle of protecting depositors, but not institutions. If there is no confidence government is working to restrain excesses, the chances that representatives of the public will be forthcoming to the FSLIC plight lessen significantly.

Under the circumstances the case for folding or merging Federal Home Loan Bank regulation with that applicable to the banking industry is compelling. The sterner standards applied to banking should be transferred to thrifts, with regulatory responsibility shifted to the FDIC, Comptroller or a new financial community regulatory body. The put-off-problems-til-tomorrow panacea has failed. The problem of over-leveraged capital in the thrift industry can no longer be dealt with by stringing out the due date. Tomorrow has arrived; the wolf is at the door. The time to face up to reality is here, not by choice, but by necessity.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1792. An act to authorize appropriations for the Office of Environmental Quality for fiscal years 1987, 1988, and 1989; and

S. 2869. An act to authorize appropriations for the completion of certain walls of the Internal Revenue Service Building located in Washington, D.C.

NEW SERVICE OFFERED BY HIS ON NOVEMBER 8 AND 9

(Without objection, Mr. Frenzel was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the House that the House Information System will have a new service available on Election Day, November 8 and November 9, beginning at 9 p.m. on November 8. They will, on channels 27, 29, and 36 of the House television channels, be showing Federal election data.

Channel 27 will have Alabama through Iowa; 29 will have Kansas through New York; 36 will have North Carolina through Wyoming. We will have updated election reports and percentages for those States as complete as we can get them.

In addition, we are going to give access to the AP news wire through HIS on a 24-hour basis. We hope the Members will find this service interesting, and we guarantee that HIS will be conducting no exit polls.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE PETER W. RODINO, JR.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Hughes] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I rise to lead the chorus of praise for the distinguished and beloved dean of the New Jersey delegation and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Peter Rodino.

It has been my personal privilege to serve on the Judiciary Committee with Peter Rodino for the past 14 years, and during that time I have come to know him as a man of wisdom, compassion and courage. His exemplary leadership as chairman of that committee is well known to Members of this House, and the Nation.

For two-score years, Peter Rodino has made his presence known in this body; the major legislation that bears his imprint is too extensive to detail here. But undoubtedly his greatest contributions have been in protecting our constitutional liberties and advancing the civil rights of all Americans. Peter Rodino's role in the passage of major civil rights legislation—including the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the open housing law of 1966, to name just two—was instrumental in making ours a more just society.

All of America had the opportunity to observe Peter Rodino's praiseworthy character during the televised hearings of the Judiciary Committee on the impeachment of President Nixon. His fairness and deliberation were manifest during that time of high emotion and partisan tension. He presided over those historic proceedings in a manner that brought legitimacy to the impeachment process, and credit to this body. By resolutely insisting on the supremacy of the Constitution in our system of government, Peter Rodino has rightfully secured for himself a place of honor in the history of this great country.

Surely, a void will be felt next January when Congress convenes, for the first time in four decades, without the wisdom and leadership of Peter Rodino. The Judiciary Committee will be deprived of a most able helmsman, while the Constitution and Bill of Rights will lose one of their most steadfast guardians in this institution.

Peter Rodino's record of service over the past 40 years, however, is a legacy that will continue to inspire and guide this body in its deliberations. His courtesy and kindness will certainly never be forgotten by anyone who has had the pleasure of knowing him. We will miss him, not only as one of the truly outstanding Members in the long history of the House of Representatives, but, just as importantly, as a good and trusted friend.

As Peter Rodino leaves this great American institution, I want to wish him and his beautiful family God's richest blessings in the years ahead.

[From the Washington Post, Oct. 20, 1988]

PETER RODINO: HE KEPT HIS COMPACT

(By Leonard Steinhorn)

In the flurry of Congress' departure this week, we should not let it pass unnoticed that the end of the 100th Congress also marks the end of the legislative career of Peter W. Rodino Jr. I don't think it's an overstatement to say that he has been a great legislator. In this age of blow-dried candidates and media-driven politics, Peter Rodino has been an exception. During 40 years in Congress and 16 as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, he has followed principles rather than polls, conviction rather than expediency. The nation will surely miss his voice in Congress.

It is common enough to praise politicians by saying they came to Washington but never forgot where they came from. In Rodino's case this is not fulsome praise but the simple truth. In all his years as "Mr. Chairman," he really never did forget that he was the son of an Italian immigrant.

His identification with the common people was natural to him, and it underlay all his work in Congress. He came to Washington as a champion of the post-World War II Fair Deal agenda for working Americans and never wavered. And long before the civil rights movement became a popular cause, he spoke out for racial justice, despite initially representing a white ethnic district not predisposed to civil rights.

His legislative accomplishments are many. He was instrumental in gaining passage of every major civil rights bill of the last 30 years. Less well known but almost as significant was his leadership in 1965 in repealing the odious national immigration quotas that kept out immigrants from southern and Eastern Europe. His distaste for monopolistic business practices led him to promote stronger antitrust laws. His concern for inner-city youths led him to the forefront of the congressional battle against drug abuse.

But for all these accomplishments, even Peter Rodino knows that history will remember him for his role during Watergate. He was an unlikely hero in that difficult time. Throughout the crises, he had but one goal: to restore the integrity of our system and the trust of the people. That is why he resisted the calls of less temperate politicians to hang Richard Nixon and instead conducted the impeachment proceedings with the balance and dignity the Constitution deserved.

His guiding star, during Watergate and throughout his career, was that our system cannot long survive unless we adhere to the principle of equal justice. To him, no one, including the most powerful, is above the law. Anything but pure devotion to that ideal will lead us down a slippery slope to a system of government that protects the rights of some but not others.

Peter Rodino often spoke of our Constitution as a compact with the American people. It pains him that equal justice and civil rights have not been fully realized by all Americans.

Perhaps the greatest irony—and tribute—of his career is that he decided to retire this year to make way for a black congressman who would represent the changing demographics of his district. Peter Rodino's last act in Congress shows that he was willing to keep his compact with the people.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Roukema].

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Hughes], for the wonderful words he has said and the kind and poignant words that he has repeated here tonight on behalf of our colleague, Peter Rodino. I want to add my own words to this tribute.

Mr. Speaker, as the 100th Congress comes to an end, the career of one of the most distinguished Members of the House in modern U.S. history is also coming to an end.

After 40 years in the House as the representative of the citizens of the 10th Congressional District, our colleague, Peter Rodino, is bowing out. I know the decision to retire was not an easy one for him to make. He has dedicated his life to hard and often frustrating work of the Congress. Nevertheless, his legislative accomplishments are numerous and his career distinguished.

Over these past 40 years, our colleague has seen and been part of many profound changes and the drama of a historic period which has changed the face of America.

Elected in 1948, PETER has experienced legislative combat with 8 different Presidents. He has seen the country survive the cold and calculated extremes of the cold war and the Cuban missile crisis. He has witnessed close up and personal one of the most devisive periods of American history, the war in Southeast Asia. He has been part of the civil rights movement and has been cited for his role in the adoption of the Civil Rights Act and for fighting for the rights of minorities in this country. And, he has witnessed the tragic assassinations of three great American leaders.

But perhaps the most important achievement in PETER's long and distinguished career has been his 15 years as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Appointed chairman in 1973, PETER has been quietly effective in the formation of national immigration policy and defining and protecting the Constitution and constitutional law. In this capacity, PETER has also been instrumental in having the words, one Nation Under God," included in the Pledge of Allegience. He was also instrumental in making Columbus Day a Federal holiday. A day of pride for all Americans and a tribute for all of Italian American heritage.

And of course, as we all know, PETER established his place in history during the early 1970's when he led the committee, and the Nation, steadily, methodically and professionally through one of the most profound constitutional crises in our history, Watergate and the impeachment proceedings against President Richard Nixon.

There are certainly hundreds of humorous stories and anecdotes that could be told about this individual and his long career but PETER does not really need us to elaborate on them. He will, I am sure, continue his contributions to public policy in his new professorship at Seton Hall University teaching a new generation of leaders committed to upholding the finest American traditions, the basic tenets of the law, and the noblest ideals of American democracy for the benefit of all peoples of any race, color, or creed. But PETER, please know we will miss you and your expertise and wish you the very best in your next career.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from New Jersey for a fine statement.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FASCELL].

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise to express my appreciation to one of this country's most distinguished public servants, my good friend PETER RODINO. In the rich history of the House of Representatives, few have served with as much dignity, diligence and integrity as the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. After 40 years of service to his constituents of Newark, NJ, and to his country, I think we can all agree that PETE has earned our respect and admiration.

Mr. Speaker, as one who has had the honor of serving in this Chamber for 34 of PETER RODINO's 40 years, allow me to reflect. In 1948, the good people of Newark made a decision all Americans should appreciate; they sent a young man named PETER RODINO to Washington as their Congressman. The United States and Washington were very different when PETE was elected, postwar America had not yet seen Brown vs. Topeka, the civil rights movement had not yet taken shape and segregation was an accepted practice. PETER worked to move America through its postwar era and fought against racial intolerance and bigotry. PETE was working to eliminate the institutionalized prejudices of our society long before he saw riots break out in the streets of Newark. Without my good friend's quiet, but strong leadership, I am certain that many of the landmark civil rights acts of the 1960's would not have flowed out of the Congress and been signed into law. We are all appreciative of Chairman RODINO's ability to craft an effective solution out of a controversial issue.

While those of us who have been fortunate to serve with Chairman RODINO know of his character, the rest of the country learned what kind of person PETER RODINO was when he chaired the impeachment proceedings of President Nixon. He listened to the rhetoric and innuendo, separated the fact from the fiction, and gave President Nixon the fair and equitable treatment that the situation called for. Through his chairing of the impeachment hearings, when all was said and done, it was recognized that he gave to each American the realization that the Congress had brought honesty and dignity to Government at a time when that was sorely needed. For his good work during the Watergate scandal and the subsequent impeachment hearings, Democrats and Republicans owe a debt to PETER RODINO that can never be repaid. He is truly one of the great Americans of our times.

I have been honored to serve on the Select Committee to Investigate Covert Arms Transactions with Iran, and Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control with PETE. Mr. Speaker, a leader of the caliber of PETER RODINO comes along rarely. PETE has never been one to leap to conclusions without carefully contemplating the entire issue and hearing all the arguments. For that alone he will be missed. We shall miss also his leadership; his dedication to constitutional principles; to the achievement of equality; elimination of discrimination and his pursuit of truth and justice.

Jeanne-Marie and I extend our best wishes for a happy and rewarding retirement to our good friend, PETER RODINO.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for those remarks.

I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE].

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from new Jersey, Mr. HUGHES, and very much appreciate his taking this time to say a few words about one of the great legends of this body, PETER RODINO. I had the honor, the pleasure, the experience, great experience, of experiencing for 14 years with PETER RODINO on the Committee on the Judiciary, and I never met a finer gentleman, a better lawyer nor a more exemplary Congressman in the fullest sense of those terms than PETER RODINO.

I have listened to my colleagues talk about what he did for racial equality, how he fought it, how he fought for fair housing laws, how he fought for the Voting Rights Act, how he fought for human rights and human dignity, and to remove color barriers, and I watched him do that and I even participated, along this very important struggle, but I must say no Member carries water more for the civil rights community and all of its dimensions than PETER RODINO.

I am sure PETER RODINO would like to serve in this body another term and another term. He is vigorous. He is healthy. His mind is as acute and alert and as productive as it ever was, but somehow or another that civil rights community decided that his work for racial equality was over, that his fighting for the Voting Rights Act so that people, no matter where they work, no matter what their culture or their heritage, they would have a right to vote and their vote counted, and this enormous unequaled record of fighting for civil rights is now to be put on the shelf because the civil rights community has decided to put a fresh one in where we had 40 years of incredibly fertile, useful, productive service, and that is a bitter lesson to me as someone who observes this happen before my eyes.

I see where loyalty and gratitude somehow or another gets taken out of the occasion, and Peter Rodino must step aside for reasons that baffle me, especially for someone who has fought for the civil rights community as he has.

He will be missed, but he has friends that will far outlast the sorrow and the pain of Peter Rodino having to retire before his time.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois, and I yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rangel].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, let me thank my friend from New Jersey for taking time out to allow us to share our love and respect for Peter Rodino.

It is strange to hear people say that Peter Rodino is stepping aside because of civil rights activists, when Peter Rodino made his independent judgment as to what he thought was good for himself, the Congress and the Nation. I think it is ridiculous for people to read into this what the people in a given congressional district have decided what is in their best interests, and the fact remains that every time Peter Rodino said that he wanted to run for reelection, I have felt proud to not only support Peter Rodino but to do what little I could do to make certain that he is elected.

It seems to me that when a community has its own interests, its own culture, its own racial background, it has a great opportunity to participate in this American dream, become a part of this august body and a decision of an incumbent decides this is what he would want done, instead of people becoming baffled and confused who are already Members, they should join in and say that this is the epitome of civil rights by a man who does not just talk about it but a man who has truly lived it.

Peter Rodino, really, I served with as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and really think that all Americans have a sense of obligation as the way he kept that committee together, how he kept Congress together, how he made certain it was not a question of liberals and conservatives or Republicans and Democrats during the impeachment hearings, but to make certain we weighed the facts and did what was great for America.

Let us not look behind his reasons as to why he made a decision, but let us laud him and make certain we wish the best for him, the best for his family and made this history before him, may his life before him be just as rich as the strong history and the legacy that he leaves behind. He raises the standard for all of us who are privileged to serve.

Mr. Speaker, it is a very high honor for me to rise today and pay tribute to the able and distinguished chairman of the House Committee on the Judiciary, Representative Peter W. Rodino, Jr. In December, Chairman Rodino will conclude 40 years of public service to the citizens of the 10th Congressional District of New Jersey and the Nation as a Member of the U.S. Congress.

Few men who have served in this body have achieved the level of respect and admiration that Peter currently holds with the Members of this body. He is respected and admired for his sense of honesty, compassion, and fairness. These rare and unique qualities were especially evident during the summer of 1974, when the House Committee on the Judiciary was charged with beginning impeachment proceedings against the 37th President of the United States, Richard M. Nixon. Perhaps it was there, as these proceedings were being watched by millions around the world, that Peter helped steer this Nation through one of the most painful and difficult periods in our history.

In particular, on the issue of civil rights for minorities in this country, Peter has been exemplary. Passage of every major piece of civil rights legislation for the last 20 years has had Peter's input and stamp of approval. For example, he drafted the fair employment practices provision of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Whether the issue was a Federal holiday to honor Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., or one of fair housing, minorities and indeed, all people of good will, knew that they had a staunch and unwavering ally in Chairman Rodino.

Peter, I commend and salute you as you near retirement from the U.S. Congress for a job well done. It has been a privilege and an honor to have had the opportunity to serve with you in this great body. I wish you well, knowing that although you will no longer be an active Member of the U.S. Congress, you will continue to be an active voice on those issues that are near and dear to your heart.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for that nice statement and I want to yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish], the ranking Republican on the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, it is very fitting that Members of this body reflect on the extraordinary public career of our colleague and friend, the gentleman from New Jersey, Peter W. Rodino, Jr. His many years of congressional service—spanning almost one-fifth of our history as a nation—have been characterized by fidelity to the Constitution, vigilance in championing civil liberties, and sustained interest in our immigration and refugee policies.

Millions of Americans know the story of how a new chairman of the Judiciary Committee led a fair and methodical inquiry into the conduct of a sitting President. Peter Rodino's dispassionate leadership of our committee in that troubled time won him the admiration of his colleagues and the gratitude of his country. The name Peter Rodino became synonymous in the public consciousness with respect for the rule of law.

If Peter Rodino had done nothing else in public life besides leading the impeachment inquiry, he would have earned an important place in our Nation's history. In fact, he has done so much more! Advances in the administration of justice bear his mark. He has championed every civil rights statute of his time. He has left a major imprint on our immigration and refugee laws as a result of decades of effort to promote generous, humane, and nondiscriminatory policies.

Peter Rodino, beginning with his earliest years in the Congress, championed the abolition of the discriminatory national origin quota system of immigration law—an effort that reached fruition in 1965. In eloquent floor remarks that year, the gentleman from New Jersey extolled the diversity of our population and concluded in words that ring true to this day:

> The question of immigration is so basic to our welfare, so basic to our international relations, and so basic to the growth and development of this country that we must make every effort to place present and future national needs above the garbled echos of past prejudices.

Peter Rodino, a forceful advocate of fair legal immigration policies, focused in the 1970's and 1980's on the problem of illegal immigration. The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 reflected his tireless efforts to deter future unlawful entry and treat undocumented persons with compassion.

The gentleman from New Jersey has displayed a deep concern for the welfare of persecuted people. He was an architect of the Refugee Act of 1980, which he accurately described in floor debate as "one of the most important pieces of humanitarian legislation ever enacted by a U.S. Congress." He has been a great supporter of international relief efforts on behalf of refugees and has taken a keen interest in the welfare of international refugee organizations.

Peter Rodino is a quiet man whose actions stand for compassion and principle. He demonstrates steadfast devotion to civil liberties—refusing to yield to popular tides. He lives the Constitution every day and continually reaffirms his commitment to humanitarian values.

I have been proud to sit at his side in the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York and yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. Udall].

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, what I have to say about Peter Rodino is consistent with what every Member here has said. He is a great American and it has been with great pride to have served with him.

□ 0015

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield briefly to the distinguished gentleman from New York.

Mr. GREEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, most of those who have spoken this evening on the special order of the gentleman from New Jersey have addressed themselves to PETE RODINO's national significance and that is enormous.

I would just like to relate a little local incident of which I am familiar because I was there.

From 1970 to 1977 I served as Regional Administrator of HUD covering New Jersey, New York, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Because of some problems in Columbus Houses, a project in PETE RODINO's district, he asked Bill Barrett, the late representative from Philadelphia, the late chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing, to come up to Columbus Houses one Saturday and look at the problems there. Of course I came over as regional administrator.

It was obvious from the occasional bottle descending from the upper stories of that housing project as we walked from building to building to inspect it that all was not well. But it was also very clear when we gathered in a parish hall after our walkthough that PETE RODINO, back in this district, was exercising the same kind of leadership that he exercised here in the House of Representatives. This was the case of a black housing project in the middle of what was otherwise a largely Italian-origin neighborhood in Newark and plainly there were some problems between the two communities. And yet, though it could not have been politically advantageous for him to do so, nonetheless there was PETE RODINO on this Saturday afternoon busily engaged in trying to bridge the gap between these two communities, trying to see what could be done to help improve conditions in the housing project and at the same time make the housing project a better neighborhood for the community at large.

Let me say in conclusion that once I came here some years later the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RODINO], has always been as helpful as he could to me as I have come to him with problems of the courts in the Southern District of New York. I just want to express my appreciation to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], for his taking out this time when we can all express our appreciation to PETE RODINO for the marvelous work he has done both here in the Congress and back home in Newark.

Mr. HUGHES. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I know there are a lot of other Members who want to address themselves on behalf of PETE RODINO. I believe we are ready to move ahead with the legislative business of the House but I am going to yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] for a brief statement.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, so much has been said about what the gentleman has done over the years.

Mr. Speaker, in the 6 years I have been here, it has been an absolute privilege for me to be part of the committee which the gentleman from New Jersey chaired and to see the way, in fact, he has devoted his whole career to the preservation of the rights of the American citizen under the Constitution and has been a guardian of those rights for every American. I am proud that PETER RODINO has become an important part of the history of this House.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask Members to provide their remarks for the RECORD and submit statements for the RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, I have a series of statements of Members who want to be heard.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, as we draw to the close of the 100th Congress I am honored to rise in tribute to our very distinguished colleague and chairman of the Judiciary Committee PETER RODINO, a man whose 40 years in Congress and 16 years as Judiciary Committee chair have demonstrated a selfless, strong, and committed leadership to this country. His mark on American politics is legendary.

I am proud to have served under this leadership during my tenure in Congress. But well before I was elected, PETER RODINO was fighting for civil liberties and equal justice for all Americans. The Voting Rights Act, Fair Housing Act, and the Civil Rights Restoration Act are just a few of the examples of the major civil rights legislation that PETER RODINO played a vital role in achieving, to bring forth a new era of opportunity for Americans regardless of race. He fought at every turn for diversity in business through strong antitrust legislation. He never faltered in his commitment to working Americans.

Mr. RODINO is perhaps best known for his even-tempered handling of the Watergate hearings. PETER RODINO's conduct during these historic meetings had a profound and lasting impact on my own approach to this office, and held forth a standard by which we all strive to abide. Indeed, PETER RODINO guided us through a tumultuous time in our history, with a steady hand, and with utmost regard for truth without ever appealing to our less politic demeanor.

Mr. Speaker, PETER RODINO's dedication to his office and his country has led to a better nation and a better Congress. Let us all come forth to assue him that his dream of true equality and justice will continue through us all. "Mr. Chairman," your presence will be painfully missed, but your great vision shall forever live on.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, my good friend and colleague, PETER RODINO, will be leaving Congress at the end of this session and we will miss him deeply. For the past 36 years PETER and I have served together on the Judiciary Committee and I have grown to admire him for his skill and dedication as a committee chairman.

Our Nation owes a tremendous debt of gratitude to Chairman RODINO for his outstanding service in the House of Representatives and as chairman of the Judiciary Committee for the past 15 years.

He has led the Judiciary Committee with skill, dignity, and integrity through some of our Nation's most trying days. He is deeply committed to the rule of law and to a judicial system that carries out the principles of our Constitution.

All of us on the Judiciary Committee will miss PETER RODINO's leadership and dedication, the Congress will miss his contribution to the legislative process, the people of New Jersey's 10th District will miss his skillful representation of their interests for the past 40 years, and I will miss him as a friend and a valued colleague.

His work here in Congress has set a high standard of excellence for others to follow who believe in progressive government. I will miss his wise counsel and warm friendship and I wish him the very best that life has to offer.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker; I am delighted to join with my good friend from New Jersey, Congressman BOB TORRICELLI, who has reserved this special order, in paying tribute to an outstanding American—the Honorable PETER W. RODINO, JR.—who is retiring from the Congress after 40 years of distinguished service to our country.

PETER RODINO has been my close and trusted personal friend for over 25 years, and I am proud to have had the privilege of serving in the House of Representatives with this great American. He is a tower of strength in the Congress, and is a champion of civil rights and civil liberties for all of our citizens. He continues to receive the praise, respect, and admiration of all of his colleagues for the role that he has played, as the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, in preserving and protecting constitutional rights.

As floor manager of the 1965 Immigration and Nationality Act, PETER RODINO played a key role in repealing the discriminatory immigration quotas of the Walter-McCarran Act. He also played an important role as the floor manager of the 1966 civil rights bill and the Voting Rights Act extension of 1982. Of equal importance to these civil rights laws, he also has been instrumental in stopping legislation which infringes on individual rights and liberties, or seeks to destroy the delicate constitutional balance and separation of powers.

PETER RODINO will always be remembered as the gravel-voiced chairman of the Watergate impeachment hearings in 1974, where he exercised great patience and the utmost in statesmanship. His demeanor insured that our Constitution was protected and that no political considerations would ever enter into these hearings. His fairness insured a smooth transition of power during one of the most turbulent and troubling times in our Nation's history.

At the forefront of protecting rights and liberties, PETER RODINO has also worked tirelessly to protect the rights of minorities, the poor, and the disadvantaged, and his efforts have left behind the promise of hope and have made our land a stronger and better country.

PETER RODINO has dedicated his life to public service. He is a decorated veteran, serving in the U.S. Army during World War II. During the 20 terms he has served in the Congress, he has provided exemplary service to his constituents from the 10th Congressional District of New Jersey, and his service to our country has been monumental. His dedication to the principles of our Constitution is an inspiration to his friends and fellow citizens, and his work and his accomplishments will long be remembered by those of us who had the honor of serving with him in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to share with my colleagues an article which appeared today in the October 20 edition of the Washington Post, commending PETER RODINO for his many achievements in the House of Representatives, and a copy of that article follows:

[From the Washington Post, Oct. 20, 1988]

PETER RODINO: HE KEPT HIS COMPACT

(By Leonard Steinhorn)

In the flurry of Congress' departure this week, we should not let it pass unnoticed that the end of the 100th Congress also marks the end of the legislative career of Peter W. Rodino Jr. I don't think it's an overstatement to say that he has been a great legislator. In this age of blow-dried candidates and medria-driven politics, Peter Rodino has been an exception. During 40 years in Congress and 16 as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, he has followed principles rather than polls, conviction rather than expediency. The Nation will surely miss his voice in Congress.

It is common enough to praise politicians by saying they come to Washington but never forgot where they come from. In Rodino's case this is not fulsome praise but the simple truth. In all his years as "Mr. Chairman," he really never did forget that he was the son of an Italian immigrant.

His identification with the common people was natural to him, and it underlay all his work in Congress. He came to Washington as a champion of the post-World War II Fair Deal agenda for working Americans and never wavered. And long before the civil rights movement became a popular cause, he spoke out of racial justice, despite initially representing a white ethnic district not predisposed to civil rights.

His legislative accomplishments are many. He was instrumental in gaining passage of every major civil rights bill of the last 30 years. Less well known but almost as significant was his leadership in 1965 in repealing the odious national immigration quotas that kept out immigrants from southern and Eastern Europe. His distaste for nomopolistic business practices led him to promote stronger antitrust laws. His concern for inner-city youths led him to the forefront of the congressional battle against drug abuse.

But for all these accomplishments, even Peter Rodino knows that history will remember him for his role during Watergate. He was an unlikely hero in that difficult time. Throughout the crisis, he had but one goal: to restore the integrity of our system and the trust of the people. That is why he resisted the calls of less temperate politicians to hang Richard Nixon and instead conducted the impeachment proceedings with the balance and dignity the Constitution deserved.

His guiding star, during Watergate and throughout his career, was that our system cannot long survive unless we adhere to the principle of equal justice. To him, no one, including the most powerful, is above the law. Anything but pure devotion to that ideal will lead us down a slippery slope to a system of government that protects the rights of some but not others.

Peter Rodino often spoke of our Constitution as a compact with the American people. It pains him that equal justice and civil rights have not been fully realized by all Americans.

Perhaps the greatest irony—and tribute—of his career is that he decided to retire this year to make way for a black congressman who would represent the changing demographics of his district. Peter Rodino's last act in Congress shows that he was willing to keep his compact with the people.

Congressman PETER RODINO can retire with the assurance that through his efforts our Nation has greatly benefited, and there is no tribute higher than this. I extend to my dear friend, PETER RODINO, my best wishes for a healthy and happy retirement.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in deep lament that with the end of this Congress PETER RODINO will no longer be a Member of this House. One of the truly illustrious careers of any Member of this body has been that of PETE RODINO. Throughout the decades he has served in this House, he has made an outstanding record. Always keen of mind, exceptionally dedicated to this House, to our Constitution, and to our country, PETER RODINO has stood out as a symbol and a disciple of all that was good and great in America. I know of no Member in my experience in the Congress who has more deeply revered our Constitution and to whom the Constitution has had a more poignant meaning than to PETE RODINO. Time after time as he and I walked from the Capitol to the Rayburn Building we have stopped to let him pour out his deep dedication to the meaning of our Constitution and the deep feeling that he had for that great document.

The most illustrious part of PETER RODINO's House career has been his chairmanship of the House Committee on the Judiciary. As chairman of that great committee he had an opportunity to reflect what the U.S. Constitution meant to him, and as he viewed it, to the American people. In the consideration of legislation and finally in the consideration of a resolution to impeach the President of the United States, he rose to his greatest heights of dedication to the Constitution and to patriotism and to the love of our country. His example as he presided over the Judiciary Committee and finally the adoption of an impeachment resolution against a President, PETER RODINO set an example of heroic citizenship comparable to the heroic action of a brave soldier upon the battlefield. And in other impeachment proceedings he, too, has discharged his duty with the faithfulness of a great patriot.

PETER RODINO is beloved by all the Members of this House because of his kind and charming manner, the genuineness of his friendship, and his always friendly smile.

I have been very close to PETE RODINO and his friendship has been one of the warming experiences of my heart. While I am in this House, I shall immeasurably miss the warm smile, the many friendly conversations, the stirring discussions about our Constitution and our country which I have enjoyed with PETE RODINO.

PETE, my heart and my affectionate good wishes to you and your family will always be with you, and crowning many of my happy moments in this House will be my association and my friendship with you.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to take part in this special order honoring our colleague, Representative PETER W. RODINO of New Jersey. We here in Congress are aware of the many accomplishments of PETER RODINO and he's known across America for his fine work on the Judiciary Committee at several key moments in recent history. It is fitting that we honor PETER RODINO today for his 40 years in Congress. He is one of the greats here in Washington and he will be greatly missed.

I have served in Congress with PETER RODINO for almost 36 years. He has always impressed me with his day-to-day work, but 2 moments particularly stand out. The first is his leadership role in the 1960's on the sensitive issue of civil rights.

It took many years of effort by leaders around the country and here in Congress to get effective civil rights laws on the books. As a key member of the Judiciary Committee, PETER RODINO was in a position to make a difference.

In 1957, 1960, 1964, and 1968 he wrote the majority reports on civil rights bills and helped steer them through the legislative process. In 1965, PETER RODINO authored the Voting Rights Act and worked tirelessly to see it enacted. The Voting Rights Act stands today as a symbol of true equality for all Americans. It is a source of pride for all of us who supported it and we can all be thankful for the brilliant work of PETER RODINO in the battle for civil rights.

The second moment that stands out in all of our memories of PETER RODINO is his steady leadership during the difficult days of the Watergate scandal. In 1973, PETER RODINO became chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Within a year he was heading the first Presidential impeachment investigation in over a century. The Nation held its breath as the investigation unfolded. The integrity of the Presidency and of Congress was at stake. After that episode passed, it was clear that the leadership of PETER RODINO had carried us through some of the darkest days in American history. He became a hero to millions of Americans and to many of us here in Congress.

Mr. Speaker, PETER RODINO has taken a leadership role on many issues since the Watergate investigation and more recently the Iran-Contra investigation. He has worked hard on law-enforcement legislation, immigration legislation, and refugee measures. A full list of his accomplishments in Congress would fill a book. He has served this country in the Army and in the Congress. He has been honored in this country and around the world. I wish

PETER the best of everything in his retirement years. We can say of PETER RODINO that others will come after him, but no one will take his place.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, as the days of this historic 100th Congress near their end, it is with both joy and sadness that I rise today to pay tribute to House Judiciary Committee Chairman PETER RODINO, who is retiring after 40 distinguished years of service in the House of Representatives.

It is difficult in this time and space to enumerate the countless achievements Chairman RODINO has bestowed upon the Congress and the American people. Many of my colleagues, the press, and historians have already noted the achievements which will mark the chairman's lofty place in our history.

What is important to note, however, is that his guidance in passing legislation like the Civil Rights Act of 1964 or the Voting Rights Act of 1982, PETER RODINO vigorously championed the civil and constitutional rights of the individual. Were it not for his efforts in these areas, the strides which we can point to today that have narrowed the inequalities among our people would be lessened.

Many Americans remember Chairman RODINO most for his leadership in presiding over the 1974 Watergate hearings. His meticulous and deliberate style in this role was indeed a reassuring influence on an American public whose faith in our system had waned due to the events surrounding this loathesome affair.

For me, I will carry for all time fond recall of Mr. RODINO's counsel and influence in helping me secure the passage of the landmark Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986—the bill I initiated to revamp our Nation's immigration laws. The 1986 act is a momentous measure which culminated a 6-year effort of Congress to gain control of our Nation's borders and to do justice to undocumented aliens. His guidance was invaluable to me and to the successful passage of the measure.

Upon retirement, Chairman RODINO has indicated his intention to pursue a vocation in writing and teaching. That would be most appropriate, as he has taught the Congress and the Nation during his service in the House of Representatives.

It has been an honor and a pleasure to serve with him both on the Judiciary Committee and in the House. He will be missed here as a legislator and as a person.

I wish to insert, at this point, editorials which appeared in the New York Times and the Washington Post noting Mr. RODINO's retirement.

[From the New York Times, Mar. 16, 1988]

CHAIRMAN RODINO RETIRES, WITH GRACE

For one who has enjoyed the power and privileges that Congressional seniority brings, leaving Capitol Hill for good isn't easy. So it was understandable that Representative Peter Rodino of New Jersey, who has spent more than half his 78 years in the House, might have had second thoughts about retiring after his current term.

But Mr. Rodino has now confirmed his plans to leave, and ended a distinguished career with grace. "I believe that my part of the journey in this great American experiment is at its end," he said. "I feel I have served my time and purpose."

Some time. Some purpose.

When Peter Rodino was first elected to the House in 1948, America was a radically different nation. For one thing, it had a home-grown variety of apartheid. It was part of Mr. Rodino's purpose to eradicate that evil. He did so as a legislative champion of civil rights—floor managing the 1966 Civil Rights Bill and, as a Judiciary Committee chairman, writing the Voting Rights Act extension in 1982.

Reluctantly at first, then vigorously, he put his influence behind the landmark Immigration Act of 1986. But what he may best be remembered for was the fairness with which he presided over the Judiciary Committee's 1974 Nixon impeachment hearings. More than a decade later, a colleague recalled yesterday, Mr. Rodino would proudly display mementos from those hearings, which he justifiably regarded as among his finest hours.

It was the Voting Rights Act that led some in his district to push for Mr. Rodino's retirement. Largely white, ethnic and middle-class in 1948, his district acquired a black majority by court order in 1972. The intent had been to open a path for the election of a black representative, but the voters kept returning Mr. Rodino to Congress by wide margins. In 1986, against an opponent backed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, he won by a margin of almost 2 to 1.

He implied in that election that his 20th term would be his last. Now it is official.

There are two ways to retire from Congress, a colleague said. Some stay on until they are over the hill and have begun to embarrass themselves; some leave while they are on top and still appreciated. Typically, Peter Rodino took the noble way.

[From the Washington Post, Mar. 16, 1988]

MR. RODINO STEPS ASIDE

When it became clear in 1973 that the House of Representatives might have to consider the impeachment of Richard Nixon, people ran down the list of committee chairmen to see who would be conducting the hearings and came upon the name of Peter Rodino. It was not a familiar one to many outside the House: Mr. Rodino had been elected from the 10th district of New Jersey in 1948, but he did not became chairman of the Judiciary Committee until more than two decades later. But as has happened before in American history, the responsibility devolved upon a person capable of fulfilling it. Chairman Rodino superintended the staff that built the factual record, he gave all sides opportunity to present their arguments, and he made the case for the result that he, with some reluctance, believed was right. It was a judgment that was quickly and entirely vindicated.

Conducting those impeachment hearings was not Mr. Rodino's only large contribution in the House, from which he announced Monday he will retire this year. As a member and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, he had an important part in the framing of civil rights and immigration legislation, in handling technical matters like bankruptcy and the broad economic issue of antitrust. In the 1980's, he played a key role in the renewal of the Voting Rights Act, the passage after arduous debate of immigration reform and the passage just this year of the Grove City bill. He has not only passed good laws; he has also worked to thwart bad ones.

Mr. Rodino brought to his long career an unusual ability to adapt as the political world changed around him. He was first elected to the House as a young Italian-American New Dealer in a historically Republican and white Protestant district; by 1972 most of his constituents were black. He was elected altogether 20 times by solid majorities—even in recent Democratic primaries against serious black opponents, when his longtime support of civil rights and work helping black constituents when they were only a small minority in the district were remembered. Mr. Rodino will also be well remembered in the House for his 40 years of remarkably vigorous and productive service.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, these hallowed halls in which we serve have been firsthand witness to the careers of some truly remarkable people who have dedicated their lives to guiding our Nation to greatness. During my service in the House, I have indeed been privileged to have the opportunity to work first hand with one of those truly remarkable people.

I am speaking, of course, of my most distinguished colleague from New Jersey, the Honorable PETER W. RODINO, JR., who, with our adjournment, will be concluding a 40-year career that stands as one of the most illustrious in the history of this great body. It has been one of the highlights of my 19 years in the U.S. House of Representatives to have been able to serve with and work alongside PETE RODINO.

Mr. Speaker, our words in praise of PETER RODINO never do justice to all that he has accomplished and to all that his work has meant to our Nation. Perhaps the greatest barometer of his achievement is the fact that while he attacked the problems of our Nation with unparalleled vigor, he represented his constituents with equal dedication and, in return, they elected him to the House for 20 consecutive terms. I can think of no greater endorsement of achievement.

PETER RODINO will be remembered for many contributions. To his great credit and foresight, they are contributions that I know will stand the test of time and affect our country for decades to come. I do not believe there has been a greater champion of civil rights in the U.S. House of Representatives than PETER RODINO. In 1966, he was the floor manager of our Nation's landmark civil rights legislation and in 1982, as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, he wrote the Voting Rights Act extension that has been critical in assuring all Americans the right to vote. As chairman of the Judiciary Committee, he put his stamp on numerous other important pieces of legislation dealing with immigration, bankruptcy, and antitrust.

About this litany of accomplishments, it is quite possible PETER W. RODINO, JR., will be best remembered for the fair and evenhanded manner in which he presided over the Judiciary Committee's 1974 Watergate hearings. As we all know, Mr. Speaker, this was a time of great turmoil for our Nation and for our Constitution, and Mr. RODINO served both in exemplary fashion in the way he chaired those hearings.

I know that both the Nation and the people of New Jersey will miss PETER RODINO's leadership, his vigor, his dedication, and his patriotism. Personally, I will miss him both as a colleague here in the House and as a member of our New Jersey delegation. But it also gives me great comfort to know that our Nation has been forever enriched by all that PETER RODINO has accomplished during his four decades in Congress, and for that, we as a nation, and those of us from the State of New Jersey, are eternally in his debt.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my colleagues in honoring a fellow Member of the House from my home State of New Jersey who, after dedicating over 40 years of his life to public service, has announced his decision to not seek another term of office. I know my colleagues share with me the sentiment that Mr. RODINO will be missed in this Chamber.

PETER RODINO, as we all know, has had a most distinguished career. After graduating in 1937 from what is today Rutgers University with a degree in law, he was decorated for his tour of duty in the Army during World War II. Two years after his discharge from the service he was elected to represent the 10th District of New Jersey in 1948 and has served his constituency honorably ever since.

As we all know, Mr. Speaker, the early 1970's were difficult years in the history of our Nation. Historians will long write of the steady hand and sense of fairness that Mr. RODINO displayed as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee during those years. He faced the challenges of the times with grace and respect toward all.

Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that Mr. RODINO and I find ourselves on different sides of the aisle that so often divides this House. I have, however, had the pleasure of working closely with him on several occasions, inasmuch as he is the dean of the New Jersey congressional delegation and I am the secretary.

During his many years of service, Chairman RODINO has been a driving force as this body has addressed the issues of civil rights, crime, drug abuse, and immigration. He will be greatly missed by this body, as his service will be missed by the residents of the 10th District of New Jersey. I know my colleagues join with me today in wishing him all the best in his years to come.

Mr. DWYER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, we are gathered in this Chamber tonight to pay tribute to one of the pillars of the House of Representatives, PETER RODINO.

PETE RODINO has been a Member of this House for 40 years and, to our loss, has decided to retire at the end of the 100th Congress.

When PETER RODINO first came to Washington, after serving in the Army during World War II, the world was rebuilding. At that time, no one could have every imagined the course which the world would take any more than that freshman Congressman could have seen where his chosen course would lead him.

PETER RODINO has served under eight Presidents during his tenure in the House. And, 15 years ago he took over as chairman of one of the House's most important committees, the Judiciary Committee.

It was during his chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee that PETER RODINO came onto the national scene when it was his duty to preside over the impeachment hearings of Richard Nixon. His statesmanship during those weeks when the eyes of the Nation and the world were focused on the Judiciary Committee brought him the respect of the country. This, of course, was something he already had earned from his colleagues.

In 1976, PETER RODINO was responsible for the enactment of landmark antitrust legislation. The Hart-Scott-Rodino Anti-Trust Improvement Act of that year set important, expanded guidelines with which businesses must comply in the area of premerger notifications. This, in turn, has facilitated the ability of the FTC and the Justice Department to conduct full investigations of certain mergers and acquisitions, which had been difficult to accomplish prior to the legislation.

PETER RODINO has left his mark on the country, on the State of New Jersey and on his congressional district. As the dean of our State's delegation, he has fought hard and successfully for the best interests of New Jersey and he has served his constituents unselfishly during these past 40 years. I'm sure that they will miss his leadership and dedication—as will we in this Congress.

I wish him many more productive and happy years with his children and grandchildren.

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues today to honor a man who has become known among his colleagues simply as "Mr. Chairman," the Honorable PETER W. RODINO, JR., of New Jersey.

PETER RODINO's record as a champion of civil rights and as a scholar of constitutional law has been clearly described in some detail by previous speakers. I am equally proud that this native of the Garden State has brought honor to New Jersey and dignity to our Nation as the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee since 1973.

I would like to relate one personal reflection as my contribution to today's special order in his honor.

Since 1984, when I was elected to serve the people of the 11th District of New Jersey, the chairman has offered his advice and counsel in the spirit of bipartisanship and he has been supportive on a number of occasions.

I am reminded of one occasion in particular—in early 1986—when Representative FRANK GUARINI and I were very concerned because it looked as though the July 3 ceremonies honoring the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty would be limited to the swearing in of new citizens from Lower Manhattan, due to a technicality in immigration and naturalization law limiting jurisdiction of the Federal judiciary with regard to Ellis Island, where the ceremonies were scheduled.

Representative GUARINI and I felt strongly that this was a national day of celebration and that representatives from all of the 50 States should be included in this symbolic reaffirmation of our common heritage as immigrants.

We took this concern to Chairman RODINO and he embraced it as his own, sheparding the legislation through Congress and on to the President's desk in less than 60 days.

Anyone familiar with the workings of Congress knows what a major achievement it is to move legislation from start to finish in less than 2 months.

The State of New Jersey and the United States of America will miss his strong leadership and his acute sense of perspective developed over 40 years of service to the people.

I understand that the Honorable Mr. RODINO will soon become Prof. PETER RODINO. I applaud his dedication to good government and his willingness to share that commitment with the next generation of leaders.

I thank him for his friendship and for his counsel. I join my colleagues in recognizing his many accomplishments and I wish for him a long and prosperous academic career.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, as the youngest member of the Democratic delegation from New Jersey, I am especially proud to have enjoyed and benefited from the skillful leadership of PETER RODINO. Although his service in the House of Representatives began before I was born, PETER RODINO readily welcomed me upon my own election to the House and has always been there to guide me.

PETER RODINO has played a unique role in bringing our delegation together. Ours, like many, could have been a delegation of a few powerful people. Instead, it was a combination of effective leaders, and a real fighting team: a team which has been led through all these years by PETER RODINO.

When PETER RODINO announced in March of this year that this session of Congress would be his last, I could not help but to think of how different America is today, how much better America has become through PETER RODINO'S leadership.

In his announcement, he said that he had served his time and a purpose. In his time, his district, his State, his America have been reshaped through his leadership in bringing civil and human rights to all of our citizens.

Through 40 years in the House of Representatives and 15 years as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, PETER RODINO led us ably through passage of the 1966 civil rights bill, the Voting Rights Act extension in 1982, and the Immigration Act of 1986.

PETER RODINO also served a purpose. Often the only thing that stood between the radical politics of the moment and the defense of common sense and our constitution has been PETER RODINO. That has made him important for our country. It means that PETER RODINO has been more than just another Member of this institution.

Although PETER RODINO'S journey at the helm of an important committee of this institution is coming to an end, I hope that America and the communities that he represented will continue to receive the benefit of this wisdom and leadership.

For me and many young people around the country, PETER RODINO was and always will be a model of public service. He made this institution a place where people want to serve. He made this a place, even a profession, that people want to be a part of. He has made it a noble, dignified, and a special place.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to join in this tribute to my chairman, the Honorable PETER RODINO.

Long before I became a Member of this body, I was aware of PETER RODINO's awesome reputation as a committed proponent of civil and constitutional rights, equal opportunity for all Americans, and the values of fairness and integrity in the conduct of governmental affairs. My personal experience since then has only confirmed the reputation he has earned during the course of a long and honored career.

I don't think it is an overstatement to say that no Member has ever made a greater contribution to insuring the humaneness and equity of our immigration laws. In 1965, PETER RODINO achieved a long-sought goal of fair-minded Americans as the prime sponsor of the 1965 Immigration Act, which eliminated from our laws the shame of the old national origin quota system. In 1980, he accomplished the elimination of ideological considerations in the admission of refugees to this country, establishing in the Refugee Act a comprehensive, equitable policy for refugee admission and resettlement. Most recently, PETER RODINO doggedly worked for the enactment of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, and has consistently called for generous and humane implementation of its landmark provisions.

On a personal note, our efforts to prevent the creation of a massive new bracero program as part of IRCA would simply never have succeeded without the stalwart leadership of PETER RODINO. He insisted that under no circumstances would he allow immigration reform legislation to go forward at the price of a giant step backward in the struggle for dignity and fairness for American farmworkers.

I have long assumed that PETER RODINO's commitment to a just and fair system for admitting natives of other countries to share in the blessings of the United States is part and parcel of his abiding belief that our Constitution and our laws afford a system of individual liberties that is the envy of the world.

But PETER RODINO believes that steadfast vigilance is required to protect those timeless rights from the shifting winds of popular sentiment. In his 16 years at the helm of the Judiciary Committee, PETER RODINO has from time to time been accused of presiding over the "killer committee," the graveyard for constitutional amendments and other bills that have enjoyed a great measure of popular support.

But what does that mean? It means that PETER RODINO has done no less than to walk in the footprints of our Founding Fathers, who believed that minority rights must be protected against the encroachments of majority sentiment. Not for PETER RODINO is the view that Congress can proceed blithely to pass unconstitutional laws and let the courts take care of the consequences. And not for PETER RODINO are amendments to constrict cherished constitutional rights or to strip the Federal courts of the ability to adjudicate and provide redress to our citizens in critical disputes.

Under his leadership, the House Judiciary Committee has strengthened the Voting Rights Act and the Nation's fair housing laws. The landmark Hart-Scott-Rodino Act stands as the most important antitrust legislation of the past four decades. The integrity of our bankruptcy laws has been maintained on his watch. Members of the Judiciary Committee and of this body have been confident that legislation with PETER RODINO's mark on it has passed his test of fairness and integrity.

Not least of all, in one of the darkest hours of our Republic, PETER RODINO presided over impeachment proceedings against Richard Nixon which remain a model of evenhandedness, propriety, and faithfulness to constitutional principles, no less than we have come to expect from PETER RODINO, but a marvel in his first year as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

For these gifts to the Nation and to this body, I stand in tribute to PETER RODINO, and wish him well in the years to come. I am delighted that college students will enjoy the benefit of his wisdom and experience, and hope only that he will continue to share his good counsel with us in the years to come.

Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, among the members of the class of 1948 in the House of Representatives was a proud, quiet man from Newark, NJ, who would one day take his place among the giants of our day.

PETER RODINO, JR., was not one to go for the big splash. He is by character a very patient man. Years passed by before he became chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, but once the gavel was in his hands, Congressman RODINO played a key role in some of the greatest pieces of legislation ever to insure and expand the civil rights of Americans. In recent years, against what sometimes seemed a tidal wave of ideological zeal, Congressman RODINO'S role changed somewhat. Instead of helping to pass good legislation, he became the gatekeeper whose efforts helped to prevent the passage of bad legislation whose spirit, and often whose letter, would have taken the Founding Fathers aback.

In either role, he served the cause of all Americans. Never was Chairman RODINO mentioned more honorably than during the 1974 impeachment hearings in the wake of Watergate. Again, patience was a Rodino hallmark. While others might counsel speed, with all its potential for errors and political partisanship, Chairman RODINO acted carefully and thoughtfully with a watchful eye, not on the political winds of the moment, but on the lasting impact Congress' actions might have on the Constitution. He marshaled his case. He sought out facts. He gave minority opinions a chance to be heard. In the end, his work added luster to that great document, the Constitution of the United States.

His colleagues from New Jersey probably knew him best. When he retires at the end of the 100th Congress, our State delegation loses its dean. There are other facts about PETER RODINO that make him, and us, proud. He was the first Italian-American from New Jersey to be elected to Congress. He has been a staunch defender of the rights of working men and women.

To me, and to others in the New Jersey delegation, PETER RODINO has been all that and more. He has been a friend. He has been an adviser. He has stood as a shining example of the best in what a Member of this esteemed body can become.

We will miss PETER RODINO, and we wish him all the best in his well-earned retirement. However, in a way, we will not miss him. That is because he will always be around. Such was his contribution that the things he stood for, the causes he championed, the battles he won will forever be a part of this body and this Nation.

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in honoring one of the most distinguished Members of the House, Chairman PETER RODINO, who is retiring after 40 years in Congress.

During his tenure in the House PETER has earned the respect of his colleagues on both sides of the aisle for his political skill and his commitment to civil rights. As chairman of the Judiciary Committee, PETER first achieved national recognition during the Watergate era while presiding over committee debate on the resolution to impeach President Nixon. His calm leadership helped this country through one of the most trying periods in its history, and one of the greatest tests of our constitutional form of government. For his role in these hearings alone, PETER's place in history is assured.

PETER has gained additional recognition on a number of other national issues. As Judiciary chairman and member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, PETER has been a leader in the drafting of the omnibus drug bill currently before Congress. He has worked hard to ensure the integrity of the U.S. judicial system, by providing an adequate supply of Federal judges appointed on the basis of the needs of the judicial system and not on the basis of political patronage. PETER was also selected to serve on the committee investigating the Iran-Contra scandal, a further acknowledgment of his experience and his reputation for fairness.

I personally have had the pleasure of working closely with PETER on a number of immigration bills. Last year I introduced legislation to extend the NP-5 Program, and to provide new immigration catagories not based on the traditional family reunification criteria. This legislation would have eliminated the unintended effects of the 1965 immigration reforms, which had reduced immigration from European countries, a traditional source of immigrants to this country, to a trickle. However, with the end of session approaching, and November elections causing a rush toward adjournment, further reform of immigration law during the 100th Congress appeared dead.

Chairman RODINO helped to revive efforts to increase legal immigration into this country. His legislation, H.R. 5115, which was introduced during the waning days of the session, contains many of the basic provisions of my legislation, including the extension of the NP-5 Program. With his leadership, it now appears likely that Congress will reach agreement on this important legislation prior to adjournment. Those of my colleagues who, like me, do not serve on the Judiciary Committee, but who are concerned about the immigration issue, are extremely grateful for PETER's leadership on this issue.

Clearly, those of us who are here to honor our colleague are not the only ones who admire PETER RODINO. The people of New Jersey's 10th Congressional District have selected PETER to represent them in the last 20 elections, and as we all know, a Congressman needs no higher praise than that.

Finally, I want to express my appreciation to Congressman TORRICELLI for providing us with this opportunity to pay special tribute to one of our most distinguished colleagues. It has been my great pleasure to work with PETER RODINO over the last 10 years. PETER can look back with pride on what has been a long and successful career. This institution will miss his advice and leadership dearly.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, when I was first elected to the House of Representatives only 2 years ago, I had the opportunity to become a member of two major committees. Whether or not I was to be given permission to accept the two spots was primarily left to the discretion of PETER RODINO. I made an appointment with the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee to discuss the matter.

The chairman made it very clear to me: he only wanted people on the committee who were willing to spend the time and energy to learn the issues. Naturally he was suspect of anyone who wanted to be on two major committees. He was very committed to the issues under the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee and demanded the same thoughtful consideration of these issues by members of the committee.

Two years later I can look back with 20/20 hindsight, with the experience of having served on his Judiciary Committee, and know first hand what it means to have been a member of PETER RODINO's Judiciary Committee.

It means having been a part of a committee that, in this historic Congress, produced historic legislation. The committee waded through the mire of ethics violations of this administration to reauthorize an independent counsel statute—and ultimately to see its constitutionality upheld by the Supreme Court. It put teeth in the Fair Housing Act, continuing the march toward civil rights for all Americans that has been stalled during this administration.

It means, during consideration of the omnibus drug bill this year, that the Judiciary Committee, under the leadership of the chairman, had the political guts to fend off many attacks on the Constitution and the civil liberties of the American people. I'm sorry to say that the House did not follow the lead of the Judiciary Committee on many of these matters.

And it means having had the opportunity to serve with PETER RODINO. For years now, Chairman RODINO has stood between the Constitution and those who want to turn it into a Christmas tree, hanging on it every decoration the far right can think of, from abortion to busing to school prayer.

At the same time, he produced the tough legislation the Nation needed, leading the fights for reform of the immigration and bankruptcy laws.

Of course, from the very beginning, we had reason to expect great things from PETER RODINO's chairmanship. He had wielded the gavel less than 1 year when he presided over the greatest constitutional crisis of this century. His distinguished, evenhanded, and painstakingly careful handling of the Watergate impeachment hearings was critical to guiding our country through that traumatic time.

The highest praise any public servant can hope for is that he has left things better than he found them. Chairman RODINO has left his committee, this Congress, and his country better than he found them. We are grateful for his service, and will miss his leadership.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my friend and colleague, Chairman PETER RODINO. Congressman RODINO has admirably served in the House of Representatives for 40 years. His district of Newark, NJ, has experienced many changes since the postwar years, yet the people have wisely continued to elect PETER RODINO as their representative to the U.S. Congress.

PETER RODINO will no doubt be noted in history as the fair and strong chairman of the Judiciary Committee which voted in 1974 to impeach Richard Nixon. As chairman of that committee, he proved to be a most capable leader and above all, a fair and evenhanded leader. By proceeding with caution and restraint, PETER RODINO was able to avert a strictly partisan war against Richard Nixon. It was Chairman PETER RODINO who galvanized the necessary bipartisan support in favor of impeaching President Nixon. This was a most difficult time in the history of our country. PETER RODINO rose to this immense and unfortunate challenge to our system of government by providing the leadership necessary to prove that our democratic system was able to work in the face of a great crisis.

Congressman PETER RODINO has consistently been involved in major civil rights legislation. He directed the fair employment practices provision of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and became the main sponsor of the new Immigration Reform and Control Act in 1983 which he saw through to its passage in 1986. This paralleled his early, effective work in Congress, when, as a subcommittee chairman, he mastered the legislative process and successfully rewrote immigration and naturalization policy.

PETER RODINO is surely one of the most powerful and respected Members of Congress. Chairman RODINO has the ability and determination to craft legislation and, as importantly, to block legislation that he feels infringes on basic constitutional liberties. Many legislative measures bear PETER RODINO'S name including antitrust legislation that has proven so important to the competitive free enterprise system that supports our people and our Nation.

Congressman RODINO has been a friend to many Members of this House. For the past 12 years, I have had the great pleasure of working with him and I have benefited from his good counsel and strong friendship. Congressman RODINO and I share a common Italian American heritage and I was fortunate to have been able to accompany him on several trips abroad to participate in important meetings with Pope John Paul and other political leaders. We have shared some special responsibilities, some special times, and a common joy in our work.

Chairman PETER RODINO is a model of leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives and in the Congress, proving by example just how much one person can accomplish. He is a man with conviction and values. He knows well the advantage of being in the right place at the right time, especially when he is needed. But, let us all understand that his actions and accomplishments are not an accident of history; rather, these accomplishments stem from a well-considered commitment to serve as best he could. When faced with challenges he was ready and did his homework thoroughly. No quick rush to judgment for partisan or other advantage has characterized PETER RODINO'S actions and success.

PETER RODINO shall be dearly missed as a friend, a legislator, and a leader in the House by both those whom he has served and those who have served with him.

PETER RODINO has devoted his life to public service. As he leaves us, PETER can know that he goes with the thanks of a grateful legislative body for his years of friendship, diligence, and unblemished service. We wish PETER RODINO well in his working retirement and want him to know that his continued counsel will always be welcome.

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, we are here to honor one of the giants of our time, PETER RODINO. PETE RODINO first came to Congress when Harry Truman was President. He came as a fighter, a reformer, a man of the people.

And for 40 years, PETE RODINO has served his district, Congress, and the United States with dignity and diligence. He has always been a champion of the underdog. He has always been a disciple of the truth and fair play.

PETE first came to national attention when he had the difficult task of presiding over the impeachment hearings of President Nixon. He won national acclaim for his evenhanded, nonpartisan attitude toward that most trying process.

Yet, for those of us who have come to know PETER RODINO, that is not at all surprising. He is a man of character, of integrity. He further proved those fine qualities by throwing himself into the debate on civil rights. He worked hard on behalf of minorities in this Nation. He worked hard on behalf of the poor and underprivileged.

PETE RODINO was also an advocate of immigration reform. While I did not always agree with him on this issue, I, nonetheless, felt that his efforts were always well intentioned. His heart was always in the right place.

I will miss PETE. We will all miss him. He has been an example of what is best about this body. He has been a testimony to public service. And while he is leaving us after this Congress, his legacy will remain for generations to come.

Mr. GUARINI. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to celebrate the Rodino years.

When I think of PETER RODINO, I am reminded of a story from "A Man For All Seasons." Thomas More was talking to his son-in-law, Roper. Young Roper said that he would cut down every law in England to go after the devil. More replied, "when you have cut down all the laws, and the devil comes after you, what will be left to protect you?"

Thomas More, a man of wisdom and a man of faith, understood one of the great rules of history—the rule of law.

When the weak are victimized by the strong, they look to the law.

When communities seek protection from crime, they look to the law.

When people seek to halt the abuse of power, they look to the law.

When the poor seek simple justice, they look to the law.

And when people seek to uphold the rule of law, they often look to Peter Rodino.

For 40 years, this man has left his fingerprints on the Constitution, and his footprints on American history.

And every time, the country has been better for it.

He has helped to turn "Equal Justice" from a worthy dream to a way of life: Fair housing, voting rights, immigration, education, equal employment, equal opportunity, equal rights. Each has been touched by the guiding hand of Peter Rodino.

And every time, the cause of justice has moved ahead.

From the Supreme Court to the district court, from the Court of International Trade to the court of public opinion.

Each has been moved by this man's courage, conviction, and compassion.

And every time, the rule of law became stronger, and the administration of justice became wiser.

Peter Rodino knows that being an American is a statement of principle.

When we think about the immigrants who have come to our shores, we should think about what they came for, what they searched for, what they stood for.

All they wanted was a chance.

A chance to be free, a chance to find a decent job, a chance to raise a family, to worship in peace, and to build a nation.

Their pockets were empty, but their hearts were full of hope.

And in return, they offered everything.

They passed the truest test of patriotism; they believed in the power of the American idea.

When people come to Washington, they can walk past the White House, go through the Halls of Congress, and visit the building that houses the Supreme Court.

As they walk up the stairs to the Supreme Court, they can see four simple words that stand at the center of the American idea: Equal justice under law.

For four decades, Peter Rodino has fought for equal justice, under law.

He has treated public service as a noble calling.

He has made America better.

He has made America stronger.

He has helped our country remain a beacon of justice, providing hope to people everywhere.

And here at home, for so many, he has helped the American dream come true.

So Peter Rodino, on behalf of all who believe in simple justice and the American idea, I say thank you.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I am most pleased to have this opportunity to participate in a special order honoring our long time colleague and friend, Peter W. Rodino, Jr. It is well known to the Members of this House, as well as throughout the Nation, that Peter Rodino has served as the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary for nearly two decades. In fact, his overall service in Congress dates back to the 81st Congress—some 40 years ago.

Since I came to Congress in 1973, it has been my privilege to serve on the Republican side of the aisle in that same Judiciary Committee. While Peter Rodino and I have occasionally differed on the merits of specific legislation, these differences have never clouded our friendship. Peter Rodino may be a partisan Democrat in a policy sense, but he has never been a partisan man in a personal sense. He has steered the House Judiciary Committee through many difficult legislative situations. By nature a prudent and cautious man, Chairman Rodino's decisions are always tempered by a genuine sense of personal integrity. He has consistently presided over the Judiciary Committee with parliamentary impartiality; he is a Congressman who cares about the quality of the legislative work product as much as the intended policy result.

Early in his career, Peter Rodino made a mark as a Congressman sensitive to the need for civil rights changes in our society. In addition, as a subcommittee chairman, he became a nationally recognized expert on the complex subject of immigration policy. He was the floor manager of the landmark Immigration Reform Act of 1965, which eliminated national origin quotas from the statute books.

My first term in Congress was a time of great stress for all of us serving on the Judiciary Committee—it was the era of Watergate. As a freshman Republican Congressman, I sat through weeks and months of evidence gathering and testimony on the difficult and tempestuous impeachment question. In my view, the careful way in which that difficult proceeding was conducted was in large part a reflection of Chairman Rodino's restraint and good judgment. That tone allowed each member of the Judiciary Committee to arrive at their own conclusion based upon the evidence available at that time. His temperance minimized the partisan divisions that were present and provided the American people with a view of the congressional committee process at its best.

Since that difficult period, Chairman Rodino and I have worked together on numerous bipartisan initiatives. These subjects have included dealing with needs of our Federal court system and Federal judges, needed antitrust and bankruptcy law amendments, and trade and competitiveness issues. Much of the work of a legally oriented and technical committee like judiciary does not result in front page headlines. But as chairman, Peter Rodino has always made sure that our committee does its necessary, as well as its high-visibility, work.

This is one conservative Republican who has served with Peter Rodino for many years and who genuinely respects him. It is my sincere hope that Peter Rodino will enjoy his well-earned retirement and that he will often come back to Capitol Hill to share his experience and insights with all of us. I wish Peter Rodino all the best and thank him for his many courtesies to me over the past 16 years.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, Representaive Peter W. Rodino, Jr., a great legislator and a good friend, will be retiring at the close of this 100th Congress. After 40 years of service in the House of Representatives, Peter Rodino will always be remembered for his democratic pursuits as a champion of civil rights and as a leader in social justice.

Peter Rodino has earned a number of leadership positions and outstanding awards throughout his glorious and distinguished career, but his active fight for civil rights is the one most memorable and dear to me. Peter plunged into the battle for civil rights well before he became chairman of the House Committee on the Judiciary. During the sixties, he managed and wrote major civil rights bills, including the fair employment practices provision of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Since becoming chairman of the Judiciary Committee in 1973, he has continued to uphold the historic civil rights measures, which he and many others fought so hard for. In addition, Peter boldly fended off weakening amendments to our U.S. Constitution in the Judiciary Committee and on the House floor.

Peter Rodino was instrumental in leading major drives for social justice legislation. He authored the Voting Rights Act Extension of 1982, the Immigration Control and Legalization Act of 1986, and the National Antidrug Reorganization and Coordination Act of 1986. He also led the fight to eliminate aid to foreign nations that do not cooperate with the United States in halting illegal drug trafficking into this country.

The people of this country came to know and respect Peter Rodino during the Watergate crisis, but those of us in Congress had long known his unyielding commitment and dedication to achieve equality and justice throughout this great Nation.

Long after Peter Rodino leaves Congress, he will be remembered not only for his legislative accomplishments, but also for his studied yet compassionate appreciation for his fellow man. Peter Rodino will be truly missed by all who know and respect him.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to retiring Congressman Peter Rodino who has served in the U.S. House of Representatives for 40 distinguished years. Peter has been instrumental in many historic events in Congress and the Nation. As an Italian-American I have always looked to Peter as the best of what we can accomplish. He has taken his heritage and patriotism to a level that we all strive to reach. Through his dedication to the ideals of our country he has managed to pioneer vital legislation.

Along with the rest of the country, I learned who Peter Rodino was during the Watergate hearings. As the new chairman of the House Judiciary Committee many doubted that he would be ready for the challenge that these historic hearings promised to bring. However, as he did throughout his career, he proved the skeptics wrong. Through his careful preparation and presentation, Peter succeed in bringing a nonpartisan approach to these most difficult proceedings. He brought his integrity, his respect for our Nation's laws and his respect for the office of President. In this bleak moment in our Nation's history, Peter provided hope for a bright future.

This hope was manifested in the work he did on our Nation's civil rights and immigration laws. During the 99th Congress I had the pleasure of working with Peter during the consideration of the immigration reform bill. This was a difficult piece of legislation to manage. However, through his experience and skill Peter was able to finally make immigration reform a reality.

This year the 100th Congress passed an important piece of civil rights legislation. The Civil Rights Restoration Act made clear the intent of Congress when the original civil rights laws were passed. Who is better qualified than PETER RODINO to state the intent of Congress on legislation that he helped to formulate? Through much organized opposition, PETER persisted in getting this legislation to the floor. It was a great victory for the civil rights movement to have the 100th Congress confirm its commitment to enforcing our Nation's civil rights laws.

I mentioned before that PETER has successfully combined his heritage and his patriotism in a distinguished career. Nowhere is this more apparent than in his efforts to make Columbus Day a national holiday. As an Italian-American myself, I feel that Columbus Day encompasses the essence of being American. It gives our children a sense of the values and ideas that our forefathers brought with them to America and makes them recognize the uniqueness of being an American. We are a country of immigrants and that is our blessing. It is this unique status that has made the United States a pioneer in such issues as civil rights.

The retirement of PETER RODINO brings to a close a special part of American history. He has lived through and been a part of many significant historic events over his 40 years in public service. He has provided a role model for many of us in Congress. I don't know which event or accomplishment he will be most remembered for in the history books, but I know that his legacy and tradition will go on long after he has left the House of Representatives.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, our good friend, PETER RODINO has long since become a national figure standing for justice, compassion, and the rule of law in our Government. It will be difficult to adjust to him not being here, but after 40 years as one of the strongest pillars of Congress, he is retiring from the House this year. I am deeply appreciative that his and our good friend, BOB TORRICELLI, has called this special order to give the House a chance to express its affection and esteem for this great American. Since I became chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that handles funding for the Justice Department and the Federal judiciary, it has been my privilege to work closely with Chairman RODINO on appropriations bills which fund the Justice Department and the judiciary. This opportunity has been a most valuable and memorable experience.

It has amazed many people that an individual could attain such a high level of power and prestige in our public affairs and yet remain so humble and unassuming in his daily life. PETER has been elected to serve so many years because his constituents believe in him; he achieved leadership in the House because his colleagues believe in him; he will be remembered in history because a grateful nation believes in him. PETER is a fine lawyer, a superb legislator, and above all, a sensitive, caring human being who is deeply committed to our justice system.

In 1941, PETER volunteered to serve in World War II, was commissioned overseas, and discharged as a captain in 1946. He received several decorations including prestigious awards from the Italian Government. PETE has had a lifelong commitment to civil rights and he was a legislative leader of the historic reforms of the 20th century; he floor managed the 1966 civil rights bill and, as Judiciary Committee chairman, was the author of the Voting Rights Act extension in 1982. More recently he had a key role in the passage of the Grove City bill. His imprint has been on many other important bills to eliminate discrimination for reasons of race, creed, sex, or economic status.

The majority of voters in the 10th District of New Jersey he represents are minorities and he has won reelection by ever-increasing margins partly because they remember that they were fairly treated when they were a minority in that district and they knew he had the seniority and clout in Congress to represent the district effectively. As a lawyer and throughout his career in Government, PETER RODINO's knowledge of constitutional law and devotion to the U.S. Constitution shine through. In various areas, he has worked to further competition and to reduce incentives for price-fixing. As everyone knows, Chairman RODINO presided over the 1974 Nixon impeachment hearings where his performance was a model of fairness and justice for all time.

Unforseen circumstances have, at times, placed PETE in highly difficult and crucial situations. He has always met the challenge. He has always lived up to expectations and often exceeded them. Recently he played a key role as a member of the select commttee on the Iran/Contra investigation. PETE was appointed a congressional observer to the disarmament conference in Geneva in 1958 and was named by our Government to other important international posts.

The list of his awards, both national and international, and honorary degrees from leading universities, is further evidence of a distinguished and versatile career. One of my most pleasant memories of Chairman PETER RODINO is the last time he came out to Des Moines to speak in my behalf. The program chairman worried about a proper introduction, but, everybody knew him and loved him and no formal introduction was needed. The tumultuous reception he was accorded told the story.

PETE will be keenly missed in this body, but the influence of his achievements here will live on and so will the memory of this dedicated and humble man who served the Nation so well.

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my House colleagues in paying fitting tribute to our good friend, and able chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Mr. RODINO of New Jersey.

After 40 years of consistent, dedicated service in the House—15 of which have been as chairman of the Judiciary Committee—PETER RODINO will be retiring from the place in which he has presided over some of the most historic events of the past half century. History books will record the drama of the Watergate hearings and the impact of that particular period on our society. Thoughout the period—faced with demanding circumstances and difficult conditions—Chairman RODINO chaired the Judiciary Committee in a manner that encouraged debate, fostered fairness, and sought justice. He deserves to be recognized for fulfilling his role and for keeping the committee's attention on the issues and not the politics of the period. Regardless of one's views at the time on Watergate, I think history will reflect that the leadership of PETER RODINO in committee was as worthy and effective as possible.

Beyond that movement in history, PETER RODINO has effectively represented the good people of his district exceptionally well. He has served America while representing his district and State. And he has done all three tasks very, very well.

Mr. Chairman, your leadership in the House will be missed. We wish you well as you leave, and we trust you will return soon to enjoy the fellowship of those whose respect you have earned.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to join my colleagues in paying tribute to my good friend from New Jersey, PETER RODINO, for his illustrious career in the House of Representatives.

For 40 years PETE has served the people of New Jersey and the Nation with distinction and dedication. As the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee he was influential in securing passage of some of the most far-reaching civil rights legislation enacted in this century. He is a recognized expert in constitutional law and has been a staunch defender of the Constitution and the freedoms it guarantees.

As the dean of the New Jersey Congressional Delegation PETE has been a leader on issues involving our State.

PETE has an outstanding record of service of which he and his constituents can be proud. He has earned the respect and admiration of all those privileged to serve with him during the past 40 years. I am honored to be a friend and to have served with him for the 16 years we were in Congress together. PETE is a kind, compassionate human being, and I will certainly miss him.

PETE, as you leave the House you take with you my warmest wishes for the best of everything in the years ahead.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, it is hard for me to face the reality of PETER RODINO'S retirement. We have spent the past 30 years together, the major part of our professional lives.

When I consider our years spent together, I of course think of sitting with him on the dais of the House Committee on the Judiciary. I think of battles fought and won—and sometimes lost, but not too often—during some of the greatest and most turbulent days in this Nation's history: the civil rights struggle, the war in Vietnam, Watergate and the impeachment of President Nixon, the appointment of a sitting President—Ford—and a sitting Vice President—Rockefeller—the impeachment, and removal from office of Judge Harry Claiborne, the growing struggle between the executive and legislative branches.

The Judiciary Committee is a committee of lawyers. In many regards, the committee takes on the characteristics of its members. Given its composition, the committee is somewhat like an appellate court. Collegiality is important; respect for seniority prevails; due process and fundamental fairness are guiding principles. Chairman RODINO has led us as would a good judge, through respect, integrity and impartiality rather than through brute force.

I wish that Members of Congress had lifetime tenure, similar to that possessed by Federal judges—particularly now during my campaign. But, the Founding Fathers determined that Members must be politically accountable to the people. Representatives stand for reelection every 2 years, and there is no exception for Chairman RODINO.

PETER RODINO has been an example to us all through his steadfast support of the civil rights of all Americans. Not only has he fought long and hard during the past few years to maintain the gains we had made during the sixties and seventies, but with his leadership, we also have been able to pass through our committee and enact into law, affirmative legislation in the civil rights area. The fair housing bill, recently signed into law, is only one example of this. Another is Chairman RODINO's unwaivering support of the Legal Services Program and his willingness to be on the firing line when the program has most needed his support. We have succeeded in improving the third branch of Government, the Federal judiciary, and equipping it to meet he enormous burdens assigned it under our Constitution and laws.

In the waning days of the 100th Congress, as we reflect on the career of our distinguished colleague, it is difficult to avoid judging his career without using some of the terminology of the current Presidential campagin. Perhaps more than any other Member of Congress, PETER RODINO has sought to make the United States a kinder and gentler Nation. His work on immigration reform, civil rights and civil liberties, and separation of powers bespeak a fundamental and heartfelt commitment to individual human rights. His understanding of the constitutional balance between individual rights and Government power distinguish him from most lawmakers. For PETER RODINO, short-term political fixes to the transient political crises of the moment have been no substitute to the longer, harder road to meaningful laws that enhance the rights of the least among us.

We are a nation of laws, where respect for the rule of law prevails. As a lawyer, I can think of few more important roles than chairman of the House Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Chairman, you have done a good job and I and the people of this country will miss you.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak for a moment about my friend and colleague PETER RODINO who is retiring after 40 years in the House. Chairman RODINO has served this body with both distinction and honor.

Throughout his career in the House, PETER RODINO has always acted in the best interests of the country. As a senior member of the Judiciary Committee, he played a major role in drafting much of the civil rights legislation of the 1960's. Americans of all races and creeds owe a great deal of gratitude to PETER RODINO. Supporters of the equal rights amendment are also losing a strong and influential voice with his retirement. Nevertheless, PETER can leave this body with a feeling of tremendous satisfaction for having achieved all of these accomplishments.

In my view, PETER RODINO is best remembered for his cautious but fair leadership of the Watergate hearings. His unswerving desire to lead an objective inquiry resulted in a bipartisan resolution on the matter. PETER'S fairness have made him a good friend upon whose advice I know I can always rely.

In closing, I would like to commend PETER for his many years of service to this Nation and wish him well on behalf of my wife Nancy and myself. Mr. Speaker, we will miss PETER next year.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, Congressman PETER RODINO, the able chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, came to Congress at the same time I did in 1949, and we have had a great friendship and a mutual admiration society in the years that have followed. He is a highly decorated veteran of World War II who has had many honors conferred upon him as an able legislator here in our Congress. He has received numerous awards and honors from various governments and organizations and numerous honorary degrees. He served as a delegate to the North Atlantic Assembly and as chairman of its scientific and technical committee and on its working group on the control of narcotics. He is dean of the New Jersey Congressional Delegation. He has served in the House leadership as assistant to the majority whip and as a member of the House Steering Committee. Not only has he held many important positions, but he has held them with distinction and merit. We will greatly miss him for his very substantial contributions to the Government of the United States and to the welfare of people everywhere. We will also miss him greatly as a dear and trusted friend, who we hope will often come back and visit with us. We wish him well in everything that lies ahead in the future for him.

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, if we were to look back over the past generation and seek the one person who has contributed more than anyone else in upholding and securing the legal rights of all Americans and in preserving and protecting the very foundations of our judicial system and constitutional safeguards of checks and balances, our distinguished colleague from New Jersey, Representative PETER RODINO, is the person who comes to mind.

PETER RODINO has represented his constituents in Newark for 40 years. He has achieved this remarkable feat while adhering to the principles of grace and distinction. Forty years ago, another great American, Hubert H. Humphrey, spoke out on the need for the Democratic Party to pursue the cause of civil rights, a position that, at that time, was not fully understood and often unpopular. But in that same year, PETER RODINO began his service in the U.S. House of Representatives and ever since his entry into the Congress, our Nation has witnessed some of the most important achievements in the cause of equal rights for all Americans and a newfound interest and involvment in expanding and enhancing the rights and opportunities of our fellow citizens who were denied the promises of the American dream.

PETER RODINO was there when America discovered the need to resolutely and completely tear asunder the vestiges of slavery and racial separation held over from the Civil War, resulting in the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1966; PETER RODINO was there in 1973 and 1974 when the very foundation of our Government was teetering at the shameful pinnacle of Watergate, and he provided the leadership and guidance to bring the American people through the dark days of that time through the proper and forceful deliberations of the House Judiciary Committee; and PETER RODINO was there when Congress saw the need to reinforce the rights of Americans to elect a government of their choice, resulting in the passage of Voting Rights Act of 1982.

There are numerous times when Americans look back in history and speculate on the potential differences that might have been realized had someone or somebody not been on the public scene or in key positions of leadership during important times in our past. Abraham Lincoln and the Civil War come to mind as one example, as does the Great Depression and the Second World War and the role that Franklin Delano Roosevelt played in bringing the United States through those difficult times. As we look back over the past 40 years and select those individuals who helped to shape the system of laws and the concepts of justice that thread through our Government and strengthen our Nation, PETER RODINO stands out as the person constantly on the leading edge in defending the freedoms and liberties of all Americans.

I wish PETER RODINO the very best upon his departure from the Congress and I extend to him and his children my hopes for many years of happiness together.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, one of America's greatest heroes, the legendary chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is retiring from Congress after 40 years of serving his country.

In the following excellent article, Leonard Steinhorn pays tribute to my chairman, who "kept his compact" with the Nation's people.

[From the Washington Post, Oct. 20, 1988]

PETER RODINO: HE KEPT HIS COMPACT. . .

(By Leonard Steinhorn)

In the flurry of Congress' departure this week, we should not let it pass unnoticed that the end of the 100th Congress also marks the end of the legislative career of Peter W. Rodino, Jr. I don't think it's an overstatement to say that he has been a great legislator. In this age of blow-dried candidates and media-driven politics, Peter Rodino has been an exception. During 40 years in Congress and 16 as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, he has followed principles rather than polls, conviction rather than expediency. The Nation will surely miss his voice in Congress.

It is common enough to praise politicians by saying they came to Washington but never forgot where they came from. In Rodino's case this is not fulsome praise but the simple truth. In all his years as "Mr. Chairman," he really never did forget that he was the son of an Italian immigrant.

His identification with the common people was natural to him, and it underlay all his work in Congress. He came to Washington as a champion of the post-World War II Fair Deal agenda for working American and never wavered. And long before the civil rights movement became a popular cause, he spoke out for racial justice, despite initially representing a white ethnic district not predisposed to civil rights.

His legislative accomplishments are many. He was instrumental in gaining passage of every major civil rights bill of the last 30 years. Less well known but almost as significant was his leadership in 1965 in repealing the odious national immigration quotas that kept out immigrants from southern and Eastern Europe. His distaste for monopolistic business practices led him to promote stronger antitrust laws. His concern for inner-city youths led him to the forefront of the congressional battle against drug abuse.

But for all these accomplishments, even Peter Rodino knows that history will remember him for his role during Watergate. He was an unlikely hero in that difficult time. Throughout the crisis, he had but one goal; to restore the integrity of our system and the trust of the people. That is why he resisted the calls of less temperate politicians to hang Richard Nixon and instead conducted the impeachment proceedings with the balance and dignity the Constitution deserved.

His guiding star, during Watergate and throughout his career, was that our system cannot long survive unless we adhere to the principle of equal justice. To him, no one, including the most powerful, is above the law. Anything but pure devotion to that ideal will lead us down a slippery slope to a system of government that protects the rights of some but not others.

Peter Rodino often spoke of our Constitution as a compact with the American people. It pains him that equal justice and civil rights have not been fully realized by all Americans.

Perhaps the greatest irony—and tribute—of his career is that he decided to retire this year to make way for a black congressman who would represent the changing demographics of his district. Peter Rodino's last act in Congress shows that he was willing to keep his compact with the people.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise to join in this tribute to PETER RODINO.

For 15 years our valued friend and colleague has been chairman of the Judiciary Committee. And in that role he has distinguished himself and his institution as well. It is not hyperbole to say that he is a paradigm of virtue and integrity, two of the most essential qualities in a democratic form of government.

The Nation owes this man a debt of gratitude for his extraordinary performance during the impeachment proceedings relating to former President Richard Nixon.

During this trying time, he protected the Constitution against reckless assaults and reaffirmed for all Americans that this is a nation of laws, not men.

More than anyone else, PETER was responsible for directing the proceedings against the former President. It was perhaps his finest hour. And it reflected the greatness of our system and our institutions.

The issues in that complex and tortuous affair dealt with the very heart and soul of our democracy. The eyes of the world were upon us.

And it was PETER RODINO that showed the world that our system worked as it was intended. And in so doing he restored faith in our Government for millions of Americans. What's more, he demonstrated that we can keep faith with honesty, integrity, and compassion.

PETER RODINO'S career has been dedicated to justice—and equal justice for all. His commitment to civil rights has been unwavering. He has been in the forefront of every major piece of civil rights legislation since the banner of equal justice was hoisted during the Kennedy administration.

For 40 years this body has been fortunate, indeed, to have the services of such a dedicated American. And for the past 15 years, during some of the Nation's most difficult times, we were especially lucky to have him as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Both this body and the country as a whole will miss him.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, PETER RODINO has been one of the finest and most dedicated men ever to serve in the U.S. Congress in its 200-year history. It is this simple—he is a great man and that greatness has been reflected in his work here for the people of the United States. This Nation is about justice and truth. And this too has been the work of Chairman RODINO.

When I first came to the Congress—as new and young as any Member ever elected to this body—it was PETER RODINO, my chairman at the Judiciary Committee, who guided me. I look back on the patience of such a wise man with such a novice and I feel both gratitude and admiration. This is the man who guided our country through the difficult days of the impeachment hearings; the man who has treated justice and civil rights not as mere concepts but as the touchstones for legislative action and commitment.

He's been a gentle guide and teacher for us all, but his quiet approach does not belie the lasting impact of his leadership. He's protected our Constitution and the Nation is in his debt for his years of dedicated and effective service.

I recall a quote I once heard, and it fits Chairman RODINO: "A really great man is known by three signs—generosity in the design, humanity in the execution, moderation in success."

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for a job well-done. Thank you for your honor and your strength of character and courage. Thank you for bringing special pride to the hearts of Italian-Americans. I join with my colleagues in saluting you and wishing you every happiness in your retirement.

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, with the retirement of PETER RODINO, we will all be losing a great leader in Congress. The gentleman from New Jersey has been a leading light in this House for 40 years, and he will be greatly missed in these halls.

Chairman RODINO, of course, left his most memorable mark in history in his role as chairman of the Judiciary Committee during the Watergate hearings. His steady hand and strong sense of fairness were invaluable in steering us through that stormy period.

But, like many great Members of Congress, Chairman RODINO looked beyond his immediate district or committee jurisdiction to consider the well-being of the entire country. He has always shown concern for all the people of our Nation, both on the mainland and in the insular areas, and I want to offer special thanks to him for that.

Despite his extensive responsibilities and the countless demands on his time, Chairman RODINO has been willing to listen to the concerns of the U.S. Virgin Islands. I have been able to turn to him when my people in the Virgin Islands needed his help and, whenever possible, he has responded. His genuine interest in the Virgin Islands and our other insular areas has always been evident, and we are deeply grateful for his efforts on our behalf.

We will miss him here, but we can all join in wishing him the very best in his retirement.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, during the 200 years in which the House has existed, many outstanding individuals have answered the call of public service and served in this Chamber.

During the course of our 11 Congresses, our colleagues have consistently included the best and brightest of our Nation. Our number have included farmers, doctors, industrialists, entrepreneurs, journalists, members of the clergy—and lawyers. Each has brought to this Chamber unique insights. Each has brought to this Chamber the invaluable expertise born of the diversity of the American people.

Mr. Speaker, our charge is a sacred one, for our oath is to the Constitution of the United States and to the people of the United States.

For two centuries, the very best of our number have held this responsibility above parochial interests or partisanship. And yes, Mr. Speaker, this Chamber has indeed been blessed with an abundance of such individuals, men and women who have truly honored the privilege of being a lawmaker.

Mr. Speaker, for 40 years PETER RODINO has been such a lawmaker, and such a lawyer.

Since 1948, PETER has served his constitutents in and about Newark, NJ with distinction, with compassion, with foresight and with a determination to remain accessible and accountable to their changing needs. Such has been the service he has provided to the citizens of the Garden State.

For his Nation at large, PETER has served with even more emphatic dedication—if such a thing is possible.

During the Second World War, PETER was a young lawyer who rose to the rank of colonel in the U.S. Army. He knew what we were fighting for during that great conflict—and knew he would never forget the lessons learned in the battle against dictatorship and tyranny.

One lesson was that there is never any substitute for the rule of law and that no one is above the law. Our law is the U.S. Constitution, and no one is above it. No one.

Another lesson was that there is no substitute for the guarantee of civil rights to each and every citizen without precondition or qualification.

And, Mr. Speaker, there was a third lesson; and the third lesson was that we must always remain vigilant in guarding both the rule of law and the civil rights guaranteed by our law.

Throughout his entire term of service in the House, PETER has guarded our Nation from those who would be expedient with justice or cavalier with the rule of law. In his 15 years as chair of the House Judiciary Committee, there has been no question of his dedication—or his success.

PETER became chair of the Judiciary at one of the most critical times in our Nation's history. As presiding officer during the President Nixon's impeachment debate, PETER mastered the factual and legal case. But as importantly, he conducted the hearings with calm assurance, even-handedness, and with great care to inform rather than alarm the American people.

The historical impact of PETER's leadership has only begun to be appreciated fully. Today, a new generation of American leaders have begun to seek out public service careers and win public office. Many of these individuals were teenagers during the impeachment proceedings.

They watched the hearings from the vantage point of the classroom; and they learned the lesson well. They came away with awe, respect and a determination to take an active, positive role in our Nation's public life. But PETER's legacy as a lawmaker did not start and end with the impeachment proceedings.

Any tribute to his lasting work would be incomplete without citing the 1964 Civil Rights Act, for which PETER drafted the fair employment practices provision. It would be incomplete without citing his leadership as floor manager of the 1966 opening housing bill. It would be incomplete without citing his leadership of the 1965 immigration reform law, which eliminated the national origin quotas that had formed the foundation of our immigration policy for 40 years.

It would also be incomplete without citing his leadership on a truly historic measure enacted just this year.

Mr. Speaker, the story of this act, the Civil Liberties Act of 1988, begins 46 years ago. During the Second World War, 120,000 Americans of Japanese ancestry were summarily stripped of their civil rights, rounded up and taken to desolate internment camps scatterred throughout the Western United States.

On September 17, 1987—on the very day the founders of our Nation had signed the Constitution 200 years before—this body said to the American people that the rule of law, that the Constitution itself was indeed alive and well. On that day, the House passed the Civil Liberties Act, which both apologizes and offers reparations to victims of the grievous injustices endured by the internees during the Second World War.

Mr. Speaker, the Civil Liberties Act would not have passed the House, passed the Senate and then have been signed into law on August 10, 1988, had it not been for the leadership of Chairman PETER RODINO.

The passage of the Civil Liberties Act is another lasting accomplishment for PETER RODINO, and a very fitting tribute to his able dedication to our laws and the American people.

Mr. Speaker, PETER RODINO will be sorely missed when he retires at the close of this historic 100th Congress, but he will never be forgotten by his constitutents, by his colleagues, or by the American people.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise to honor Congressman PETER RODINO, a distinguished colleague and fellow Italian-American. For 40 years in this House, he has dedicated himself to the pursuit of judicial excellence.

One of Congressman RODINO's greatest challenges, and a role that earned him a place in American history, was his chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee during the Nixon impeachment proceedings in 1974. With the eyes of the world on his gavel, Chairman RODINO handled that difficult but necessary task with grace, fairness, and diligence. In so doing, he restored a Nation's faith in the integrity of its governmental institutions at a time when the integrity of its President was seriously in question.

During his 40 years in the House of Representatives, PETER RODINO has been a chamption of civil rights. He has been unyielding in his support for the rights of the minority, even when it was not politically expedient to do so. As early as 1949, PETER RODINO voted to allow minorities into the Coast Guard Women's Auxiliary. He voted against the separate-but-equal doctrine before the controversial 1954 Supreme Court decision mandated integrated schools. As a member of the Judiciary Committee, PETER RODINO crafted the Civil Rights Acts of 1957, 1960, 1964, 1968 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. He presided over legislation to extend the Voting Rights Act in 1970 and added amendments in 1975 to extend the act to include "language minorities" such as Hispanics.

Mr. Speaker, PETER RODINO has said that "the real security of this Nation lies in the integrity of its institutions and the informed confidence of its people." He has worked tirelessly toward this goal and it is an honor to serve with him in this distinguished body. Thank you.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to join my colleagues in paying tribute to one of the marvels of the legislative branch of Government, the very distinguished gentleman from New Jersey, the most honorable, Mr. PETER RODINO.

Congressman RODINO'S dedication to the functions of this body and the great principles on which our Nation was founded cannot be overstated. In his unrelenting quest to ensure equal opportunity for all Americans, Representative PETER RODINO has demonstrated the highest devotion to the human cause. As chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, PETER RODINO has been an ardent advocate of the genuine interests of ordinary American citizens. His dedication to attaining what is right for all Americans has been the hallmark of PETER RODINO'S accomplishments in U.S. House of Representatives.

Congressman RODINO leaves us with a legacy of achievements. He was a key author of the civil rights bills of the 1960's and he played an instrumental role in the struggle to enact the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Later, Congressman RODINO gained national attention as the highly respected chairman of the Watergate impeachment panel. Most recently, Chairman RODINO has labored untiringly to improve bankruptcy and copyright laws, revise antitrust statutes, and rewrite U.S. immigration policies.

PETER RODINO's indefatigable efforts to promote justice and help realize genuine equality for all Americans have forever improved the quality of life in these United States. His leadership embodies a solid, unpretentious style, one that is not guided by public opinion, but guided by a deep love of all people and a deep love of rule by the people. PETER RODINO'S contributions to our society are immeasurable and his career is a testament to American democracy.

The United States is a stronger, greater Nation for the love and labor of the most honorable PETER RODINO. It has been a tremendous privilege to serve with you in the U.S. House of Representatives. I salute you as you, PETER, retire from this body. We will miss you, but we are grateful to you and you will forever be an inspiration to the Members of the U.S. Congress.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to associate my remarks with those of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] and thank him for reserving the time for this tribute to one of our most outstanding colleagues; a true patriot and sterling lawmaker who will be sorely missed in this Chamber and by our Nation.

PETER RODINO first came to the Congress in 1948. His career in the House represents almost the entire postwar era. He has represented the same area in northern New Jersey all that time. PETER RODINO is a living link with the past, for he has witnessed all of the major changes that affected our Nation during the past four decades.

PETER RODINO was initially elected to replace Fred Harley, the coauthor of the famous—some say infamous—Taft-Hartley Act. PETER RODINO brought to that 1948 campaign a record as an ardent New Deal and Fair Deal supporter, an exemplary record in World War II, during which he rose to the rank of colonel, and a deep pride in his Italian-American roots.

For 40 years, PETER RODINO has represented the people of the Newark, NJ area in an exemplary manner because he truly cares about people. His ear was always attuned to their hopes and desires; his mind was always alert to their arguments; and his heart was always open to their desires. PETER RODINO's record of responsive representation was a model for the rest of us to emulate thoughout the years.

Although as a Member of Congress we all respected and held him up as a role model for two and a half decades, and although he was revered by the residents of his own district throughout that period, it was not until 1974 that PETER RODINO became a household word and a respected name to men, women, and children throughout our Nation and throughout the world. That was the year that PETER RODINO, as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, chaired the televised hearings into the second impeachment of a President in our history. In that historic role, PETER could have been a great force for evil, but he didn't even think about that. To the everlasting credit of our system and to the everlasting credit of PETER RODINO, he chaired the hearings with fairness, with decency, and, uppermost, with regard to our Constitution being afforded the paramount priority. The Watergate hearings could have become a bitterly partisan event which could have divided the American people for generations. PETER RODINO singlehandedly saw to it that this did not happen. PETER RODINO steered the impeachment hearings in such a way that they were an educational lesson for all Americans; a living demonstration, that we cannot forget, that the system does work—and that our laws pertain to all of us.

PETER RODINO's fame and respect was such that he was a major contender for the Vice Presidential nomination of his party in 1976. PETER, however, removed himself from contention because he believed his prime responsibility was to this House. Although this decision was a deep loss for the Nation that most Americans do not appreciate, it was a benefit to the House of Representatives.

I personally can attest that PETER RODINO's guidance and wise counsel has been of great benefit to us. If I were to enumerate all of the occasions that PETER RODINO has helped my district with judiciary matters, we would be here many hours. Suffice it to say that PETER's assistance and advice on such matters as our campaign against narcotics traffickers, the reimbursement of local governments for the Brink's trial, for equal rights for all Americans, and for due compensation for our police officers, are just a few of the issues which come to mind when recounting PETER RODINO's decades of service.

The Almanac of American Politics paid an exceptional glowing tribute to PETER RODINO which is quite an exception in that cynical publication:

> One strength of the American political system is that it has produced people of extraordinary talent who have happened to find their way into crucial positions at critical times and who have performed far better than their records gave anyone the right to expect. Such leaders have come from the most unlikely places: a Lincoln from the midwestern hick town of Springfield, Illinois; a Franklin Roosevelt from the aristocratic patroon families of the Hudson Valley. PETER RODINO, from Newark, New Jersey, proved himself in 1974 to be very much in that tradition.

Now that PETER RODINO departs on his certainly well earned retirement, we can assure him that he will go down in history as one of the giants of this institution. We can assure PETER that those of us who had the distinct honor and privilege of serving with him will never forget his kindnesses and counsel.

We can only hope that PETER will look back with fondness on his 40 years of memories in the House. We hope that PETER's retirement will be filled with years of good health and happiness.

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, there have been few persons who have served our Nation and our Congress more honorably than PETER RODINO. He has been a role model—a living example of how to stand firm like a rock on matters of principle.

Some outside this city may fail to recognize our valued friend's accomplishments in protecting our constitutional form of Government. He is retiring at the conclusion of this historic 100th session of Congress. The Founding Fathers are well known in history and history will recognize that PETER RODINO is a philosophical direct descendent of those great men who nutured a new republic. PETER RODINO has kept that trust and served our Nation well.

As chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, he led our Nation through a constitutional crisis that would have toppled lesser nations. He led this Congress through a constitutional confrontation with actions in the best interest of the Nation and this Congress. He dismissed pressure and acted with judicious dispatch much to his and our Nation's credit.

He has also been a champion for the American consumer. His leadership as chairman of the Subcommittee on Monopolies and Commercial Law has been outstanding. He has been a strong supporter of competition—true competition—that which allows the American economy to benefit within a system of business competition that benefits both industry and consumer. In recent years Congress has been bombarded with requests to grant exemptions to the antitrust laws. Chairman RODINO has led our committee, having surgically allowed exemptions when needed, without compromising the free market system that has made our Nation great.

The gentleman from New Jersey has been a leader—he has been a key to keeping our Nation free and competitive.

Millions of Americans are grateful for his service and I am pleased to join with them in applauding his distinguished career. He is one of the greatest persons to have served in Congress and I am pleased to have had the privilege to serve in this Congress with him.

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to my good friend and colleague, PETER RODINO. As you know, Chairman RODINO will be retiring from the House of Representatives at the end of the 100th Congress.

Over the last 40 years, Chairman RODINO has had a very distinguished and successful career in Congress. He has led this body through some of the most troubling times in our Nation's history. In the 1960's, PETE RODINO was at the forefront of efforts to enact comprehensive civil rights legislation and in the 1970's, headed the Watergate inquiry. As chairman of the Judiciary Committee he has demonstrated an uncanny ability to understand issues and based on that understanding, to formulate sound public policy.

While Chairman RODINO has established himself as a national leader, he has also served the 10th District of New Jersey with dignity, dedication, and honor. I know that he will be missed by his constituents.

For my own part, I am honored to have served with Chairman RODINO in the Congress. His compassion and devotion have led to many achievements for his district and for the country. I salute the 40 years of service of this great statesman and wish him all the best in the future.

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay my respects to the dean of the New Jersey delegation, PETER RODINO. PETE was one of 75 freshmen of his party who took their seats in the 81st Congress and owed their good fortune to Harry Truman's stunning election in 1948.

In time PETE became a vocal spokesman for the expansive view of the powers of Congress, and for strong limitations on the powers of the President. He was chairing the Judiciary Committee years before I was elected to the House. He achieved a career peak, as we know, during the Watergate hearings and carried his constitutional opinions over to last year's Iran-Contra committee hearings, which I had the privilege of sharing with him.

PETE has served New Jersey long and ably over four decades. I don't doubt he has many constituents who believe he yet has more public service to give, but PETE decided to retire this year. New Jersey loses a powerful representative with his retirement. I, for one, wish him a retirement that will be long, prosperous, and fruitful.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to express my appreciation that, over the 4 years of my service in the House, I've had the opportunity of working closely with the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey, whose retirement from the House I deeply regret.

I was initially elected to the House in 1972, and was honored to be assigned to the Judiciary Committee and to service under its new chairman, Mr. RODINO. The 93d Congress generally, and the Judiciary Committee specifically, was to be preoccupied by issues relating to whether President Richard Nixon should continue in office. Impeachment resolutions introduced by many Members, including myself, were referred to the Judiciary Committee and investigated over a 9-month period.

To say that Chairman RODINO kept faith with his responsibilities is a serious understatement. Whether in public or private session, or in confidential conversations, Chairman RODINO always displayed total nonpartisanship and sensitivity during the long, historic, and difficult days of the impeachment process. He gave truly extraordinary direction to the complex issues of constitutional balance of power and abuses of the Presidential office which dominated the committee's agenda. He rose to great pinnacles in stature, and made us all proud of him as he directed that historic inquiry, resulting in articles of impeachment being voted.

So it is with genuine fondness and admiration that I join with so many of our colleagues in expressing appreciation to Chairman RODINO for his truly outstanding service to this body and to the country—not only during that historic 93d Congress but during his 40 years of service in this House.

Thank you, PETER, for your friendship and warmth over the many years and thank you for unparalleled service here.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, I want to express my particular support for title VIII of H.R. 5210, which requires the placement of warning labels on containers of alcoholic beverages. This is a matter that is within the jurisdiction of our subcommittee and we were party to negotiations which led to the provision's inclusion in H.R. 5210.

The principal concern and jurisdiction of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment is public health. We are therefore critically aware that from a public health perspective, alcoholism and alcohol abuse are a major factor in our Nation's fight against drug abuse. The abuse of alcohol is responsible for over one half of fatal automobile accidents. It is one of the three leading causes of birth defects. It is a leading cause of suicide, injuries, and can be a cause of cancer and other serious health problems. Recognition of these facts is evidenced by the requirement for a national health warning label on alcoholic beverage containers. It is a long overdue step in the right direction.

The new warning label will state:

> Government Warning: (1) According to the Surgeon General, women should not drink alcoholic beverages during pregnancy because of the risk of birth defects. (2) Consumption of alcoholic beverages impairs your ability to drive a car or operate machinery, and may cause health problems.

Regulations specifying the location of this new warning on beverage containers will be issued by the Secretary of the Treasury. The statute requires that the warning be located in a "conspicuous and prominent place on the container." In carrying out this authority, we expect the Secretary to require that the label be of sufficient size and be printed in contrasting colors to assure that it is clearly visible to consumers.

I am particulary pleased that the new warning will highlight the serious risks that alcohol consumption poses to the fetus during pregnancy. Fetal alcohol syndrome is a major cause of birth defects and is the only cause that we know is preventable. The U.S. Surgeon General recommends that pregnant women or women contemplating pregnancy abstain from drinking. It's good advice. Warnings on alcoholic beverage containers will complement efforts to educate the general public about the public health consequences of alcohol abuse. Furthermore, warnings will serve as a reminder to pregnant women and equally important, to their friends, family and others who love them.

I want to emphasize that the placement of a Federal warning statement on alcoholic beverage containers represents only a small part of our efforts to discourage the abuse of alcohol and reduce the impact of abuse on public health. When we teach our young people about the dangers of illicit drugs, we must talk about alcohol, and we must talk about tobacco. It is a simple fact that drinking and tobacco use by minors is a serious risk factor for future illicit drug use. We must continue educational efforts in the schools. As parents we must teach by example. As citizens concerned about public health, we must promote community-based prevention efforts aimed at discouraging the abuse of alcohol, particularly on our college campuses. It is critical that States, which have primary authority for the regulation of alcohol sales, adopt additional policies and programs which will reduce the toll of alcoholism and alcohol abuse on our communities.

With the passage of this legislation, the authority of States is preempted to prescribe additional warning labels on beverage containers. It is a reasonable policy for two reasons. First, providing for uniformity in such health warnings will minimize burdens on interstate commerce. Second, the requirement of a Federal warning is but one means by which States and the alcohol beverage industry may discharge their responsibility to promote public health. Although the legislation precludes State legislatures from enacting laws that would prescribe alcohol container health warnings, States are free to regulate the conditions under which alcoholic beverages are sold and to regulate the advertising of such products. In this regard, the authority of States is unaffected by the legislation. In fact, the Senate committee report (Rept. No. 100-596), upon which these provisions were based, states this interpretation clearly.

> The provision should not be read to indicate that the states do not have the authority in other areas to impose standards to protect the health and safety of their citizens from hazards associated with the products they consume.

During deliberations on these provisions, questions were raised as to whether Federal preemption affected a manufacturer's product liability responsibility. I want to state clearly that the legislation does not affect the duty that manufacturers, bottlers, and sellers of alcoholic beverages have to inform and warn the public through all appropriate means of any known hazards associated with their product. Similarly, the legislation does not preclude manufacturers from voluntarily providing consumers of alcoholic beverages information about the adverse health effects of alcoholic beverages including the placement of additional warning statements or disclaimers on container labels. Nor can there be any question about the authority of courts to enter judgments with respect to warnings other than those directly on the labels of containers.

Certainly States and courts could find that public information campaigns were warranted in some circumstances or that certain types of advertising violated the duties of the manufacturers of alcoholic beverages. For example, certain advertising practices might be found to undermine the public perception of the Federal health warning label.

This bill deals only with warning labels, not liability. There is absolutely no mention of liability or immunity in the legislation or in the Senate committee report. The omission was deliberate and reflects the Congress' unwillingness to interfere in product liability actions. In the passage of this legislation it was not Congress' intent to affect the liability of manufacturers either positively or negatively. The Congress intended that any implications to be drawn from a manufacturer's compliance with this legislation are left to the discretion and interpretation of the courts.

In this regard, courts may well decide that it would be unjustified to penalize manufacturers for failing to have additional warnings on the label concerning birth defects and driving and operating machinery, since the bill blocks State legislatures from requiring additional label warnings in order to provide uniformity across the country. But even if some courts were to make such a finding, there can be no implication that any immunity is conferred for failure to use methods other than warning labels to warn about birth defects and driving or operating machinery.

The legislation also requires the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the Congress within 24 months if scientific information justifies changing the warning labels. While the Secretary of Treasury's report is to be prepared in consultation with the U.S. Surgeon General, nothing in this legislation diminishes the existing authority of the Department of Health and Human Services in general or the U.S. Surgeon General in particular to assess independently the adverse health effects of alcoholic beverages or to disseminate the results of such assessments to the Congress and the public.

It is our subcommittee's intent to follow the implementation of these provisions carefully in order to determine the need for additional legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for the legislation.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

We all realize that the solution to the problem of both alcoholism and drug addiction is complex. It requires a multifaceted approach to reach the many different aspects of the problem. This bill represents such an aproach.

One of the provisions of the bill which I believe holds out great promise is the provision to encourage the establishment of recovery housing for individuals recovering from addiction to drugs and alcohol. Chairman WAXMAN and I included, as part of the block grant treatment provisions of this bill a mandatory set-aside of $100,000 in each State to establish a revolving fund to provide loans to start self-run and self-supported recovery housing throughout the country. We did so because we believe that we have discovered a cost-effective program that has had great success in reducing relapse—a phenomena that makes recovery from alcoholism or drug addiction so frustrating I want to take a few minutes to share with my colleagues what we have learned.

Thirteen years ago a group of recovering individuals in the Washington, DC, area responded to the closing of a Government run halfway house by assuming the lease on that halfway house and running it on their own. They called the operation Oxford House. Today over 200 recovering individuals live in 18 such houses in the Washington, DC, area and 1 in Bethlehem, PA. Fifteen are for men and four are for women.

Each is an alcohol and drug free group house rented by recovering individuals and democratically run on a self-supporting basis. Each house was started by borrowing enough money for the first month's rent and a security deposit. Within 2 years each house has repaid the money it had borrowed. The repayment of startup loans has permitted loans for new houses to get started.

Self-run and self-supported addiction recovery houses—such as Oxford House—hold out great promise as a cost-effective way to help addicted individuals who want to recover. Such houses provide the kind of support necessary for most addicted individuals during the first year or so of their recovery.

In the Washington, DC, area each of the 18 Oxford Houses has to turn away between 15 and 20 new applications for membership each week because they are fully occupied. Oxford House is constantly opening new houses but because it generates all of its funds internally it takes time to accumulate the first month's rent and security deposit needed to rent another house. In the Washington housing market the rent for 1 month and the security deposit total between $4,000 and $5,000.

Once a house is started that money is paid back but it takes about 2 years. The State revolving funds established by this bill will enable the establishment of such houses throughout the country by providing an outside loan source to start new recovery houses.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that a brief explanation of Oxford House, a more detailed description of three of the existing Oxford Houses and the results of a survey concerning all Oxford House residents be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

The principle of self-help has already made a great contribution in dealing with the problems of both alcoholism and drug addiction. Alcoholics Anonymous in its half-century of existence has saved millions of lives and has groups in nearly every community in the country. Nan Robertson, a New York Times reporter reports in her recent book "Getting Better; Inside Alcoholics Anonymous" that AA now has 2 million members in 63,000 groups in 114 countries around the world and its numbers are now doubling every 10 years.[1] On Labor Day weekend an organization for drug addicts similar to AA—Narcotics Anonymous—held its annual convention in Anaheim, CA, and 11,000 members from all over the United States were there. Together AA and NA have demonstrated that for those who want to recover from addiction to alcohol or drugs the self-help path to recovery is available.

Unfortunately not every addicted individual is able to recover by using AA or NA alone. Even after detoxification and inpatient rehabilitation many need to live in an alcohol- and drug-free environment for some time in order to avoid relapse—the return to addiction.

For the past 13 years Oxford House has demonstrated that an alcohol- and drug-free living environment can be provided in a cost-effective manner. That living environment enables many recovering individuals, who might otherwise return to using drugs or alcohol, to stay clean, and become successful members of AA or NA. The loan concept, in this bill provides the catalyst to replicate recovery housing throughout the country without taking anything away from the self-help concept that makes Oxford House work.

Under this bill, each State revolving fund can provide startup loans of up to $4,000—to be repaid within 2 years—to individuals who want to start a recovery house. The number of individuals in an Oxford House ranges from 6 to 15 depending upon the size of the rented house. It is anticipated that under the new law small groups of recovering individuals will be able to rent a house in the existing housing market. To receive a loan recovering individuals must agree that first, the recovery house must be democratically run; second, it must be self-supporting; and third, individuals living in the house must be thrown out if they relapse into drinking alcohol or using drugs. It is a simple concept. It works and it is cost effective.

I urge the Secretary of Health and Human Services to work with Oxford House to implement this new program. The successful 13-year experience of Oxford House should be shared with officials and interested individuals in every State so that the concept of self-run, self-supported recovery housing can be quickly replicated throughout the country.

This new program represents a real opportunity to alleviate both the tragedy of addiction and the demand that fuels illicit drug trafficking. Recovery housing can provide the missing link in recovery from addiction. Passage of this bill begins an important new chapter in the fight against alcoholism and drug addiction by helping addicted individuals to help themselves to get better by living together in a supportive alcohol and drug free environment.

OXFORD HOUSE

In the Washington, DC area there are seventeen group houses which are home to nearly 200 individuals recovering from alcoholism and drug addiction. The Houses began 13 years ago, when a county-run halfway house closed, and have expanded solely from internally generated funds. It is truly a self-supported operation and democratically run like a college fraternity or sorority except members who relapse and use alcohol or drugs are thrown out. Each individual house is autonomous (like an AA group) and elects officers from its own members, who can only serve in office for six month periods of time. Each individual house is self-supporting. Each individual house has a charter from Oxford House, Inc., a non-profit 501(c)(3) corporation, which is the umbrella organization that enables the membership of each house to share its experience, strength and hope with the membership of every other house.

The corporation has two distinct entities: (1) the Oxford House Service Board, which helps new houses get started and existing houses to keep in close contact with the whole group of Oxford Houses; and (2) the Oxford House Revolving Fund which loans start-up money to new houses.

Experience has shown that Oxford House fills a void in the field of treatment of alcoholism or drug addiction by providing transitional housing in a supportive environment free of alcohol or drug use. Simply stated the concept recognizes that relapse is one of the great deterrents to recovery from alcohol or drug addiction. Many individuals in the recovery process do better when given time and a safe place to live to re-enforce the principle of abstinence fostered by AA and NA.

Oxford House is a supplement to—not a replacement of—other treatment facilities including traditional half-way houses. In October 1987 Oxford House branched out from the Washington area by starting a house in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. It has worked as well as the houses in Washington and demonstrated that the concept can be replicated throughout the country. Oxford House owns no property. All of its houses are rented. It is classified as family-residential for zoning purposes since no formal treatment is undertaken in the individual houses.

Oxford House is not affiliated with AA or NA and has neither of those meetings within its houses. However, individual members of Oxford House attend an average of six AA or NA meetings a week. Moreover the organization is patterned after AA and governance of the organization is through the development of consensus or group conscience.

THREE OXFORD HOUSES IN OPERATION

Three Oxford Houses were chosen for closer examination to give a better idea of the economics of running Oxford Houses and to examine the social interactions that make them work. The first is the Northampton house which has been in operation since November 1977 and is the second oldest Oxford House at the same location. It is in an upper middle class neighborhood of northwest Washington. The second is the Nineteenth Street house which has been in the same urban setting since March 1984. The third is the only house outside the Washington area, begun in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania in 1987. It will serve to illustrate how a house begins away from the near proximity of the Washington houses.

The stories of the three houses give insight into the process of Oxford House residents helping one another. There is no formal treatment in Oxford Houses, yet it is a healing environment. Residents are both providers and receivers of peer assistance in learning to work, attend and understand AA and NA and to live sober. By participating in the management and assuming leadership roles in the houses, members gain self-respect and learn to interact and get along with others. Paying their own way is important for those who have cut corners for years.

Older residents make newer residents feel at home and often know where they can get a temporary job quickly or get needed medical or dental attention. The most important function of older residents may be serving as role models, proving that it's possible to stay sober, work and lead satisfying lives. Alcoholics and drug adicts, notorious for defiance of authority, are influenced by their peers just like everybody else. They don't want to be evicted from a house by their peers for failure to pay their way or for using alcohol or drugs. Removed from their old drinking and drug-using associates, they fall under the influence of a house full of people who are sober and improving their lives. Hundreds of Oxford House residents and former residents attributed their sobriety to that powerful influence.

Names in this report have been changed to protect privacy.

OXFORD HOUSE NORTHAMPTON

The Property

Oxford House Northhampton must surely be one of the finest recovery homes in the country and is probably the most comfortable residence leased by Oxford House.

It is located in an upper middle class neighborhood, one block from Chevy Chase Circle in upper northwest Washington, D.C., about a mile from the exclusive Chevy Chase Country Club. It is the last house on the end of a quiet residential street near Connecticut Avenue, a major thoroughfare.

On the west side is a branch bank and the bank's parking lot. On the east side is a residence. Across Northampton Street is the Chevy Chase city library. Along Connecticut Avenue is a short business district, the only commercial strip in the area. Within a few blocks of the house are two grocery stores, a drug store, another bank, a gasoline station, movies, and a number of restaurants and other shops. Everything a resident needs is within easy walking distance. It is on a city bus line and within walking distance of a subway stop. It is about five miles from the center of Washington and an easy commute.

The house at 3765 Northampton Street is an imposing structure with a circular driveway in front and four white pillars on the concrete front porch. Inside is a chandelier at the front of a wide hallway that runs the length of the downstairs. The hallway was painted grey-blue with white trim by a house member.

The downstairs has five large common rooms plus a kitchen and half-bath. To the right of the entrance is a paneled library which is now often used as a television room. To the left of the entrance is the living room with a television, videorecorder and working fireplace, for which the residents buy firewood. Above the fireplace are a number of large trophies won by a resident on the golf course. Behind the living room is another large room used as a dining area. Behind the library is a large kitchen with applicances found in most Oxford Houses, a drip coffeemaker and microwave oven. Each resident has his own shelf space and spot in the two large refrigerators. Behind the kitchen, in what was once probably the dining room, is a room used as sort of a combination house office and den. It has two pay telephones, which house members got as a solution to unclaimed long-distance charges. It also has a bulletin board and desk.

The second floor has seven bedrooms, three double and four single, and two full baths. Each room is carpeted, each has a television set and each television is wired for cable reception. Eight of the 13 house members have private telephones, some with answsering machines.

In the basement are three single rooms and two full baths. Also in the basement are a washer and dryer and a weight room with an exercise bicycle and punching bag.

Origin

Oxford House Northampton was begun in November, 1977, the second house the organization began in the District of Columbia and the second oldest now in operation at the same location.

Like most other Oxford House, the Northampton house was begun because those in existing houses began to feel guilty that they had a safe place to achieve sobriety, yet there were telephone calls every day from prospective applicants for whom there was no room.

The first house in the District of Columbia was started in May, 1976, in a fine upper-northwest neighborhood. In their eagerness to lease a house, the first residents took a house that was scarcely adequate for 10 people. One year later when the lease expired, the residents of that house moved about ½ mile away to a stately house on Huntington Street that was much more suitable for an Oxford House operation and is still an Oxford House today.

While there were several houses in Maryland, the Huntington Street house was the only one in the District and was swamped with applicants. One member of the house asked a friend in the real estate business to be alert for another potential Oxford House. The real estate salesman soon found the Northampton house. It had been vacant for several months, apparently because there was little demand for huge houses at the time. Some youngsters had broken in and used it as a place to congregate. There were empty beer cans and chicken bones in some of the bedrooms on moving day. A one-year lease was signed, with rent of $800 monthly with an option for a second year at the same rental.

Prior to that time, all Oxford Houses were begun with some members of existing houses moving into the new house. At the Northampton house all the members were new recruits. The first resident was Tom, a Naval Academy graduate who treated the other new residents like members of his private Navy. It was several months before they realized that the house was really run democratically and began to rebel.

One positive carryover from Tom's days in the house was that a tradition of cleanliness was established that continues to the present day. It was the first house where chores were rigidly set out and fines levied if they weren't performed.

In the early days Oxford House houses were often rented and furniture collected before a large group of potential residents was lined up to move into a house. Two residents of existing houses might become the first occupants of a house for 14 people. Once moved in they would begin taking applications. In recent years the demand is such that once word leaks out that a new house will open there is a rush of potential candidates and the house is usually full or near full before moving day. Some people at alcohol rehabilitation centers have paid rent for weeks to reserve a space in a house.

Oxford House Northampton in Operation

Discussions with several Oxford House Northampton residents reveals a firm belief that the mandatory weekly meeting is at the heart of what makes a successful house.

Members of the house feel so strongly about the required attendance at the meeting that, unlike other houses, they won't accept any new residents who can't attend the 6:30 p.m. Monday meetings. Any resident who moves into the house and can't attend on a regular basis is asked to move.

Residents feel that the meeting is the key to harmonious living. It is at the meetings that prospective members are interviewed, that house business and purchases are discussed, and where members report on subjects like cleanliness, rent due, jobs and job prospects.

Without the meetings residents say tensions can build and fester over personality conflicts or neglected responsibilities to the house. At the meetings the items that cause discord can be debated, sometimes hotly, and taken care of. A member who has been in the house five years said there has been no physical confrontations during his residency. There is a house rule that anybody who starts a fight is expelled. During June, July and August house meetings are held only every second week to allow residents to go on vacation. Members claim the house doesn't work as well during those months because house business isn't taken care of promptly.

The house meetings, while not lengthy, are to the point. Each house member is called on to name the chore he is assigned and to tell other house members whether it has been done. Back rents are discussed. In April this year, no member was over one week behind in rent.

Emphasis at the meetings often reflects the interests of the house presidents, which change every six months. Some stress cleanliness, others paying rent on time and others making sure everybody is employed, according to one resident.

The house is as well taken care of as if the members were actually the owners. Through the years the members of the house have gradually and steadily improved the property. They spend about $500 yearly on the lawn for mulch, fertilizer, garden tools and on flowers. The lawn is thick and well cared for, the hedges are trimmed and there are two birdbaths.

The care of the house has paid dividends. The owners are so pleased to have Oxford House as their tenant that they haven't raised the rent in five years. One occupant said one of the owners remarked that they have a perpetual lease with no rent increase as far as she is concerned.

The house has little turnover. In April, none of the 13 residents had moved out in seven months. The house is overwhelmed with requests for residency. One member estimated there are 15 calls weekly in times of peak demand and about eight weekly in times of slow demand. Several alcohol rehabilitation programs like the Veterans' Administration, the Psychiatric Institute and the U.S. Post Office employee assistance program refer all those needing housing to the house. There is seldom room for any of them.

Getting Accepted

When a vacancy occurs the house president calls prospective house members from a file of applicants kept at the house. Former residents get first consideration if they left the house in good standing.

The prospective residents are brought before a house meeting one at a time and asked to give a five-minute talk on why they want to move into the house. The house residents look at the application and each in turn asks the applicant questions. Then the next applicant is brought in. The process takes about 30-minutes per applicant. After two are interviewed, a vote is taken by secret ballot. If both are rejected, more are called. Members try to accept those who need the house the most and those who return time and again hoping to gain acceptance. They try to avoid those who want to move into Oxford House to mitigate a legal problem and those who aren't serious about staying sober.

Those who survive this elaborate process feel it is a privilege to get to live in the house. This feeling is reinforced when the new resident moves in and those in the house go out of their way to make him feel welcome. Old residents take him to Alcoholics Anonymous or Narcotics Anonymous meetings. They encourage him to get a job and help him find one if they can. It is explained to him that he is living in a good neighborhood and is expected to respect his neighbors. They also tell him in a supportive way that he is on his own, but they will be keeping an eye on him.

He is lucky in several respects. Because the owners of the property haven't raised the $1,800 monthly rent in five years, it is a very reasonable place to live in the Washington, D.C. area. Weekly rental of $55 covers everything but food.

The house has features others don't have like cable television in every room not because residents have higher income than other houses, but because members take great pride in the house and its improvements.

Oxford House Northampton has eight white and five black residents ranging in age from 21 to 62, with an average age of 37.

Although all misused alcohol, several of the residents primarily had problems with drugs other than alcohol. Their occupations include a marble worker, housepainter, liquor store worker, post office worker, drywall installer, telephone company worker, dispatcher, a building inspector and a man in the insurance business.

The house is sound financially and during those months when there are five weeks' rental payments collected, extra items are purchased for the house. These include a weed eater, a gas grill for the back yard, a new VCR, the microwave oven, gym equipment and a cat. The monthly gas bill averages about $300 and the electric about $150. The house spends $225 monthly on staples and $40 for the pay telephones.

While Oxford House, Inc. doesn't require any rules of houses except the prohibition on drinking and using drugs and that each member pay his share of expenses, the Northampton house is more rigid than some. For instance, guests aren't allowed in rooms between midnight and 8 a.m. The hours that the washer and dryer can be used are limited. Lying down on the couch in the library is prohibited. Rules are handed down verbally rather than new residents being handed a list of rules.

While nobody has been ejected from the house for well over a year, residents say the no drinking, no drug use rule is essential.

"I had run out of people who would help me," said Robert, a 62-year-old World War II veteran and former college basketball player. "I knew if I drank I wouldn't have any place to live. That's why you got to have a rule that if you drink or drug you're on the street immediately."

Bill, a 51-year-old post office worker who competes in golf tournaments, attributes the success of the house to peer pressure.

"Most of us had never lived with people getting clean," he said. "We had peer pressure to get alcohol and drugs, but never to stay clean.

"This place took me away from the friends I had and forced me to adapt—to stay clean. I always preach get involved—do more."

On Christmas house members buy a tree, select names to share gifts and have a big meal. On Thanksgiving they have a large meal to give thanks.

OXFORD HOUSE NINETEENTH STREET

The Property

Oxford House Nineteenth Street is part of a three story duplex with a basement located on a reasonably quiet street near the center of Washington, D.C. The immediate area is mostly residential, with single family houses and an occasional apartment building or large house converted into apartments. It is near the Connecticut Avenue corridor of upscale homes and apartment buildings and also near the Adams-Morgan section, an ethnically mixed neighborhood of whites, blacks and recent immigrants, mostly Hispanic. Adams-Morgan has recently become a fashionable nightspot that some claim will rival the trendy Georgetown section of Washington for restaurants and nightlife.

The Oxford House has residential neighbors on both sides and is across the street from the John Quincy Adams Elementary School. Just around the corner are the Hilton Hotel where President Reagan was shot in 1981 and part of the Soviet Embassy. It is about 12 blocks from the White House.

The house is convenient to everything a resident could possibly need. There are banks within several blocks, and grocery stores, dry cleaners, drug stores and other convenience stores are nearby. It is a five minute walk to a subway stop at DuPont Circle, allowing quick access to any section of the city. This is important because only four residents have automobiles and parking is in short supply in the area. No parking places are included with the house. It is on a bus line and taxis are easy to hail in the area.

The house, at 2017 Nineteenth Street N.W., is within walking distance of the main business district of Washington where most of the residents work. It would be difficult to find a more convenient location for an Oxford House.

The house doesn't have a great deal of common space considering that 15 people live there. The first floor has a living room in the front with relatively new furniture and a large television with remote control and a VCR with a selection of movies. There is but a small area separating the living room from a large kitchen with spacious storage space and three refrigerators. There is a drip coffeemaker, stove, microwave oven and a large dining table that seats six.

Each of the two upper floors has three double bedrooms and one bath. The basement has a separate entrance that is seldom used. It has two bedrooms, one a double and one a single, and one bath. It also has two washers and two dryers separated by a partition from the rest of the basement, and one refrigerator.

Origin

The Nineteenth Street Oxford House, although in that location only since March 1984, is a direct descendent of one of the earliest Oxford Houses.

In 1976 some Oxford House members left the second Oxford House ever established, at 41st and Fessenden Streets in the District of Columbia, to begin a third house in Silver Spring, Maryland. After several years in the Silver Spring location, the owners of the house returned from duty oveseas with the State Department and reclaimed their house. The members of the house then leased a house on Ingomar Street in Washington. After about four years at the Ingomar Street address the same thing happened, the owners returned to Washington from Michigan and moved back into their house. This time the group moved to Nineteenth Street and leased a house from an owner who intended to keep the house as a rental investment property, presumably preempting another episode of returning owners forcing an Oxford House to relocate. Members of the Nineteenth Street house were directly responsible for founding another Oxford House, which now has 15 residents, in the same area. In 1985 a small Oxford House in Takoma Park, Maryland was closing because the owner had another use for his property. Several members of the Nineteenth Street house, being friendly with a long-time resident of the Takoma Park house, began looking for a house to rent so he could start another Oxford House in the District. The same landlord who owned the Nineteenth Street house offered for lease a house on Kalorama Street in the District. For personal reasons the member from Takoma Park didn't move into the Kalorama house, but three members of the Nineteenth Street house did move. Within about one week the Kalorama house was full, again indicating the need for alcohol-free housing for recovery.

Oxford House Nineteenth Street in Operation

Several residents likened living at the Nineteenth Street Oxford House to being part of family. The glue that holds the house together is the weekly meeting, they said. Held at 7 p.m. each Tuesday, it allows members to ask new residents how they are adjusting to the house and how older residents can help them adjust. Like other houses, the meetings also deal with house finances, and during summer months when gas bills are low, how any surplus money should be spent to improve the house or yard. Perhaps the greatest function of house meetings is to allow those with any gripes or resentments against other members to air them so conflicts can be resolved rather than allowed to fester. Though usually most residents are current, past due rents are reviewed. The house is inspected before each house meeting to see if assigned chores have been performed. If they haven't they are brought up. Chores are generally done promptly because a house member can be fined a week's rent, $50, for failure to perform his chore. Minutes of past meetings are reviewed.

Getting Accepted

The house has an average of five applications for each opening, many of them coming from the Veterans Administration alcohol and drug treatment facility in Washington, other alcohol treatment units, from halfway houses or from people who are living in bad situations where others are using alcohol or drugs. Applicants appear before the house meeting where they are asked to tell about themselves; how they got into treatment; how Oxford House can be useful to them; if they have the money to live in the house; if they have 30-days of sobriety or nearly 30-days[1]; if they have problems with sharing a room. Applicants are also familiarized with Oxford House.

All applicants are discussed before a vote is taken. House members tend to accept the applicant who needs the house the most because he is newly sober, rather than the one who has been sober for a while. However, if a person who has been out of treatment for a while keeps applying for membership in the house, he probably will eventually be accepted. The house president was rejected at the Nineteenth Street house twice and at the Kalorama house once before being accepted last July.

Although like all Oxford Houses there is no mandatory atttendance at AA or NA meetings, members of the house are strongly encouraged to participate when they gain admittance, and 14 of 15 house members regularly attend. It would be unusual to find two residents at the house at the 8 and 10 p.m. meeting time. New residents are invited to attend meetings with old residents.

Every new resident has a roommate and isn't allowed to become isolated. One house member wasn't seen but briefly for a long period of time, so several residents visited him at his job site to see if he was having problems. They found that he was merely having to work long hours.

The house is about evenly divided between those whose drug of choice was alcohol and those whose drugs of choice were other than alcohol. Although odorless, it isn't difficult to tell if somebody is using drugs, residents assert. Behavior changes are a sure giveaway. People on drugs act differently, they say. "I know I couldn't come here and be using . . . somebody would know," said a resident. "I would want to be in my room alone and people would know something was wrong."

[1] Although there is no requisite period of sobriety for admittance to Oxford House, some houses have established time periods they consider important before admitting new members.

In the past year only one resident was voted out of the house for using alcohol or drugs and two others left on their own under suspicious circumstances. The Nineteenth Street house has instituted a rule on knowledge of drinking that resembles the honor codes at the military academies. If a person knows that another is drinking or using drugs and fails to report him, he too is banished from the house.

The 15 residents are in their 20s, 30s and 40s, with an average age of 37, the youngest being 24 and the oldest 49. Twelve are black and three are white. At least six are veterans and another is on active military duty. Their occupations include a government worker, mortician, two construction workers, two hospital workers, two restaurant workers, a counselor for the handicapped, a painter, a railroad conductor, a carpenter, a luggage store worker, a correctional center worker and a maintenance worker at a school. Two have been in Oxford House over six years and five more between one and five years. Seven have been in the house less than a year, with an average of six months each.

Monthly rental is $1,800 with an average gas bill of $500 monthly and electric bill of $290. The house spends $200 monthly on staples like sugar, coffee and paper products.

The house is like a family, said a resident who is a railroad conductor. "Everybody is concerned with what's going on. Lots of times there will be five or six of us in the kitchen at 1 a.m. talking about our lives and the house. it's a good house. I'm glad I'm here."

"If I had to go back to my old environment I doubt I would make it," said the house president, a maintenance worker at a day care center who moved in last July. "I go back to my old neighborhood because I have kids, and get the old feelings. Oxford House is a safe, pleasant place to go after work.

"This is how I would want it to be at my house if I had one," he said. "Everybody has a chore. We sit down and go over the bills. If somebody has a problem we sit down and talk about and try to help."

OXFORD HOUSE BETHLEHEM, PENNSYLVANIA

The Property

The Oxford House in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania is a large, solid, three-story, white brick house. It is located in a neglected older section of Bethlehem that is now a mix of businesses and residents. Although a single house, it is situated just a few feet from the neighboring house on one side and is separated only by an alleyway and a small yard from the neighbor on the other side. Across the street is a huge German-Catholic church. It is an easy walk from the house to the grocery store, bank and other convenience stores. Several blocks away is Lehigh University and some of the housing in the area is rented to students. Several row houses in the neighborhood have been turned into low-price hamburger and hotdog restaurants.

The house was once divided into two apartments for rental. There are three large common rooms and one bedroom on the first floor. The front room is the living room where the television is playing most of the time. The center room, which was once the dining room, has a telephone, desk and a couch and serves as the house office. Off the hall leading from the office toward the kitchen is a bedroom for two with a full-bath across the hall. In the back is a large kitchen with two dining tables, two large refrigerators, and a drip coffeemaker. Bacause so many house members prepared prepackaged frozen foods, one of the first purchases once the house was on its feet was a microwave oven.

On the second floor are four bedrooms and one bath. Three of the bedrooms are occupied by two residents each and a fourth tiny bedroom has one resident. The third floor has a large front bedroom with two occupants and a large unfinished, unheated area used for storage. The basement, which appeared like a dungeon when the house was first leased, has been painted and the front room converted into a weight room. Also in the front room is a washer and dryer. The back part is for storage.

The house is large enough so that it doesn't seem crowded, even with 10 residents. It is "big enough so that you find a place to be alone, sort of, but you're not really alone," said one resident.

The house is reasonably well furnished throughout. In addition to a small truckload of furniture sent up by the Washington houses, house members scrounged the remainder and have spent less than $200 on furniture, and that included $75 for a large color television.

Origin

The Oxford House in Bethlehem is one of the newest Oxford Houses and the only one not in the Washington, D.C. area.

The idea for the house began in the summer of 1987 when one of the founders of Oxford House, a former staff member for the Congress, ran into former congressman Fred Rooney, with whom he had once worked. Rooney, who knew about Oxford House, mentioned that it was too bad that Oxford House didn't have houses in Pennsylvania because his home place in Bethlehem was for sale. The former Oxford House member told him Oxford House didn't purchase property, but perhaps a lease would be possible. Rooney, along with his partner Bill Werpehowski, arranged for him and another Oxford House founder to see the house in August and to meet with Sally Gillispie who directs alcohol programs for the county. Gillispie, whose responsibilities included a large halfway house in neighboring Allentown, said there was a need for transitional housing and agreed that the halfway house would be a good source of residents for Oxford House.

Rooney and Werpehowski, who owns a real estate business in Bethlehem, agreed to lease the house to Oxford House for several years for $1,000 monthly. In late September the first referral, Frank, moved into the house at 426 Carlton Avenue.

To prevent any possibility of a zoning dispute, Rooney and Werpehowski sent the Oxford House literature to city officals who ruled that the house fell within the definition of a "family" and the city issued a certificate of occupancy.

Oxford House Bethlehem in Operation

Oxford House Bethlehem was the first house in many years begun away from the day-to-day influence of the Washington house and the deck seemed stacked against it from the beginning. The main problem, because of a misunderstanding, was a lack of residents and inability to meet expenses.

The first resident, and the people at the halfway house who were to recommend residents for Oxford House, somehow got the notion that three or four months sobriety were required for Oxford House residency. By limiting occupancy to those with several months sobriety, the pool of potential residents shrunk to almost nothing before the house ever opened. Those who had managed to stay sober several months had already made other living arrangements.

The first resident lived alone in the house for about six weeks. During that time he made a number of physical improvements, including trimming some overgrown hedges and painting much of the downstairs, but the house was no nearer self-sufficiency than when he moved in.

Since the Oxford Houses in Washington didn't have any seed money set aside for the Bethlehem house, it was in a precarious position. A private loan from an Oxford House resident in Washington picked up the first month's rent. In the second month the Washington houses sent $600 and a truckload of furniture.

In early November two additional residents of the halfway house moved in and the members began to pull together to make it work.

A neighbor gave them a television set. A resident bought some dressers from a neighbor. They did little things to establish a precedent of keeping the house straight and clean.

The Lehigh Valley is a depressed area with Bethlehem Steel having cut back from about 20,000 to about 6,000 employees in the last decade. Two residents were out of work and the first Thanksgiving they had to get some food from a food bank.

The Bethlehem House was operating according to the Oxford House manual, but the manual never dealt with where to get new residents. The Houses in Washington were unaware of the belief in Bethlehem that 3-4 months of sobriety were required. In retrospect, it was largely the fault of the Washington houses for not making sure Bethlehem knew that residents could come from a variety of places and that there were no absolute sobriety requirements.

One of the Oxford House founders, who had a son at Lehigh University, would make brief visits periodically. When he found out the house requirement, he suggested that they fill the house the best way they could and pay the bills, If a person drank or used drugs he could be evicted immediately.

House members set a weekly rental of $50, plus a $5 surcharge for staples like toilet paper and coffee. By the end of November there were five residents. By January 1, there were six, still hardly enough to make a go of it, especially with the high heating bills of winter.

Once they knew that no period of sobriety was required for residency, they became more aggressive in their recruiting. Two men stayed for a month and left. At times they felt like it might not work, but they never quit.

Slowly membership in the house climbed, reaching 10 by early April. At that time all bills were paid and over $1,000 was in the bank, more than was needed to pay May's rent. Further, the house asked about repaying the $1,600 loaned by the people in Washington.

The average electric bill for the house has been $100, with oil averaging $90 and gas $30. Residents spend about $200 monthly on staples. They bought a microwave oven and were talking of other accessories for the house.

There are nine white residents and one black, with an average age of 43. Nine of the house members used alcohol as their drug of choice.

Strong bonds were formed while staying sober and solving problems together. By April the house members knew the house was there to stay and confidently spoke of being able to handle other problems that came their way.

Some of the examples of personal friendships in the house are moving. For instance, in January when the bills were behind, one resident went to the local detoxification unit and found a 58-year-old black man who had lost a leg while drinking and who had been hospitalized 12 times for alcoholism the prior year.

Some residents didn't think it would be a good idea to accept him because he had so much physical damage he couldn't be fitted with an artificial leg and would never be able to walk or hold a job, had relapsed often, and shook so badly he couldn't even feed himself. Some argued that he would be better off in a nursing home-type facility.

Nonetheless, the need to pay the bills was great and he was voted in.

As the man recovered he began to carry his own weight. He refused to allow other residents to take his clothing downstairs to the washing machine, instead washing it by hand himself. He took on the chore of keeping the downstairs floors clean and would get out of his wheelchair and crawl around the floor to get the job done. "I won't ask them to do anything I can do myself," he said.

He also began to talk a lot about the wreckage of his drinking years and how to avoid the same mistakes again, a never-ending topic of conversation in Oxford Houses. By April he was not only an accepted member of the house, but a popular member. He is proud of the four months without a drink and grateful to have an Oxford House to live in. "If they hadn't taken me in I don't know what would have happened to me," he said.

"This proves that just because somebody has handicaps and disabilities it doesn't mean they can't be a positive force," said Steve, the first house president.

Gratitude for Oxford House and the chance it offers for sobriety is a common theme.

Carl, for instance, a middle-aged test engineer for a large company, tried to get into two halfway houses before leaving a 28-day rehabilitation program, but the houses were full. Fearful of getting drunk if on his own and aware that he was once called legally dead after a series of alcoholic seizures, he found Oxford House and likes the philosophy of self-help. "I've been here a month and I don't think I would have lasted that long out there (without drinking)"

Steve, the twice-divorced father of two who was the first resident, had experienced successes in the past as a restaurant manager, restaurant supply salesman, service station operator, real estate salesman and maintenance worker. But for six years prior to getting sober he lived in a cabin in the woods without electricity where he said he worked when he had to and partied all the time.

After getting sober in the Veterans Administration hospital and a stay at the halfway house in Allentown, Pennsylvania he moved into Oxford House. He began the first house president and began to accept responsibility again. He began working for a contractor on a job for Bethlehem Steel for $6.00 hourly. That was quickly raised to $6.50 and then $9.00 hourly and his status seemed secure. One evening in April Steve and his supervisor were sharing a cup of coffee in the Oxford House Kitchen.

"It really helps me a lot knowing that if I drink or use drugs I'm out," he said. "I don't have to make the decision, it's made for me. It makes it easier to stay sober."

The house president in April was Don, a six-year Navy veteran who later worked 20 years for the state of New Jersey and raised five children before getting into serious trouble with alcohol. He had once unsuccessfully tried to stay sober in a small private room above a bar.

Don liked the freedom from the regimentation that exists in halfway houses. "We are not under the pressure of being under somebody's thumb," he commented.

The members of the Bethlehem house are older on average than most Oxford Houses and are "mature enough that there aren't any serious personality problems to solve," he said. "The house just seems to have clicked * * * to have taken off."

Six of the 10 residents were veterans and Don attributed time in the armed services to stability in the house. People with military training have lived together "and when they see tension coming, they can work around it," he said.

Several of the veterans had been through the alcohol program at the Lyons, N.J. VA hospital and some had met there before eventually ending up in Oxford House.

At some houses parking is a problem. At the Bethlehem house, because of drunk driving arrests or because they are just getting on their feet, only two residents had cars. The Bethlehem house was probably more lenient on past due rent than any other house with the majority of residents behind at least a week in rent.

The neighbors know who they are and their purpose and they have been welcomed. One neighbor gave them a television set that lasted several months. Another sent over a platter of food on New Year's Eve. The neighbors are appreciative that a rundown property has been improved and comment on improvements like flowers and the fresh paint. "We have 10 guys who can fix things up. We can't go outside on a nice day and not have people say 'hello'," said Steve.

Gillispie, the county director of alcohol programs, said the men in Oxford House had made a believer out of her and she would be willing to participate in any future houses. She spoke of the need for a house for women in the area.

Werpehowski, who had been a cooperative and understanding landlord, said he was impressed with what was going on at the house and would be willing to find another house for lease to Oxford House, perhaps in Allentown. That matter was to be put before the Oxford House board.

OXFORD HOUSE RESIDENT SURVEY, SPRING 1988

Introduction

During the Spring 1988, the residents of all 13 (there are now 18) Oxford Houses in the Washington, D.C., Maryland and Pennsylvania areas were asked to participate in a short, self-administered, confidential survey. Of 125 persons in the houses, 96 (77 percent) answered the voluntary survey. Respondents were not asked to identify themselves on the survey.

The marginal data were computer generated using the SPSSX statistical package. The data was analyzed by William H. Spillane PH.D.

The purpose of the survey is to describe characteristics of house residents and document the value of the Oxford House concept as a key component in recovery of alcoholics and/or drug addicts.

Some of the more striking findings are that virtually all respondents found Oxford House crucial to their recovery, and they attend an average of six Alcoholics Anonymous or Narcotics Anonymous meetings weekly, a remarkable number since no AA or NA meetings are compulsory and none are held in the houses.

Descriptive Findings

Survey participants are male (87 percent) [2] and employed full or part-time (84 percent).

Average gross monthly income is $1,040.

29 percent are between the ages of 18-29; 41 percent are between the ages of 29-39; and 30 percent are older than 39.

55 percent had no military service and 13 respondents didn't answer this item.

56 are caucasian; 40 percent are black.

73 percent are single; 8 percent are separated.

80 percent have finished high school; 36 percent have some college.

One-fourth used Oxford House in a first attempt to get sober or straight; 26 percent had tried to get sober five or more times.

50 percent had been sober one year or longer; of that 50 percent, 18 percent had been sober two years or more, and 14 percent had been sober three years or more.

29 percent had not been admitted to a detoxification unit; 28 percent had been detoxed at least once; and 43 percent had been detoxed two or more times.

79 percent had been to at least one in-patient or out-patient substance abuse treatment program; 29 percent reported being admitted to a substance abuse treatment program three or more times.

39 percent reported being homeless at some time in their lives; 20 percent were homeless for six months or more; and 12 percent were homeless for one-year or more.

97 percent reported that Oxford House was important to their continued sobriety; 80 percent called it "very important."

99 percent percent said they would recommend Oxford House to other alcoholics or drug abusers in early recovery.

80 percent attend Alcoholics Anonymous weekly; 43 percent attend four or more AA meetings per week.

58 percent attend Narcotics Anonymous weekly; with 25 percent attending five or more meetings per week.

45 percent attend both AA and NA meetings each week. When AA and NA are combined, respondents attend an average of six meetings per week.

41 percent receive additonal counseling.

95 percent report their health as "very good" or "pretty good".

51 percent had resided in Oxford House for nine months or longer; 24 percent had four or fewer months of residence; and 10 percent had lived in Oxford House for three or more years.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the conference report on the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. During the past few years, the problems associated with illegal drug use have greatly increased across the Nation. Drugs are prevalent in our schools, they are corrupting our youth, and they are leading to an increase in crime that is terrorizing many of our neighborhoods. The legislation we will pass today is not a cure-all to the drug problem, but it will assist the effort on many fronts.

[2] Since the survey a house for eight women has opened in the District of Columbia and a house for twelve women.

The bill before us now is the result of a year-long effort by the House and Senate to develop a more effective Federal role in combating illegal drug use in America. The package that has been developed has provisions that will deal with both the supply and demand sides of the problem. The bill authorizes funds for drug law enforcement, drug abuse prevention and treatment, and international narcotics control programs. It also makes important changes in existing laws to discourage drug use and improve law enforcement efforts.

Drug and gang activity is posing a major threat to the quality of life for the people living in the Inland Empire of Southern California, which I represent. Much of the drug problem there involves the use of highly purified cocaine, known as "crack." Members of two main Los Angeles-based drug gangs, the Crisps and the Bloods, are the major dealers of this potent drug, which can be purchased by students in playgrounds and schoolyards throughout my congressional district.

Crack has been shown to be highly addictive, more so than most other drugs. Crack is so addictive, according to experts, that it does not have "casual users." Even one-time users can feel a powerful and desperate need to use the drug again and again. Of additional concern, studies have shown crack users to be more prone to violence than users of other drugs.

A major part of the war on drugs does not take place in the United States. Most of the cocaine that is confiscated in the United States is manufactured in Colombia and smuggled across our border. It is vital for drug-producing countries to develop other forms of income, and in some cases, we may need to help the countries diversify their economies. In Bolivia, the cocaine trade provides a livelihood for over 400,000 peasants who have little other means of support. Bringing those responsible for smuggling to trial is also a problem. In the past 10 years, 31 Colombian judges have been murdered for their role in trying drug cases.

We can do a better job of stopping drugs at our borders, but interdiction alone is insufficient. Our national border is simply too permeable to boats and planes aimed at delivering drugs to U.S. customers. Federal law enforcement agencies estimate that they are intercepting only 5 to 15 percent of the flow of drugs crossing our borders. Illegal shipments of cocaine, for example, have tripled in the past 6 years, leading to a fivefold reduction in the street price of cocaine.

We must supplement interdiction efforts with education. I am particularly pleased with the emphasis on drug education in the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. Knowledge remains our best weapon against drug abuse. Classrooms and living rooms across the Nation must be used to instruct our youth about the cancerous, fatal nature of the drug problem. People throughout the country must realize that their use of illegal drugs makes them accomplices to the crime, gang wars, murder, and corruption that are all components of the drug market in America.

What we need—and what I believe we have in the drug bill before us today—is an aggressive national strategy to address the drug problem on all fronts, aimed at combating international drug production and traffic, protecting our borders against drug smugglers, enhancing drug law enforcement, and reducing drug use through effective drug treatment, prevention, and education programs.

This will be no small task, but what higher priority do we have when children are being pulled into drug gangs, reaping incredible profits from illegal narcotics, engaging in criminal activities—including homicide—to finance their habits, and, in thousands of cases each year, dying of overdoses?

DRUG PROGRAMS THAT WORK

Two programs that have shown good results and have my enthusiastic support are asset forfeiture and the DARE Program:

Asset forfeiture: Major assets from drug traffickers, such as cars and boats, are being seized in raids by law enforcement officers, and then resold. The profits are used for needed drug and crime-fighting equipment and for overtime pay for officers. This program benefits police officers by using assets from drug traffickers to help pay for the war on drugs.

DARE Program: This education program is funded by State and Federal moneys to send specially trained officers into fourth- and fifth-grade classrooms. Officers teach a 17-week class on drug education, using visual aids and role playing to help young students "Just Say No" to drugs. Educators in my district tell me this program is well received by both students and teachers, because it presents real life situations and teaches students how to make critical decisions.

THE 1988 OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT

Today in the House we will be voting on the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. This bill will help improve the national effort, at a time when, having already spent more than $14 billion on the war against drugs, we appear to be losing that war. The bill which comes to us from the Senate today is our best chance to regroup our forces and fight the war on drugs on a variety of fronts. It is not a perfect bill. It has provisions in it which I opposed in the House. But, generally speaking, the Senate has ameliorated some of the worst of these provisions.

The Omnibus Drug Initiative Act establishes increased penalties for possession of crack and says that those who traffic in drugs should pay the highest possible price. The measure will also establish a drug abuse eradication and prevention program targeted at the youth gangs that sell crack. A gram of cocaine may cost someone only $90, but even so-called casual or recreational users—if indeed casual use is possible—must realize that even the simple act of buying drugs subsidizes gang violence, smugglers, pushers, and other crime activities.

Under this bill, drug dealers and anyone found using drugs a second time can lose such Federal benefits as student loans, Federal mortgage loans, and Government contracts and licenses. Courts can also direct offenders to complete an approved drug-treatment program which must include drug testing, or require offenders to perform community service.

Additional amendments would require overseas financial institutions with ties to the United States to cooperate with U.S. law-enforcement agencies seeking banking records of suspected drug traffickers, and to maintain records of large cash transactions.

The bill will also come to the House floor with compromise amendments to be voted on, including the establishment of a "drug czar," and the authorization of several million dollars to expand the role of the Coast Guard, Customs Service, and other law enforcement agencies in domestic and international enforcement activities. We will vote on a long and detailed list of tougher penalties for using, buying, and selling drugs. Drug testing provisions will be debated, and drug education and treatment programs are expected to be substantially increased.

The Omnibus Drug Initiative Act is an expensive, multifaceted attack on drug abuse and crime. But sadly, it is only the second chapter of a long, up-hill battle against the war on drugs. We cannot pass this bill and consider our work done. We can only pass this legislation and see the start of a whole new round of drug interdiction, education, treatment, and penalty programs that will continue to test our resources and our vigilance. It is a war that demands our strength and ingenuity. It is a war that we must fight—and win.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I would like to offer an additional comment regarding the application of some provisions in the child pornography and obscenity amendment in this drug bill to the telephone companies.

The amendments in section 7511 prohibit the distribution "by any means including by computer" of video depictions, or notices or advertisements concerning video depictions, of pornography involving minors. The amendments are in response to the growth of an industry which distributes child pornography through computers, and advertises the availability of such materials through a computer on electronic bulletin boards. Most of us are aware of the fact that telephone companies have begun to transmit information services over their facilities. By creating the conduit for transmission of information services, telephone companies may provide the opportunity for vendors to distribute pornographic materials over the network.

It is my intention that the prohibition in these amendments, and the applicable sanctions, will apply to those persons who are knowingly involved in the distribution of video depictions, or advertisements of video depictions, of child pornography. However, it is not intended that the prohibition and sanctions should apply to telephone companies which merely provide facilities over which the prohibited depictions or materials are transmitted. This is true even if such companies have been notified or are otherwise aware of the nature of these depictions or materials.

Similarly, section 7521 amends the current law relating to the prohibition on the transportation of obscene matters for sale or distribution. It extends the prohibition to a person who "knowingly uses a facility or means of commerce for the purpose of transporting obscene material in interstate or foreign commerce." This amendment contemplates, among other things, the distribution of obscene materials through a computer. Again, it is not my intention that this prohibition, and the applicable sanctions, should apply against a telephone company whose facilities are used to transmit the prohibited materials or to engage in other prohibited conduct. Furthermore, this section and section 7511 do not create any new statutory responsibilities for telephone companies concerning the screening of information transmitted by way of telecommunications systems.

We should also note that when the other body considered this issue on October 14, 1988, it may have given the impression that if telephone companies merely have knowledge of the content of the transmissions, then they may be subject to the bill's sanctions. As you know, some telephone companies are prohibited by State law from terminating service to a person on the basis of the content of the person's communications. Therefore, let me make it clear that whether or not a telephone company knows about these transmissions by other persons does not by itself render the company criminally liable. Telephone companies are not the targets of this legislation—the purveyors of pornography are. This will clarify the other body's interpretation of October 14, 1988.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to comment on an entirely different matter. In order to maximize the intelligence resources of the United States Government in national security matters—specifically in the areas of drug trafficking, narco-terrorism and terrorism—proper cooperation among all law enforcement and intelligence agencies is imperative.

However, traditional means of "encouraging" increased intelligence sharing, such as memorandums of understanding, are not sufficient to change bureaucratic behavior and reluctance toward intelligence sharing in the areas of drug trafficking, narco-terrorism and terrorism.

And, when it comes to these critical areas it should be a priority of the chief executive to insure that that such sharing be increased, with due protection for sources and methods, between law enforcement and intelligence agencies to enhance law enforcement and further national security objectives.

Although this debate most often focuses on the types of information which can be furnished to law enforcement agencies by the intelligence community, it is also true that the law enforcement community has valuable information which should be provided to the intelligence community respecting national security matters.

Particularly in areas of narco-terrorism—where both domestic and international boundaries are crossed—it is difficult to assign jurisdiction, but that is no reason for valuable intelligence to be ignored.

For instance, local law enforcement, U.S. Border Patrol, Customs and other traditional "law enforcement"—as opposed to "intelligence" or national security—personnel, may in the course of their duties come upon valuable information which could help our efforts to stop terrorism and narco-terrorist efforts. This information, although gathered by a law enforcement official, should not be neglected by national security personnel and vice versa.

I encourage the President to establish a national intelligence sharing system which will promote effective exchange of information and assist the chief drug enforcement official as well as the Director of Central Intelligence in the difficult national security areas of drugs, narco-terrorism and terrorisim.

The Congress understands the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice for domestic matters and does not wish to insert national security personnel into domestic matters. In turn, Congress does not wish to insert domestic law enforcement in intelligence concerns. Nevertheless, particularly in matters which cross jurisdictional bounds, the Congress is extremely concerned that every effort is made among U.S. Government agencies to cooperate and share the critical tool of information.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order this evening.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

CONVEYING FOREST SERVICE LAND TO FLAGSTAFF, AZ

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs be discharged from further consideration of the Senate bill (S. 253) to convey Forest Service land to Flagstaff, AZ, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 253

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) subsection (b)(1) of section 1 of Public Law 96-581, relating to land conveyances in the State of Arizona, is amended by striking out "Any conveyances" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subsection (c), any conveyances".

(b) Subsection (c) of section 1 is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1) Of the tract of land described in subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall offer to sell at the fair market value as determined on December 23, 1980, to the Flagstaff Medical Regional Center, Flagstaff, Arizona, not to exceed 18.25 acres immediately adjacent to said Flagstaff Medical Regional Center and shall convey, without consideration, except for administrative costs associated with the preparation of title and legal description, to the city of Flagstaff, Arizona, 134.57 acres, under special use permit in effect on the date of enactment of this Act to the city of Flagstaff.

"(2) Title to any real property acquired by the city of Flagstaff pursuant to this section shall revert to the United States if the city attempts to convey or otherwise transfer ownership of any portion of such property to any other party or attempts to encumber such title, or if the town permits the use of any portion of such property for any purpose incompatible with the purposes specified in paragraph (3) of this section.

"(3) Real property conveyed to the city of Flagstaff pursuant to this section shall be used for public open space, park and recreational purposes.

"(4) Except for any land to be conveyed to the Flagstaff Medical Regional Center and the city of Flagstaff, the Secretary shall solicit public offers for the remaining lands and improvements authorized under subsection (a) of this section. All offers shall be publicly opened at the time and place stated in the soliciation in accordance with the administrative requirements of the Secretary. The Secretary shall consider price and land values before entering into agreements or land exchanges with any party whose offer conforming to the soliciation notice is determined by the Secretary to be the most advantageous to the Government. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Secretary may reject any offer if the Secretary determines that such rejection is in the public interests.".

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsidered was laid on the table.

MOTION TO AGREE TO SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 5210, OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT OF 1988, WITH AN AMENDMENT

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 595 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 595

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider in the House, without intervening motion, a motion, if offered by Representative Foley of Washington, or his designee, to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5210) to prevent the manufacturing, distribution, and use of illegal drugs, and for other purposes, together with the Senate amendment thereto, and to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment. The motion shall be considered as having been read. All points of order against the motion are hereby waived. Debate on the motion shall continue not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the motion to final adoption without intervening motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. FROST] is recognized for one hour.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LATTA] pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 595 makes it in order for the majority leader to move to take H.R. 5210 from the Speaker's table with the Senate amendment, and to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment. The rule waives all points of order against the motion and provides that the motion is to be considered as having been read when it is called up for consideration. The motion is to be debatable for up to 1 hour and the debate time is to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders. No amendment to the majority leader's motion will be in order.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5210 is the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. The rule before the House will afford us the opportunity to vote on the package which has been agreed to in informal conference between Members of the House and Members of the other body. I urge adoption of the rule and of the majority leader's motion.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted we will not have to oppose the previous question on this rule in order to give the House a chance to vote on stronger antichild pornography and obscenity provisions than were originally proposed.

I understand that language has been agreed to which will give us the antichild pornography and obscenity provisions which had been sought.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I will support this rule so that the House may proceed to consider the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

Mr. Speaker, drugs are perceived by many to be the greatest domestic problem facing this Nation today. Clearly, drug abuse is taking a heavy toll.

The legislative package made in order by this rule is the response of the Congress to this problem. It includes provisions designed to cut the demand for drugs as well as to cut the supply.

Mr. Speaker, no bill of this magnitude can please everybody. But this appears to be a fair compromise. We should support the rule and support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE].

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I support the rule and the legislation that it makes possible which we will approve tonight as one of the most important pieces of legislation that would be considered by the 100th Congress. Every day we read about the drug problem. Almost every night another homocide results from drugs right here in the Nation's Capital and many occur every day throughout this country.

Mr. Speaker, it has been estimated that Americans spend $80 to $150 billion a year on drugs. Organized crime, deeply involved in the drug trade, reaps anywhere from $40 to $60 billion a year. As we all know, this is a problem of massive proportions, and that is why legislation designed to curb drug use and punish drug dealers is critically important. The drug bill before us tonight is a step in the right direction when it comes to fighting drugs—getting tough. This bill will provide the death penalty for drug kingpins. It will provide "user accountability"—that means those who use drugs won't do so with impunity. And this bill will create a Federal drug czar with broad authority to oversee Federal drug efforts—a concept I have supported for some time.

As the ranking member on the Banking Committee, I know that one method of combating drugs is to limit the ability of drug dealers to launder money through our Nation's financial institutions. This is a sizable problem. An estimated $5 to $15 billion a year is laundered through financial institutions every year. In fact, just recently, the Justice Department indicted 70 individuals accused of conspiring to launder $32 million in cocaine profits from the United States, Panama, and Colombia through a Luxembourg based bank. This is the first case of its kind against a major international bank.

It was made possible by the 1986 law when Congress really began the fight against this problem by strengthening the Bank Secrecy Act. Under those changes, Congress made it a crime to structure transactions to avoid that act's reporting requirements. In this bill a provision that allowed financial institutions to give limited information about accounts to Federal investigators where criminal activity is suspected was clarified.

It has been 2 years since the passage of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, and having had a chance to review the implementation of that law, the Treasury and Justice Departments have recommended some changes to build on the effectiveness of that law.

The Banking Committee of this bill will require that some limited information be recorded by the financial institution when issuing travelers checks, cashiers checks, and other similar instruments over $3,000. Additionally, the Treasury Secretary will have the authority to require more extensive transaction information for any transaction of less than $10,000 in targeted areas. For example, if the Secretary determines that money laundering is worse in the Los Angeles area, then he can require stiffer reporting requirements. I think this is a sensible provision.

This legislation will also make an important change in the Right to Financial Privacy Act. For the first time, law enforcement authorities will have the power, in good cause, shown to review financial records of bank "insiders" without having to notify them that their records are being reviewed for possible criminal activity. As the Justice Department testified before our committee, they have a file cabinet full of cases where the suspect headed for the airport immediately after being notified that his records had been subpoenaed. "Insiders" are defined as officers, directors, employees, controlling shareholders, and in some cases, major borrowers.

Along with the money laundering initiatives that fall within the Banking Committee's jurisdiction, the final agreement on the Anti-Drug Abuse Act, before us tonight, contains several measures which address the problems of drugs in public housing. Drug abuse has become a major problem for many of our Nation's public housing projects. Unfortunately, the users and dealers of drugs in public housing deny many thousands of decent American citizens the national goal set forth in the Housing Act of 1949 of "a decent home and suitable living environment for every American family."

This past spring, a constituent and public housing resident wrote me on this issue. In part, the letter reads as follows:

> The drug problem is stronger than ever here. People live here who are not on leases. I have told my friends that live here that there is hope we can clean this place up like it once was a nice place to live. With God's help and yours, I have told them you are going to help us.

Well, today I am pleased to report back to my constituent and to our 3,000 local public housing authorities that the Congress has resolved itself to provide additional tools to enhance HUD's and the Nation's public housing managers' ability to deal with the problem of drugs in public housing.

Mr. Speaker, under title V, User Accountability of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act, an important subtitle on "Preventing Drug Abuse in Public Housing" is included. This subtitle contains three significant measures. First, regulatory and enforcement provisions are included which confirm that Public Housing Authorities have the legal authority to evict a public housing tenant if the tenant, a member of the tenant's household, or a guest or other person under the tenant's control is engaged in or is convicted of drug-related criminal activity on or near public housing premises. Also, the Bureau of Justice Assistance Block Grant program is amended to include a new eligible activity to provide funding for local police to fight drug activities in public housing.

Second, as $8.2 million public housing drug elimination pilot program is established under which local public housing authorities may apply to HUD for funds to employ individuals to investigate drug-related crime on or about public housing projects and to provide evidence relating to any such crime in any administrative or judicial proceeding. This pilot program also creates other innovative programs designed to reduce the use of drugs in and around public housing. Finally, a provision on Drug-Free Public Housing is included which reaffirms the principle that a decent affordable shelter is a basic necessity. To maintain this principle, measures are included which require better coordination and training in drug prevention programs among the public officials and agencies responsible for administering the public housing programs of the Nation. I will insert a short section-by-section summary of the housing provisions.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill, and I am pleased that we are passing this legislation before the 100th Congress is adjourned.

The section-by-section summary follows:

H.R. 5210—ANTI-DRUG ABUSE ACT OF 1988 HOUSE-SENATE AGREEMENT ON PUBLIC HOUSING PROVISIONS AND DENIAL OF FEDERAL BENEFIT PROVISION PERTAINING TO HOUSING PROGRAMS

Subtitle C—Preventing Drug Abuse in Public Housing

PART 1—REGULATORY AND ENFORCEMENT PROVISIONS

Section 5101—Termination of Tenancy in Public Housing:

Senate Provision: House recedes to Senate.

This provision amends existing law concerning lease provisions and confirms that Public Housing Authorities have the legal authority to evict a public housing tenant if the tenant, a member of the tenant's household, or a guest or other person under the tenant's control is engaged in or is convicted of drug-related criminal activity on or near public housing premises while the tenant is a tenant in public housing.

Section 5102—Study of Public Housing Security Activities:

Senate Provision: House recedes to the Senate with an amendment deleting the provision authorizing the use of funds from the Performance Funding System for the purpose of investigating the illegal use of and trafficking in controlled substances in public housing.

The provision as amended requires the Secretary to conduct a study of the extent to whch security activities in public housing projects are funded under the Performance Funding System. The report shall be submitted to Congress not later than 6 months after enactment.

Section 5103—Report on Impact of Public Housing Lease and Grievance Regulation on the Ability of Public Housing Agencies to Take Action Against Tenants Engaging in Drug Crimes:

Senate Provision: House recedes to Senate.

Provision requires HUD to report to Congress within 12 months on the impact of the Public Housing Lease and Grievance regulations on the PHA's ability to take action against tenants engaging in drug crimes.

Section 5104—Eligible Activities Under Bureau of Justice Assistance Block Grant Program:

Senate Provision: House recedes to Senate.

Amends the Bureau of Justice Assistance Block Grant program to include as an eligible activity funds for local police to fight drug activities in public housing.

Section 5105—Inclusion of Leasehold Interests in Property Subject to Forfeiture Under Controlled Substances Act:

Senate Provision: House recedes to Senate.

Clarifies that a leasehold interest is considered property with respect to the Federal Civil Forfeiture law and consequently that the lease is subject to forfeiture by the Federal Government. (21 U.S.C. 881(a)(7).)

PART 2—PUBLIC HOUSING DRUG ELIMINATION PILOT PROGRAM

Sections 5121-5129:

Senate-House had similar provision:

House recedes to Senate with an amendment and adding two eligible activities from the House provision: (1) the employment of 1 or more individuals to investigate drug-related crime on or about public housing projects and to provide evidence relating to any such crime in any administrative or judicial proceeding and (2) permits the provision of training, communications equipment, and other related equipment for use by voluntary public housing tenant patrols acting in cooperation with local law enforcement officials.

This pilot program authorizes the Secretary to make grants to public housing authorities (including Indian housing authorities) for use in eliminating drug-related crime in public housing projects.

The Public Housing Drug Elimination Pilot program is provided an authorization of appropriation of $8.2 million for FY '89 (Senate provision) and such sums as may be appropriated for FY '90 (House provision).

PART 3—DRUG-FREE PUBLIC HOUSING

Sections 5141-5146:

House Provision: Senate recedes to the House with a conforming amendment providing for defined terms.

The Drug-Free Public Housing Act of 1988 reaffirms the principle that decent affordable shelter is a basic necessity, and the general welfare of the Nation and the health and living standards of its people require better coordination and training in drug prevention programs among the public officials and agencies responsible for administering the public housing programs of the Nation.

Two specific initiatives are included in this part: (1) Clearinghouse on Drug Abuse in Public Housing and (2) Regional Training Program on Drug Abuse in Public Housing are established in HUD.

Title V—User Accountability

Section 5301—Denial of Federal Benefits to Drug Traffickers and Possessors:

House and Senate had similar provisions: The Agreement contains the thrust of the Senate provision (i.e., discretion of the courts) with the House provision pertaining to the definition of "federal benefits" with significant changes as to which benefits are excluded.

Explanation—

(a) Drug Traffickers. Subsection (a) would require any individual convicted of any Federal or State offense consisting of the distribution of controlled substances to be ineligible for Federal benefits (1) at the court's discretion for up to 5 years for a first conviction; (2) at the court's discretion for up to 10 years for a second conviction; and (3) permanently upon a third or subsequent conviction. This subsection does not cut off benefits relating to long-term drug treatment programs for addiction in certain cases.

(b) Drug Possessors. Subsection (b) would require any individual convicted of possession of a controlled substance for the first time, at the discretion of the court, to (a) be ineligible for Federal benefits for up to one year; (b) successfully complete a drug treatment program, including periodic drug testing; (c) perform appropriate community service; or (d) any combination of items (a), (b), or (c). For a second or subsequent conviction, the court would have the discretion to make the person ineligible for Federal benefits for up to 5 years after the conviction. The court would be permitted to require the individual to complete the conditions noted in items (b) and (c) above as a requirement for the reinstatement of Federal benefits. Penalties would be waived in the case of a person who agrees to a long-term treatment program or who is considered rehabilitated.

(c) Suspension of Period of Ineligibility. Periods of ineligibility for Federal benefits would be suspended if the individual (1) completes a drug rehabilitation program after becoming ineligible; (2) has otherwise been rehabilitated; or (3) has made a good faith effort to gain admission to a rehabilitation program.

(d) Definitions. Under subsection (d), the term "Federal Benefit" would mean the issuance of any grant, contract, loan, professional license, or commerical license provided by an agency or appropriated funds of the United States. The term would not incude any retirement, welfare, social security, health, disability, veterans benefits, public housing, or other similar benefits, or any other benefit for which payments or services are required for eligibility. The term "veterans benefits" would mean all benefits provided to veterans, their families, or survivors by virtue of the service of a veteran.

(e) Inapplicability of this Section to Government Witnesses. The ineligibility provisions would not apply to individuals who cooperates or testify for the Government in criminal cases or who are in a Government witness protection program.

(f) Indian Provisions. Subsection (f) would require that this section not be construed to affect any obligation of the United States to any Indian or Indian tribe under any treaty, statute, Executive order, or trust responsibility. The sanctions of this section would otherwise apply to individual Indians.

(g) Presidential Report. This subsection would require, on or before May 1, 1989, a report from the President (1) delineating the role of State courts in implementing this section; (2) describing how Federal agencies will implement and enforce this section; (3) detailing how Federal and State agencies, courts, and law enforcement agencies will exchange and share data necessary to implement and enforce the withholding of Federal benefits; and (4) recommending modifications to improve this section. By September 1, 1989, Congress must consider the report and enact appropriate legislative changes.

(h) Effective Date. Subsection (h) would require that this section take effect for convictions occurring after September 1, 1989.

From the Banking committee's perspective the agreement includes the following—

(1) Public housing is excluded from the term "federal benefits." Existing HUD procedures, permit public housing authorities discretion to screen potential tenants to determine any past history of drug use or drug distribution and denying admission on that basis.

(2) For the purpose of various housing programs the denial of benefit is determined at the time of application. Therefore, this provision is prospective in nature and not retroactive.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. GREEN. I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply point out to my colleagues that this bill contains a new title, an appropriations title which the House has not previously considered. And in the midst of all the hoopla about all the criminal law parts of this bill, I think it is important that the appropriations part equally addresses the demand side of the drug problem. I have a situation in my district where if someone is a heroin addict and walks into a clinic and asks for treatment, that person is told that he will be put on a waiting list and to come back in 3 months or come back in 6 months. That is a scandal.

If we really want to deal with the drug problem we have got to deal with that.

I am proud to say that in the appropriations committee the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Mississippi. [Mr. WHITTEN], and the distinguished ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE], saw to it that our bill would allocate 50 percent of its funds to the demand side so that we can have more funds for treatment and education.

I want to express my appreciation to them for that and urge all of my colleagues to vote for the rule and for the bill.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

☐ 0030

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, this is the last rule that will be handled as a Member of Congress by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LATTA]. He has been a distinguished member of the Committee on Rules, a constructive Member, and we all owe him a debt of gratitude and well wishes in his retirement.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5210) to prevent the manufacturing, distribution, and use of illegal drugs, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the rule, the motion is considered as having been read.

The text of the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 5210 is as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988".

TITLE I—COORDINATION OF NATIONAL DRUG POLICY

Subtitle A—National Drug Control Program

SEC. 1001. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Narcotics Leadership Act of 1988".

SEC. 1002. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE.—There is established in the Executive Office of the President the "Office of National Drug Control Policy".

(b) DIRECTOR AND DEPUTY DIRECTORS.—(1) There shall be at the head of the Office of National Drug Control Policy a Director of National Drug Control Policy.

(2) There shall be in the Office of National Drug Control Policy a Deputy Director for Demand Reduction and a Deputy Director for Supply Reduction.

(3) The Deputy Director for Demand Reduction and the Deputy Director for Supply Reduction shall assist the Director in carrying out the responsibilities of the Director under this Act.

(c) BUREAU OF STATE AND LOCAL AFFAIRS.—(1) There is established in the Office of National Drug Control Policy a Bureau of State and Local Affairs.

(2) There shall be at the head of such bureau an Associate Director for National Drug Control Policy.

(d) ACCESS BY CONGRESS.—The location of the Office of National Drug Control Policy in the Executive Office of the President shall not be construed as affecting access by the Congress or committees of either House to—

(1) information, documents, and studies in the possession of, or conducted by or at the direction of the Director; or

(2) personnel of the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

SEC. 1003. APPOINTMENT AND DUTIES OF DIRECTOR, DEPUTY DIRECTORS, AND ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR.

(a) APPOINTMENT.—(1) The Director, the Deputy Director for Demand Reduction, the Deputy Director for Supply Reduction, and the Associate Director for National Drug Control Policy shall each be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) The Director, the Deputy Director for Demand Reduction, the Deputy Director for Supply Reduction, and the Associate Director for National Drug Control Policy shall each serve at the pleasure of the President. No person shall serve as Director, a Deputy Director, or Associate Director while serving in any other position in the Federal Government.

(3) Section 101 of the National Security Act of 1947 is amended by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g) and inserting after subsection (e) the following:

"(f) The Director of National Drug Control Policy may, in his role as principal adviser to the National Security Council on national drug control policy, and subject to the direction of the President, attend and participate in meetings of the National Security Council.".

(4)(A) Section 5312 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Director of National Drug Control Policy.".

(B) Section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Deputy Director for Demand Reduction, Office of National Drug Control Policy.

"Deputy Director for Supply Reduction, Office of National Drug Control Policy.".

(C) Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Associate Director for National Drug Control Policy, Office of National Drug Control Policy.".

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Director shall—

(1) establish policies, objectives, and priorities for the National Drug Control Program;

(2) annually promulgate the National Drug Control Strategy in accordance with section 1005;

(3) coordinate and oversee the implementation by National Drug Control Program agencies of the policies, objectives, and priorities established under paragraph (1) and the fulfillment of the responsibilities of such agencies under the National Drug Control Strategy;

(4) make such recommendations to the President as the Director determines are appropriate regarding—

(A) changes in the organization, management, and budgets of Federal departments and agencies engaged in drug enforcement; and

(B) the allocation of personnel to and within such departments and agencies; to implement the policies, priorities, and objectives established under paragraph (1) and the National Drug Control Strategy;

(5) consult with and assist State and local governments with respect to their relations with the National Drug Control Program agencies;

(6) appear before duly constituted committees and subcommittees of the House of Representatives and of the Senate to represent the drug policies of the executive branch; and

(7) notify any National Drug Control Program agency if its policies are not in compliance with the responsibilities of such agency under the National Drug Control Strategy and transmit a copy of each such notification to the President.

(c) National Drug Control Program Budget.—(1) The Director shall develop for each fiscal year, with the advice of the program managers of departments and agencies with responsibilities under the National Drug Control Program, a consolidated National Drug Control Program budget proposal to implement the National Drug Control Strategy, and shall transmit such budget proposal to the President and to the Congress.

(2) Each Federal Government program manager, agency head, and department head with responsibilities under the National Drug Control Strategy shall transmit the drug control budget request of the program, agency, or department to the Director at the same time as such request is submitted to their superiors (and before submission to the Office of Management and Budget) in the preparation of the budget of the President submitted to the Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(3) The Director shall—

(A) review each drug control budget request transmitted to the Director under paragraph (2);

(B) certify in writing as to the adequacy of such request to implement the objectives of the National Drug Control Strategy for the year for which the request is submitted; and

(C) notify the program manager, agency head, or department head, as applicable, regarding the Director's certification under subparagraph (B).

(4) The Director shall maintain records regarding certifications under paragraph (3)(B).

(5)(A) No National Drug Control Program agency shall submit to the Congress a reprogramming or transfer request with respect to any amount of appropriated funds greater than $5,000,000 which is included in the National Drug Control Program budget unless such request has been approved by the Director.

(B) The head of any National Drug Control Program agency may appeal to the President any disapproval by the Director of a reprogramming or transfer request.

(6) The Director shall report to the Congress on a quarterly basis regarding the need for any reprogramming or transfer of appropriated funds for National Drug Control Program activities.

(7) The head of each National Drug Control Program agency shall ensure timely development and submission to the Director of drug control budget requests transmitted pursuant to subsection (c)(2), in such format as may be designated by the Director with the concurrence of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(d) Powers of Director.—In carrying out the responsibilities established under subsection (b), the Director may—

(1) select, appoint, employ, and fix compensation of such officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Office of National Drug Control Policy under this title;

(2) direct, with the concurrence of the Secretary of a department or head of an agency, the temporary reassignment within the Federal Government of personnel employed by such department or agency, in order to implement United States drug control policy;

(3) use for administrative purposes, on a reimbursable basis, the available services, equipment, personnel, and facilities of Federal, State, and local agencies;

(4) procure the services of experts and consultants in accordance with section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, relating to appointments in the Federal Service, at rates of compensation for individuals not to exceed the daily equivalent of the rate of pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code;

(5) accept and use donations of property from Federal, State, and local government agencies;

(6) use the mails in the same manner as any other department or agency of the executive branch; and

(7) monitor implementation of the National Drug Control Program, including—

(A) conducting program and performance audits and evaluations; and

(B) requesting assistance from the Inspector General of the relevant agency in such audits and evaluations.

(e) Personnel Detailed to the Office.—(1) Notwithstanding any provision of chapter 43 of title 5, United States Code, the Director shall perform the evaluation of the performance of any employee detailed to the Office of National Drug Control Policy for purposes of the applicable performance appraisal system established under such chapter for any rating period, or part thereof, that such employee is detailed to such office.

(2)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Director may provide periodic bonus payments to any employee detailed to the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

(B) An amount paid under this paragraph to an employee for any period shall not be greater than 20 percent of the basic pay paid or payable to such employee for such period.

(C) Any payment under this paragraph to an employee shall be in addition to the basic pay of such employee.

(D) The aggregate amount paid during any fiscal year to an employee detailed to the Office of National Drug Control Policy as basic pay, awards, bonuses, and other compensation shall not exceed the annual rate payable at the end of such fiscal year for positions at level III of the Executive Schedule.

SEC. 1004. COORDINATION WITH EXECUTIVE BRANCH DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES.

(a) Access to Information.—(1) Upon request of the Director, and subject to laws governing disclosure of information, the head of each National Drug Control Program agency shall provide to the Director such information as may be required for drug control.

(2)(A) The authorities conferred on the Office of National Drug Control Policy and its Director by this Act shall be exercised in a manner consistent with provisions of the National Security Act of 1947. The Director of Central Intelligence shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to protect information provided pursuant to this Act regarding intelligence sources and methods.

(B) The Director of Central Intelligence shall, to the fullest extent possible in accordance with subparagraph (A), render full assistance and support to the Office of National Drug Control Policy and its Director.

(b) Certification of Policy Changes by Director.—(1) The head of a National Drug Control Program agency shall, unless exigent circumstances require otherwise, notify the Director in writing regarding any proposed change in policies relating to the activities of such department or agency under the National Drug Control Program prior to implementation of such change. The Director shall promptly review such proposed change and certify to the department or agency head in writing whether such change is consistent with the National Drug Control Strategy.

(2) If prior notice of a proposed change under paragraph (1) is not possible, the department or agency head shall notify the Director as soon as practicable. The Director shall review such change and certify to the department or agency head in writing whether such change is consistent with the National Drug Control Program.

(c) General Services Administration.—The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Director on a reimbursable basis such administrative support services as the Director may request.

SEC. 1005. DEVELOPMENT AND SUBMISSION OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL STRATEGY.

(a) Development and Submission of the National Drug Control Strategy.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the first Director is confirmed by the Senate, and not later than February 1 of each year thereafter, the President shall submit to the Congress a National Drug Control Strategy. Any part of such strategy that involves information properly classified under criteria established by an Executive order shall be presented to the Congress separately.

(2) The National Drug Control Strategy submitted under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) include comprehensive, research-based, long-range goals for reducing drug abuse in the United States;

(B) include short-term measurable objectives which the Director determines may be realistically achieved in the 2-year period beginning on the date of the submission of the strategy;

(C) describe the balance between resources devoted to supply reduction and demand reduction; and

(D) review State and local drug control activities to ensure that the United States pursues well-coordinated and effective drug control at all levels of government.

(3)(A) In developing the National Drug Control Strategy, the Director shall consult with—

(i) the heads of the National Drug Control Program agencies;

(ii) the Congress;

(iii) State and local officials;

(iv) private citizens with experience and expertise in demand reduction; and

(v) private citizens with experience and expertise in supply reduction.

(B) At the time the President submits the National Drug Control Strategy to the Congress, the Director shall transmit a report to the Congress indicating the persons consulted under this paragraph.

(4) Beginning with the second submission of a National Drug Control Strategy, the Director shall include with each such strategy a complete evaluation of the effectiveness of drug control during the preceding year.

(b) Goals, Objectives, and Priorities.—Each National Drug Control Strategy shall include—

(1) a complete list of goals, objectives, and priorities for supply reduction and for demand reduction;

(2) private sector initiatives and cooperative efforts between the Federal Government and State and local governments for drug control;

(3) 3-year projections for program and budget priorities and achievable projections for reductions of drug availability and usage;

(4) a complete assessment of how the budget proposal transmitted under section 1003(c) is intended to implement the strategy and whether the funding levels contained in such proposal are sufficient to implement such strategy;

(5) designation of areas of the United States as high intensity drug trafficking areas in accordance with subsection (c); and

(6) a plan for improving the compatibility of automated information and communication systems to provide Federal agencies with timely and accurate information for purposes of this subtitle.

(c) High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas.—(1) The Director, upon consultation with the Attorney General, heads of National Drug Control Program agencies, and the Governors of the several States, may designate any specified area of the United States as a high intensity drug trafficking area. After making such a designation and in order to provide Federal assistance to the area so designated, the Director may—

(A) direct the temporary reassignment of Federal personnel to such area, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the department or head of the agency which employs such personnel;

(B) take any other action authorized under section 1003 to provide increased Federal assistance to such areas; and

(C) coordinate actions under this paragraph with State and local officials.

(2) When considering the designation of an area under this subsection as a high intensity drug trafficking area, the Director shall consider, along with other criteria the Director may deem appropriate—

(A) the extent to which the area is a center of illegal drug production, manufacturing, importation, or distribution;

(B) the extent to which State and local law enforcement agencies have committed resources to respond to the drug trafficking problem in the area, thereby indicating a determination to respond aggressively to the problem;

(C) the extent to which drug-related activities in the area are having a harmful impact in other areas of the country; and

(D) the extent to which a significant increase in allocation of Federal resources is necessary to respond adequately to drug-related activities in the area.

(3) Before March 1, 1991, the Director shall submit a report to the House of Representatives and to the Senate concerning the effectiveness of and need for the designation of areas under this subsection as high intensity drug trafficking areas, along with any comments or recommendations for legislation.

(d) Lead Agencies.—(1) The President shall designate lead agencies with areas of principal responsibility for carrying out the National Drug Control Strategy.

(2) The Director shall require that any National Drug Control Program agency that conducts a major supply reduction activity which is in the area of principal responsibility of a lead agency designated under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) notify such lead agency in writing of the activity; and

(B) provide such notification prior to conducting such activity, unless exigent circumstances require otherwise.

(3) If a lead agency objects to the conduct of an activity described under paragraph (2), the lead agency and the agency planning to conduct such activity shall notify the Director in writing regarding such objection.

SEC. 1006. SUBMISSION OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL PROGRAM BUDGET WITH ANNUAL BUDGET REQUEST OF PRESIDENT.

Section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(26) a separate statement of the amount of appropriations requested for the Office of National Drug Control Policy and each program of the National Drug Control Program.".

SEC. 1007. TERMINATION OF NATIONAL DRUG ENFORCEMENT POLICY BOARD, NATIONAL NARCOTICS BORDER INTERDICTION SYSTEM, AND WHITE HOUSE DRUG ABUSE POLICY OFFICE.

(a) National Drug Enforcement Policy Board.—(1) The National Drug Enforcement Policy Board is terminated effective on the 30th day after the first Director is confirmed by the Senate. Upon such termination, all records and property of the National Drug Enforcement Policy Board shall be transferred to the Director. The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall take such actions as are necessary to facilitate such transfer.

(2) All strategies, implementation plans, memoranda of understanding, and directives that have been issued or made by the National Drug Policy Board before the effective date of this subtitle shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, set aside, or revoked by the President or the Director.

(3) The National Narcotics Act of 1984 (21 U.S.C. 1201 et seq.) is repealed effective on the 30th day after the first Director is confirmed by the Senate.

(b) National Narcotics Border Interdiction System.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds may be expended after 30 days after the date on which the first Director is confirmed by the Senate for any activities or operations of the entity otherwise known as the National Narcotics Border Interdiction System.

(c) White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy.—(1) Sections 103, 201, 202, 203, 204, and 206 of the Drug Abuse Prevention, Treatment, and Rehabilitation Act (21 U.S.C. 1103, 1111, 1112, 1113, 1114, and 1116) are repealed. Section 205 of such Act is redesignated as section 201.

(2) The White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy shall terminate on the 30th day after the date on which the first Director is confirmed by the Senate.

(3) Section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking "Director of the Office of Drug Abuse Policy.".

(4) Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking "Deputy Director of the Office of Drug Abuse Policy.".

SEC. 1008. EXECUTIVE REORGANIZATION STUDY.

(a) Report to the Congress and the President.—Not later than January 15, 1990, the Director shall submit a report to the President and to the Congress regarding the necessity to group, coordinate, and consolidate agencies and functions of the Federal Government involved in supply reduction and demand reduction in order to—

(1) promote better execution of the laws;

(2) provide more effective management of the executive branch;

(3) reduce expenditures and promote economy to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the executive branch; and

(4) reduce the number of agencies by consolidating under a single head agencies having similar functions, and by abolishing agencies and functions which are unnecessary for the efficient conduct of the executive branch.

(b) Recommendations.—The report submitted under subsection (a) shall include any appropriate recommendations for legislation.

SEC. 1009. TERMINATION OF OFFICE OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL POLICY.

This subtitle and the amendments made by this subtitle, other than section 1007, are repealed on the date which is 5 years after the date of the enactment of this subtitle.

SEC. 1010. DEFINITIONS.

(B) by the President;

(7) the term "Director" means the Director of National Drug Control Policy; and

(8) the term "National Drug Control Strategy" means a strategy developed and submitted to the Congress under section 1005.

SEC. 1011. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

For the purposes of carrying out this subtitle, there are authorized to be appropriated $3,500,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years, to remain available until expended.

SEC. 1012. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This subtitle shall be effective January 21, 1989.

Subtitle B—Department of Justice Civil Enforcement Enhancement

SEC. 1051. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Justice Department Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Enhancement Act of 1988".

SEC. 1052. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) organized criminal activity contributes significantly to the importation, distribution, and sale of illegal and dangerous drugs;

(2) trends in drug trafficking patterns necessitate a response that gives appropriate weight to—

(A) the prosecution of drug-related crimes; and

(B) the forfeiture and seizure of assets and other civil remedies used to strike at the inherent strength of the drug networks and organized crime groups;

(3) law enforcement components of the Department of Justice should give high priority to the enforcement of civil sanctions against drug networks and organized crime groups; and

(4) the structure of the Department of Justice Criminal Division needs to be reviewed in order to determine the most effective structure to address such drug-related problems.

SEC. 1053. CIVIL ENFORCEMENT REPORT.

(a) Report.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this title, the Director of National Drug Control Policy (the Director) in consultation with the Attorney General, shall report to the Congress on the necessity to establish a new division or make other organizational changes within the Department of Justice in order to promote better civil and criminal law enforcement. In preparing such report, the Director shall consider restructuring and consolidating one or more of the following divisions and programs—

(1) the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Criminal Division and all subordinate strike forces therein;

(2) the Narcotic and Dangerous Drug Section of the Criminal Division;

(3) the Asset Forfeiture Office of the Criminal Division; and

(4) the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program;

(b) Legislative Recommendations.—The report submitted under subsection (a) shall include appropriate legislative recommendations for the Congress.

SEC. 1054. CIVIL ENFORCEMENT ENHANCEMENT.

(a) Duty of Attorney General.—The Attorney General shall insure that each component of the Department of Justice having criminal law enforcement responsibilities with respect to the prosecution of organized crime and controlled substances violations, including each United States Attorney's Office, attaches a high priority to the enforcement of civil statutes creating ancillary sanctions and remedies for such violations, such as civil penalties and actions, forfeitures, injunctions and restraining orders, and collection of fines.

(b) Duty of Associate Attorney General.—The Associate Attorney General shall be responsible for implementing the policy set forth in this subsection.

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $3,000,000 for salaries and expenses to the Department of Justice General Legal Activities Account and $3,000,000 for salaries and expenses for United States Attorneys for fiscal year 1989.

(2) Any appropriation of funds authorized under paragraph (1) shall be—

(A) in addition to any appropriations requested by the President in the 1989 fiscal year budget submitted by the President to the Congress on February 18, 1988, or provided in regular appropriations Acts or continuing resolutions for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989; and

(B) used to increase the number of field attorneys and related support staff over such personnel levels employed at the Department of Justice on September 30, 1988.

(3) Any increase in full-time equivalent positions described under paragraph (2)(B) shall be exclusively used for asset forfeiture and civil enforcement and be assigned to appropriate field offices of the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section and the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces.

(d) Reporting Requirement.—The Attorney General, at the end of each such fiscal year, shall file a report with the Congress setting forth the extent of such enforcement efforts, as well as the need for any enhancements in resources necessary to carry out this policy.

SEC. 1055. EXPENSES OF TASK FORCES.

(a) Appropriations and Reimbursements Procedure.—Beginning in fiscal year 1990, the Attorney General in his budget shall submit a separate appropriations request for expenses relating to all Federal agencies participating in the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces. Such appropriations shall be made to the Department of Justice's Interagency Law Enforcement Appropriation Account for the Attorney General to make reimbursements to the involved agencies as necessary.

(b) Enhancement of Field Activities.—The appropriations and reimbursements procedure described under subsection (a) shall—

(1) provide for the flexibility of the Task Forces which is vital to success;

(2) permit Federal law enforcement resources to be shifted in response to changing patterns of organized criminal drug activities;

(3) permit the Attorney General to reallocate resources among the organizational components of the Task Forces and between regions without undue delay; and

(4) ensure that the Task Forces function as a unit, without the competition for resources among the participating agencies that would undermine the overall effort.

SEC. 2012. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this subtitle with respect to substance abuse are—

(1) to prevent the transmission of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome by ensuring that treatment services for intravenous drug abuse are available to intravenous drug abusers;

(2) to continue the Federal Government's partnership with the States in the development, maintenance, and improvement of community-based alcohol and drug abuse programs;

(3) to provide financial and technical assistance to the States and communities in their efforts to develop and maintain a core of prevention services for the purpose of reducing the incidence of substance abuse and the demand for alcohol and drug abuse treatment;

(4) to assist and encourage States in the initiation and expansion of prevention and treatment services to underserved populations;

(5) to increase, to the greatest extent possible, the availability and quality of treatment services so that treatment on request may be provided to all individuals desiring to rid themselves of their substance abuse problem; and

(6) to increase understanding about the extent of alcohol abuse and other forms of drug abuse by expanding data collection activities and supporting research on the comparative cost and efficacy of substance abuse prevention and treatment services.

CHAPTER 1—REVISION AND EXTENSION OF ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE AND MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES BLOCK GRANT

SEC. 2021. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 1911 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x) is amended to read as follows:

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 1911. (a)(1) For the purpose of carrying out this subpart and section 509D, there are authorized to be appropriated $1,500,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

"(2) For the purpose of carrying out section 509D and sections 1921 through 1923, the Secretary shall obligate not less than 5 percent, and not more than 15 percent, of the amounts appropriated for a fiscal year pursuant to subsection (a).".

SEC. 2022. FORMULA FOR ALLOTMENTS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF FORMULA.—Subpart I of part B of title XIX of the Public Health Service Act is amended by inserting after section 1912 the following new section:

"ALLOTMENTS

"SEC. 1912A. (a)(1) Subject to subsections (b) and (e), the Secretary shall determine the amount of the allotment under this subpart for a State for a fiscal year in accordance with the following formula:

"(2) For purposes of the formula specified in paragraph (1), the term 'A' means the difference between—

"(A) an amount equal to the amount appropriated pursuant to section 1911 for allotments under this subpart for the fiscal year involved; and

"(B) an amount equal to 1.5 percent of the amount referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(3) For purposes of the formula specified in paragraph (1), the term 'U' means the sum of the respective terms 'X' determined for each State under paragraph (4).

"(4)(A) For purposes of the formula specified in paragraph (1), the term 'X' means the product of—

"(i) an amount equal to the term 'P' as determined under subparagraph (B); and

"(ii) the greater of—

"(I) 0.4; and

"(II) an amount equal to an amount determined in accordance with the following formula:

$$-.35\left(\frac{S}{N}\right)$$

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i), the term 'P' means the sum of—

"(i) an amount equal to the product of—

"(I) O.4; and

"(II) an amount equal to the population living in urbanized areas of the State involved, as indicated by the most recent data collected by the Bureau of the Census;

"(ii) an amount equal to the product of—

"(I) 0.2; and

"(II) an amount equal to the number of individuals in the State who are between 18 and 24 years of age, as indicated by the most recent data collected by the Bureau of the Census;

"(iii) an amount equal to the product of—

"(I) 0.2; and

"(II) an amount equal to the number of individuals in the State who are between 25 and 44 years of age, as indicated by the most recent data collected by the Bureau of the Census; and

"(iv) an amount equal to the product of—

"(I) 0.2; and

"(II) an amount equal to the number of individuals in the State who are between 25 and 64 years of age, as indicated by the most recent data collected by the Bureau of the Census.

"(C) For purposes of the formula specified in subparagraph (A)(ii)(II), the term 'S' means the quotient of—

"(i) an amount equal to the most recent 3-year average of the total taxable resources of the State, as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury; divided by

"(ii) an amount equal to the term 'P' as determined under subparagraph (B).

"(D) For purposes of the formula specified in subparagraph (A)(ii)(II), the term 'N' means the quotient of—

"(i) an amount equal to the sum of the respective amounts determined for each State under subparagraph (C)(i); divided by

"(ii) an amount equal to the sum of the respective terms 'P' determined for each State under subparagraph (B).

"(b) Each State shall receive a minimum allotment under this subpart of the lesser of—

"(1) $7,000,000; and

"(2) an amount equal to 105 percent of the sum of—

"(A) the amount the State received under section 1913 for fiscal year 1988 (as such section was in effect for such fiscal year); and

"(B) the amount the State received under part C for fiscal year 1988.".

(b) TERRITORIES AND CERTAIN SET-ASIDE.—Section 1912A of the Public Health Service Act, as added by subsection (b) of this section, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) The allotment for a territory of the United States under this subpart for a fiscal year shall be the greater of—

"(A) $100,000; and

"(B) an amount determined in accordance with paragraph (2).

"(2) The amount referred to in paragraph (1)(B) is the product of—

"(A) an amount equal to the amounts reserved under paragraph (3); and

"(B) a percentage equal to the quotient of—

"(i) the population of the territory involved, as indicated by the most recently available data; divided by

"(ii) the aggregate population of the territories of the United States, as indicated by such data.

"(3) The Secretary shall reserve for the territories of the United States 1.5 percent of the amounts appropriated pursuant to section 1911 for allotments under under this subpart for the fiscal year involved.

"(d)(1) Of the amount allotted to the State of Hawaii under this section, an amount equal to the proportion of Native Hawaiians residing in the State of Hawaii to the total population of the State of Hawaii shall be available under this section only for Native Hawaiians.

"(2) The amount made available under paragraph (1) may be expended only through contracts entered into by the State of Hawaii with public and private nonprofit organizations to enable such organizations to plan, conduct, and administer comprehensive substance abuse and treatment programs for the benefit of Native Hawaiians. In entering into contracts under this subsection, the State of Hawaii shall give preference to Native Hawaiian organizations and Native Hawaiian health centers.

"(3) For the purposes of this subsection, the terms 'Native Hawaiian', "Native Hawaiian organization', and 'Native Hawaiian health center' have the meaning given such terms in section 2308 of subtitle D of title II of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988.".

(c) TRANSITION RULES FOR STATES.—Section 1912A of the Public Health Service Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section and amended by subsection (b) of such section, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e)(1) For fiscal years 1989 through 1992, if the amount available for allotment from appropriations under section 1911 does not exceed the amount applicable under subsection (f) for the fiscal year involved, the amount of the allotment under this subpart for the State for such fiscal year shall be the product of—

"(A) the amount appropriated under section 1911 for such fiscal year; and

"(B) a percentage equal to the quotient of—

"(i) an amount equal to the amount of the allotment under this part for the State for fiscal year 1984; divided by

"(ii) an amount equal to the amount appropriated for allotments under this part for fiscal year 1984.

"(2) For the fiscal years referred to in paragraph (1), if the amount available for allotment from appropriations under section 1911 exceeds the amount applicable under subsection (f) for the fiscal year involved—

"(A) the amount of such excess shall be allotted in accordance with subsection (a), except that the amount referred to in subsection (a)(2)(A) shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the amount of such excess for the fiscal year involved; and

"(B) the amount equal to or less than such applicable amount shall be alloted in accordance with paragraph (1).

"(f) For purposes of subsection (e)—

"(1) the applicable amount for fiscal year 1989 is $330,000,000;

"(2) the applicable amount for fiscal year 1990 is $250,000,000;

"(3) the applicable amount for fiscal year 1991 is $200,000,000; and

"(4) the applicable amount for fiscal year 1992 is $100,000,000.

"(g)(1)(A) For purposes of this subpart, the term 'State' means, except as provided in subparagraph (B), each of the several States, the District of Columbia, and each of the territories of the United States.

"(B) For purposes of subsections (a), (b), (e), and (f), the term 'State' means each of the several States and the District of Columbia.

"(2) The term 'territories of the United States means each of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and any other territory or possession of the United States.

"(h) Effective October 1, 1992, this subsection and subsections (e) and (f) are repealed.".

(d) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1913 of the Public Health Service Act is amended—

(1) by striking paragraphs (1) through (3) of subsection (a);

(2) in subsection (a), as amended by paragraph (1) of this subsection, by striking the paragraph designation; and

(3) in the section heading, by inserting before "ALLOTMENTS" the following: "CERTAIN PROVISIONS WITH RESPECT TO".

(e) PAYMENTS.—Section 1914(a)(2) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-2(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Any amounts paid to a State under this section, obligated by the State, and remaining unexpended at the end of the fiscal year for which the amounts were paid shall remain available during the succeeding fiscal year to the State for carrying out this subpart.".

SEC. 2023. SET-ASIDE FOR FISCAL YEAR 1989 FOR TREATMENT FOR SUBSTANCE ABUSE.

Section 1912A of the Public Health Service Act, as added by section 2022, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i)(1) For fiscal year 1989, the Secretary may not make payments to a State from amounts appropriated in the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 for allotments under this subpart unless the State agrees that—

"(A) such payments will be expended only for the purpose of carrying out programs for substance abuse; and

"(B) in carrying out such programs, the State will expend not less than 50 percent of such payments to carry out the programs of treatment for intravenous drug abuse described in section 1915(c).

"(2) The Secretary may, upon the request of a State, waive all or part of the requirement established in paragraph (1)(B) for the State if the Secretary determines that the incidence of intravenous drug abuse in the State does not require the level of funding required in such paragraph. The Secretary shall act upon a request for such a waiver not later than 120 days after the date on which the request is made. The Secretary may approve such request only after providing interested persons in the State an opportunity to comment upon the request.".

SEC. 2024. CONSTRUCTION OF SUBSTANCE ABUSE FACILITIES.

Section 1915(b) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-1a(b)) is amended by amending the matter after and below paragraph (5) to read as follows:

"The Secretary may, with respect to funds available under this subpart for programs relating to substance abuse, grant a waiver to a State to use such amounts for the construction of a new facility or rehabilitation of an existing facility, but not for land acquisition. The Secretary may approve a waiver only if the State demonstrates to the Secretary that adequate treatment cannot be provided through the use of existing facilities and that alternative facilities in existing suitable buildings are not available. In granting such a waiver, the Secretary shall allow the use of a specified amount of funds to construct or rehabilitate a specified number of beds for residential treatment and a specified number of slots for outpatient treatment, based on reasonable estimates by the State of the costs of construction or rehabilitation. In considering waiver applications, the Secretary shall ensure that the State has carefully designed a program that will minimize the costs of additional beds. The Secretary may grant a waiver only if the State agrees, with respect to the costs to be incurred by the State in carrying out the purpose of the waiver, to make available non-Federal contributions in cash toward such costs in an amount equal to not less than $1 for each $1 of Federal funds provided under section 1914. The Secretary shall act upon a request for such a waiver not later than 120 days after the date on which the request is made.".

SEC. 2025. PREVENTION AND TREATMENT WITH RESPECT TO INTRAVENOUS DRUG ABUSE.

Section 1915(c) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-3(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1) Amounts paid to a State under section 1914 may be used by the State—

"(A) to develop, implement, and operate programs of treatment for intravenous drug abuse, with priority given to programs to treat individuals infected with the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome;

"(B) to train drug abuse counselors, and other health care providers, to provide such treatment; and

"(C) with respect to individuals in need of treatment for drug abuse, to carry out outreach activities for the purpose of encouraging such individuals to undergo such treatment.

"(2) A State may not use amounts under this subpart pursuant to this subsection unless the State involved agrees that such payments will not be expended—

"(A) to carry out any program of distributing sterile needles for the hypodermic injection of any illegal drug or distributing bleach for the purpose of cleansing needles for such hypodermic injection; and

"(B) to carry out any testing for the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome unless such testing is accompanied by appropriate pre-test counseling and appropriate post-test counseling.".

SEC. 2027. NEW MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES AND PROGRAMS.

Section 1916(c)(2) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(c)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) Of the amounts allotted to a State for mental health activities under this part for fiscal year 1991, the State agrees to use not less than 55 percent to develop and provide community mental health services and programs not available on October 1, 1988, and shall, with respect to each such service provided pursuant to this paragraph, provide funds for each service only for a limited period of time (as determined by the State), except that funds expended under this part for new services developed between October 1, 1984, and October 1, 1988, may be treated as a new service under this paragraph.

"(B) A State may request a waiver from the Secretary reducing the new service requirement established in subparagraph (A) to not less than 35 percent by 1991, increased to 55 percent by 1994, according to a schedule approved by the Secretary, if—

"(i)(I) a public hearing is held in the State on the advisability of proceeding with a waiver prior to the submission of a waiver; and

"(II) the mental health planning council in the State approves such waiver request; and

"(ii)(I) the State is judged by the Secretary to be in a financial crisis, based on objective standards established in regulations promulgated by the Secretary (such standards may include a large drop a State revenues as a result of changes in economic conditions);

"(II) more than 15 percent of the State's total community mental health budget is derived from Federal grants under this part and the Secretary determines that it is not feasible for the State to meet the 55 percent standard without substantial and damaging reductions in existing, high priority services; or

"(III) the Secretary determines that a State has demonstrated substantial ongoing development of new, innovative services for priority populations and that any shift in funding percentages will only disrupt this process and will substantially disrupt services in place.".

SEC. 2028. INDEPENDENT PEER REVIEW AND MANNER OF COMPLIANCE.

Section 1916 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4) is amended:

(1) in paragraph (5), by amending such paragraph to read as follows:

Section 1916(c)(7)(B) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(c)(7)(B)) is amended by inserting after and below subparagraph (B) the following:

"For fiscal year 1990 and subsequent fiscal years, the State agrees that, of the amounts reserved by the State to carry out subparagraph (B), the State will use not less than 50 percent to provide services described in section 1915(c).".

SEC. 2031. MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.

Section 1916(c)(11) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(c)(11)) is amended to read as follows:

"(11)(A) The State agrees that the State will maintain State expenditures for services provided pursuant to this subpart at a level equal to not less than the average level of such expenditures maintained by the State for the 2-year period preceding the fiscal year for which the State is applying to receive payments under section 1914.

"(B) The Secretary may, upon the request of a State, waive the requirement established in subparagraph (A) if the Secretary determines that extraordinary economic conditions in the State justify the waiver.".

SEC. 2032. SET-ASIDE FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Section 1916(c)(14) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(c)(14)) is amended to read as follows:

"(14) Of the amount allotted to a State under this part in any fiscal year, the State agrees to use not less than 10 percent for programs and services designed for women (especially pregnant women and women with dependent children) and demonstration projects for the provision of residential treatment services to pregnant women.".

SEC. 2033. SET-ASIDE FOR MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

Section 1916(c)(15) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(c)(15)) is amended to read as follows:

"(15) Of the amounts allotted in any fiscal year for mental health services under this subpart, the State agrees—

"(A) to use not less than 10 percent to provide services and programs for seriously emotionally disturbed children and adolescents; and

"(B) to use, by the end of fiscal year 1990, not less than 50 percent of the amount reserved by the State pursuant to subparagraph (A) to provide new or expanded services and programs that were not available prior to October 1, 1988".

SEC. 2034. CERTAIN REQUIRED AGREEMENTS.

Section 1916(c) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (15) the following new paragraphs:

"(16) The State agrees that the State will, with respect to programs of treatment for intravenous drug abuse, require that any such program receiving funds pursuant to this part, upon reaching 90 percent of its capacity to admit individuals to the program, provide to the State a notification of such fact.

"(17) The State agrees that the State will, with respect to notifications under paragraph (16), ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, each individual who requests and is in need of treatment for intravenous drug abuse is admitted to a program described in such paragraph within 7 days after making the request.

"(18) The State agrees that the State will require any program receiving funds pursuant to this part to carry out outreach activities described in 1915(c)(1)(C).

"(19) The State agrees that, in carrying out this subpart with respect to substance abuse, payments under section 1914 will be targeted to communities with the highest prevalence of substance abuse or the greatest need for treatment services with respect to such abuse, as determined by the State after consideration of—

"(A) the demand for such services or a need for such services that exceeds the capacity to provide such services;

"(B) a high prevalence of drug-related criminal activities; and

"(C) a high incidence of communicable diseases transmitted through intravenous drug abuse.

"(20) The State agrees that the State will provide to the Secretary any data required by the Secretary pursuant to section 509D and will cooperate with the Secretary in the development of uniform criteria for the collection of data pursuant to such section.

"(21) The State agrees to devise and make available at such times as the Secretary may request, a plan that describes how the State can provide services to all individuals seeking treatment services if sufficient resources are available and an estimate of the financial and personnel resources necessary to provide such treatment.".

SEC. 2035. REQUIREMENT OF ESTABLISHMENT OF MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES PLANNING COUNCIL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1916(f) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x-4(f)) is amended to read as follows:

"(f)(1) The State agrees to establish and maintain a State mental health planning council in accordance with this subsection.

"(2) The duties of the Council will be—

"(A) to serve as an advocate for chronically mentally ill individuals, severely emotionally disturbed children and youth, and other individuals with mental illnesses or emotional problems; and

"(B) to monitor, review, and evaluate, not less than once each year, the allocation and adequacy of mental health services within the State.

"(3) The Council will be composed of residents of the State, including representatives of—

"(i) the principal State agencies with respect to—

"(I) mental health, education, vocational rehabilitation, criminal justice, housing, and social services; and

"(II) the development of the plan submitted pursuant to title XIX of the Social Security Act;

Subpart I of part B of title XIX of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C 300x) is amended by inserting after section 1916 the following new section:

"GROUP HOMES FOR RECOVERING SUBSTANCE ABUSERS

"SEC. 1916A. (a) For fiscal year 1989, the Secretary may not make payments under section 1914 unless the State involved agrees—

"(1) to establish, directly or through the provision of a grant or contract to a nonprofit private entity, a revolving fund to make loans for the costs of establishing programs for the provision of housing in which individuals recovering from alcohol or drug abuse may reside in groups of not less than 4 individuals;

"(2) to ensure that the programs are carried out in accordance with guidelines issued under subsection (c);

"(3) to ensure that not less than $100,000 will be available for the revolving fund;

"(4) to ensure that each loan made from the revolving fund does not exceed $4000 and that each such loan is repaid to the revolving fund not later than 2 years after the date on which the loan is made;

"(5) to ensure that each such loan is repaid through monthly installments and that a reasonable penalty is assessed for each failure to pay such periodic installments by the date specified in the loan agreement involved; and

"(6) to ensure that such loans are made only to nonprofit private entities agreeing that, in the operation of the program established pursuant to the loan—

"(A) the use of alcohol or any illegal drug in the housing provided by the program will be prohibited;

"(B) any resident of the housing who violates such prohibition will be expelled from the housing;

"(C) the costs of the housing, including fees for rent and utilities, will be paid by the residents of the housing; and

"(D) the residents of the housing will, through a majority vote of the residents, otherwise establish policies governing residence in the housing, including the manner in which applications for residence in the housing are approved.

"(b) For fiscal year 1990 and subsequent fiscal years, the Secretary may not make payments under section 1914 unless the State involved provides assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that the State has provided for the establishment and ongoing operation of a revolving fund in accordance with subsection (a).

"(c) Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of the Comprehensive Alcohol Abuse, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Amendments Act of 1988, the Secretary, acting through the Administrator, shall issue guidelines for the operation of programs described in subsection (a).".

Part B of title XIX of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300x et seq.), as amended by section 2038 of this Act, is further amended by adding after section 1921 the following new section:

"SERVICE RESEARCH ON COMMUNITY-BASED MENTAL HEALTH TREATMENT PROGRAMS

"SEC. 1923. (a)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institute of Mental Health, shall develop and maintain an ongoing program of research on community mental health programs and services. Such program shall include an evaluation of—

"(A) the most effective methods of providing community-based prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation services for the mentally ill; and

"(B) the quality, appropriateness, and costs of different methods of treatment utilized in such programs with respect to diagnoses of mental illness for which such programs provided treatment.

"(2) Research and evaluations required in paragraph (1) may be carried out through grants, contracts, or cooperative agreements.

"(b) The Director of the National Institute of Mental Health may, to the extent practicable, establish research centers to carry out the evaluations required in subsection (a)(1). Such research centers shall establish and maintain liaisons with community mental health systems that provide services to the mentally ill.

"(c)(1) The Administrator shall develop and make available, from time to time, a model plan for a community-based system of care for chronically mentally ill individuals. Such plan shall be developed in consultation with State mental health directors, providers of mental health services, chronically mentally ill individuals, advocates for such individuals, and other interested parties.

"(2) The Administrator, in cooperation with members of the insurance industry, other members of the business community, and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, shall develop a model insurance plan for consideration for adoption by such Director and the Congress. In developing such a plan, the Secretary shall consider the costs and benefits of alternative designs.".

SEC. 2041. STATE COMPREHENSIVE MENTAL HEALTH SERVICE PLAN.

(a) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Section 1925(d) of the Public Health Service Act, as redesignated by section 2038, is amended to read as follows:

"(d) The amount referred to in subsections (a), (b), and (c) with respect to a State is the total amount that the State is permitted to expend for administrative expenses under section 1915(d) for fiscal year 1986 from amounts paid to the State under subpart 1 for such fiscal year. If in the judgment of the Secretary the State is making a good faith effort to comply with this subpart, the Secretary may assess the State a penalty that is less than the maximum penalty, but in no event shall the penalty be less than 2 percent of the amount the State is permitted to expend for administrative expenses.".

(b) REPORT.—Not later than September 30, 1990, the Comptroller General of the General Accounting Office shall prepare and submit to the Committee on Energy and

Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report that—

(1) evaluates the status of the implementation of section 1920C of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300x-11) requiring State Mental Health Services Plans; and

(2) includes an assessment of—

(A) the number of States that have submitted such plans;

(B) the number of States that have implemented the plans submitted by such States;

(C) the efficacy of the plans that have been implemented in achieving effective, organized community-based systems of care for seriously mentally ill individuals; and

(D) recommendations on additional legislation that is necessary to facilitate the achievement of the goals of this title.

SEC. 2055. DRUG ABUSE DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS OF NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE.

Part A of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq.), as amended by section 2054 of this part, is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"DRUG ABUSE DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS OF NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE

"SEC. 509G. (a)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Administrator, may make grants to public and private entities for demonstration projects—

"(A) to determine the feasibility and long-term efficacy of programs providing drug abuse treatment and vocational training in exchange for public service;

"(B) to conduct outreach activities to intravenous drug abusers with respect to the prevention of exposure to, and the transmission of, the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome and to encourage intravenous drug abusers to seek treatment for such abuse; and

"(C) to provide drug abuse treatment services to pregnant women, post partum women, and their infants.

"(2) The Secretary shall, directly or through contracts with public and private entities, provide for evaluations of projects carried out pursuant to subsection (a) and for the dissemination of information developed as result of such models.

"(b)(1) The Secretary shall establish demonstration projects that provide grants to States for the purpose of enabling such States to provide effective treatment, and referrals for treatment, to individuals who abuse drugs.

"(2) The Secretary shall award grants under subsection (a) to projects that operate in areas—

"(A) in which a demand for drug treatment services exists, or a need for such services exists which exceeds the capacity of organizations operating in that area to provide such services;

"(B) that have a high prevalence of drug abuse;

"(C) that have a high incidence of drug related criminal activities; and

"(D) that meet any other requirements that the Secretary determines are appropriate.

"(3) In awarding grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall—

"(A) select projects that focus on at least one of the following areas of treatment:

"(i) treatment of adolescents;

"(ii) treatment of minorities;

"(iii) treatment of pregnant women;

"(iv) treatment of female addicts and their children;

"(v) treatment of the residents of public housing projects; and

"(B) select at least one project that includes a centralized local referral unit that shall provide—

"(i) an initial analysis of the nature of the individual's problem and refer such individual to appropriate existing drug treatment programs; and

"(ii) assistance to school teachers and other individuals who come into contact with drug abusers when attempting to refer such abusers to appropriate drug treatment programs.

"(4) A State that desires to participate in a project established under subsection (a) shall submit a written application to the Secretary in such form and containing such information as the Secretary may by regulation request.

"(5) In awarding grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give preference to projects that demonstrate a comprehensive approach to the problems associated with drug abuse and provide evidence of broad community involvement and support, including the support of private businesses, law enforcement authorities, health care providers, local school systems, and local governments in the proposed demonstration project.

"(6) Projects funded under this section shall be for a period of at least three years but in no event to exceed five years.

"(7) The Secretary shall require, as a condition of awarding grants under this section, a systematic evaluation of the projects funded under this section on a long term basis to record the impact of such projects on treated individuals, and on the community as a whole. The methodology used in the evaluation shall be published in the Federal Register for comment before becoming effective.

"(c)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $34,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990 through 1991.

"(2) Of the amounts appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) for a fiscal year, $10,000,000 shall be made available for carrying out subsection (a).

SEC. 2219. RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.

Except as otherwise provided in this Act or the amendments made by this Act, nothing in this Act or the amendments made by this Act shall be construed to affect the obligation of the United States to any Indian or Indian tribe arising out of any treaty, statute, Executive order, or the trust responsibility of the United States owing to such Indian or Indian tribe. Nothing in this section shall exempt any individual Indian from the sanctions of "user accountability" provided for elsewhere in this Act: Provided, That no individual Indian shall be denied any benefit under Federal Indian programs comparable to those "means tested" safety net programs otherwise excluded under this Act.

Subtitle D—Native Hawaiian Health Care

SEC. 2301. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988".

SEC. 2302. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the United States retains the legal responsibility to enforce the administration of the public trust responsibility of the State of Hawaii for the betterment of the conditions of Native Hawaiians under section 5(f) of Public Law 86-3 (73 Stat. 6; commonly referred to as the "Hawaii Statehood Admissions Act");

(2) in furtherance of the State of Hawaii's public trust responsibility for the betterment of the conditions of Native Hawaiians, contributions by the United States to the provision of comprehensive health promotion and disease prevention services to maintain and improve the health status of Native Hawaiians are consistent with the historical and unique legal relationship of the United States with the government that represented the indigenous native people of Hawaii; and

(3) it is the policy of the United States to raise the health status of Native Hawaiians to the highest possible level and to encourage the maximum participation of Native Hawaiians in order to achieve this objective.

SEC. 2303. COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH CARE MASTER PLAN FOR NATIVE HAWAIIANS.

(a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary may make a grant to, or enter into contract with, Papa Ola Lokahi for the purpose of developing a Native Hawaiian comprehensive health care master plan designed to promote comprehensive health promotion and disease prevention services and to maintain and improve the health status of Native Hawaiians. The master plan shall be based upon an assessment of the health care status and health care needs of Native Hawaiians. To the extent practicable, assessments made as of the date of such grant or contract shall be used by Papa Ola Lokahi, except that any such assessment shall be updated as appropriate.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $700,000 for fiscal year 1990 to carry out subsection (a).

SEC. 2304. NATIVE HAWAIIAN HEALTH CENTERS.

(a) COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH PROMOTION, DISEASE PREVENTION, AND PRIMARY HEALTH SERVICES.—(1)(A) The Secretary, in consultation with Papa Ola Lokahi, may make grants to, or enter into contracts with, any qualified entity for the purpose of providing comprehensive health promotion and disease prevention services as well as primary health services to Native Hawaiians.

(B) In making grants and entering into contracts under this paragraph, the Secretary shall give preference to Native Hawaiian health centers and Native Hawaiian organizations, and, to the extent feasible, health promotion and disease prevention services shall be performed through Native Hawaiian health centers.

(2) In addition to paragraph (1), the Secretary may make grants to, or enter into a contract with, Papa Ola Lokahi for the purpose of planning Native Hawaiian health centers to serve the health needs of Native Hawaiian communities on each of the islands of O'ahu, Moloka'i, Maui, Hawai'i, Lana'i, Kaua'i, and Ni'ihau in the State of Hawaii.

(b) QUALIFIED ENTITY.—An entity is a qualified entity for purposes of subsection (a)(1) if the entity is—

(1) a Native Hawaiian health center;

(2) a Native Hawaiian organization; or

(3) a public or nonprofit private health provider.

(c) SERVICES TO BE PROVIDED.—(1) Each recipient of funds under subsection (a)(1) shall provide the following services:

(A) Outreach services to inform Native Hawaiians of the availability of health services.

(B) Education in health promotion and disease prevention of the Native Hawaiian population by (wherever possible) Native Hawaiian health care practitioners, community outreach workers, counselors, and cultural educators.

(C) Services of physicians, physicians' assistants, or nurse practitioners.

(D) Immunizations.

(E) Prevention and control of diabetes, high blood pressure, and otitis media.

(F) Pregnancy and infant care.

(G) Improvement of nutrition.

(2) In addition to the mandatory services under paragraph (1), the following services may be provided pursuant to subsection (a)(1):

(A) Identification, treatment, control, and reduction of the incidence of preventable illnesses and conditions endemic to Native Hawaiians.

(B) Collection of data related to the prevention of diseases and illnesses among Native Hawaiians.

(C) Services within the meaning of the terms "health promotion", "disease prevention", and "primary health services", as such terms are defined in section 2308, which are not specifically referred to paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(3) The health care services referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) which are provided under grants or contracts under subsection (a)(1) may be provided by traditional Native Hawaiian healers.

(d) LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF ENTITIES.—During a fiscal year, the Secretary under this subtitle may make a grant to, or hold a contract with, not more than nine qualified entities in the State of Hawaii, as follows:

(1) Two entities serving individuals on Kaua'i, from which individuals on Ni'ihau shall also be served.

(2) Two entities serving individuals on O'ahu.

(3) One entity serving individuals on Moloka'i, from which individuals on Lana'i shall also be served.

(4) Two entities serving individuals on Maui.

(5) Two entities serving individuals on Hawai'i.

(e) MATCHING FUNDS.—(1) The Secretary may not make a grant or provide funds pursuant to a contract under subsection (a)(1) to an entity—

(A) in an amount exceeding 75 percent of the costs of providing health services under the grant or contract; and

(B) unless the entity agrees that the entity will make available, directly or through donations to the entity, non-Federal contributions toward such costs in an amount equal to not less than $1 (in cash or in kind under paragraph (2)) for each $3 of Federal funds provided in such grant or contract.

(2) Non-Federal contributions required in paragraph (1) may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services. Amounts provided by the Federal Government or services assisted or subsidized to any significant extent by the Federal Government may not be included in determining the amount of such non-Federal contributions.

(3) The Secretary may waive the requirement established in paragraph (1) if—

(A) the entity involved is a nonprofit private entity described in subsection (b); and

(B) the Secretary, in consultation with Papa Ola Lokahi, determines that it is not feasible for the entity to comply with such requirement.

(f) RESTRICTION ON USE OF GRANT AND CONTRACT FUNDS.—The Secretary may not make a grant to, or enter into a contract with, an entity under subsection (a)(1) unless the entity agrees that amounts received pursuant to such subsection will not, directly or through contract, be expended—

(1) for any purpose other than the purposes described in subsection (c);

(2) to provide inpatient services;

(3) to make cash payments to intended recipients of health services; or

(4) to purchase or improve real property (other than minor remodeling of existing improvements to real property) or to purchase major medical equipment.

(g) LIMITATION ON CHARGES FOR SERVICES.—The Secretary may not make a grant, or enter into a contract with, an entity under subsection (a)(1) unless the entity agrees that, whether health services are provided directly or through contract—

(1) health services under the grant or contract will be provided without regard to ability to pay for the health services; and

(2) the entity will impose a charge for the delivery of health services, and such charge—

(A) will be made according to a schedule of charges that is made available to the public, and

(B) will be adjusted to reflect the income of the individual involved.

(h) Authorization of Appropriations.—(1) There is authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 to carry out subsection (a)(1).

(2) There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1990 $900,000 to carry out subsection (a)(2).

SEC. 2305. ADMINISTRATIVE GRANT FOR PAPA OLA LOKAHI.

(a) In General.—In addition to any other grant or contract under this subtitle, the Secretary may make grants to, or enter into contracts with, Papa Ola Lokahi for—

(1) coordination, implementation, and updating (as appropriate) of the comprehensive health care master plan developed pursuant to section 2303;

(2) training for the persons described in section 2304(c)(1)(B); or

(3) identification of and research into the diseases that are most prevalent among Native Hawaiians, including behavioral, biomedical, epidemiological, and health services.

(b) Authorization of Appropriations.—There is authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992 to carry out subsection (a).

SEC. 2306. ADMINISTRATION OF GRANTS AND CONTRACTS.

(a) Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary shall include in any grant made or contract entered into under this subtitle such terms and conditions as the Secretary considers necessary or appropriate to ensure that the objectives of such grant or contract are achieved.

(b) Periodic Review.—The Secretary shall periodically evaluate the performance of, and compliance with, grants and contracts under this subtitle.

(c) Administrative Requirements.—The Secretary may not make a grant or enter into a contract under this subtitle with an entity unless the entity—

(1) agrees to establish such procedures for fiscal control and fund accounting as may be necessary to ensure proper disbursement and accounting with respect to the grant or contract;

(2) agrees to ensure the confidentiality of records maintained on individuals receiving health services under the grant or contract;

(3) with respect to providing health services to any population of Native Hawaiians a substantial portion of which has a limited ability to speak the English language—

(A) has developed and has the ability to carry out a reasonable plan to provide health services under the grant or contract through individuals who are able to communicate with the population involved in the language and cultural context that is most appropriate; and

(B) has designated at least one individual, fluent in both English and the appropriate language, to assist in carrying out the plan;

(4) with respect to health services that are covered in the plan of the State of Hawaii approved under title XIX of the Social Security Act—

(A) if the entity will provide under the grant or contract any such health services directly—

(i) the entity has entered into a participation agreement under such plan; and

(ii) the entity is qualified to receive payments under such plan; and

(B) if the entity will provide under the grant or contract any such health services through a contract with an organization—

(i) the organization has entered into a participation agreement under such plan; and

(ii) the organization is qualified to receive payments under such plan; and

(5) agrees to submit to the Secretary and to Papa Ola Lokahi an annual report that describes the utilization and costs of health services provided under the grant or contract (including the average cost of health services per user) and that provides such other information as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(d) Contract Evaluation.—(1) If, as a result of evaluations conducted by the Secretary, the Secretary determines that an entity has not complied with or satisfactorily performed a contract entered into under section 2304, the Secretary shall, prior to renewing such contract, attempt to resolve the areas of noncompliance or unsatisfactory performance and modify such contract to prevent future occurrences of such noncompliance or unsatisfactory performance. If the Secretary determines that such noncompliance or unsatisfactory performance cannot be resolved and prevented in the future, the Secretary shall not renew such contract with such entity and is authorized to enter into a contract under section 2304 with another entity referred to in section 2304(b) that provides services to the same population of Native Hawaiians which is served by the entity whose contract is not renewed by reason of this subsection.

(2) In determining whether to renew a contract entered into with an entity under this subtitle, the Secretary shall consider the results of evaluation under this section.

(3) All contracts entered into by the Secretary under this subtitle shall be in accordance with all Federal contracting laws and regulations except that, in the discretion of the Secretary, such contracts may be negotiated without advertising and may be exempted from the provisions of the Act of August 24, 1935 (40 U.S.C. 270a et seq.).

(4) Payments made under any contract entered into under this subtitle may be made in advance, by means of reimbursement, or in installments and shall be made on such conditions as the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

(e) Limitation on Use of Funds For Administrative Expenses.—Except for grants and contracts under section 2305, the Secretary may not make a grant to, or enter into a contract with, an entity under this subtitle unless the entity agrees that the entity will not expend more than 10 percent of amounts received pursuant to this subtitle for the purpose of administering the grant or contract.

(f) Report.—(1) For each fiscal year during which an entity receives or expends funds pursuant to a grant or contract under this subtitle, such entity shall submit to the Secretary and to Papa Ola Lokahi a quarterly report on—

(A) activities conducted by the entity under the grant or contract;

(B) the amounts and purposes for which Federal funds were expended; and

(C) such other information as the Secretary may request.

(2) The reports and records of any entity which concern any grant or contract under this subtitle shall be subject to audit by the Secretary, the Inspector General of Health and Human Services, and the Comptroller General of the United States.

(g) Annual Private Audit.—The Secretary shall allow as a cost of any grant made or contract entered into under this subtitle the cost of an annual private audit conducted by a certified public accountant.

SEC. 2307. ASSIGNMENT OF PERSONNEL.

(a) In General.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with any entity under which the Secretary is authorized to assign personnel of the Department of Health and Human Services with expertise identified by such entity to such entity on detail for the purposes of providing comprehensive health promotion and disease prevention services to Native Hawaiians.

(b) Applicable Federal Personnel Provisions.—Any assignment of personnel made by the Secretary under any agreement entered into under the authority of paragraph (1) shall be treated as an assignment of Federal personnel to a local government that is made in accordance with subchapter VI of chapter 33 of title 5, United States Code.

The Task Force shall consist of at least 6 and not more than 20 members. Each Administrator shall appoint one-half of the members as follows: (1) the Adminstrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall appoint members from among Emergency Response Technicians and other appropriate employees of the Agency; and (2) the Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration shall appoint members from among Special Agents assigned to field divisions and other appropriate employees of the Administration.

(c) Duties of Task Force.—The Task Force shall formulate, establish, and implement a program for the cleanup and disposal of hazardous waste produced by illegal drug laboratories. In formulating such program, the Task Force shall consider the following factors:

(1) The volume of hazardous waste produced by illegal drug laboratories.

(2) The cost of cleaning up and disposing of hazardous waste produced by illegal drug laboratories.

(3) The effectiveness of the various methods of cleaning up and disposing of hazardous waste produced by illegal drug laboratories.

(4) The coordination of the efforts of the Environmental Protection Agency and the Drug Enforcement Administration in cleaning up and disposing of hazardous waste produced by illegal drug laboratories.

(5) The dissemination of information to law enforcement agencies that have responsibility for enforcement of drug laws.

(d) Guidelines.—The Task Force shall recommend to the Administrators guidelines for cleanup of illegal drug laboratories to protect the public health and environment. Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Administrators shall formulate and publish such guidelines.

(e) Demonstration Projects.—

(1) The Attorney General shall make grants to, and enter into contracts with, State and local governments for demonstration projects to clean up and safely dispose of substances associated with illegal drug laboratories which may present a danger to public health or the environment.

(2) The Attorney General may not under this subsection make a grant or enter into a contract unless the applicant for such assistance agrees to comply with the guidelines issued pursuant to subsection (d).

(3) The Attorney General shall, through grant or contract, provide for independent evaluations of the activities carried out pursuant to this subsection and shall recommend appropriate legislation to the Congress.

(f) FUNDING.—Of the amounts made available to carry out the Controlled Substances Act for fiscal year 1989, not less than $5,000,000 shall be made available to carry out subsections (d) and (e).

(g) REPORTS.—After consultation with the Task Force, the Administrators shall—

(1) transmit to the President and to each House of Congress not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle a report describing the program established by the Task Force under subsection (c) (including an analysis of the factors specified in paragraphs (1) through (5) of that subsection);

(2) periodically transmit to the President and to each House of Congress reports describing the implementation of the program established by the Task Force under subsection (c) (including an analysis of the factors specified in paragraphs (1) through (5) of that subsection) and the progress made in the cleanup and disposal of hazardous waste produced by illegal drug laboratories; and

(3) transmit to each House of Congress a report describing the findings made as a result of the evaluations referred to in subsection (e)(3).

Subtitle F—Certain Provisions With Respect to Veterans

SEC. 2501. EVALUATION OF THE VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION INPATIENT AND OUTPATIENT DRUG AND ALCOHOL TREATMENT PROGRAMS.

The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall conduct an evaluation of inpatient and outpatient drug and alcohol treatment programs operated by the Veterans' Administration. The evaluation shall include a determination of the medical advantages and cost-effectiveness of such programs, taking into consideration rates of readmission and the rate of successful rehabilitation. There are authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of the conduct of such evaluation $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

SEC. 2502. VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION DRUG AND ALCOHOL TREATMENT PROGRAMS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Veterans' Administration, in addition to any other amounts that may be authorized to be appropriated to the Veterans' Administration for the purpose described in subsection (b), $15,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1989 through 1991.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Any amounts appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) may be expended only for the purpose of providing care and services under chapter 17 of title 38, United States Code, to eligible veterans with alcohol or drug dependence or abuse disabilities.

SEC. 2613. AMENDMENTS TO TITLE IV.

(a) NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON DEAFNESS AND OTHER COMMUNICATION DISORDERS.—

(1) Subpart 13 of part C of title IV, as added by section 101(4) of the Health Omnibus Programs Extension of 1988, is amended by adding at the end the following new sections:

"NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON DEAFNESS AND OTHER COMMUNICATION DISORDERS ADVISORY BOARD

"SEC. 464D. (a) The Secretary shall establish in the Institute the National Deafness and Other Communications Disorders Advisory Board (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Advisory Board').

"(b) The Advisory Board shall be composed of eighteen appointed members and nonvoting ex officio members as follows:

"(1) The Secretary shall appoint—

"(A) twelve members from individuals who are scientists, physicians, and other health and rehabilitation professionals, who are not officers or employees of the United States, and who represent the specialties and disciplines relevant to deafness and other communication disorders, including not less than two persons with a communication disorder; and

"(B) six members from the general public who are knowledgeable with respect to such disorders, including not less than one person with a communication disorder and not less than one person who is a parent of an individual with such a disorder.

Of the appointed members, not less than five shall by virtue of training or experience be knowledgeable in diagnoses and rehabilitation of communication disorders, education of the hearing, speech, or language impaired, public health, public information, community program development, occupational hazards to communications senses, or the aging process.

"(2) The following shall be ex officio members of each Advisory Board:

"(A) The Assistant Secretary for Health, the Director of NIH, the Director of the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders, the Director of the Centers for Disease Control, the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration, and the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs (or the designees of such officers).

"(B) Such other officers and employees of the United States as the Secretary determines necessary for the Advisory Board to carry out its functions.

"(c) Members of an Advisory Board who are officers or employees of the Federal Government shall serve as members of the Advisory Board without compensation in addition to that received in their regular public employment. Other members of the Board shall receive compensation at rates not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate in effect for grade GS-18 of the General Schedule for each day (including traveltime) they are engaged in the performance of their duties as members of the Board.

"(d) The term of office of an appointed member of the Advisory Board is four years, except that no term of office may extend beyond the expiration of the Advisory Board. Any member appointed to fill a vacancy for an unexpired term shall be appointed for the remainder of such term. A member may serve after the expiration of the member's term until a successor has taken office. If a vacancy occurs in the Advisory Board, the Secretary shall make an appointment to fill the vacancy not later than 90 days from the date the vacancy occurred.

"(e) The members of the Advisory Board shall select a chairman from among the appointed members.

"(f) The Secretary shall, after consultation with and consideration of the recommendations of the Advisory Board, provide the Advisory Board with an executive director and one other professional staff member. In addition, the Secretary shall, after consultation with and consideration of the recommendations of the Advisory Board, provide the Advisory Board with such additional professional staff members, such clerical staff members, such services of consultants, such information, and (through contracts or other arrangements) such administrative support services and facilities, as the Secretary determines are necessary for the Advisory Board to carry out its functions.

"(g) The Advisory Board shall meet at the call of the chairman or upon request of the Director of the Institute, but not less often than four times a year.

"(h) The Advisory Board shall—

"(1) review and evaluate the implementation of the plan prepared under section 464A(a) and periodically update the plan to ensure its continuing relevance;

"(2) for the purpose of assuring the most effective use and organization of resources respecting deafness and other communication disorders, advise and make recommendations to the Congress, the Secretary, the Director of NIH, the Director of the Institute, and the heads of other appropriate Federal agencies for the implementation and revision of such plan; and

"(3) maintain liaison with other advisory bodies related to Federal agencies involved in the implementation of such plan and with key non-Federal entities involved in activities affecting the control of such disorders.

"(i) In carrying out its functions, the Advisory Board may establish subcommittees, convene workshops and conferences, and collect data. Such subcommittees may be composed of Advisory Board members and nonmember consultants with expertise in the particular area addressed by such subcommittees. The subcommittees may hold such meetings as are necessary to enable them to carry out their activities.

"(j) The Advisory Board shall prepare an annual report for the Secretary which—

"(1) describes the Advisory Board's activities in the fiscal year for which the report is made;

"(2) describes and evaluates the progress made in such fiscal year in research, treatment, education, and training with respect to deafness and other communication disorders;

"(3) summarizes and analyzes expenditures made by the Federal Government for activities respecting such disorders in such fiscal year; and

"(4) contains the Advisory Board's recommendations (if any) for changes in the plan prepared under section 464A(a).

"(k) The National Deafness and Other Communication Disorders Advisory Board shall be established not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders and Health Research Extension Act of 1988.

"INTERAGENCY COORDINATING COMMITTEE

"SEC. 464E. (a) The Secretary may establish a committee to be known as the Deafness and Other Communication Disorders Interagency Coordinating Committee (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Coordinating Committee').

"(b) The Coordinating Committee shall, with respect to deafness and other communication disorders—

"(1) provide for the coordination of the activities of the national research institutes; and

"(2) coordinate the aspects of all Federal health programs and activities relating to deafness and other communication disorders in order to assure the adequacy and technical soundness of such programs and activities and in order to provide for the full communication and exchange of information necessary to maintain adequate coordination of such programs and activities.

"(c) The Coordinating Committee shall be composed of the directors of each of the national research institutes and divisions involved in research with respect to deafness and other communication disorders and representatives of all other Federal departments and agencies whose programs involve health functions or responsibilities relevant to deafness and other communication disorders.

"(d) The Committee shall be chaired by the Director of NIH (or the designee of the Director). The Committee shall meet at the call of the chair, but not less often than four times a year.

"(e) Not later than 120 days after the end of each fiscal year, the Committee shall prepare and transmit to the Secretary, the Director of NIH, the Director of the Institute, and the advisory council for the Institute a report detailing the activities of the Committee in such fiscal year in carrying out subsection (b).

"LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

"SEC. 464F. With respect to amounts appropriated for a fiscal year for the National Institutes of Health, the limitation established in section 408(b)(1) on the expenditure of such amounts for administrative expenses shall apply to administrative expenses of the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders.".

(2)(A) Personnel employed by the National Institutes of Health in connection with the functions vested under paragraph 1, and under section 101(4) of the Health Omnibus Programs Extension of 1988, in the Director of the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders, and assets, property, contracts, liabilities, records, unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds of the National Institutes of Health, arising from or employed, held, used, available to, or to be made available, in connection with such functions shall be transferred to the Director for appropriate allocation. Unexpended funds transferred under this subsection shall be used only for the purposes for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

(B) With respect to functions vested under paragraph 1, and under section 101(4) of the Health Omnibus Programs Extension of 1988, in the Director of the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders, all orders, rules, regulations, grants, contracts, certificates, licenses, privileges, and other determinations, actions, or official documents, that have been issued, made, granted, or allowed to become effective, and that are effective on the date of the enactment of this Act, shall continue in effect according to their terms unless changed pursuant to law.

(b) EFFECT OF ENACTMENT OF SIMILAR PROVISIONS ESTABLISHING NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON DEAFNESS AND OTHER COMMUNICATION DISORDERS.—

(1) Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall take effect immediately after the enactment of both the bill, S. 1727, of the One Hundredth Congress, and the Health Omnibus Programs Extension of 1988.

With respect to amounts appropriated for any fiscal year pursuant to the authorization contained in the preceding sentence, the Director—

"(1) shall use not less than 15 percent and not more than 25 percent of such amounts for purposes of carrying out section 124(b); and

"(2) shall ensure that not more than $500,000 is used for program support."; and

(2) in subsection (d)(1), by inserting "(other than section 124(b))" after "title I" the first place it appears.

Subtitle B—Drug Abuse Education and Prevention

CHAPTER 1—DRUG EDUCATION AND PREVENTION RELATING TO YOUTH GANGS

SEC. 3501. ESTABLISHMENT OF DRUG ABUSE EDUCATION AND PREVENTION PROGRAM RELATING TO YOUTH GANGS.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services, through the Administration on Children, Youth, and Families, shall make grants to, and enter into contracts with, public and nonprofit private agencies, organizations (including community based organizations with demonstrated experience in this field), institutions, and individuals, to carry out projects and activities—

(1) to prevent and to reduce the participation of youth in the activities of gangs that engage in illicit drug-related activities,

(2) to promote the involvement of youth in lawful activities in communities in which such gangs commit drug-related crimes,

(3) to prevent the abuse of drugs by youth, to educate youth about such abuse, and to refer for treatment and rehabilitation members of such gangs who abuse drugs,

(4) to support activities of local police departments and other local law enforcement agencies to conduct educational outreach activities in communities in which gangs commit drug-related crimes,

(5) to inform gang members and their families of the availability of treatment and rehabilitation services for drug abuse,

(6) to facilitate Federal and State cooperation with local school officials to assist youth who are likely to participate in gangs that commit drug-related crimes,

(7) to facilitate coordination and cooperation among—

(A) local education, juvenile justice, employment and social service agencies, and

(B) drug abuse referral, treatment, and rehabilitation programs, for the purpose of preventing or reducing the participation of youth in activities of gangs that commit drug-related crimes, and

(8) to provide technical assistance to eligible organizations in planning and implementing drug abuse education, prevention, rehabilitation, and referral programs for youth who are members of gangs that commit drug-related crimes.

SEC. 3502. APPLICATION FOR GRANTS AND CONTRACTS.

(a) SUBMISSION OF APPLICATIONS.—Any agency, organization, institution, or individual desiring to receive a grant, or to enter into a contract, under section 3501 shall submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may require by rule.

(b) CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.—Each application for assistance under this chapter shall—

(1) set forth a project or activity for carrying out one or more of the purposes specified in section 3501 and specifically identify each such purpose such project or activity is designed to carry out,

(2) provide that such project or activity shall be administered by or under the supervision of the applicant,

(3) provide for the proper and efficient administration of such project or activity,

(4) provide for regular evaluation of the operation of such project or activity,

(5) provide that regular reports on such project or activity shall be submitted to the Secretary, and

(6) provide such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to ensure prudent use, proper disbursement, and accurate accounting of funds received under this chapter.

SEC. 3503. APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.

In selecting among applications submitted under section 3502(a), the Secretary shall give priority to applicants who propose to carry out projects and activities—

(1) for the purposes specified in section 3501 in geographical areas in which frequent and severe drug-related crimes are committed by gangs whose membership is composed primarily of youth, and

(2) that the applicant demonstrates that it has the broad support of community based organizations in such geographical areas.

SEC. 3504. COORDINATION WITH JUVENILE JUSTICE PROGRAMS.

The Secretary shall coordinate the program established by section 3501 with the programs and activities carried out under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 and with the programs and activities of the Attorney General, to ensure that all such programs and activities are complementary and not duplicative.

SEC. 3505. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

To carry out this chapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for the fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

CHAPTER 2—PROGRAM FOR RUNAWAY AND HOMELESS YOUTH

SEC. 3511. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

(a) The Secretary shall make grants to public and private nonprofit agencies, organizations, and institutions to carry out research, demonstration, and services projects designed—

(1) to provide individual, family, and group counseling to runaway youth and their families and to homeless youth for the purpose of preventing or reducing the illicit use of drugs by such youth,

(2) to develop and support peer counseling programs for runaway and homeless youth related to the illicit use of drugs,

(3) to develop and support community education activities related to illicit use of drugs by runaway and homeless youth, including outreach to youth individually,

(4) to provide to runaway and homeless youth in rural areas assistance (including the development of community support groups) related to the illicit use of drugs,

(5) to provide to individuals involved in providing services to runaway and homeless youth, information and training regarding issues related to the illicit use of drugs by runaway and homeless youth,

(6) to support research on the illicit drug use by runaway and homeless youth, and the effects on such youth of drug abuse by family members, and any correlation between such use and attempts at suicide, and

(7) to improve the availability and coordination of local services related to drug abuse, for runaway and homeless youth.

(b) Priority.—In selecting among applicants for grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to agencies and organizations that have experience in providing services to runaway and homeless youth.

(c) Limitation.—Grants under this section may be made for a period not to exceed 3 years.

SEC. 3512. ANNUAL REPORT.

Not later than 180 days after the end of a fiscal year for which funds are appropriated to carry out this chapter, the Secretary shall submit to the President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate a report that contains—

(1) a description of the types of projects and activities for which grants were made under this chapter for such fiscal year,

(2) a description of the number and characteristics of the youth and families served by such projects and activities, and

(3) a description of exemplary projects and activities for which grants were made under this chapter for such fiscal year.

SEC. 3513. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) Authorization.—Subject to subsection (b), to carry out this chapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

(b) Limitation.—No funds are authorized to be appropriated for a fiscal year to carry out this chapter unless the aggregate amount appropriated to carry out title III of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5701-5751) for such fiscal year is not less than the aggregate amount appropriated to carry out such title for the preceding fiscal year.

SEC. 3514. APPLICATIONS.

(a) Submission of Application.—Any State, unit of local government (or combination of units of local government), agency, organization, institution, or individual desiring to receive a grant, or enter into a contract, under this chapter shall submit an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as may be prescribed by the Federal officer who is authorized to make such grant or enter into such contract (hereinafter in this chapter referred to as the "appropriate Federal officer").

(b) Contents of Application.—In accordance with guidelines established by the appropriate Federal officer, each application for assistance under this chapter shall—

(1) set forth a project or activity for carrying out one or more of the purposes for which such grant or contract is authorized to be made and expressly identify each such purpose such project or activity is designed to carry out,

(2) provide that such project or activity shall be administered by or under the supervision of the applicant,

(3) provide for the proper and efficient administration of such project or activity,

(4) provide for regular evaluation of such project or activity,

(5) provide that regular reports on such project or activity shall be sent to the appropriate Federal officer, and

(6) provide for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to ensure prudent use, proper disbursement, and accurate accounting of funds received under this chapter.

SEC. 3515. REVIEW OF APPLICATIONS.

(a) Consideration of Factors.—In reviewing applications submitted under this chapter, the appropriate Federal officer shall consider—

(1) the relative cost and effectiveness of the proposed project or activity in carrying out purposes for which the requested grant or contract is authorized to be made,

(2) the extent to which such project or activity will incorporate new or innovative techniques,

(3) the increase in capacity of the State or the public or nonprofit private agency, organization, institution, or individual involved to provide services to address the illicit use of drugs by runaway and homeless youth,

(4) the extent to which such project or activity serves communities which have high rates of illicit drug use by juveniles (including runaway and homeless youth),

(5) the extent to which such project or activity will provide services in geographical areas where similar services are unavailable or in short supply, and

(6) the extent to which such project or activity will increase the level of services, or coordinate other services, in the community available to eligible youth.

(b) Competitive Process.—(1) Applications submitted under this chapter shall be selected for approval through a competitive process to be established by rule by the appropriate Federal officer. As part of such a process, such officer shall publish a notice in the Federal Register—

(A) announcing the availability of funds to carry out this part,

(B) the general criteria applicable to the selection of applicants to receive such funds, and

(C) a description of the procedures applicable to submitting and reviewing applications for such funds.

(2) As part of such process, each application referred to in subsection (a) shall be subject to peer review by individuals (excluding officers and employees of the Department of Justice and the Department of Health and Human Services) who have expertise in the subject matter related to the project or activity proposed in such application.

(c) Expedited Review.—The appropriate Federal officer shall expedite the consideration of an application referred to in subsection (a) if the applicant demonstrates, to the satisfaction of the Administrator, that the failure to expedite such consideration would prevent the effective implementation of the project or activity set forth in such application.

CHAPTER 3—COMMUNITY PROGRAM

SEC. 3521. THE COMMUNITY YOUTH ACTIVITY PROGRAM.

(a) Block Grant Program.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make grants to eligible States to enable such States to carry out the activities described in subsection (e).

(b) Application.—

(1) In general.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State, acting on its own behalf or on behalf of a person, shall submit to the Secretary an application that contains such information and is in such form as may be required by the Secretary.

(2) Demonstration of need.—In the application submitted under paragraph (1), the State shall demonstrate a need for the activities described in subsections (c)(3)(B) and (e) and provide a description of those activities and projects that will receive financial assistance from a grant made under this section to the State.

(c) Amount of Grant.—

(1) Minimum amount.—Each State that submits for a fiscal year an application under subsection (b) that meets the requirements of the Secretary shall, subject to the availability of appropriations, receive a grant in an amount determined in accordance with paragraph (3).

(2) Programs of national significance.—Of amounts appropriated or otherwise available to carry out this section for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall reserve 5 percent to be provided for activities and projects of national significance, such as activities authorized by section 681(a)(2)(F) of the Community Services Block Grant Act (42 U.S.C. Sec. 9910(a)(2)(F)), or projects expected to have a significant impact in preventing the abuse of drugs by youth.

(3) Specified appropriations.—

(A) In general.—Of the aggregate amount appropriated under subsection (h) for any fiscal year and after reserving the amount required by paragraph (2), the Secretary shall—

(i) allot—

(I) 25 percent equally among the eligible States if such amount is less than $40,000,000; or

(II) $250,000 to each eligible State if such amount equals or exceeds $40,000,000;

(ii) allot one-half of 1 percent of such amount on the basis of need among Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands of the United States, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands; and

(iii) set aside the remainder to be disbursed as described in subparagraph (B).

For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "State" does not include Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands of the United States, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(B) Remainder.—Amounts referred to in subparagraph (A)(iii) shall be used by the Secretary to make grants, on a competitive basis and taking into consideration with respect to the States—

(i) the highest proportions of school-aged youth are at risk of drug abuse;

(ii) if a tangible need has been identified by the State involved; and

(iii) if the State involved has proposed the funding of additional projects targeted at the areas of highest need; to carry out the activities and projects that are consistent with the activities described in subsection (e)(1). The activities and projects for which such grants are made shall be selected by the Secretary from among proposed activities and projects submitted to the Secretary by the States. Such grants shall be made to the States for redistribution to the persons on whose behalf the State submitted an application under subsection (b).

(d) PRIORITY.—In making grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to—

(1) projects aimed at youth who are not in school or who are at risk of dropping out of school;

(2) projects that seek to reinvolve dropouts in educational programs, involve youth community-based activities, develop training or employment opportunities for dropouts, or provide youth with alternatives to drug abuse;

(3) projects to provide after-school, vacation, and weekend activities designed to give youth opportunities to actively participate in a variety of activities, including youth sports programs;

(4) activities and projects that are consistent with activities and projects described in subsection (e)(1) and that include participation by the business community;

(5) projects that provide outreach to individuals of all ages who are at high risk of involvement with drug abuse;

(6) projects targeted to communities with the most serious drug abuse problems to enable such communities to develop programs that coordinate Federal, State, and local efforts to develop comprehensive, long-term, community-wide prevention and education strategies;

(7) projects that seek to involve youth who are members of gangs or who may join a gang, in—

(A) educational programs;

(B) community-based activities;

(C) training or employment opportunities; or

(D) other alternatives to gang involvement; and

(8) projects that seek to inform youth regarding the existence and operation of the projects referred to in paragraph (7).

(e) ACTIVITIES AND PROJECTS.—Financial assistance may be provided with a grant received under subsection (a) under this section by a State as follows:

(1) COMMUNITY SERVICES AND PARTNERSHIPS.—Such assistance may be provided for community services and partnerships designed to develop community activities targeted at drug abuse prevention through education, training, and recreation projects. Such services may be provided by, and such partnerships may be entered into with—

(A) local educational agencies;

(B) law enforcement agencies;

(C) community-based organizations;

(D) community action agencies;

(E) local or State recreational departments; or

(F) business organizations; and in consultation with local and State health departments and with community health or mental health centers when appropriate. Such assistance may be provided to any entity described in subparagraphs (A) through (F), either individually or in partnerships. Applications for such assistance shall include a description of the method to be used to evaluate the impact the particular service or partnership is designed to have on the drug abuse problem within the community.

(2) OTHER ACTIVITIES AND PROJECTS.—Such assistance may be provided to carry out projects or activities that are consistent with the activities and projects described in paragraph (1).

(f) PROJECT EVALUATIONS.—The Secretary shall provide for the evaluation of activities and projects conducted with financial assistance received under this section. Applications for grants under this section shall include a description of the method to be used in evaluating the impact such activities and programs have on the drug abuse problem within the communities in which such activities and projects are carried out.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—To carry out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, $55,000,000 for fiscal year 1990, $60,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $66,550,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $73,205,000 for fiscal year 1993.

SEC. 3522. EVALUATION OF DRUG ABUSE EDUCATION AND PREVENTION EFFORTS.

(a) METHOD.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Administrator, shall develop and conduct a structured evaluation of the different approaches utilized across the Nation to reduce drug abuse (as defined in section 3601(6)).

(b) GRANTS.—The Administrator may make grants to or enter into contracts with appropriate entities for the purpose of conducting the evaluations required by subsection (a).

(c) TIME OF REPORTS.—The Secretary shall submit a report based on the evaluations prepared under subsection (a) not later than 1 year after the effective date of this section, and another report based on such evaluations not later than 3 years after such date. A third report based on such evaluations shall be submitted by the Secretary not later than January 1, 1994.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—To carry out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 in fiscal year 1989, and $15,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1990 through 1993.

Subtitle B—MULTILATERAL NARCOTICS CONTROL EFFORTS

SEC. 4101. REGIONAL ANTI-NARCOTICS FORCES.

(a) NEED FOR ANTI-NARCOTICS FORCE IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the operations of international illegal drug smuggling organizations pose a direct threat to the national security of the member nations of the Organization of American States;

(2) illegal international drug smuggling organizations have grown so large and powerful that they threaten to overwhelm small nations standing alone against them;

(3) to preserve the national sovereignty, protect the public health, and maintain domestic law and order within their borders, member nations of the Organization of American States should coordinate their efforts to fight the illegal drug trade;

(4) recent events in drug source and transit countries in the Western Hemisphere make clear the requirement for international agreement on the formation of a multinational force to conduct operations against these illegal drug smuggling organizations;

(5) the United States should make every effort to initiate diplomatic discussions through the Organization of American States aimed at achieving agreement to establish and operate a Western Hemisphere anti-narcotics force; and

(6) sensitive to the legitimate concerns of other member nations of the Organization of American States, the United States stands ready to provide equipment, training, and financial resources to support the establishment and operation of such an anti-narcotics force, but believes that the personnel for such a force should be provided by those nations facing the most serious threat from drug trafficking organizations.

(b) DIPLOMATIC DISCUSSIONS REGARDING WESTERN HEMISPHERE REGIONAL FORCE.—The President shall direct the United States Ambassador to the Organization of American States, under the direction of the Secretary of State, to initiate diplomatic discussions with member nations of the Organization of American States aimed at securing agreement to the formation of a multinational force to conduct operations against international illegal drug smuggling organizations wherever they may be found in the Western Hemisphere.

(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall report to the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives on the progress United States diplomatic efforts have made toward achieving agreement on the establishment of such a multinational anti-narcotics force for the Western Hemisphere.

(d) BUDGET REQUEST.—If diplomatic efforts toward achieving a multinational anti-narcotics force for the Western Hemisphere demonstrate progress or agreement has been reached on formation of such a force, the President shall submit to the Congress, within 30 days after submission of the report required by subsection (c), supplemental budget requests for fiscal years 1989 and 1990 covering the United States' share of the cost of operation and maintenance of such a force.

(e) OTHER REGIONAL ANTI-NARCOTIC FORCES.—The Congress urges the President to seek the establishment, in each of the relevant regions of the world, of a multilateral anti-narcotics force similar to the Western Hemisphere anti-narcotics force contemplated by this section.

SEC. 4102. UNITED NATIONS EFFORTS TO STOP ILLEGAL DRUG TRAFFICKING.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the Department of State estimates that in 1987 the worldwide production of opium was between 1,902 and 3,107 metric tons, production of cocaine hydrochloride was between 324 and 422 metric tons, and production of marijuana was between 10,930 and 17,625 metric tons;

(2) it is estimated that the value of the illegal drug trade worldwide is as high as $500,000,000,000 a year;

(3) drug traffickers appear to be intensifying their efforts to distribute drugs to Western industrialized nations, as a source of stable currencies;

(4) drug traffickers also appear to be intensifying their efforts to distribute drugs to developing nations, as a means to increase their market;

(5) it is estimated that there are between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 drug addicts worldwide;

(6) the American illegal drug market alone, comprised primarily of marijuana, cocaine, and heroin, annually produces between $50,000,000,000 and $100,000,000,000 at the retail level;

(7) approximately 35 percent of the inmates of State prisons were under the influence of illegal drugs at the time they committed the crime for which they were incarcerated;

(8) it is estimated that there are 26,000,000 regular users of illegal drugs in the Nation, slightly more than 10 percent of the Nation's population; and

(9) over 50 percent of the high school seniors in the Nation have used marijuana or hashish.

(b) ENCOURAGEMENT FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF INTERNATIONAL FORCE.—The Congress encourages the United Nations to explore ways and means to establish an international force or mechanism aimed at stopping the trafficking of illegal drugs.

SEC. 4103. INTERNATIONAL DRUG FORCE.

It is the sense of the Congress that the President should call for international negotiations for the purpose of agreeing on the establishment of an international drug force to pursue and apprehend major international drug traffickers.

SEC. 4104. INTERNATIONAL DRUG CONFERENCE.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the President should convene as soon as possible an international conference to be known as the International Conference on Combatting Illegal Drug Production, Trafficking, and Use in the Western Hemisphere;

(2) this conference should involve the heads of state, the highest-ranking law enforcement officers, and other appropriate officials from every government in the Western Hemisphere that is willing to combat the drug trade, and whose cooperation the President determines is essential to that goal; and

(3) this conference should focus exclusively on combatting the drug trade and, in particular, should emphasize enhancing cooperative efforts among the governments of the Western Hemisphere to—

(A) substantially reduce the production, cultivation, and processing of illicit drugs;

(B) eliminate the transshipment of such drugs through countries in the Western Hemisphere;

(C) curb the demand for and use of such drugs in every country in the Western Hemisphere;

(D) combat the problems of drug-related corruption and drug money laundering; and

(E) share intelligence information, extradite drug traffickers, and take other steps necessary to improve law enforcement efforts against the drug trade.

SEC. 4105. INTEGRATED REGIONAL PLAN TO FIGHT THE INTERNATIONAL COCAINE TRADE.

(a) Consultations Concerning Creation of an Integrated Plan.—The Secretary of State shall consult with—

(1) the heads of appropriate agencies and departments of the United States Government,

(2) the governments of those countries in the Western Hemisphere that cultivate, process, or traffic in cocaine, and

(3) the governments of other cocaine consuming countries, about the feasibility of creating a comprehensive, integrated, multinational plan whose objective would be the substantial reduction or elimination of the international cocaine trade.

(b) Report on the Integrated Plan.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall report to the Congress on—

(1) the feasibility of creating a comprehensive, integrated, multinational plan whose objective would be the substantial reduction or elimination of the international cocaine trade;

(2) the measures in such areas as eradication, interdiction, crop substitution, economic development, extradition, money-laundering, precursor chemical control, and related fields, that would be required to achieve such an objective;

(3) the material resources, funding, and technological assistance each producer and transit country would require in order to achieve such an objective; and

(4) the resources, funding, and other assistance each producer, transit, and consuming country would be prepared to make available for such an effort.

SEC. 4106. REGIONAL ANTI-NARCOTICS TRAINING CENTER IN THE CARIBBEAN.

It is the sense of the Congress that the Assistant Secretary of State for International Narcotics Matters—

(1) should seek the establishment of a regional anti-narcotics training center in the Caribbean;

(2) should contribute funds or other resources to such a center; and

(3) should seek such contributions from other countries for such a center.

SEC. 4107. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR MULTILATERAL AND REGIONAL DRUG ABUSE CONTROL PROGRAMS.

Section 302 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(j) In addition to amounts otherwise available under this section for such purposes, there are authorized to be appropriated to the President $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 to be available only for United States contributions to multilateral and regional drug abuse control programs. Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by this subsection—

"(1) $2,000,000 shall be for a United States contribution to the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control;

"(2) $600,000 shall be for the Organization of American States (OAS) Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission (CICAD) Legal Development Project, except that the proportion which such amount bears to the total amount of contributions to this specific project may not exceed the proportion which the United States contribution to the budget of the Organization of American States for that fiscal year bears to the total contributions to the budget of the Organization of American States for that fiscal year; and

"(3) $400,000 shall be for the Organization of American States (OAS) Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission (CICAD) Law Enforcement Training Project, except that the proportion which such amount bears to the total amount of contributions to this specific project may not exceed the proportion which the United States contribution to the budget of the Organization of American States for that fiscal year bears to the total contributions to the budget of the Organization of American States for that fiscal year.".

SEC. 4108. INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(a) In General.—It is the sense of the Senate that the President should begin discussions with foreign governments to investigate the feasibility and advisability of establishing an international criminal court to expedite cases regarding the prosecution of persons accused of having engaged in international drug trafficking or having committed international crimes.

(b) United States Citizens.—Such discussions shall not include any commitment that such court shall have jurisdiction over the extradition of United States citizens and shall assure that any international agreement shall recognize the rights and privileges guaranteed to United States citizens under the United States Constitution.

Subtitle C—Authorizations and Earmarkings of Foreign Assistance

SEC. 4201. AUTHORIZATION FOR INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS CONTROL ASSISTANCE.

Section 482(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by striking out paragraphs (1) and (3) and by inserting the following new paragraph (1) after "(a)":

"(1) To carry out the purposes of section 481, there are authorized to be appropriated to the President $101,000,000 for fiscal year 1989.".

SEC. 4202. HERBICIDES FOR AERIAL COCA ERADICATION.

(a) Earmarking of Funds.—The Secretary of State shall use not less than $500,000 of the funds made available for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to international narcotics control) to finance the testing and use of safe and effective herbicides for use in the aerial eradication of coca.

(b) Impact on the Environment and Health.—Section 481(d) of that Act is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(5)(A) The President, with the assistance of appropriate federal agencies, shall monitor any use under this chapter of a herbicide in the aerial eradication of coca in order to determine the impact of such use on the environment and on the health of individuals.

"(B) The President shall report on such impact in the annual report required by subsection (e).

"(C) If the President determines that any such use is harmful to the environment or the health of individuals, the President shall immediately report that determination to the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, together with such recommendations as the President deems appropriate.".

SEC. 4203. PROCUREMENT OF WEAPONS TO DEFEND AIRCRAFT INVOLVED IN NARCOTICS CONTROL EFFORTS.

(a) Earmarking of MAP Funds.—Of the funds available to carry out chapter 2 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to the grant military assistance program), $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 shall be made available to arm, for defensive purposes, aircraft used in narcotics control eradication or interdiction efforts. These funds may only be used to arm aircraft already in the inventory of the recipient country, and may not be used for the purchase of new aircraft.

(b) Notification to Congress.—The Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate shall be notified of the use of any such funds for that purpose at least 15 days in advance in accordance with the reprogramming procedures applicable under section 634A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

SEC. 4204. TRAINING FOR NARCOTICS CONTROL ACTIVITIES.

(a) Earmarking of Funds.—Not less than $2,000,000 of the funds made available for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 5 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to international military education and training) shall be available only for—

(1) education and training in the operation and maintenance of equipment used in narcotics control interdiction and eradication efforts of countries in Latin America and the Caribbean which are described in subsection (c); and

(2) the expenses of deploying, upon the request of the government of a foreign country described in subsection (c), Department of Defense mobile training teams in that foreign country to conduct training in military-related individual and collective skills that will enhance that country's ability to conduct tactical operations in narcotics interdiction.

(b) Units Eligible for Training.—Education and training may be provided under subsection (a)(1) and training may be provided under subsection (a)(2) only for foreign law enforcement agencies, or other units, that are organized for the specific purpose of narcotics enforcement.

(c) Eligible Countries.—Assistance may be provided under this section only for countries—

(1) which are major illicit drug producing or major drug-transit countries (as defined in section 481(i) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961);

(2) which have democratic governments; and

(3) whose law enforcement agencies do not engage in a consistent pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights (as defined in section 502B(d)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961).

(d) Coordination With International Narcotics Control Assistance Program.—Assistance under this section shall be coordinated with assistance provided under chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance

Act of 1961 (relating to international narcotics control).

(e) Waiver of Section 660.—Assistance may be provided pursuant to this section notwithstanding the prohibition contained in section 660 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to police training).

SEC. 4205. MILITARY ASSISTANCE FOR ANTI-NARCOTICS EFFORTS.

(a) Purposes of Assistance.—Assistance provided under this section shall be designed to—

(1) enhance the ability of friendly governments to control illicit narcotics production and trafficking;

(2) strengthen the bilateral ties of the United States with friendly governments by offering concrete assistance in this area of great mutual concern; and

(3) strengthen respect for internationally recognized human rights and the rule of law in efforts to control illicit narcotics production and trafficking.

(b) Waiver of Certain Provisions.—During fiscal years 1989 and 1990, section 660(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 shall not apply with respect to assistance provided under chapter 2 of part II of that Act (relating to the grant military assistance program) to countries described in subsection (c) for the procurement, for use in narcotics control, eradication, and interdiction efforts, of weapons or ammunition for foreign law enforcement agencies, or other units, that are organized for the specific purpose of narcotics enforcement.

(c) Eligible Countries.—Assistance may be provided under this section only for countries—

(1) which are major illicit drug producing or major drug-transit countries (as defined in section 481(i) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961);

(2) which have democratic governments; and

(3) whose law enforcement agencies do not engage in a consistent pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights (as defined in section 502B(d)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961).

(d) Reports to Congress.—Not less than 15 days before funds are obligated to provide assistance authorized by this section, the President shall transmit to the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, in accordance with the procedures applicable under section 634A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, a written notification which specifies—

(1) the country to which the assistance is to be provided;

(2) the type and value of the assistance to be provided;

(3) the law enforcement agencies or other units that will receive the assistance; and

(4) an explanation of how the proposed assistance will achieve the purposes specified in subsection (a) of this section.

(e) Reports on Human Rights Situation.—Section 502B(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to country-specific human rights reports upon the request of the foreign affairs committees) applies with respect to countries for which assistance authorized by this section is proposed or is being provided.

(f) Coordination With International Narcotics Control Assistance Program.—Assistance under this section shall be coordinated with assistance provided under chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to international narcotics control).

(g) Earmarking for Latin America and the Caribbean.—Of the amounts made available for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 2 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, $3,500,000 shall be available only to provide assistance authorized by this section for countries in Latin America or the Caribbean.

(h) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 578(a) of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1989 (Public Law 100-461), is amended—

(A) by striking out paragraph (3);

(B) in paragraph (4), by striking out "except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection"; and

(C) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (3).

(2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall be effective as of October 1, 1988.

SEC. 4206. REALLOCATION OF FUNDS WITHHELD FROM COUNTRIES WHICH FAIL TO TAKE ADEQUATE STEPS TO HALT ILLICIT DRUG PRODUCTION OR TRAFFICKING.

(a) Requirement To Reallocate.—Chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 486. REALLOCATION OF FUNDS WITHHELD FROM COUNTRIES WHICH FAIL TO TAKE ADEQUATE STEPS TO HALT ILLICIT DRUG PRODUCTION OR TRAFFICKING.

"(a) Additional Assistance for Countries Taking Significant Steps.—If any funds authorized to be appropriated for any fiscal year for security assistance are not used for assistance for the country for which those funds were allocated because of the requirements of section 481(h) or any other provision of law requiring the withholding of assistance for countries that have not taken adequate steps to halt illicit drug production or trafficking, the President shall use those funds for additional assistance for those countries which have met their illicit drug eradication targets or have otherwise taken significant steps to halt illicit drug production or trafficking, as follows:

"(1) International narcotics control assistance.—Those funds may be transferred to and consolidated with the funds appropriated to carry out this chapter in order to provide additional narcotics control assistance for those countries. Funds transferred under this paragraph may only be used to provide increased funding for activities previously justified to the Congress. Transfers may be made under this paragraph without regard to the 20-percent increase limitation contained in section 610(a). This paragraph does not apply with respect to funds made available for assistance under the Arms Export Control Act.

"(2) Security assistance.—Any such funds not used under paragraph (1) shall be reprogrammed within the account for which they were appropriated (subject to the regular reprogramming procedures under section 634A) in order to provide additional security assistance for those countries.

"(b) Definition of Security Assistance.—As used in this section, the term 'security assistance' means assistance under chapter 2 of part II of this Act (relating to the grant military assistance program), chapter 4 of part II of this Act (relating to the Economic Support Fund), chapter 5 of part II of this Act (relating to international military education and training), or the Arms Export Control Act (relating to foreign military sales financing).".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) of this section supersedes section 578(d) of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1989 (Public Law 100-461).

(2) Funds may be transferred pursuant to paragraph (1) of section 486(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (as enacted by this section) notwithstanding section 514 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1989 (as amended by section 589 of that Act), relating to transfers between accounts.

Subtitle D—Provisions Relating to Specific Countries

SEC. 4301. COOPERATIVE NONMAJOR DRUG-TRANSIT COUNTRIES.

(a) Greater Attention.—The Congress urges the Assistant Secretary of State for International Narcotics Matters to give greater attention, and provide more narcotics control assistance, to those countries which are drug-transit countries but are not major drug-transit countries (as defined in section 481(i)(5) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961) and which are cooperating with the United States in its international narcotics control efforts.

(b) Earmarking of Assistance.—Of the amounts made available for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to international narcotics control), not less than $1,000,000 shall be available only for assistance to countries described in subsection (a).

SEC. 4302. ASSISTANCE FOR BOLIVIA.

(a) Security Assistance.—For fiscal year 1989, assistance may be provided for Bolivia under chapter 2 (relating to the grant military assistance program), chapter 4 (relating to the Economic Support Fund), and chapter 5 (relating to international military education and training) of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and under chapter 2 of the Arms Export Control Act (relating to foreign military sales financing) only if the President certifies to the Congress that the Government of Bolivia is implementing legislation that—

(1) establishes its legal coca requirements,

(2) provides for the licensing of the number of hectares necessary to produce the legal requirement,

(3) makes unlicensed coca production illegal, and

(4) makes possession and distribution of coca leaf illegal (other than possession and distribution for licit purposes).

(b) Section 481 Certification.—

(1) Conditions on certification.—For fiscal year 1989, the President may make a certification with respect to Bolivia under clause (i) or (ii) of section 481(h)(2)(A) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 only if the Government of Bolivia—

(A) has entered into the narcotics cooperation agreement with the United States specified in section 611(2)(B) of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1985;

(B) has fully achieved the eradication targets contained in that agreement; and

(C) has begun a program of forced eradication of illicit coca cultivation if the targets for voluntary eradication are not being met or are not continued.

(2) Nonwaivability.—The authorities contained in section 614 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 may not be used to waive the requirements of this subsection, and may not be used to waive the requirements of section 481(h) of that Act for fiscal year 1989 with respect to Bolivia.

(c) Development Assistance.—For fiscal year 1989, the project agreement document for a project carried out pursuant to chapter I of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to development assistance) shall contain—

(1) in the case of the Chapare Regional Development Project, a clause requiring that project activities be suspended if the Government of Bolivia fails to achieve the coca eradication targets contained in the applicable agreement concerning that project; and

(2) in the case of a project to be carried out in an area in Bolivia in which there is no known illicit coca cultivation as of the date of enactment of this Act, a clause requiring that project activities be suspended if the Government of Bolivia fails to keep the project area free of illicit coca cultivation.

(d) Fiscal Year 1989 Earmarking.—Title II of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1989 (Public Law 100-461), is amended in the paragraph under the heading "INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS CONTROL" by striking out "$15,000,000" in the first proviso and all that follows through "not less than" in the second proviso.

SEC. 4303. ASSISTANCE FOR PERU.

(a) Determinations Regarding Narcotics Control Cooperation.—In making determinations with respect to Peru pursuant to section 481(h)(2)(A)(i) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 for fiscal year 1989, the President shall give foremost consideration to whether the Government of Peru made substantial progress in meeting its coca eradication targets during the previous year.

(b) Upper Huallaga Valley Project.—Funds authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 1 of part I of that Act (relating to development assistance) may be made available for the project of the Agency for International Development in the Upper Huallaga Valley of Peru only if the Secretary of State determines, and reports to the Congress, that such project continues to be effective in reducing and eradicating coca leaf production, distribution, and marketing in the Upper Huallaga Valley.

SEC. 4304. ASSISTANCE FOR MEXICO.

(a) Limitation on Assistance.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), not more than $15,000,000 of the amounts made available for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to international narcotics control) may be made available for Mexico.

(2) Assistance in excess of the amount specified in paragraph (1) may be made available for Mexico only if the congressional committees specified in section 634A(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 are notified at least 15 days in advance in accordance with the regular reprogramming procedures applicable under that section.

(b) Cooperation on Drug Law Enforcement Matters.—The Congress urges the Government of Mexico to cooperate fully with the United States on matters of concern to the United States regarding drug law enforcement. In particular, the Congress anticipates that the new Government which will take office on December 1 will move expeditiously to bring to trial and effectively prosecute those responsible for the 1985 murders of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and his pilot Alfredo Zavala Avelar and those responsible for the 1986 detention and torture of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Victor Cortez, Junior.

(c) Joint Air Operations and Joint Crewing.—In making determinations with respect to Mexico pursuant to section 481(h)(2)(A)(i) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 for fiscal year 1989, the President shall consider whether the Government of Mexico has responded favorably to the United States proposals to establish, and is making measurable progress toward implementing—

(1) a joint United States-Mexico airborne apprehension capability (commonly referred to as "joint air operations"); and

(2) joint air surveillance operations (commonly referred to as "joint crewing").

(d) Banking Information Concerning Money Laundering.—The Congress encourages the Government of Mexico, upon ratification of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty between the United States and Mexico, to furnish banking information pursuant to that treaty which would permit the successful investigation and prosecution in the United States of major narco-terrorists who use Mexican financial institutions to "launder" their profits.

SEC. 4305. ASSISTANCE FOR COLOMBIA.

(a) Size of Military Assistance Group.—The third sentence of section 515(c)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to countries authorized to have more than 6 members of the Armed Forces assigned to carry out international security assistance programs) is amended by inserting "Colombia," after "Honduras,".

(b) Increased Military Assistance.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out chapter 2 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to the grant military assistance program) $15,000,000 as supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 1989, which are authorized to remain available until expended. These funds shall be available only to provide defense articles to the armed forces of Colombia to support their efforts to combat illicit narcotics production and trafficking.

(c) Protection from Narco-Terrorist Attacks.—

(1) Earmark of funds.—Of the funds made available for fiscal year 1989 to carry out chapter 4 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to the Economic Support Fund), not less than $5,000,000 shall be used to provide to the Government of Colombia such assistance as it may request to provide protection against narco-terrorist attacks on judges, other government officials, and members of the press.

(2) Waiver of prohibition on assistance to police forces.—The assistance provided for in paragraph (1) may be provided without regard to section 660 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

(3) Notification to congress.—Funds made available pursuant to paragraph (1) may not be obligated until at least 15 days after the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate are notified of the proposed obligation in accordance with the reprogramming procedures applicable under section 634A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

(4) Extension of period for obligation of funds.—Funds allocated to carry out this subsection shall remain available until expended, notwithstanding any other provision of law.

SEC. 4306. ILLICIT DRUG PRODUCTION AND TRAFFICKING IN PAKISTAN.

In making determinations with respect to Pakistan pursuant to section 481(h)(2)(A)(i) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the President shall take into account the extent to which the Government of Pakistan—

(1) is increasing the number of illicit laboratories destroyed and is vigorously prosecuting and punishing the owners and operators of such laboratories;

(2) is increasing the number of arrests and successful prosecutions of violators, with particular emphasis on putting major traffickers out of business; and

(3) has made changes in Pakistani legal codes in order to enable Pakistani law enforcement officials to move more effectively against narcotics traffickers, such as new conspiracy laws and new asset seizure laws.

SEC. 4307. UNITED STATES RELIANCE ON LICIT OPIUM GUM FROM FOREIGN SOURCES.

(a) Review Required.—The President shall conduct a review of United States narcotics raw material policy to determine—

(1) the current and reserve international needs for opium-derived pharmaceutical and chemical products, and the relative capabilities for meeting those needs through the opium gum process and the concentrated poppy straw method of production;

(2) whether the United States should continue to rely on a single foreign country for all its licit opium gum;

(3) whether it should be United States policy to encourage all countries which produce licit opium to use the concentrated poppy straw method of production; and

(4) what options are available, consistent with treaties to which the United States is a party, to reduce United States reliance on licit opium gum from foreign sources.

(b) Report to Congress.—The results of this review shall be reported to the Congress not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4308. AFGHANISTAN AS A HEROIN SOURCE.

(a) Finding.—The Congress finds that Afghanistan remains the source of most of the heroin exported from southwest Asia.

(b) Statement of Policy.—It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the United States Government should pursue efforts to press the Government of Afghanistan, and should work with the Mujahadeen—

(A) to reduce production and trafficking in areas under their respective control, and

(B) to encourage drug eradication, interdiction, and crop substitution in Afghanistan; and

(2) an initiative should be developed which could be put in place as the Mujahadeen and successors to the present Kabul regime begin to exert more civil authority.

SEC. 4309. INVOLVEMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF LAOS IN ILLICIT DRUG PRODUCTION AND TRAFFICKING.

(a) Periodic Reports.—The President shall prepare and transmit to the Congress, in accordance with subsection (b), periodic reports containing the following determinations:

(1) Does the Government of Laos, as a matter of government policy, encourage or facilitate the production or distribution of illegal drugs?

(2) Does any senior official of the Government of Laos engage in, encourage, or facilitate the production or distribution of illegal drugs?

(3) Do other governments in the region assist the distribution of illegal drugs from Laos?

(b) Time for Submission of Reports.—The report described in subsection (a) shall be submitted as part of each report required by section 481(e) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and as part of each report required by section 2013 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986.

(c) Information To Be Included.—(1) If an affirmative determination is made under paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a), the report shall describe the activities and identities of officials whose activities caused that determination to be made.

(2) If an affirmative determination is made under paragraph (3) of subsection (a), the report shall describe the activities of other governments in the region which caused that determination to be made.

Subtitle E—Annual Report and Certification Process

SEC. 4401. EXPRESSION IN NUMERICAL TERMS OF MAXIMUM ACHIEVABLE REDUCTIONS IN ILLICIT DRUG PRODUCTION.

Section 481(e)(4) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "Each determination of the President under the preceding sentence shall be expressed in numerical terms, such as the number of acres of illicitly cultivated controlled substances which can be eradicated.".

SEC. 4402. REPORTS ON ASSISTANCE DENIED.

Section 481(e) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(8) Each report pursuant to this subsection shall describe the United States assistance for the preceding fiscal year which was denied, pursuant to subsection (h), to each major illicit drug producing country and each major drug-transit country.".

SEC. 4403. EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN NARCOTICS EDUCATION ACTIVITIES FROM DEFINITION OF UNITED STATES ASSISTANCE.

Section 481(i)(4)(vii) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by striking out "126 of this Act;" and inserting in lieu thereof "126(b)(2) of this Act (but any such assistance shall be subject to the prior notification procedures applicable to reprogrammings pursuant to section 634A of this Act),".

SEC. 4404. REPORTS AND RESTRICTIONS CONCERNING CERTAIN COUNTRIES.

Section 2013(a) of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 is amended—

(1) by striking out "Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act and every 6 months thereafter, the" and inserting in lieu thereof "The"; and

(2) by inserting ", at the same time as each report is submitted pursuant to section 481(b)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961," after "transmit to the Congress".

SEC. 4405. DETERMINING MAJOR DRUG-TRANSIT COUNTRIES.

(a) Procedures for Determining.—Section 481 of Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(k)(1) For each calendar year, the Secretary of State, after consultation with the appropriate committees of the Congress, shall establish numerical standards and other guidelines for determining which countries will be considered to be major drug-transit countries under subsection (i)(5)(A) and (B) of this section.

"(2) Not later than September 1 of each year, the Secretary of State shall make a preliminary determination of the numerical standards and other guidelines to be used pursuant to paragraph (1) with respect to that year and shall notify the appropriate committees of the Congress of those standards and guidelines.

"(3) Not later than October 1 of each year, the Secretary of State shall notify the appropriate committees of the Congress of—

"(A) which countries appear likely, as of that date, to be determined to be major drug-transit countries for that year under the numerical standards and other guidelines developed pursuant to this subsection; and

"(B) which countries appear likely, as of that date, to be determined to be major illicit drug producing countries for that year.

"(4) Each report submitted pursuant to subsection (e) shall discuss—

"(A) any changes made, since the notification provided pursuant to paragraph (2), in the numerical standards and other guidelines used in determining which countries were major drug-transit countries under subsection (i)(5)(A) and (B) during the preceding year; and

"(B) any changes made, since the notification provided pursuant to paragraph (3)—

"(i) in the countries determined to be major drug-transit countries under subsection (i)(5)(A) and (B) during the preceding year; or

"(ii) in the countries determined to be major illicit drug producing countries for that year.".

(b) Transition Provision.—With respect to fiscal year 1989, the Secretary of State—

(1) shall take the actions specified in subsection (k)(2) of section 481 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (as added by subsection (a) of this section) not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(2) shall take the actions specified in subsection (k)(3) of that section (as added by subsection (a) of this section) not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4406. WAIVER OF RESTRICTIONS ON UNITED STATES ASSISTANCE FOR CERTAIN MAJOR DRUG-TRANSIT COUNTRIES.

Section 481(h) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 shall not apply with respect to a major drug-transit country for fiscal year 1989 if the President certifies to the Congress, during that fiscal year, that—

(1) section 481(i)(5)(C) of that Act (relating to money laundering) does not apply to that country;

(2) the country previously was a major illicit drug producing country but, during each of the preceding two years, has effectively eliminated illicit drug production; and

(3) the country is cooperating fully with the United States or has taken adequate steps on its own—

(A) in satisfying the goals agreed to in an applicable bilateral narcotics agreement with the United States (as described in section 481(h)(2) of that Act) or a multilateral agreement which achieves the objectives of that section;

(B) in preventing narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances transported through such country from being sold illegally within the jurisdiction of such country to United States Government personnel or their dependents or from being transported, directly or indirectly, into the United States; and

(C) in preventing and punishing bribery and other forms of public corruption which facilitate the production, processing, or shipment of narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, or which discourage the investigation and prosecution of such acts.

SEC. 4407. ANNUAL CERTIFICATION PROCEDURES FOR BILATERAL AND MULTILATERAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) Revision of Procedures.—Section 481(h) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by striking out all that precedes subparagraph (B) of paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(h) Annual Certification Procedures.—

"(1) Withholding of bilateral assistance and opposition to multilateral development assistance.—(A) Fifty percent of the United States assistance allocated each fiscal year in the report required by section 653(a) for each major illicit drug producing country or major drug-transit country shall be withheld from obligation and expenditure, except as provided in paragraph (2).

"(B) The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States Executive Director of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the United States Executive Director of the International Development Association, the United States Executive Director of the Inter-American Development Bank, and the United States Executive Director of the Asian Development Bank to vote, on and after March 1 of each year, against any loan or other utilization of the funds of their respective institution to or for any major illicit drug producing country or major drug-transit country, except as provided in paragraph (2).

"(2) Certification procedure.—(A) Subject to paragraph (4), the assistance withheld from a country pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) may be obligated and expended, and the requirement of paragraph (1)(B) to vote against multilateral development bank assistance to a country shall not apply, if the President determines and certifies to the Congress, at the time of the submission of the report required by subsection (e), that—

"(i) during the previous year the country has cooperated fully with the United States, or has taken adequate steps on its own—

"(I) in satisfying the goals agreed to in an applicable bilateral narcotics agreement with the United States (as described in subparagraph (B)) or a multilateral agreement which achieves the objectives of subparagraph (B),

"(II) in preventing narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances produced or processed, in whole or in part, in such country or transported through such country, from being sold illegally within the jurisdiction of such country to United States Government personnel or their dependents or from being transported, directly or indirectly, into the United States,

"(III) in preventing and punishing the laundering in that country of drug-related profits or drug-related moneys, and

"(IV) in preventing and punishing bribery and other forms of public corruption which facilitate the production, processing, or shipment of narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, or which discourage the investigation and prosecution of such acts; or

"(ii) for a country that would not otherwise qualify for certification under clause (i), the vital national interests of the United States require that the assistance withheld pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) be provided and that the United States not vote against multilateral development bank assistance for that country pursuant to paragraph (1)(B).

"(B) A bilateral narcotics agreement referred to in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) is an agreement between the United States and a foreign country in which the foreign country agrees to take specific activities, including, where applicable, efforts to—

"(i) reduce drug production, drug consumption, and drug trafficking within its territory, including activities to address illicit crop eradication and crop substitution;

"(ii) increase drug interdiction and enforcement;

"(iii) increase drug treatment;

"(iv) increase the identification of and elimination of illicit drug laboratories;

"(v) increase the identification and elimination of the trafficking of precursor chemicals for the use in production of illegal drugs;

"(vi) increase cooperation with United States drug enforcement officials; and

"(vii) where applicable, increase participation in extradition treaties, mutual legal assistance provisions directed at money laundering, sharing of evidence, and other initiatives for cooperative drug enforcement.

"(C) A country which in the previous year was designated as a major illicit drug producing country or a major drug-transit country may not be determined to be cooperating fully under subparagraph (A)(i) unless it has in place a bilateral narcotics agreement with the United States or a multilateral agreement which achieves the objectives of subparagraph (B).

"(D) If the President makes a certification with respect to a country pursuant to subparagraph (A)(ii), he shall include in such certification—

"(i) a full and complete description of the vital national interests placed at risk if United States bilateral assistance to that country is terminated pursuant to this subsection and multilateral development bank assistance is not provided to such country; and

"(ii) a statement weighing the risk described in clause (i) against the risks posed to the vital national interests of the United States by the failure of such country to cooperate fully with the United States in combating narcotics or to take adequate steps to combat narcotics on its own.

"(E) The President may make a certification under subparagraph (A)(i) with respect to a major illicit drug producing country or major drug-transit country which is also a producer of licit opium only if the President determines that such country has taken steps to prevent significant diversion of its licit cultivation and production into the illicit market, maintains production and stockpiles at levels no higher than those consistent with licit market demand, and prevents illicit cultivation and production.

"(3) Matters to be considered.—In determining whether to make the certification required by paragraph (2) with respect to a country, the President shall consider the following:

"(A) Have the actions of the government of that country resulted in the maximum reductions in illicit drug production which were determined to be achievable pursuant to subsection (e)(4)? In the case of a major illicit drug producing country, the President shall give foremost consideration, in determining whether to make the determination required by paragraph (2), to whether the government of that country has taken actions which have resulted in such reductions.

"(B) Has that government taken the legal and law enforcement measures to enforce in its territory, to the maximum extent possible, the elimination of illicit cultivation and the suppression of illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, as evidenced by seizures of such drugs and substances and of illicit laboratories and the arrest and prosecution of violators involved in the traffic in such drugs and substances significantly affecting the United States?

"(C) Has that government taken the legal and law enforcement steps necessary to eliminate, to the maximum extent possible, the laundering in that country of drug-related profits or drug-related moneys, as evidenced by—

"(i) the enactment and enforcement by that government of laws prohibiting such conduct,

"(ii) that government entering into, and cooperating under the terms of, mutual legal assistance agreements with the United States governing (but not limited to) money laundering, and

"(iii) the degree to which that government otherwise cooperates with United States law enforcement authorities on anti-money laundering efforts?

"(D) Has that government taken the legal and law enforcement steps necessary to eliminate, to the maximum extent possible, bribery and other forms of public corruption which facilitate the production, processing, or shipment of narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, or which discourage the investigation and prosecution of such acts, as evidenced by the enactment and enforcement of laws prohibiting such conduct?

"(E) Has that government, as a matter of government policy, encouraged or facilitated the production or distribution of illicit narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances?

"(F) Does any senior official of that government engage in, encourage, or facilitate the production or distribution of illicit narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances?

"(G) Has that government investigated aggressively all cases in which any member of an agency of the United States Government engaged in drug enforcement activities since January 1, 1985, has been the victim of acts or threats of violence, inflicted by or with the complicity of any law enforcement or other officer of such country or any political subdivision thereof, and energetically sought to bring the perpetrators of such offense or offenses to justice?

"(H) Having been requested to do so by the United States Government, does that government fail to provide reasonable cooperation to lawful activities of United States drug enforcement agents, including the refusal of permission to such agents engaged in interdiction of aerial smuggling into the United States to pursue suspected aerial smugglers a reasonable distance into the airspace of the requested country?

"(I) Has that government made necessary changes in legal codes in order to enable law enforcement officials to move more effectively against narcotics traffickers, such as new conspiracy laws and new asset seizure laws?

"(J) Has that government expeditiously processed United States extradition requests relating to narcotics trafficking?

"(K) Has that government refused to protect or give haven to any known drug traffickers, and has it expeditiously processed extradition requests relating to narcotics trafficking made by other countries?

"(4) Congressional review.—Paragraph (1) shall apply without regard to paragraph (2) if, within 45 days of continuous session (within the meaning of section 601(b)(1) of the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act of 1976) after receipt of a certification under paragraph (2), the Congress enacts a joint resolution disapproving the determination of the President contained in such certification.

"(5) Denial of assistance for countries decertified.—If the President does not make a certification under paragraph (2) with respect to a country or the Congress enacts a joint resolution disapproving such certification, then until such time as the conditions specified in paragraph (6)(A) are satisfied—

"(A) funds may not be obligated for United States assistance for that country, and funds previously obligated for United States assistance for that country may not be expended for the purpose of providing assistance for that country; and

"(B) the requirement to vote against multilateral development bank assistance pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) shall apply with respect to that country, without regard to the date specified in that paragraph.

"(6) Recertification.—(A) Paragraph (5) shall apply to a country until—

"(i) the President makes a certification under paragraph (2) with respect to that country, and the Congress does not enact a joint resolution under paragraph (4) disapproving the determination of the President contained in that certification; or

"(ii) the President submits at any other time a certification of the matters described in paragraph (2) with respect to such country, and the Congress enacts a joint resolution approving the determination of the President contained in that certification.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Such section 481(h) is further amended—

(A) by striking out existing paragraph (5); and

(B) in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (6), as so redesignated by the amendment made by subsection (a) of this section—

(i) by striking out "such" in clause (i), and

(ii) by inserting "under this subsection" before "shall be" in clause (i); and

(iii) by striking out "resolution" in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "resolutions".

(2) Section 585 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1988 (as contained in section 101(e) of Public Law 100-202), is amended by striking out subsection (c).

SEC. 4408. ANNUAL CERTIFICATION PROCEDURES FOR TRADE AND AVIATION SANCTIONS.

(a) Revision of Procedures.—Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 802(b) the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2492(b) (1) and (2)) are amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1)(A) Subject to paragraph (3), subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to a country if the President determines and certifies to the Congress, at the time of the submission of the report required by section 481(e) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, that—

"(i) during the previous year the country has cooperated fully with the United States, or has taken adequate steps on its own—

"(I) in satisfying the goals agreed to in an applicable bilateral narcotics agreement with the United States (as described in paragraph (B)) or a multilateral agreement which achieves the objectives of paragraph (B),

"(II) in preventing narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances produced or processed, in whole or in part, in such country or transported through such country, from being sold illegally within the jurisdiction of such country to United States Government personnel or their dependents or from being transported, directly or indirectly, into the United States,

"(III) in preventing and punishing the laundering in that country of drug-related profits or drug-related moneys, and

"(IV) in preventing and punishing bribery and other forms of public corruption which facilitate the production, processing, or shipment of narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, or which discourage the investigation and prosecution of such acts; or

"(ii) for a country that would not otherwise qualify for certification under clause (i), the vital national interests of the United States require that subsection (a) not be applied with respect to that country.

"(B) A bilateral narcotics agreement referred to in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) is an agreement between the United States and a foreign country in which the foreign country agrees to take specific activities, including, where applicable, efforts to—

"(i) reduce drug production, drug consumption, and drug trafficking within its territory, including activities to address illicit crop eradication and crop substitution;

"(ii) increase drug interdiction and enforcement;

"(iii) increase drug treatment;

"(iv) increase the identification of and elimination of illicit drug laboratories;

"(v) increase the identification and elimination of the trafficking of precursor chemicals for the use in production of illegal drugs;

"(vi) increase cooperation with United States drug enforcement officials; and

"(vii) where applicable, increase participation in extradition treaties, mutual legal assistance provisions directed at money laundering, sharing of evidence, and other initiatives for cooperative drug enforcement.

"(C) A country which in the previous year was designated as a major drug producing country or a major drug-transit country may not be determined to be cooperating fully under subparagraph (A)(i) unless it has in place a bilateral narcotics agreement with the United States or a multilateral agreement which achieves the objectives of subparagraph (B).

"(D) If the President makes a certification with respect to a country pursuant to subparagraph (A)(ii), he shall include in such certification—

"(i) a full and complete description of the vital national interests placed at risk if action is taken pursuant to subsection (a) with respect to that country; and

"(ii) a statement weighing the risk described in clause (i) against the risks posed to the vital national interests of the United States by the failure of such country to cooperate fully with the United States in combating narcotics or to take adequate steps to combat narcotics on its own.

"(E) The President may make a certification under subparagraph (A)(i) with respect to a major drug producing country or drug-transit country which is also a producer of licit opium only if the President determines that such country has taken steps to prevent significant diversion of its licit cultivation and production into the illicit market, maintains production and stockpiles at levels no higher than those consistent with licit market demand, and prevents illicit cultivation and production.

"(2) In determining whether to make the certification required by paragraph (1) with respect to a country, the President shall consider the following:

"(A) Have the actions of the government of that country resulted in the maximum reductions in illicit drug production which were determined to be achievable pursuant to section 481(e)(4) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961? In the case of a major drug producing country, the President shall give foremost consideration, in determining whether to make the certification required by paragraph (1), to whether the government of that country has taken actions which have resulted in such reductions.

"(B) Has that government taken the legal and law enforcement measures to enforce in its territory, to the maximum extent possible, the elimination of illicit cultivation and the suppression of illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, as evidenced by seizures of such drugs and substances and of illicit laboratories and the arrest and prosecution of violators involved in the traffic in such drugs and substances significantly affecting the United States?

"(C) Has that government taken the legal and law enforcement steps necessary to eliminate, to the maximum extent possible, the laundering in that country of drug-related profits or drug-related moneys, as evidenced by—

"(i) the enactment and enforcement by that government of laws prohibiting such conduct,

"(ii) that government entering into, and cooperating under the terms of, mutual legal assistance agreements with the United States governing (but not limited to) money laundering, and

"(iii) the degree to which that government otherwise cooperates with United States law enforcement authorities on anti-money laundering efforts?

"(D) Has that government taken the legal and law enforcement steps necessary to eliminate, to the maximum extent possible, bribery and other forms of public corruption which facilitate the production, processing, or shipment of narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances, or which discourage the investigation and prosecution of such acts, as evidenced by the enactment and enforcement of laws prohibiting such conduct?

"(E) Has that government, as a matter of government policy, encouraged or facilitated the production or distribution of illicit narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances?

"(F) Does any senior official of that government engage in, encourage, or facilitate the production or distribution of illicit narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances?

"(G) Has that government investigated aggressively all cases in which any member of an agency of the United States Government engaged in drug enforcement activities since January 1, 1985, has been the victim of acts or threats of violence, inflicted by or with the complicity of any law enforcement or other officer of such country or any political subdivision thereof, and has energetically sought to bring the perpetrators of such offense or offenses to justice?

"(H) Having been requested to do so by the United States Government, does that government fail to provide reasonable cooperation to lawful activities of United States drug enforcement agents, including the refusal of permission to such agents engaged in interdiction of aerial smuggling into the United States to pursue suspected aerial smugglers a reasonable distance into the airspace of the requested country?

"(I) Has that government made necessary changes in legal codes in order to enable law enforcement officials to move more effectively against narcotics traffickers, such as new conspiracy laws and new asset seizure laws?

"(J) Has that government expeditiously processed United States extradition requests relating to narcotics trafficking?

"(K) Has that government refused to protect or give haven to any known drug traffickers, and has it expeditiously processed extradition requests relating to narcotics trafficking made by other countries?".

(b) CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW PERIOD.—Section 802(b) of that Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3) by striking out "30 days" and inserting in lieu thereof "45 days";

(2) in paragraph (4)(A) by striking out "30 days" and inserting in lieu thereof "45 days"; and

(3) in paragraph (4)(B) by striking out "30 days" and inserting in lieu thereof "45 days".

(c) DETERMINING MAJOR DRUG-TRANSIT COUNTRIES.—Section 802 of that Act is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) For each calendar year, the Secretary of State, after consultation with the appropriate committees of the Congress, shall establish numerical standards and other guidelines for determining which countries will be considered to be major drug-transit countries under section 805(3) (A) and (B).".

Subtitle F—Miscellaneous Provisions Relating to Assistance Programs

SEC. 4501. REPORTING ON TRANSFER OF UNITED STATES ASSETS.

(a) 15-DAY ADVANCE NOTIFICATION.—Any transfer by the United States Government to a foreign country for narcotics control purposes of any property seized by or otherwise forfeited to the United States Government in connection with narcotics-related activity shall be subject to the regular reprogramming procedures applicable under section 634A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

(b) ANNUAL REPORTS.—Section 4601 of this title requires that all such transfers be reported annually to the Congress.

SEC. 4502. IMPORTANCE OF SUPPRESSING INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS TRAFFICKING.

Section 481(a)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (C) through (E), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following:

"(B) suppression of international narcotics trafficking is among the most important foreign policy objectives of the United States;".

SEC. 4503. PROHIBITION ON ASSISTANCE TO DRUG TRAFFICKERS.

Chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended by section 4206 of this title, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 487. PROHIBITION ON ASSISTANCE TO DRUG TRAFFICKERS.

"(a) Prohibition.—The President shall take all reasonable steps to ensure that assistance under this Act and the Arms Export Control Act is not provided to or through any individual or entity that the President knows or has reason to believe—

"(1) has been convicted of a violation of, or a conspiracy to violate, any law or regulation of the United States, a State or the District of Columbia, or a foreign country relating narcotic or psychotropic drugs or other controlled substances (as defined in section 481(i)(3) of this Act); or

"(2) is or has been an illicit trafficker in any such controlled substance or is or has been a knowing assistor, abettor, conspirator, or colluder with others in the illicit trafficking in any such substance.

"(b) Regulations.—The President shall issue regulations specifying the steps to be taken in carrying out this section.

"(c) Congressional Review of Regulations.—Regulations issued pursuant to subsection (b) shall be submitted to the Congress before they take effect.".

SEC. 4504. PROCUREMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS CONTROL ASSISTANCE.

The Congress urges the Secretary of State to take appropriate corrective action to improve the Department of State's procurement operations in order to assure that the procurement of property or services for use in providing assistance under chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to international narcotics control assistance) is timely, efficient, and in accordance with applicable procurement statutes and regulations.

SEC. 4505. PROHIBITION ON USE OF NARCOTICS CONTROL ASSISTANCE TO ACQUIRE REAL PROPERTY.

Chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended by sections 4206 and 4503 of this title, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 488. PROHIBITION ON USE OF NARCOTICS CONTROL ASSISTANCE TO ACQUIRE REAL PROPERTY.

"Funds made available to carry out this chapter may not be used to acquire (by purchase, lease, or other means) any real property for use by foreign military, paramilitary, or law enforcement forces.".

SEC. 4506. REIMBURSEMENT FOR DOD SERVICES USED IN PROVIDING INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS CONTROL ASSISTANCE.

Section 632(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by inserting after "actual cost," the following: "or, in the case of services procured from the Department of Defense to carry out chapter 8 of part I, the amount of the additional costs incurred by the Department of Defense in providing such services,".

SEC. 4507. PERMISSIBLE USES OF AIRCRAFT AND OTHER EQUIPMENT.

Chapter 8 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended by sections 4206, 4503, and 4505 of this title, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 489. PERMISSIBLE USES OF AIRCRAFT AND OTHER EQUIPMENT.

"(a) In General.—The President shall take all reasonable steps to ensure that aircraft and other equipment made available to foreign countries under this chapter are used only in ways that are consistent with the purposes for which such equipment was made available.

"(b) Reports.—In the reports submitted pursuant to subsection (e), the President shall discuss—

"(1) any evidence indicating misuse by a foreign country of aircraft or other equipment made available under this chapter, and

"(2) the actions taken by the United States Government to prevent future misuse of such equipment by that foreign country.

"(c) Regulations.—The President shall issue regulations specifying the steps to be taken in carrying out this section.

"(d) Congressional Review of Regulations.—Regulations issued pursuant to subsection (c) shall be submitted to the Congress before they take effect.".

Subtitle G—Department of State Activities

SEC. 4601. COORDINATION OF ALL UNITED STATES ANTI-NARCOTICS ASSISTANCE TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

(a) Coordination.—Consistent with subtitle A of title I of this Act, the Secretary of State shall be responsible for coordinating all assistance provided by the United States Government to support international efforts to combat illicit narcotics production or trafficking.

(b) Annual Reports.—

(1) Requirement for reports.—At the time that the report required by section 481(e) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is submitted each year, the Secretary of State, in consultation with appropriate United States Government agencies, shall report to the appropriate committees of the Congress on the assistance provided by the United States Government during the preceding fiscal year to support international efforts to combat illicit narcotics production or trafficking.

(2) Specific items to be included.—(A) Each report pursuant to this subsection shall specify the amount and nature of the assistance provided.

(B) Each report pursuant to this subsection shall include, for each country which is a significant direct or indirect source of illicit narcotic and psychotropic drugs and other controlled substances significantly affecting the United States, a section prepared by the Drug Enforcement Administration, a section prepared by the Customs Service, and a section prepared by the Coast Guard, which describes in detail—

(i) the assistance provided or to be provided (as the case may be) to such country by that agency, and

(ii) the assistance provided or to be provided (as the case may be) to that agency by such country, with respect to narcotic control efforts during the preceding fiscal year, the current fiscal year, and the next fiscal year.

(C) Each report required by this subsection shall also list all transfers, which were made by the United States Government during the preceding fiscal year, to a foreign country for narcotics control purposes of any property seized by or otherwise forfeited to the United States Government in connection with narcotics-related activity, including an estimate of the fair market value and physical condition of each item of property transferred.

(3) Reports may be classified.—The reports required by this subsection may be provided on a classified basis to the extent necessary.

(c) Rule of Construction.—Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to limit or impair the authority or responsibility of any other Federal agency with respect to law enforcement, domestic security operations, or intelligence activities as defined in Executive Order 12333.

SEC. 4602. REWARDS FOR INFORMATION CONCERNING NARCOTICS-RELATED OFFENSES COMMITTED OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

Section 36(g) of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 is amended by amending the second sentence to read as follows: "In addition to the amount authorized to be appropriated by the preceding sentence, there are authorized to be appropriated, without fiscal year limitation, $5,000,000 for 'Administration of Foreign Affairs' for use in paying rewards for information described in subsection (b)(1).".

SEC. 4603. DENIAL OF PASSPORTS TO CERTAIN CONVICTED DRUG TRAFFICKERS.

Title I of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 42 as section 43; and

(2) by inserting after section 41 the following:

"SEC. 42. DENIAL OF PASSPORTS TO CERTAIN CONVICTED DRUG TRAFFICKERS.

"(a) Ineligibility for Passport.—

"(1) In general.—A passport may not be issued to an individual who is convicted of an offense described in subsection (b) during the period described in subsection (c) if the individual used a passport or otherwise crossed an international border in committing the offense.

"(2) Passport revocation.—The Secretary of State shall revoke a passport previously issued to an individual who is ineligible to receive a passport under paragraph (1).

"(b) Drug Law Offenses.—

"(1) Felonies.—Subsection (a) applies with respect to any individual convicted of a Federal drug offense, or a State drug offense, if the offense is a felony.

"(2) Certain misdemeanors.—Subsection (a) also applies with respect to an individual convicted of a Federal drug offense, or a State drug offense, if the offense is misdemeanor, but only if the Secretary of State determines that subsection (a) should apply with respect to that individual on account of that offense. This paragraph does not apply to an individual's first conviction for a misdemeanor which involves only possession of a controlled substance.

"(c) Period of Ineligibility.—Subsection (a) applies during the period that the individual—

"(1) is imprisoned, or is legally required to be imprisoned, as the result of the conviction for the offense described in subsection (b); or

"(2) is on parole or other supervised release after having been imprisoned as the result of that conviction.

"(d) Emergency and Humanitarian Exceptions.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), the Secretary of State may issue a passport, in emergency circumstances or for humanitarian reasons, to an individual with respect to whom that subsection applies.

"(e) Definitions.—As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'controlled substance' has the same meaning as is provided in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802);

"(2) the term 'Federal drug offense' means a violation of—

"(A) the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) or the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.);

"(B) any other Federal law involving controlled substances; or

"(C) subchapter II of chapter 53 of title 31, United States Code (commonly referred to as the 'Bank Secrecy Act'), or section 1956 or section 1957 of title 18, United States Code (commonly referred to as the 'Money Laundering Act'), if the Secretary of State determines that the violation is related to illicit production of or trafficking in a controlled substance;

"(3) the term 'felony' means a criminal offense punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year;

"(4) the term 'imprisoned' means an individual is confined in or otherwise restricted to a jail-type institution, a half-way house, a treatment facility, or another institution, on a full or part-time basis, pursuant to the sentence imposed as the result of a conviction;

"(5) the term 'misdemeanor' means a criminal offense other than a felony;

"(6) the term 'State drug offense' means a violation of State law involving the manufacture, distribution, or possession of a controlled substance; and

"(7) the term 'State law' means the law of a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, or a territory or possession of the United States.".

SEC. 4604. MACHINE-READABLE DOCUMENT BORDER SECURITY PROGRAM.

(a) Requirement To Develop Program.—(1) The Department of State, the United States Customs Service, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service shall develop a comprehensive machine-readable travel and identity document border security program that will improve border entry and departure control through automated data capture of machine-readable travel and identity documents.

(2) Within 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Department of State, the Customs Service, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service shall jointly submit a detailed implementation plan to the Congress and the President regarding how they intend to carry out the program required by this section.

(3) The border security program required by this section shall include an integrated cooperative data exchange system that will incorporate law enforcement data on narcotics traffickers, terrorists, convicted criminals, fugitives, and others currently documented in the Lookout Systems of all three agencies and departments.

(4) In developing the border security program mandated in this section, the agencies and departments shall ensure that at least the following documents shall be integrated into the program and be machine-readable: border crossing cards; alien registration; pilots licenses; passports; and visas.

(b) Agencies That Will Contribute Law Enforcement Data for the System.—The following agencies and organizations shall contribute appropriate law enforcement data to the integrated cooperative data exchange system mandated in this section and shall update such information into the system on no less than a monthly basis:

(1) The Drug Enforcement Administration.

(2) The Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(3) The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms.

(4) The Internal Revenue Service.

(5) The Federal Aviation Administration.

(6) The United States Marshals Service.

(7) The United States Coast Guard.

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $23,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 for the development, procurement, and implementation of a machine-readable travel and identity document border security program. Of this amount $7,000,000 shall be available only for the United States Customs Service, $7,000,000 shall be available only for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and $9,000,000 shall be available only for the Department of State to carry out the provisions of this section.

(2) The amounts authorized by paragraph (1) are in addition to other amounts authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1989.

(d) Continuing Full Implementation Required.—All agencies participating in the development and implementation of the border security program and systems mandated in this section shall maintain their participation and contributions to the program and systems authorized under this section at full implementation levels in fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992, subject to the availability of appropriations.

SEC. 4605. EXTRADITION AND MUTUAL LEGAL ASSISTANCE TREATIES AND MODEL COMPREHENSIVE ANTIDRUG LAWS.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) section 133 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987 (enacted August 16, 1985), directed the Secretary of State to increase United States efforts to negotiate updated extradition treaties relating to narcotics offenses with each major drug-producing country;

(2) section 803 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989 (enacted December 22, 1987) directed the Secretary of State to ensure that an objective of the United States diplomatic mission in each major illicit drug producing or major drug-transit country be to ensure that drug traffickers can be extradited to the United States; and

(3) although some progress has been made pursuant to these directives in increasing international law enforcement cooperation with respect to illicit drug production and trafficking, much greater international law enforcement cooperation is required in combating the illicit drug problem.

(b) Greater Emphasis Required.—Therefore, the Congress directs the Secretary of State to place greater emphasis on updating extradition treaties, and on negotiating mutual legal assistance treaties, with major illicit drug producing countries and major drug-transit countries.

(c) Model Treaties and Antidrug Laws.—The Secretary of State and the Attorney General shall jointly develop a model extradition treaty with respect to narcotics-related violations (including extradition of host country nationals), a model mutual legal assistance treaty, and model comprehensive anti-narcotics legislation. The Secretary of State shall distribute such treaties and legislation to each United States mission abroad.

(d) Report to Congress.—The Secretary of State shall report to the Congress, not later than six months after the date of enactment of this Act, on actions taken to carry out this section.

SEC. 4606. OVERSEAS INVESTIGATIVE PROGRAM.

It is the sense of the Congress that Regional Security Officers and other security personnel at United States embassies and other civilian posts abroad should be directed to expand their investigative activities with respect to illicit drug use and trafficking by United States Government personnel and their dependents.

SEC. 4607. ASSIGNMENT OF MORE DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION AGENTS TO UNITED STATES EMBASSIES.

The Congress urges the Secretary of State to permit the assignment of additional Drug Enforcement Administration agents to United States diplomatic missions in those foreign countries where illicit narcotics production or trafficking is, or is likely to become, a significant problem.

Subtitle H—International Banking Matters

SEC. 4701. INTERNATIONAL CURRENCY TRANSACTION REPORTING.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the success of cash transaction and money laundering control statutes in the United States has been significant; and

(2) the United States should play a leadership role in the development of an international system of a similar kind.

(b) Purpose.—It is the purpose of this section to urge the United States Government, to the maximum extent practicable, to seek the active cooperation of other countries in the enforcement of these statutes, since only a truly multilateral approach can be effective in eliminating bank haven loopholes through which money launderers can escape.

(c) Establishment of International Agency.—The Congress urges the Secretary of the Treasury to negotiate with finance ministers of foreign countries to establish an international currency control agency to—

(1) serve as a central source of information and database for international drug enforcement agencies;

(2) collect and analyze currency transaction reports filed by member countries; and

(3) encourage the adoption, by member countries, of uniform cash transaction and money laundering statutes.

(d) Maintenance of Domestic Effort.—While establishing a multilateral agency will be the most effective method of combatting money laundering, the United States must itself continue to do everything it can to curb international money laundering.

SEC. 4702. RESTRICTIONS ON LAUNDERING OF UNITED STATES CURRENCY.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that international currency transactions, especially in United States currency, that involve the proceeds of narcotics trafficking fuels trade in narcotics in the United States and worldwide and consequently is a threat to the national security of the United States.

(b) Purpose.—The purpose of this section is to provide for international negotiations that would expand access to information on transactions involving large amounts of United States currency wherever those transactions occur worldwide.

(c) Negotiations.—(1) The Secretary of the Treasury (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall enter into negotiations with the appropriate financial supervisory agencies and other officials of any foreign country the financial institutions of which do business in United States currency. Highest priority shall be attached to countries whose financial institutions the Secretary determines, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Director of National Drug Control Policy, may be engaging in currency transactions involving the proceeds of international narcotics trafficking, particularly United States currency derived from drug sales in the United States.

(2) The purposes of negotiations under this subsection are—

(A) to reach one or more international agreements to ensure that foreign banks and other financial institutions maintain adequate records of large United States currency transactions, and

(B) to establish a mechanism whereby such records may be made available to United States law enforcement officials.

In carrying out such negotiations, the Secretary should seek to enter into and further cooperative efforts, voluntary information exchanges, the use of letters rogatory, and mutual legal assistance treaties.

(d) Reports.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit an interim report to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate on progress in the negotiations under subsection (c). Not later than 2 years after such enactment, the Secretary shall submit a final report to such Committees and the President on the outcome of those negotiations and shall identify, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Director of National Drug Control Policy, countries—

(1) with respect to which the Secretary determines there is evidence that the financial institutions in such countries are engaging in currency transactions involving the proceeds of international narcotics trafficking; and

(2) which have not reached agreement with United States authorities on a mechanism for exchanging adequate records on international currency transactions in connection with narcotics investigations and proceedings.

(e) Authority.—If after receiving the advice of the Secretary and in any case at the time of receipt of the Secretary's report, the Secretary determines that a foreign country—

(1) has jurisdiction over financial institutions that are substantially engaging in currency transactions that effect the United States involving the proceeds of international narcotics trafficking;

(2) such country has not reached agreement on a mechanism for exchanging adequate records on international currency transactions in connection with narcotics investigations and proceedings; and

(3) such country is not negotiating in good faith to reach such an agreement, the President shall impose appropriate penalties and sanctions, including temporarily or permanently—

(1) prohibiting such persons, institutions or other entities in such countries from participating in any United States dollar clearing or wire transfer system; and

(2) prohibiting such persons, institutions or entities in such countries from maintaining an account with any bank or other financial institution chartered under the laws of the United States or any State.

Any penalties or sanctions so imposed may be delayed or waived upon certification of the President to the Congress that it is in the national interest to do so. Financial institutions in such countries that maintain adequate records shall be exempt from such penalties and sanctions.

(f) Definitions.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) The term "United States currency" means Federal Reserve Notes and United States coins.

(2) The term "adequate records" means records of United States' currency transactions in excess of $10,000 including the identification of the person initiating the transaction, the person's business or occupation, and the account or accounts affected by the transaction, or other records of comparable effect.

(g) Sunset.—The authority given the President in subsection (e) shall expire on June 30, 1994.

SEC. 4703. EXPORT-IMPORT BANK FINANCING FOR SALES OF DEFENSE ARTICLES AND SERVICES FOR ANTI-NARCOTICS PURPOSES.

Section 2(b)(6) of the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945 (12 U.S.C. 635(b)(6)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" before "The Bank";

(2) by striking "paragraph" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) Subparagraph (A), and section 32 of the Arms Export Control Act, shall not apply to any sale of defense articles or services if—

"(i) the Bank is requested to provide a guarantee or insurance for the sale;

"(ii) the President determines that the defense articles or services are being sold primarily for anti-narcotics purposes;

"(iii) section 481(h)(5) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 does not apply with respect to the purchasing country;

"(iv) the President determines, in accordance with subparagraph (C), that the sale is in the national interest of the United States;

"(v) the Bank determines that, notwithstanding the provision of a guarantee or insurance for the sale, not more than 5 percent of the guarantee and insurance authority available to the Bank in any fiscal year will be used by the Bank to support the sale of defense articles and services; and

"(vi) the sale is made on or before September 30, 1990.

"(C) In determining whether a sale of defense articles or services would be in the national interest of the United States, the President shall take into account whether the sale would—

"(i) be consistent with the anti-narcotics policy of the United States;

"(ii) involve the end use of a defense article or service in a major illicit drug producing or major drug-transit country (as defined in section 481(i) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961); and

"(iii) be made to a country with a democratic form of government.

"(D)(i) The Board shall not give approval to guarantee or insure a sale of defense articles or services unless—

"(I) the President determines, in accordance with subparagraph (C), that it is in the national interest of the United States for the Bank to provide such guarantee or insurance; and

"(II) such determination has been reported to the Speaker and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, not less than 25 days of continuous session of the Congress before the date of such approval.

"(ii) For purposes of clause (i), continuity of a session of the Congress shall be considered as broken only by an adjournment of the Congress sine die, and the days on which either House is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain shall be excluded in the computation of the 25-day period referred to in such sentence.

"(E) The provision of a guarantee or insurance under subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to be the provision of security assistance for purposes of section 502B of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (relating to governments which engage in a consistent pattern of gross violations of international recognized human rights).

"(F) To the extent that defense articles or services for which a guarantee or insurance is provided under subparagraph (B) are used for a purpose other than anti-narcotics purposes, they may be used only for those purposes for which defense articles and defense services sold under the Arms Export Control Act (relating to the foreign military sales program) may be used under section 4 of such Act.

"(G) As used in this paragraph, the term 'defense articles and services' means articles, services, and related technical data that are designated as defense articles and defense services pursuant to sections 38 and 47(7) of the Arms Export Control Act and listed on the United States Munitions List (part 121 of title 22 of the Code of Federal Regulations).".

Subtitle I—Miscellaneous Provisions

SEC. 4801. INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY ACTIONS DIRECTED AT ILLICIT INTERNATIONAL DRUG TRAFFICKING.

It is the sense of the Congress that, given the magnitude of the illicit drug problem and the threat it poses to the national security of the United States, agencies of the intelligence community should be more actively involved in the effort to combat illicit international drug trafficking.

SEC. 4802. CORRECTION OF TECHNICAL ERRORS IN PRIOR ACTS.

(a) Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986.—(1) Section 2015(b)(1) of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 is amended by striking out "effects" and inserting in lieu thereof "efforts".

(2) Section 2030(b) of that Act is amended by striking out "subsection (A)(4)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a)(4)".

(b) 1986 Drug Act Amendments to Foreign Assistance Act.—Section 481(i)(4)(vi) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (as amended by section 2005 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986) is amended by striking out "section 1049(c)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 104(c)(2)".

SEC. 4803. RESOURCES FOR CERTAIN DRUG CONTROL ACTIVITIES.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) there has been a severe, cancer-like growth of youth gangs who abuse, transport, and traffic in illegal drugs;

(2) such youth gangs engage in acts of violence, often on a random basis, resulting in death or serious bodily injury to thousands of people, as well as terrorizing tens of thousands of others;

(3) such youth gangs have spread their activities from southern California to more than 50 cities throughout the United States, thereby clearly indicating that the threat posed by these gangs is national in nature, requiring a strong Federal response;

(4) stopping drugs at the source is one of the critical elements of our Government's war on drugs; and

(5) the Airwing Operations of the Bureau of International Narcotics Matters in the Department of State is an important tool of our Government's policy against narcotics trafficking.

(b) REVIEW.—It is, therefore, the sense of the Congress that the Director of National Drug Control Policy should review the entire drug control problem to determine priorities for new resources or shifting of existing resources, giving particular attention to—

(1) planning for and assistance to the Airwing Operations of the Bureau of International Narcotics Matters in the Department of State; and

(2) assistance to control the present and growing threat posed to the Nation by youth gangs which traffic in illegal drugs.

(c) ADDITIONAL RESOURCES.—Based upon his findings, the Director of National Drug Control Policy should consider, as necessary, recommending significant resources in addition to those specifically allocated in this Act.

SEC. 4804. CONSISTENCY WITH INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

(a) In prescribing regulations under subtitle D of title V of this Act, the head of the appropriate agency—

(1) shall only establish requirements that are consistent with the international obligations of the United States, and

(2) shall take into consideration any applicable laws and regulations of foreign countries.

(b) Section 5152 shall not be construed as conferring extraterritorial application of the provisions of such section.

Subtitle A—Opposition to Legalization and Public Awareness

SEC. 5011. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS OPPOSING LEGALIZATION OF DRUGS.

The Congress finds that legalization of illegal drugs, on the Federal or State level, is an unconscionable surrender in a war in which, for the future of our country and the lives of our children, there can be no substitute for total victory.

SEC. 5012. PUBLIC AWARENESS CAMPAIGN.

The Director of National Drug Control Policy shall within 90 days after confirmation by the Senate develop a program to inform the American public of the provisions of this Act pertaining to penalties for the use or possession of illegal drugs.

Subtitle B—National Commission on Drug-Free Schools

SEC. 5051. NATIONAL COMMISSION ON DRUG-FREE SCHOOLS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION.—There is established a National Commission on Drug-Free Schools (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission").

(b) MEMBERSHIP OF THE COMMISSION.—(1) The Commission shall consist of the following 26 members:

(A) The Secretary of Education (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary").

(B) The Director of National Drug Control Policy (hereinafter referred to as the "Director").

(C) Sixteen individuals appointed by the Secretary and the Director.

(D) Four members of the House of Representatives, of which 2 members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and 2 members shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(E) Four members of the Senate, of which 2 members shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate and 2 members shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate.

(2) The Secretary and the Director shall cochair the Commission.

(3) The members of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(C) shall consist of—

(A) experts in the fields of drug abuse prevention and education;

(B) representatives of State and local school authorities;

(C) representatives of parent-teacher associations;

(D) representatives of national education organizations;

(E) representatives of community groups with demonstrated records in drug abuse and prevention education;

(F) representatives of law enforcement officials; and

(G) other appropriate individuals as determined by the Secretary and the Director.

(c) APPOINTMENTS.—Members shall be appointed to the Commission not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) VACANCIES.—A vacancy in the Commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment was made. A vacancy in the Commission shall not affect the powers of the Commission.

(e) QUORUM.—Fourteen members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may hold hearings.

(f) DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall—

(1) develop recommendations of criteria for identifying drug-free schools and campuses;

(2) develop recommendations for identifying model programs to meet such criteria;

(3) make such other findings, recommendations, and proposals as the Commission deems necessary to carry out the provisions of this section; and

(4) prepare and submit a final report pursuant to subsection (i).

(g) COMPENSATION.—(1) Each member of the Commission who is not an officer or employee of the United States shall be compensated at a rate established by the Commission not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for grade GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) during which such member is engaged in the actual performance of duties as a member of the Commission. Each member of the Commission who is an officer or employee of the United States shall receive no additional compensation for service on the Commission.

(2) While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of duties for the Commission, all members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at a rate established by the Commission not to exceed the rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(h) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—(1) The Commission shall appoint an Executive Director who shall be compensated at a rate established by the Commission not to exceed the rate of basic pay prescribed for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(3) Subject to such rules as may be issued by the Commission, the cochairmen may procure temporary and intermittent services of experts and consultants.

(4) Upon request of the cochairmen of the Commission, the head of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality shall make any of the facilities and services of such department, agency, or instrumentality available to the Commission and detail any of the personnel of such department, agency, or instrumentality to the Commission, on a nonreimbursable basis, to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties under this section.

(5) The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

(6) Service of an individual as a member of the Commission, or employment of an individual by the Commission as an attorney or expert in any business or professional field, on a part-time or full-time basis, with or without compensation, shall not be considered as service or employment bringing such individual within the provisions of any Federal law relating to conflicts of interest or otherwise imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of services, or the payment or receipt of compensation in connection with claims, proceedings, or matters involving the United States. Service as a member of the Commission, or as an employee of the Commission, shall not be considered service in an appointive or elective position in the Government for purposes of section 8344 of title 5, United States Code, or comparable provisions of Federal law.

(i) REPORT OF COMMISSION.—The Commission shall report the findings and recommendations determined under subsection (f)(3) as well as proposals for any legislative action necessary to implement the recommendations of the Commission to the President and the Congress not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act. The final report of the Commission shall include—

(1) recommended criteria for schools to meet to be considered drug-free, which may include, but shall not be limited to—

(A) guidelines for the establishment of a drug education program for all students in grades kindergarten through 12;

(B) a code of student conduct;

(C) referral to treatment for students found to be using drugs; and

(D) coordinated programs for drug use prevention involving parents, teachers, counselors, local law enforcement personnel, businesses, and community organizations;

(2) a discussion of such issues as—

(A) the proper relationship among schools, parents or guardians, and law enforcement officials;

(B) what corrective measures should be imposed on students found to be using drugs;

(C) whether the suspension of eligibility for student assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act upon conviction of a drug-related offense is a deterrent to drug use;

(D) any other measured response the Commission deems appropriate; and

(E) the potential effects of measured responses described in this paragraph on civil liberties, educational programs, nondrug-using students, and family relationships;

(3) a description of the assistance required by local school districts to establish drug-free schools and the manner in which local, State and Federal Government may provide such assistance; and

(4) a description of the feasibility of certain programs designed to enhance and raise self-esteem, self-confidence, independence, and responsibility among students.

(j) POWERS OF COMMISSION.—(1) For the purpose of carrying out this section, the Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before the Commission.

(2) Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action which the Commission is authorized to take by this subsection.

(3) The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this Act. Upon request of the cochairmen of the Commission, the head of such agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section. Such sums shall remain available until expended. Any new spending authority (within the meaning of section 401 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974) which is provided under this section shall be effective for any fiscal year only to the extent or in such amounts as are provided in appropriation Acts.

Subtitle C—Preventing Drug Abuse in Public Housing

CHAPTER 1—REGULATORY AND ENFORCEMENT PROVISIONS

SEC. 5101. TERMINATION OF TENANCY IN PUBLIC HOUSING.

Section 6(l) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437d(l) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(5) provide that a public housing tenant, any member of the tenant's household, or a guest or other person under the tenant's control shall not engage in criminal activity, including drug-related criminal activity, on or near public housing premises, while the tenant is a tenant in public housing, and such criminal activity shall be cause for termination of tenancy.

For purposes of paragraph (5), the term 'drug-related criminal activity' means the illegal manufacture, sale, distribution, use, or possession with intent to manufacture, sell, distribute, or use, of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)).".

SEC. 5102. STUDY OF PUBLIC HOUSING SECURITY ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall conduct a study of the extent to which security activities in public housing projects are funded under the performance funding system established under section 9 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437g).

(b) SPECIFIC REQUIREMENTS.—The study shall include an analysis of—

(1) the extent to which the performance funding system currently takes into account, and should take into account, costs associated with maintaining security, including the hiring of security personnel, investigators, and security liaisons with local law enforcement agencies;

(2) the extent to which public housing agencies have been compelled to shift funds from tenant services, building maintenance, or other eligible activities to security activities; and

(3) an estimate of the per unit additional cost necessary to enable all public housing agencies to provide adequate security.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall submit to the Congress a report setting forth the findings and recommendations of the Secretary as a result of the study conducted under this section.

SEC. 5103. REPORT ON IMPACT OF PUBLIC HOUSING LEASE AND GRIEVANCE REGULATION ON ABILITY OF PUBLIC HOUSING AGENCIES TO TAKE ACTION AGAINST TENANTS ENGAGING IN DRUG CRIMES.

The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall submit to the Congress a report on the impact of the implementation of the public housing tenancy and administrative grievance procedure regulations issued under section 6(k) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437d(k)) on the ability of public housing agencies to evict or take other appropriate action against tenants engaging in criminal activity, especially with respect to the manufacture, sale, distribution, use, or possession of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)). The report shall be submitted not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5104. ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES UNDER BUREAU OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM.

Section 501(b) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (as added by title VI of this Act) is amended—

(1) by inserting after paragraph (16) the following new paragraph:

"(17) addressing the problems of drug trafficking and the illegal manufacture of controlled substances in public housing;"; and

(2) by redesignating the succeeding paragraphs accordingly.

SEC. 5105. INCLUSION OF LEASEHOLD INTERESTS IN PROPERTY SUBJECT TO FORFEITURE UNDER CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.

Section 511(a)(7) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(a)(7)) is amended by inserting "(including any leasehold interest)" after "right, title, and interest".

CHAPTER 2—PUBLIC HOUSING DRUG ELIMINATION PILOT PROGRAM

SEC. 5121. SHORT TITLE.

This chapter may be cited as the "Public Housing Drug Elimination Act of 1988".

SEC. 5122. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the Federal Government has a duty to provide public housing that is decent, safe, and free from illegal drugs;

(2) public housing projects in many areas suffer from rampant drug-related crime;

(3) drug dealers are increasingly imposing a reign of terror on public housing tenants;

(4) the increase in drug-related crime not only leads to murders, muggings, and other forms of violence against tenants, but also to a deterioration of the physical environment that requires substantial government expenditures; and

(5) local law enforcement authorities often lack the resources to deal with the drug problem in public housing, particularly in light of the recent reductions in Federal aid to cities.

SEC. 5123. AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.

The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, may make grants to public housing agencies (including Indian housing authorities) for use in eliminating drug-related crime in public housing projects.

SEC. 5124. ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES.

A public housing agency may use a grant under this chapter for—

(1) the employment of security personnel in public housing projects;

(2) reimbursement of local law enforcement agencies for additional security and protective services for public housing projects;

(3) physical improvements in public housing projects which are specifically designed to enhance security;

(4) the employment of 1 or more individuals—

(A) to investigate drug-related crime on or about the real property comprising any public housing project; and

(B) to provide evidence relating to any such crime in any administrative or judicial proceeding;

(5) the provision of training, communications equipment, and other related equipment for use by voluntary public housing tenant patrols acting in cooperation with local law enforcement officials;

(6) innovative programs designed to reduce use of drugs in and around public housing projects; and

(7) providing funding to nonprofit public housing resident management corporation and tenant councils to develop security and drug abuse prevention programs involving site residents.

SEC. 5125. APPLICATIONS.

(a) In General.—To receive a grant under this chapter, a public housing agency shall submit an application to the Secretary, at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such additional information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Such application shall include a plan for addressing the problem of drug-related crime on the premises of public housing projects administered by the public housing agency.

(b) Criteria.—The Secretary shall approve applications under this chapter based upon—

(1) the extent of the crime problem in the facilities of the public housing project;

(2) the quality of the plan of the public housing agency to address crime in public housing projects;

(3) the capability of the public housing agency to carry out the plan; and

(4) the extent to which the local government and local community support the anticrime activities of the public housing agency.

SEC. 5126. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this chapter:

(1) Controlled substance.—The term "controlled substance" has the meaning given such term in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802).

(2) Drug-related crime.—The term "drug-related crime" means the illegal manufacture, sale, distribution, use, or possession with intent to manufacture, sell, distribute, or use, of a controlled substance.

(3) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

SEC. 5127. IMPLEMENTATION.

The Secretary shall issue regulations to implement this chapter within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5128. REPORT TO CONGRESS.

Not later than June 30, 1990, the Secretary, in consultation with the Director of National Drug Control Policy, shall submit to the Congress a report setting forth the activities carried out under the program established in this chapter. The report shall include any recommendations of the Secretary for revisions necessary to make the program more effective.

SEC. 5129. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this chapter $8,200,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1990. Any amount appropriated under this section shall remain available until expended.

CHAPTER 3—DRUG-FREE PUBLIC HOUSING

SEC. 5141. SHORT TITLE.

This chapter may be cited as the "Drug-Free Public Housing Act of 1988".

SEC. 5142. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

The purpose of this chapter is to reaffirm the principle that decent affordable shelter is a basic necessity, and the general welfare of the Nation and the health and living standards of its people require better coordination and training in drug prevention programs among the public officials and agencies responsible for administering the public housing programs of the Nation.

SEC. 5143. CLEARINGHOUSE ON DRUG ABUSE IN PUBLIC HOUSING.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall establish, in the Office of Public Housing in the Department of Housing and Urban Development, a clearinghouse to receive, collect, process, and assemble information regarding the abuse of controlled substances in public housing projects.

(b) Functions.—The clearinghouse established under subsection (a) shall—

(1) respond to inquiries by members of the public requesting assistance in investigating, studying, and working on the problem of the abuse of controlled substances; and

(2) receive, collect, process, assemble, and provide information on programs, authorities, institutions, and agencies, that may further assist members of the public requesting information from the clearinghouse.

SEC. 5144. REGIONAL TRAINING PROGRAM ON DRUG ABUSE IN PUBLIC HOUSING.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish a regional training program for the training of public housing officials, to better prepare and educate the officials to confront the widespread abuse of controlled substances in the communities in which the officials work.

(b) Operation.—The regional training program established under subsection (a) shall be conducted within 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act by a national training unit established by the Secretary.

SEC. 5145. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this chapter:

(1) Controlled substance.—The term "controlled substance" has the meaning given such term in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802).

(2) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

SEC. 5146. REGULATIONS.

Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall issue any regulations necessary to carry out this chapter.

Subtitle D—Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988

SEC. 5151. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988".

SEC. 5152. DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE REQUIREMENTS FOR FEDERAL CONTRACTORS.

(a) Drug-Free Workplace Requirement.—

(1) Requirement for persons other than individuals.—No person, other than an individual, shall be considered a responsible source, under the meaning of such term as defined in section 4(8) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(8)), for the purposes of being awarded a contract for the procurement of any property or services of a value of $25,000 or more from any Federal agency unless such person has certified to the contracting agency that it will provide a drug-free workplace by—

(A) publishing a statement notifying employees that the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance is prohibited in the person's workplace and specifying the actions that will be taken against employees for violations of such prohibition;

(B) establishing a drug-free awareness program to inform employees about—

(i) the dangers of drug abuse in the workplace;

(ii) the person's policy of maintaining a drug-free workplace;

(iii) any available drug counseling, rehabilitation, and employee assistance programs; and

(iv) the penalties that may be imposed upon employees for drug abuse violations;

(C) making it a requirement that each employee to be engaged in the performance of such contract be given a copy of the statement required by subparagraph (A);

(D) notifying the employee in the statement required by subparagraph (A), that as a condition of employment on such contract, the employee will—

(i) abide by the terms of the statement; and

(ii) notify the employer of any criminal drug statute conviction for a violation occurring in the workplace no later than 5 days after such conviction;

(E) notifying the contracting agency within 10 days after receiving notice under subparagraph (D)(ii) from an employee or otherwise receiving actual notice of such conviction;

(F) imposing a sanction on, or requiring the satisfactory participation in a drug abuse assistance or rehabilitation program by, any employee who is so convicted, as required by section 5154; and

(G) making a good faith effort to continue to maintain a drug-free workplace through implementation of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), and (F).

(2) Requirement for individuals.—No Federal agency shall enter into a contract with an individual unless such contract includes a certification by the individual that the individual will not engage in the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance in the performance of the contract.

(b) Suspension, Termination, or Debarment of the Contractor.—

(1) GROUNDS FOR SUSPENSION, TERMINATION, OR DEBARMENT.—Each contract awarded by a Federal agency shall be subject to suspension of payments under the contract or termination of the contract, or both, and the contractor thereunder or the individual who entered the contract with the Federal agency, as applicable, shall be subject to suspension or debarment in accordance with the requirements of this section if the head of the agency determines that—

(A) the contractor or individual has made a false certification under subsection (a);

(B) the contractor violates such certification by failing to carry out the requirements of subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), or (F) of subsection (a)(1); or

(C) such a number of employees of such contractor have been convicted of violations of criminal drug statutes for violations occurring in the workplace as to indicate that the contractor has failed to make a good faith effort to provide a drug-free workplace as required by subsection (a).

(2) CONDUCT OF SUSPENSION, TERMINATION, AND DEBARMENT PROCEEDINGS.—(A) If a contracting officer determines, in writing, that cause for suspension of payments, termination, or suspension or debarment exists, an appropriate action shall be initiated by a contracting officer of the agency, to be conducted by the agency concerned in accordance with the Federal Acquisition Regulation and applicable agency procedures.

(B) The Federal Acquisition Regulation shall be revised to include rules for conducting suspension and debarment proceedings under this subsection, including rules providing notice, opportunity to respond in writing or in person, and such other procedures as may be necessary to provide a full and fair proceeding to a contractor or individual in such proceeding.

(3) EFFECT OF DEBARMENT.—Upon issuance of any final decision under this subsection requiring debarment of a contractor or individual, such contractor or individual shall be ineligible for award of any contract by any Federal agency, and for participation in any future procurement by any Federal agency, for a period specified in the decision, not to exceed 5 years.

SEC. 5153. DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE REQUIREMENTS FOR FEDERAL GRANT RECIPIENTS.

(a) DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE REQUIREMENT.—

(1) PERSONS OTHER THAN INDIVIDUALS.—No person, other than an individual, shall receive a grant from any Federal agency unless such person has certified to the granting agency that it will provide a drug-free workplace by—

(A) publishing a statement notifying employees that the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance is prohibited in the grantee's workplace and specifying the actions that will be taken against employees for violations of such prohibition;

(B) establishing a drug-free awareness program to inform employees about—

(i) the dangers of drug abuse in the workplace;

(ii) the grantee's policy of maintaining a drug-free workplace;

(iii) any available drug counseling, rehabilitation, and employee assistance programs; and

(iv) the penalties that may be imposed upon employees for drug abuse violations;

(C) making it a requirement that each employee to be engaged in the performance of such grant be given a copy of the statement required by subparagraph (A);

(D) notifying the employee in the statement required by subparagraph (A), that as a condition of employment in such grant, the employee will—

(i) abide by the terms of the statement; and

(ii) notify the employer of any criminal drug statute conviction for a violation occurring in the workplace no later than 5 days after such conviction;

(E) notifying the granting agency within 10 days after receiving notice of a conviction under subparagraph (D)(ii) from an employee or otherwise receiving actual notice of such conviction;

(F) imposing a sanction on, or requiring the satisfactory participation in a drug abuse assistance or rehabilitation program by, any employee who is so convicted, as required by section 5154; and

(G) making a good faith effort to continue to maintain a drug-free workplace through implementation of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), and (F).

(2) INDIVIDUALS.—No Federal agency shall make a grant to any individual unless such individual certifies to the agency as a condition of such grant that the individual will not engage in the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance in conducting any activity with such grant.

(b) SUSPENSION, TERMINATION, OR DEBARMENT OF THE GRANTEE.—

(1) GROUNDS FOR SUSPENSION, TERMINATION, OR DEBARMENT.—Each grant awarded by a Federal agency shall be subject to suspension of payments under the grant or termination of the grant, or both, and the grantee thereunder shall be subject to suspension or debarment, in accordance with the requirements of this section if the agency head of the granting agency or his official designee determines, in writing, that—

(A) the grantee has made a false certification under subsection (a);

(B) the grantee violates such certification by failing to carry out the requirements of subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), or (G) of subsection (a)(1); or

(C) such a number of employees of such grantee have been convicted of violations of criminal drug statutes for violations occurring in the workplace as to indicate that the grantee has failed to make a good faith effort to provide a drug-free workplace as required by subsection (a)(1).

(2) CONDUCT OF SUSPENSION, TERMINATION, AND DEBARMENT PROCEEDINGS.—A suspension of payments, termination, or suspension or debarment proceeding subject to this subsection shall be conducted in accordance with applicable law, including Executive Order 12549 or any superseding Executive order and any regulations promulgated to implement such law or Executive order.

(3) EFFECT OF DEBARMENT.—Upon issuance of any final decision under this subsection requiring debarment of a grantee, such grantee shall be ineligible for award of any grant from any Federal agency and for participation in any future grant from any Federal agency for a period specified in the decision, not to exceed 5 years.

SEC. 5154. EMPLOYEE SANCTIONS AND REMEDIES.

A grantee or contractor shall, within 30 days after receiving notice from an employee of a conviction pursuant to section 5152(a)(1)(D)(ii) or 5153(a)(1)(D)(ii)—

(1) take appropriate personnel action against such employee up to and including termination; or

(2) require such employee to satisfactorily participate in a drug abuse assistance or rehabilitation program approved for such purposes by a Federal, State, or local health, law enforcement, or other appropriate agency.

SEC. 5155. WAIVER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A termination, suspension of payments, or suspension or debarment under this subtitle may be waived by the head of an agency with respect to a particular contract or grant if—

(1) in the case of a waiver with respect to a contract, the head of the agency determines under section 5152(b)(1), after the issuance of a final determination under such section, that suspension of payments, or termination of the contract, or suspension or debarment of the contractor, or refusal to permit a person to be treated as a responsible source for a contract, as the case may be, would severely disrupt the operation of such agency to the detriment of the Federal Government or the general public; or

(2) in the case of a waiver with respect to a grant, the head of the agency determines that suspension of payments, termination of the grant, or suspension or debarment of the grantee would not be in the public interest.

(b) EXCLUSIVE AUTHORITY.—The authority of the head of an agency under this section to waive a termination, suspension, or debarment shall not be delegated.

SEC. 5156. REGULATIONS.

Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this subtitle, the government-wide regulations governing actions under this subtitle shall be issued pursuant to the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 401 et seq.).

SEC. 5157. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this subtitle—

(1) the term "drug-free workplace" means a site for the performance of work done in connection with a specific grant or contract described in section 5152 or 5153 of an entity at which employees of such entity are prohibited from engaging in the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance in accordance with the requirements of this Act;

(2) the term "employee" means the employee of a grantee or contractor directly engaged in the performance of work pursuant to the provisions of the grant or contract described in section 5152 or 5153;

(3) the term "controlled substance" means a controlled substance in schedules I through V of section 202 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 812);

(4) the term "conviction" means a finding of guilt (including a plea of nolo contendere) or imposition of sentence, or both, by any judicial body charged with the responsibility to determine violations of the Federal or State criminal drug statutes;

(5) the term "criminal drug statute" means a criminal statute involving manufacture, distribution, dispensation, use, or possession of any controlled substance;

(6) the term "grantee" means the department, division, or other unit of a person responsible for the performance under the grant;

(7) the term "contractor" means the department, division, or other unit of a person responsible for the performance under the contract; and

(8) the term "Federal agency" means an agency as that term is defined in section 552(f) of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 5158. CONSTRUCTION OF SUBTITLE.

Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to require law enforcement agencies, if the head of the agency determines it would be inappropriate in connection with the agency's undercover operations, to comply with the provisions of this subtitle.

SEC. 5159. REPEAL OF LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.

Section 628 of Public Law 100-440 (relating to restrictions on the use of certain appropriated amounts) is amended—

(1) by striking "(a)" after "SEC. 628."; and

(2) by striking subsection (b).

SEC. 5160. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Sections 5152 and 5153 shall be effective 120 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle.

Subtitle E—President's Media Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention

SEC. 5201. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR PRESIDENT'S MEDIA COMMISSION ON ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE PREVENTION.

There are authorized to be appropriated for the President's Media Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention—

(1) $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989;

(2) $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990; and

(3) $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991.

Subtitle F—Drug-Free America Policy

SEC. 5251. UNITED STATES POLICY FOR A DRUG-FREE AMERICA BY 1995.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) approximately 37 million Americans used an illegal drug in the past year and more than 23 million Americans use illicit drugs at least monthly, including more than 6 million who use cocaine;

(2) half of all high school seniors have used illegal drugs at least once, and over 25 percent use drugs at least monthly;

(3) illicit drug use adds enormously to the national cost of health care and rehabilitation services;

(4) illegal drug use can result in a wide spectrum of extremely serious health problems, including disruption of normal heart rhythm, small lesions of the heart, high blood pressure, leaks of blood vessels in the brain, bleeding and destruction of brain cells, permanent memory loss, infertility, impotency, immune system impairment, kidney failure, and pulmonary damage, and in the most serious instances, heart attack, stroke, and sudden death;

(5) approximately 25 percent of all victims of AIDS acquired the disease through intravenous drug use;

(6) over 30,000 people were admitted to emergency rooms in 1986 with drug-related health problems, including nearly 10,000 for cocaine alone;

(7) there is a strong link between teenage suicide and use of illegal drugs;

(8) 10 to 15 percent of all highway fatalities involve drug use;

(9) illegal drug use is prevalent in the workplace and endangers fellow workers, national security, public safety, company morale, and production;

(10) it is estimated that 1 of every 10 American workers have their productivity impaired by substance abuse;

(11) it is estimated that drug users are 3 times as likely to be involved in on-the-job accidents, are absent from work twice as often, and incur 3 times the average level of sickness costs as non-users;

(12) the total cost to the economy of drug use is estimated to be over $100,000,000,000 annually;

(13) the connection between drugs and crime is also well-proven;

(14) the use of illicit drugs affects moods and emotions, chemically alters the brain, and causes loss of control, paranoia, reduction of inhibition, and unprovoked anger;

(15) drug-related homicides are increasing dramatically across the Nation;

(16) 8 of 10 men arrested for serious crimes in New York City test positive for cocaine use;

(17) illicit drug use is responsible for a substantially higher tax rate to pay for local law enforcement protection, interdiction, border control, and the cost of investigation, prosecution, confinement, and treatment;

(18) substantial increases in funding and resources have been made available in recent years to combat the drug problem, with spending for interdiction, law enforcement, and prevention programs up by 100 to 400 percent and these programs are producing results—

(A) seizures of cocaine are up from 1.7 tons in 1981 to 70 tons in 1987;

(B) seizures of heroin are up from 460 pounds in 1981 to 1,400 pounds in 1987;

(C) Drug Enforcement Administration drug convictions doubled between 1982 and 1986; and

(D) the average sentence for Federal cocaine convictions rose by 35 percent during this same period;

(19) despite the impressive rise in law enforcement efforts, the supply of illegal drugs has increased in recent years;

(20) the demand for drugs creates and sustains the illegal drug trade; and

(21) winning the drug war not only requires that we do more to limit supply, but that we focus our efforts to reduce demand.

(b) DECLARATION.—It is the declared policy of the United States Government to create a Drug-Free America by 1995.

Subtitle G—Denial of Federal Benefits to Drug Traffickers and Possessors.

SEC. 5301. DENIAL OF FEDERAL BENEFITS TO DRUG TRAFFICKERS AND POSSESSORS.

(a) DRUG TRAFFICKERS.—(1) Any individual who is convicted of any Federal or State offense consisting of the distribution of controlled substances (as such terms are defined for purposes of the Controlled Substances Act) shall—

(A) at the discretion of the court, upon the first conviction for such an offense be ineligible for any or all Federal benefits for up to 5 years after such conviction;

(B) at the discretion of the court, upon a second conviction for such an offense be ineligible for any or all Federal benefits for up to 10 years after such conviction; and

(C) upon a third or subsequent conviction for such an offense be permanently ineligible for all Federal benefits.

(2) The benefits which are denied under this subsection shall not include benefits relating to long-term drug treatment programs for addiction for any person who, if there is a reasonable body of evidence to substantiate such declaration, declares himself to be an addict and submits himself to a long-term treatment program for addiction, or is deemed to be rehabilitated pursuant to rules established by the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(b) DRUG POSSESSORS.—(1) Any individual who is convicted of any Federal or State offense involving the possession of a controlled substance (as such term is defined for purposes of the Controlled Substances Act) shall—

(A) upon the first conviction for such an offense and at the discretion of the court—

(i) be ineligible for any or all Federal benefits for up to one year;

(ii) be required to successfully complete an approved drug treatment program which includes periodic testing to insure that the individual remains drug free;

(iii) be required to perform appropriate community service; or

(iv) any combination of clauses (i), (ii), or (iii); and

(B) upon a second or subsequent conviction for such an offense be ineligible for all Federal benefits for up to 5 years after such conviction as determined by the court. The court shall continue to have the discretion in subparagraph (A) above. In imposing penalties and conditions under subparagraph (A), the court may require that the completion of the conditions imposed by clauses (ii) or (iii) be a requirement for the reinstatement of benefits under clause (i).

(2) The penalties and conditions which may be imposed under this subsection shall be waived in the case of a person who, if there is a reasonable body of evidence to substantiate such declaration, declares himself to be an addict and submits himself to a long-term treatment program for addiction, or is deemed to be rehabilitated pursuant to rules established by the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(c) SUSPENSION OF PERIOD OF INELIGIBILITY.—The period of ineligibility referred to in subsections (a) and (b) shall be suspended if the individual—

(A) completes a supervised drug rehabilitation program after becoming ineligible under this section;

(B) has otherwise been rehabilitated; or

(C) has made a good faith effort to gain admission to a supervised drug rehabilitation program, but is unable to do so because of inaccessibility or unavailability of such a program, or the inability of the individual to pay for such a program.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) the term "Federal benefit"—

(A) means the issuance of any grant, contract, loan, professional license, or commercial license provided by an agency of the United States or by appropriated funds of the United States; and

(B) does not include any retirement, welfare, Social Security, health, disability, veterans benefit, public housing, or other similar benefit, or any other benefit for which payments or services are required for eligibility; and

(2) the term "veterans benefit" means all benefits provided to veterans, their families, or survivors by virtue of the service of a veteran in the Armed Forces of the United States.

(e) INAPPLICABILITY OF THIS SECTION TO GOVERNMENT WITNESSES.—The penalties provided by this section shall not apply to any individual who cooperates or testifies with the Government in the prosecution of a Federal or State offense or who is in a Government witness protection program.

(f) INDIAN PROVISION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the obligation of the United States to any Indian or Indian tribe arising out of any treaty, statute, Executive order, or the trust responsibility of the United States owing to such Indian or Indian tribe. Nothing in this subsection shall exempt any individual Indian from the sanctions provided for in this section, provided that no individual Indian shall be denied any benefit under Federal Indian programs comparable to those described in subsections (d)(1)(B) or (d)(2) above.

(g) PRESIDENTIAL REPORT.—(1) On or before May 1, 1989, the President shall transmit to the Congress a report—

(A) delineating the role of State courts in implementing this section;

(B) describing the manner in which Federal agencies will implement and enforce the requirements of this section;

(C) detailing the means by which Federal and State agencies, courts, and law enforcement agencies will exchange and share the data and information necessary to implement and enforce the withholding of Federal benefits; and

(D) recommending any modifications to improve the administration of this section or otherwise achieve the goal of discouraging the trafficking and possession of controlled substances.

(2) No later than September 1, 1989, the Congress shall consider the report of the President and enact such changes as it deems appropriate to further the goals of this section.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The denial of Federal benefits set forth in this section shall take effect for convictions occurring after September 1, 1989.

TITLE VI—ANTI-DRUG ABUSE AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1988

SEC. 6001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Anti-Drug Abuse Amendments Act of 1988".

Subtitle A—Chemical Diversion and Trafficking

SEC. 6051. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Chemical Diversion and Trafficking Act of 1988".

SEC. 6052. REGULATION OF LISTED CHEMICALS AND CERTAIN MACHINES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 310 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 830) is amended to read as follows:

"REGULATION OF LISTED CHEMICALS AND CERTAIN MACHINES

"SEC. 310. (a)(1) Each regulated person who engages in a regulated transaction involving a listed chemical, a tableting machine, or an encapsulating machine shall keep a record of the transaction—

"(A) for 4 years after the date of the transaction, if the listed chemical is a precursor chemical or if the transaction involves a tableting machine or an encapsulating machine; and

"(B) for 2 years after the date of the transaction, if the listed chemical is an essential chemical.

"(2) A record under this subsection shall be retrievable and shall include the date of the regulated transaction, the identity of each party to the regulated transaction, a statement of the quantity and form of the listed chemical, a description of the tableting machine or encapsulating machine, and a description of the method of transfer. Such record shall be available for inspection and copying by the Attorney General.

"(3) It is the duty of each regulated person who engages in a regulated transaction to identify each other party to the transaction. It is the duty of such other party to present proof of identity to the regulated person. The Attorney General shall specify by regulation the types of documents and other evidence that constitute proof of identity for purposes of this paragraph.

"(b) Each regulated person shall report to the Attorney General, in such form and manner as the Attorney General shall prescribe by regulation—

"(1) any regulated transaction involving an extraordinary quantity of a listed chemical, an uncommon method of payment or delivery, or any other circumstance that the regulated person believes may indicate that the listed chemical will be used in violation of this title;

"(2) any proposed regulated transaction with a person whose description or other identifying characteristic the Attorney General furnishes in advance to the regulated person;

"(3) any unusual or excessive loss or disappearance of a listed chemical under the control of the regulated person; and

"(4) any regulated transaction in a tableting machine or an encapsulating machine.

Each report under paragraph (1) shall be made at the earliest practicable opportunity after the regulated person becomes aware of the circumstance involved. A regulated person may not complete a transaction with a person whose description or identifying characteristic is furnished to the regulated person under paragraph (2) unless the transaction is approved by the Attorney General. The Attorney General shall make available to regulated persons guidance documents describing transactions and circumstances for which reports are required under paragraph (1) and paragraph (3).

"(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), any information obtained by the Attorney General under this section which is exempt from disclosure under section 552(a) of title 5, United States Code, by reason of section 552(b)(4) of such title, is confidential and may not be disclosed to any person.

"(2) Information referred to in paragraph (1) may be disclosed only—

"(A) to an officer or employee of the United States engaged in carrying out this title, title III, or the customs laws;

"(B) when relevant in any investigation or proceeding for the enforcement of this title, title III, or the customs laws;

"(C) when necessary to comply with an obligation of the United States under a treaty or other international agreement; or

"(D) to a State or local official or employee in conjunction with the enforcement of controlled substances laws or precursor chemical laws.

"(3) The Attorney General shall—

"(A) take such action as may be necessary to prevent unauthorized disclosure of information by any person to whom such information is disclosed under paragraph (2); and

"(B) issue guidelines that limit, to the maximum extent feasible, the disclosure of proprietary business information, including the names or identities of United States exporters of listed chemicals, to any person to whom such information is disclosed under paragraph (2).

"(4) Any person who is aggrieved by a disclosure of information in violation of this section may bring a civil action against the violator for appropriate relief.

"(5) Notwithstanding paragraph (4), a civil action may not be brought under such paragraph against investigative or law enforcement personnel of the Drug Enforcement Administration.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 is amended by striking out the item relating to section 310 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"310. Regulation of listed chemicals and certain machines.".

SEC. 6053. NOTIFICATION, SUSPENSION OF SHIPMENT, AND PENALTIES WITH RESPECT TO IMPORTATION AND EXPORTATION OF LISTED CHEMICALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part A of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"NOTIFICATION, SUSPENSION OF SHIPMENT, AND PENALTIES WITH RESPECT TO IMPORTATION AND EXPORTATION OF LISTED CHEMICALS

"SEC. 1018. (a) Each regulated person who imports or exports a listed chemical shall notify the Attorney General of the importation or exportation not later than 15 days before the transaction is to take place.

"(b)(1) The Attorney General shall provide by regulation for circumstances in which the requirement of subsection (a) does not apply to a transaction between a regulated person and a regular customer or regular supplier of the regulated person. At the time of any importation or exportation constituting a transaction referred to in the preceding sentence, the regulated person shall notify the Attorney General of the transaction.

"(2) The regulations under this subsection shall provide that the initial notification under subsection (a) with respect to a customer or supplier of a regulated person shall, upon the expiration of the 15-day period, qualify the customer as a regular customer or regular supplier, unless the Attorney General otherwise notifies the regulated person in writing.

"(c)(1) The Attorney General may order the suspension of any importation or exportation of a listed chemical (other than a regulated transaction to which the requirement of subsection (a) does not apply by reason of subsection (b)) or may disqualify any regular customer or regular supplier on the ground that the chemical may be diverted to the clandestine manufacture of a controlled substance. From and after the time when the Attorney General provides written notice of the order (including a statement of the legal and factual basis for the order) to the regulated person, the regulated person may not carry out the transaction.

"(2) Upon written request to the Attorney General, a regulated person to whom an order applies under paragraph (1) is entitled to an agency hearing on the record in accordance with subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code. The hearing shall be held on an expedited basis and not later than 45 days after the request is made, except that the hearing may be held at a later time, if so requested by the regulated person.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATES AND SPECIAL RULES.—(1) Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall forward to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget proposed regulations required by the amendment made by subsection (a).

(2) Not later than 55 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall—

(A) review such proposed regulations of the Attorney General; and

(B) forward any comments and recommendations for modifications to the Attorney General.

(3) Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall publish the proposed final regulations required by the amendment made by subsection (a).

(4) Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall promulgate final regulations required by the amendment made by subsection (a).

(5) Subsection (a) of section 1018 of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section, shall take effect 90 days after the promulgation of the final regulations under paragraph (4).

(6) Each regulated person shall provide to the Attorney General the identity of any regular customer or regular supplier of the regulated person not later than 30 days after the promulgation of the final regulations under paragraph (4). Not later than 60 days after the end of such 30-day period, each regular customer and regular supplier so identified shall be a regular customer or regular supplier for purposes of any applicable exception from the requirement of subsection (a) of such section 1018, unless the Attorney General otherwise notifies the regulated person in writing.

(c) PENALTY FOR IMPORTATION OR EXPORTATION.—Section 1010 of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) Any person who knowingly or intentionally—

"(1) imports or exports a listed chemical with intent to manufacture a controlled substance in violation of this title or, in the case of an exportation, in violation of the law of the country to which the chemical is exported; or

"(2) imports or exports a listed chemical knowing, or having reasonable cause to believe, that the listed chemical will be used to manufacture a controlled substance in violation of this title or, in the case of an exportation, in violation of the law of the country to which the chemical is exported;

shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.".

(d) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO NOTIFY.—Section 1011 of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 961) is amended in the matter before paragraph (1) by inserting after "section 1004" the following: "or fails to notify the Attorney General of an importation or exportation under section 1018".

(e) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 is amended by adding at the end of the items relating to part A of title III the following new item:

"Sec. 1018. Notification, suspension of shipment, and penalties with respect to importation and exportation of listed chemicals.".

SEC. 6054. DEFINITIONS.

Section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (8), by inserting "or a listed chemical" after "a controlled substance";

(2) in paragraph (11), by inserting "or a listed chemical" after "a controlled substance" both places it appears; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(33) The term 'listed chemical' means any listed precursor chemical or listed essential chemical.

"(34) The term 'listed precursor chemical' means a chemical specified by regulation of the Attorney General as a chemical that is used in manufacturing a controlled substance in violation of this title and is critical to the creation of the controlled substances, and such term includes (until otherwise specified by regulation of the Attorney General, as considered appropriate by the Attorney General or upon petition to the Attorney General by any person) the following:

"(A) Anthranilic acid and its salts.

"(B) Benzyl cyanide.

"(C) Ephedrine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of optical isomers.

"(D) Ergonovine and its salts.

"(E) Ergotamine and its salts.

"(F) N-Acetylanthranilic acid and its salts.

"(G) Norpseudoephedrine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of optical isomers.

"(H) Phenylacetic acid and its salts.

"(I) Phenylpropanolamine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of optical isomers.

"(J) Piperidine and its salts.

"(K) Pseudoephedrine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of optical isomers.

"(L) 3,4-Methylenedioxyphenyl-2-propanone.

"(35) The term 'listed essential chemical' means a chemical specified by regulation of the Attorney General as a chemical that is used as a solvent, reagent, or catalyst in manufacturing a controlled substance in violation of this title, and such term includes (until otherwise specified by regulation of the Attorney General, as considered appropriate by the Attorney General or upon petition to the Attorney General by any person) the following chemicals:

"(A) Acetic anhydride.

"(B) Acetone.

"(C) Benzyl chloride.

"(D) Ethyl ether.

"(E) Hydriodic acid.

"(F) Potassium permanganate.

"(G) 2-Butanone.

"(H) Toluene.

"(36) The term 'regular customer' means, with respect to a regulated person, a customer with whom the regulated person has an established business relationship that is reported to the Attorney General.

"(37) The term 'regular supplier' means, with respect to a regulated person, a supplier with whom the regulated person has an established business relationship that is reported to the Attorney General.

"(38) The term 'regulated person' means a person who manufactures, distributes, imports, or exports a listed chemical, a tableting machine, or an encapsulating machine.

"(39) The term 'regulated transaction' means—

"(A) a distribution, receipt, sale, importation or exportation of a threshold amount, including a cumulative threshold amount for multiple transactions (as determined by the Attorney General, in consultation with the chemical industry and taking into consideration the quantities normally used for lawful purposes), of a listed chemical, except that such term does not include—

"(i) a domestic lawful distribution in the usual course of business between agents or employees of a single regulated person;

"(ii) a delivery of a listed chemical to or by a common or contract carrier for carriage in the lawful and usual course of the business of the common or contract carrier, or to or by a warehouseman for storage in the lawful and usual course of the business of the warehouseman, except that if the carriage or storage is in connection with the distribution, importation, or exportation of a listed chemical to a third person, this clause does not relieve a distributor, importer, or exporter from compliance with section 310;

"(iii) any category of transaction specified by regulation of the Attorney General as excluded from this definition as unnecessary for enforcement of this title or title III;

"(iv) any transaction in a listed chemical that is contained in a drug that may be marketed or distributed lawfully in the United States under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act; or

"(v) any transaction in a chemical mixture; and

"(B) a distribution, importation, or exportation of a tableting machine or encapsulating machine.

"(40) The term 'chemical mixture' means a combination of two or more chemical substances, at least one of which is not a listed precursor chemical or a listed essential chemical, except that such term does not include any combination of a listed precursor chemical or a listed essential chemical with another chemical that is present solely as an impurity.".

SEC. 6055. AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 401 OF THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.

(a) ADDITIONAL OFFENSES.—Section 401(d) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) Any person who knowingly or intentionally—

"(1) possesses a listed chemical with intent to manufacture a controlled substance except as authorized by this title;

"(2) possesses or distributes a listed chemical knowing, or having reasonable cause to believe, that the listed chemical will be used to manufacture a controlled substance except as authorized by this title; or

"(3) with the intent of causing the evasion of the recordkeeping or reporting requirements of section 310, or the regulations issued under that section, receives or distributes a reportable amount of any listed chemical in units small enough so that the making of records or filing of reports under that section is not required;

shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.".

(b) ADDITIONAL PENALTY AND OFFENSES.—Section 401 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(f) In addition to any other applicable penalty, any person convicted of a felony violation of this section relating to the receipt, distribution, or importation of a listed chemical may be enjoined from engaging in any regulated transaction involving a listed chemical for not more than ten years.

"(g)(1) Whoever knowingly distributes a listed chemical in violation of this title (other than in violation of a recordkeeping or reporting requirement of section 310) shall be fined under title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) Whoever possesses any listed chemical, with knowledge that the recordkeeping or reporting requirements of section 310 have not been adhered to, if, after such knowledge is acquired, such person does not take immediate steps to remedy the violation shall be fined under title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.".

SEC. 6056. AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 402 OF THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.

Subtitle B—Asset Forfeiture Amendments

SEC. 6071. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Asset Forfeiture Amendments Act of 1988".

SEC. 6072. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE ASSETS FORFEITURE FUND.

Section 524(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1) There is established in the United States Treasury a special fund to be known as the Department of Justice Assets Forfeiture Fund (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Fund') which shall be available to the Attorney General without fiscal year limitation for the following purposes of the Department of Justice—

"(A) the payment, at the discretion of the Attorney General, of any expenses necessary to seize, detain, inventory, safeguard, maintain, advertise, or sell property under seizure, detention, or forfeited pursuant to any law enforced or administered by the Department of Justice, or of any other necessary expenses incident to the seizure, detention, or forfeiture of such property; such payments may include—

"(i) payments for contract services, the employment of outside contractors to operate and manage properties or provide other specialized services as necessary to dispose of such properties in an effort to maximize the return from such properties, and payments to reimburse any Federal, State, or local agency for any expenditures made to perform the foregoing functions; and

"(ii) payments made pursuant to regulations promulgated by the Attorney General, that are necessary and direct program-related expenses for the purchase or lease of automatic data processing equipment (not less than a majority of which use will be program related), training, printing, contracting for services directly related to the identification of forfeitable assets processing of and accounting for forfeitures, and the storage, protection, and destruction of controlled substances;

"(B) the payment of awards for information or assistance directly relating to violations of the criminal drug laws of the United States;

"(C) the payment of awards for information or assistance leading to a civil or criminal forfeiture under the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 800 et seq.) or a criminal forfeiture under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations statute (18 U.S.C. 1961 et seq.), at the discretion of the Attorney General;

"(D) the compromise and payment of valid liens and mortgages against property that has been forfeited pursuant to any law enforced or administered by the Department of Justice, subject to the discretion of the Attorney General to determine the validity of any such lien or mortgage and the amount of payment to be made, and the employment of attorneys and other personnel skilled in State real estate law as necessary;

"(E) disbursements authorized in connection with remission or mitigation procedures relating to property forfeited under any law enforced or administered by the Department of Justice;

"(F) for equipping for drug law enforcement functions any government-owned or leased vessels, vehicles, and aircraft available for official use by the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, or the United States Marshals Service;

"(G) for purchase of evidence of any violation of the Controlled Substances Act, the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act, chapter 96 of title 18, or sections 1956 and 1957 of title 18; and

"(H) after all reimbursements and program-related expenses have been met at the end of fiscal year 1989, the Attorney General may transfer deposits from the Fund to the building and facilities account of the Federal prison system for the construction of correctional institutions.

Amounts for paying the expenses authorized by subparagraphs (A)(ii), (B), (C), (F), and (G) shall be specified in appropriations acts. Amounts for other authorized expenditures and payments from the Fund, including equitable sharing payments, are not required to be specified in appropriations acts. The Attorney General may exempt the procurement of contract services under subparagraph (A) under the fund from section 3709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (41 U.S.C. 5), title III of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 251 and following), and other provisions of law as may be necessary to maintain the security and confidentiality of related criminal investigations.

"(2) Any award paid from the Fund for information, as provided in paragraphs (1)(B) or (C), shall be paid at the discretion of the Attorney General or his delegate, under existing departmental delegation policies for the payment of awards, except that the authority to pay an award of $250,000 or more shall not be delegated to any person other than the Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or the Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration. Any award for information pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) shall not exceed $250,000. Any award for information pursuant to paragraph (1)(C) shall not exceed the lesser of $250,000 or one-fourth of the amount realized by the United States from the property forfeited.

"(3) Any amount under subparagraph (F) of paragraph (1) shall be paid at the discretion of the Attorney General or his delegate, except that the authority to pay $100,000 or more may be delegated only to the respective head of the agency involved.

"(4) There shall be deposited in the Fund all amounts from the forfeiture of property under any law enforced or administered by the Department of Justice, except all proceeds of forfeitures available for use by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary of the Interior pursuant to section 11(d) of the Endangered Species Act (16 U.S.C. 1540(d)) or section 6(d) of the Lacey Act Amendments of 1981 (16 U.S.C. 3375(d)) or the Postmaster General of the United States pursuant to section 2003(b)(7) of title 39.

"(5) Amounts in the Fund which are not currently needed for the purpose of this section shall be kept on deposit or invested in obligations of, or guaranteed by, the United States and all earnings on such investments shall be deposited in the Fund.

"(6) The Attorney General shall transmit to the Congress, not later than 4 months after the end of each fiscal year, two detailed reports as follows:

"(A) a report on—

"(i) the estimated total value of property forfeited under any law enforced or administered by the Department of Justice with respect to which funds were not deposited in the Fund; and

"(ii) the estimated total value of all such property transferred to any State or local law enforcement agency; and

"(B) a report on—

"(i) the Fund's beginning balance;

"(ii) sources of receipts (seized cash, conveyances, and others);

"(iii) liens and mortgages paid and amount of money shared with State and local law enforcement agencies;

"(iv) the net amount realized from the year's operations, amount of seized cash being held as evidence, and the amount of money legally allowed to be carried over to next year;

"(v) any defendant's equity in property valued at $1,000,000 or more; and

"(vi) year-end Fund balance.

"(7) The Fund shall be subject to annual audit by the Comptroller General.

"(8) The provisions of this subsection relating to deposits in the Fund shall apply to all property in the custody of the Department of Justice on or after the effective date of the Comprehensive Forfeiture Act of 1983.

"(9) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as necessary for the purposes described in subparagraphs (A)(ii), (B), (C), (F), and (G) of paragraph (1). At the end of each of fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992, unobligated amounts not to exceed $150,000,000 remaining in the Fund shall be deposited in the Special Forfeiture Fund, except that an amount not to exceed $15,000,000 or, if determined necessary by the Attorney General to meet asset specific expenses, an amount equal to one-twelfth of the previous year's expenditures may be carried forward and remain available for appropriation in the next fiscal year.

"(10) For the purposes of this subsection, property is forfeited pursuant to a law enforced or administered by the Department of Justice if it is forfeited pursuant to—

"(A) any criminal forfeiture proceeding;

"(B) any civil judicial forfeiture proceeding; or

"(C) any civil administrative forfeiture proceeding conducted by the Department of Justice, except to the extent that the seizure was effected by a Customs officer or that custody was maintained by the United States Customs Service in which case the provisions of section 613A of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1613a) shall apply.".

SEC. 6073. ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL FORFEITURE FUND.

(a) In General.—There is established in the Treasury of the United States the Special Forfeiture Fund (hereafter referred to in this section as the "Fund") which shall be available to the Director of the National Drug Control Policy without fiscal year limitation in such amounts as may be specified in appropriations acts.

(b) Deposits.—Beginning in fiscal year 1990, there shall be deposited in the Fund not to exceed $150,000,000 in unobligated amounts remaining at the end of each fiscal year from the Department of Justice Assets Forfeiture Fund (28 U.S.C. 524(c)) except that amounts specified in section 524(c)(9) of title 28, United States Code, may be carried forward and remain available for appropriation in the next fiscal year.

(c) Investment of Fund.—Amounts in the Fund which are not currently needed for the purposes of this section shall be kept on deposit or invested in obligations of, or guaranteed by, the United States and all earnings on such investments shall be deposited in the Fund.

(d) President's Budget.—The President shall, in consultation with the Director for National Drug Control Policy, include, as part of the budget submitted to the Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, a separate and detailed request for the use of the amounts in the Fund. This request shall reflect the priorities of the National Drug Control strategy.

(e) Funds Provided Supplemental.—Funds disbursed under this subsection shall not be used to supplant existing funds, but shall be used to supplement the amount of funds that would be otherwise available.

(f) Annual Report.—No later than 4 months after the end of each fiscal year, the President shall submit to both Houses of Congress a detailed report on the amounts deposited in the Fund and a description of expenditures made under this subsection.

SEC. 6074. TRANSFER BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF FOREIGN PROPERTY.

Section 511(e)(1) of the Controlled Substance Act (21 U.S.C. 881(e)) is amended by—

(1) striking "or" after the semicolon in subparagraph (C);

(2) striking the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following:

"(E) transfer the forfeited personal property or the proceeds of the sale of any forfeited personal or real property to any foreign country which participated directly or indirectly in the seizure or forfeiture of the property, if such a transfer—

"(i) has been agreed to by the Secretary of State;

"(ii) is authorized in an international agreement between the United States and the foreign country; and

"(iii) is made to a country which, if applicable, has been certified under section 481(h) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.".

SEC. 6075. ADDITIONAL EXCEPTION TO PROVISION RELATING TO FORFEITURE OF CONVEYANCES.

Paragraph (4) of section 511(a) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(a)(4)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking out "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking out the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) no conveyance shall be forfeited under this paragraph to the extent of an interest of an owner, by reason of any act or omission established by that owner to have been committed or omitted without the knowledge, consent, or willful blindness of the owner.".

SEC. 6076. FORFEITURES OF CONVEYANCES.

(a) Amendment to Act of August 9, 1939.—Section 2 of the Act of August 9, 1939 (chapter 618, 53 Stat. 1291; 49 U.S.C. App. 782), is amended by adding at the end the following: "No vessel, vehicle, or aircraft shall be forfeited under this section to the extent of an interest of an owner for a drug-related offense established by that owner to have been committed or omitted without the knowledge, consent, or willful blindness of the owner.".

(b) Amendments to Tariff Act of 1930.—Section 594(b) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1594(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(b)";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (1) or subsection (c), no vessel, vehicle, or aircraft is subject to forfeiture to the extent of an interest of an owner for a drug-related offense established by that owner to have been committed or omitted without the knowledge, consent, or willful blindness of the owner.".

SEC. 6077. RESTORATION OF EQUITABLE SHARING PRINCIPLE RELATING TO TRANSFER OF FORFEITED ASSETS TO STATE AND LOCAL AGENCIES UNDER THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.

(a) In General.—Section 511(e) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) The Attorney General shall assure that any property transferred to a State or local law enforcement agency under paragraph (1)(A)—

"(A) has a value that bears a reasonable relationship to the degree of direct participation of the State or local agency in the law enforcement effort resulting in the forfeiture, taking into account the total value of all property forfeited and the total law enforcement effort with respect to the violation of law on which the forfeiture is based; and

"(B) is not so transferred to circumvent any requirement of State law that prohibits forfeiture or limits use or disposition of property forfeited to State or local agencies.".

(b) Technical Amendment.—Section 511(e)(1)(A) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(e)(1)(A)) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) retain the property for official use or, in the manner provided with respect to transfers under section 616 of the Tariff Act of 1930, transfer the property to any Federal agency or to any State or local law enforcement agency which participated directly in the seizure or forfeiture of the property;".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 551(e)(3)(B) of the Controlled Substances Act, as enacted by subsection (a), shall apply with respect to fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1989.

SEC. 6078. COORDINATION OF POST-SEIZURE PROCEDURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part E of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 871 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"COORDINATION AND CONSOLIDATION OF POST-SEIZURE ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 517. The Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury shall take such action as may be necessary to develop and maintain a joint plan to coordinate and consolidate post-seizure administration of property seized under this title, title III, or provisions of the customs laws relating to controlled substances.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 516 the following new item:

"517. Coordination and consolidation of post-seizure administration.".

SEC. 6079. REGULATIONS TO PROVIDE FORFEITURE PROCEDURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury shall consult, and after providing a 30-day public comment period, shall prescribe regulations for expedited administrative procedures for seizures under section 511(a) (4), (6), and (7) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(a) (4), (6), and (7)); section 596 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1595a(a)); and section 2 of the Act of August 9, 1939 (53 Stat. 1291; 49 U.S.C. app. 782) for violations involving the possession of personal use quantities of a controlled substance.

(b) SPECIFICATIONS.—The regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) shall

(1) minimize the adverse impact caused by prolonged detention, and

(2) provide for a final administrative determination of the case within 21 days of seizure, or provide a procedure by which the defendant can obtain release of the property pending a final determination of the case. Such regulations shall provide that the appropriate agency official rendering a final determination shall immediately return the property if the following conditions are established:

(A) the owner or interested party did not know of or consent to the violation;

(B) the owner establishes a valid, good faith interest in the seized property as owner or otherwise; and

(C)(1) the owner establishes that the owner at no time had any knowledge or reason to believe that the property in which the owner claims an interest was being or would be used in a violation of the law; and

(2) if the owner at any time had, or should have had, knowledge or reason to believe that the property in which the owner claims an interest was being or would be used in a violation of the law, that the owner did what reasonably could be expected to prevent the violation.

An owner shall not have the seized property returned under this subsection if the owner had not acted in a normal and customary manner to ascertain how the property would be used.

(c) NOTICE.—At the time of seizure or upon issuance of a summons to appear under subsection (d), the officer making the seizure shall furnish to any person in possession of the conveyance a written notice specifying the procedures under this section. At the earliest practicable opportunity after determining ownership of the seized conveyance, the head of the department or agency that seizes the conveyance shall furnish a written notice to the owner and other interested parties (including lienholders) of the legal and factual basis of the seizure.

(d) SUMMONS IN LIEU OF SEIZURE OF COMMERCIAL FISHING INDUSTRY VESSELS.—Not later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe joint regulations, after a public comment period of at least 30 days, providing for issuance of a summons to appear in lieu of seizure of a commercial fishing industry vessel as defined in section 2101 (11a), (11b), and (11c) of title 46, United States Code, for violations involving the possession of personal use quantities of a controlled substance. These regulations shall apply when the violation is committed on a commercial fishing industry vessel that is proceeding to or from a fishing area or intermediate port of call, or is actively engaged in fishing operations. The authority provided under this section shall not affect existing authority to arrest an individual for drug-related offenses or to release that individual into the custody of the vessel's master. Upon answering a summons to appear, the procedures set forth in subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this section shall apply. The jurisdiction of the district court for any forfeiture incurred shall not be affected by the use of a summons under this section.

(e) PERSONAL USE QUANTITIES OF A CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE.—For the purposes of this section, personal use quantities of a controlled substance shall not include sweepings or other evidence of non-personal use amounts.

SEC. 6080. EXPEDITED PROCEDURES FOR SEIZED CONVEYANCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 511 the following new section:

"EXPEDITED PROCEDURES FOR SEIZED CONVEYANCES

"SEC. 511A. (a)(1) The owner of a conveyance may petition the Attorney General for an expedited decision with respect to the conveyance, if the conveyance is seized for a drug-related offense and the owner has filed the requisite claim and cost bond in the manner provided in section 608 of the Tariff Act of 1930. The Attorney General shall make a determination on a petition under this section expeditiously, including a determination of any rights or defenses available to the petitioner. If the Attorney General does not grant or deny a petition under this section within 20 days after the date on which the petition is filed, the conveyance shall be returned to the owner pending further forfeiture proceedings.

"(2) With respect to a petition under this section, the Attorney General may—

"(A) deny the petition and retain possession of the conveyance;

"(B) grant the petition, move to dismiss the forfeiture action, if filed, and promptly release the conveyance to the owner; or

"(C) advise the petitioner that there is not adequate information available to determine the petition and promptly release the conveyance to the owner.

"(3) Release of a conveyance under subsection (a)(1) or (a)(2)(C) does not affect any forfeiture action with respect to the conveyance.

"(4) The Attorney General shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section.

"(b) At the time of seizure, the officer making the seizure shall furnish to any person in possession of the conveyance a written notice specifying the procedures under this section. At the earliest practicable opportunity after determining ownership of the seized conveyance, the head of the department or agency that seizes the conveyance shall furnish a written notice to the owner and other interested parties (including lienholders) of the legal and factual basis of the seizure.

"(c) Not later than 60 days after a claim and cost bond have been filed under section 608 of the Tariff Act of 1930 regarding a conveyance seized for a drug-related offense, the Attorney General shall file a complaint for forfeiture in the appropriate district court, except that the court may extend the period for filing for good cause shown or on agreement of the parties. If the Attorney General does not file a complaint as specified in the preceding sentence, the court shall order the return of the conveyance to the owner and the forfeiture may not take place.

"(d) Any owner of a conveyance seized for a drug-related offense may obtain release of the conveyance by providing security in the form of a bond to the Attorney General in an amount equal to the value of the conveyance unless the Attorney General determines the conveyance should be retained (1) as contraband, (2) as evidence of a violation of law, or (3) because, by reason of design or other characteristic, the conveyance is particularly suited for use in illegal activities.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 511 the following new item:

"511A. Expedited procedures for seized conveyances.".

Subtitle C—State and Local Narcotics Control and Justice Assistance Improvements

PART 1—STATE AND LOCAL NARCOTICS CONTROL AND JUSTICE ASSISTANCE IMPROVEMENTS

SEC. 6091. BUREAU OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE AND UNIFIED GRANT PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by striking parts D and E (42 U.S.C. 3741-3766) and inserting the following:

"PART D—ESTABLISHMENT OF BUREAU OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE

"ESTABLISHMENT OF BUREAU OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 401. (a) There is established within the Department of Justice, under the general authority of the Attorney General, a Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Bureau').

"(b) The Bureau shall be headed by a Director (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director') who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Director shall report to the Attorney General through the Assistant Attorney General. The Director shall have final authority for all grants, cooperative agreements, and contracts awarded by the Bureau. The Director shall not engage in any employment other than that of serving as the Director, nor shall the Director hold any office in, or act in any capacity for, any organization, agency, or institution with which the Bureau makes any contract or other arrangement under this title.

"DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS OF THE DIRECTOR

"SEC. 402. The Director shall have the following duties:

"(1) Providing funds to eligible States, units of local government, and nonprofit organizations pursuant to part E.

"(2) Establishing programs in accordance with subpart 2 of part E and, following public announcement of such programs, awarding and allocating funds and technical assistance in accordance with the criteria of subpart 2, and on terms and conditions determined by the Director to be consistent with subpart 2.

"(3) Cooperating with and providing technical assistance to States, units of local government, and other public and private organizations or international agencies involved in criminal justice activities.

"(4) Providing for the development of technical assistance and training programs for State and local criminal justice agencies and fostering local participation in such activities.

"(5) Encouraging the targeting of State and local resources on efforts to reduce the incidence of drug abuse and crime and on programs relating to the apprehension and prosecution of drug offenders.

"(6) Establishing and carrying on a specific and continuing program of cooperation with the States and units of local government designed to encourage and promote consultation and coordination concerning decisions made by the Bureau affecting State and local drug control and criminal justice priorities.

"(7) Preparing recommendations on the State and local drug enforcement component of the National Drug Control Strategy which shall be submitted to the Associate Director of the Office on National Drug Control Policy. In making such recommendations, the Director shall review the statewide strategies submitted by such States under part E, and shall obtain input from State and local drug enforcement officials. The recommendations made under this paragraph shall be provided at such time and in such form as the Director of National Drug Control Policy shall require.

"(8) Exercising such other powers and functions as may be vested in the Director pursuant to this title or by delegation of the Attorney General or Assistant Attorney General.

"PART E—BUREAU OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE GRANT PROGRAMS

"NAME OF PROGRAMS

"SEC. 500. The grant programs established under this part shall be known as the 'Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Law Enforcement Assistance Programs'."

"Subpart 1—Drug Control and System Improvement Grant Program

"DESCRIPTION OF THE DRUG CONTROL AND SYSTEM IMPROVEMENT GRANT PROGRAM

"SEC. 501. (a) It is the purpose of this subpart to assist States and units of local government in carrying out specific programs which offer a high probability of improving the functioning of the criminal justice system, with special emphasis on a nationwide and multilevel drug control strategy by developing programs and projects to assist multijurisdictional and multi-State organizations in the drug control problem and to support national drug control priorities.

"(b) The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director') is authorized to make grants to States, for the use by States and units of local government in the States, for the purpose of enforcing State and local laws that establish offenses similar to offenses established in the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) and to improve the functioning of the criminal justice system with emphasis on violent crime and serious offenders. Such grants shall provide additional personnel, equipment, training, technical assistance, and information systems for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, adjudication, and detention and rehabilitation of persons who violate these laws, and to assist the victims of such crimes (other than compensation), including—

"(1) demand reduction education programs in which law enforcement officers participate;

"(2) multijurisdictional task force programs that integrate Federal, State, and local drug law enforcement agencies and prosecutors for the purpose of enhancing interagency coordination, intelligence, and facilitating multijurisdictional investigations;

"(3) programs designed to target the domestic sources of controlled and illegal substances, such as precursor chemicals, diverted pharmaceuticals, clandestine laboratories, and cannabis cultivations;

"(4) providing community and neighborhood programs that assist citizens in preventing and controlling crime, including special programs that address the problems of crimes committed against the elderly and special programs for rural jurisdictions;

"(5) disrupting illicit commerce in stolen goods and property;

"(6) improving the investigation and prosecution of white-collar crime, organized crime, public corruption crimes, and fraud against the government with priority attention to cases involving drug-related official corruption;

"(7)(A) improving the operational effectiveness of law enforcement through the use of crime analysis techniques, street sales enforcement, schoolyard violator programs, gang-related and low-income housing drug control programs;

"(B) developing and implementing antiterrorism plans for deep draft ports, international airports, and other important facilities;

"(8) career criminal prosecution programs including the development of proposed model drug control legislation;

"(9) financial investigative programs that target the identification of money laundering operations and assets obtained through illegal drug trafficking, including the development of proposed model legislation, financial investigative training, and financial information sharing systems;

"(10) improving the operational effectiveness of the court process through programs such as court delay reduction programs and enhancement programs;

"(11) programs designed to provide additional public correctional resources and improve the corrections system, including treatment in prisons and jails, intensive supervision programs, and long-range corrections and sentencing strategies;

"(12) providing prison industry projects designed to place inmates in a realistic working and training environment which will enable them to acquire marketable skills and to make financial payments for restitution to their victims, for support of their own families, and for support of themselves in the institution;

"(13) providing programs which identify and meet the treatment needs of adult and juvenile drug-dependent and alcohol-dependent offenders;

"(14) developing and implementing programs which provide assistance to jurors and witnesses, and assistance (other than compensation) to victims of crimes;

"(15)(A) developing programs to improve drug control technology, such as pretrial drug testing programs, programs which provide for the identification, assessment, referral to treatment, case management and monitoring of drug dependent offenders, enhancement of State and local forensic laboratories, and

"(B) criminal and justice information systems to assist law enforcement, prosecution, courts, and corrections organization (including automated fingerprint identification systems);

"(16) innovative programs that demonstrate new and different approaches to enforcement, prosecution, and adjudication of drug offenses and other serious crimes;

"(17) improving the criminal and juvenile justice system's response to domestic and family violence, including spouse abuse, child abuse, and abuse of the elderly;

"(18) drug control evaluation programs which the State and local units of government may utilize to evaluate programs and projects directed at State drug control activities;

"(19) providing alternatives to prevent detention, jail, and prison for persons who pose no danger to the community; and

"(20) programs of which the primary goal is to strengthen urban enforcement and prosecution efforts targeted at street drug sales.

"(c) Each program funded under this section shall contain an evaluation component, developed pursuant to guidelines established by the National Institute of Justice, in consultation with the Bureau of Justice Assistance. The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance may waive this requirement when in the opinion of the Director—

"(1) the program is not of sufficient size to justify a full evaluation report; or

"(2) the program is designed primarily to provide material resources and supplies, such as laboratory equipment, that would not justify a full evaluation report.

"ELIGIBILITY

"SEC. 502. The Bureau is authorized to make financial assistance under this subpart available to a State to enable it to carry out all or a substantial part of a program or project submitted and approved in accordance with the provisions of this subpart.

"STATE APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 503. (a) To request a grant under this subpart, the chief executive officer of a State shall submit an application within 60 days after the Bureau has promulgated regulations under this section, and for each subsequent year, within 60 days after the date that appropriations for this part are enacted, in such form as the Director may require. Such application shall include the following:

"(1) A statewide strategy for drug and violent crime control programs which improve the functioning of the criminal justice system, with an emphasis on drug trafficking, violent crime, and serious offenders. The strategy shall be prepared after consultation with State and local officials with emphasis on those whose duty it is to enforce drug and criminal laws and direct the administration of justice and shall contain—

"(A) a definition and analysis of the drug and violent crime problem in the State, and an analysis of the problems in each of the counties and municipalities with major drug and violent crime problems;

"(B) an assessment of the criminal justice resources being devoted to crime and drug control programs at the time of the application;

"(C) coordination requirements;

"(D) resource needs;

"(E) the establishment of statewide priorities for crime and drug control activities and programs;

"(F) an analysis of the relationship of the proposed State efforts to the national drug control strategy; and

"(G) a plan for coordinating the programs to be funded under this part with other federally funded programs, including State and local drug abuse education, treatment, and prevention programs.

"(2) A certification that Federal funds made available under the formula grant of this subpart will not be used to supplant State or local funds, but will be used to increase the amounts of such funds that would, in the absence of Federal funds, be made available for law enforcement activities.

"(3) A certification that funds required to pay the non-Federal portion of the cost of each program and project for which such grant is made shall be in addition to funds that would otherwise be made available for law enforcement by the recipients of grant funds.

"(4) An assurance that the State application described in this section, and any amendment to such application, has been submitted for review to the State legislature or its designated body (for purposes of this section, such application or amendment shall be deemed to be reviewed if the State legislature or such body does not review such application or amendment within the 30-day period beginning on the date such application or amendment is so submitted).

"(5) An assurance that the State application and any amendment thereto was made public before submission to the Bureau and, to the extent provided under State law or established procedure, an opportunity to comment thereon was provided to citizens and to neighborhood and community groups.

"(6) An assurance that following the first fiscal year covered by an application and for each fiscal year thereafter, a performance evaluation and assessment report concerning the activities carried out pursuant to this section will be submitted to the Bureau.

"(7) A provision for fund accounting, auditing, monitoring, and such evaluation procedures as may be necessary to keep such records that the Bureau shall prescribe to assure fiscal control, proper management, and efficient disbursement of funds reviewed under this section.

"(8) An assurance that the applicant shall maintain such data and information and submit such reports in such form, at such times, and containing such data and information as the Bureau may reasonably require to administer other provisions of this subpart.

"(9) A certification that its programs meet all the requirements of this section, that all the information contained in the application is correct, that there has been appropriate coordination with affected agencies, and that the applicant will comply with all provisions of this subpart and all other applicable Federal laws. Such certification shall be made in a form acceptable to the Bureau and shall be executed by the chief executive or such other officer of the applicant qualified under regulations promulgated by the Office.

"(10) A certification that the State is undertaking initiatives to reduce, through the enactment of innovative penalties or increasing law enforcement efforts, the demand for controlled substances by holding accountable those who unlawfully possess or use such substances.

"(b) Within 30 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall promulgate regulations to implement this section (including the information that must be included and the requirements that the States must meet) in submitting the applications required under this section.

"GRANT LIMITATIONS

"SEC. 504. (a) A grant made under this subpart may not—

"(1) for fiscal year 1989 appropriations be expended for more than 75 per centum; and

"(2) for any subsequent fiscal year appropriations be expended for more than 50 per centum; of the cost of the identified uses for which such grant is received to carry out any purpose specified in section 502, except that in the case of funds distributed to an Indian tribe which performs law enforcement functions (as determined by the Secretary of the Interior) for any such program or project, the amount of such grant shall be equal to 100 percent of such cost. The non-Federal portion of the expenditures for such uses shall be paid in cash.

"(b) Not more than 10 percent of a grant made to an eligible State under section 506 may be used for costs incurred to administer such grant.

"(c) States and units of local government or combinations thereof are authorized to use a grant made under section 506 for the expenses associated with participation in the State and Local Task Force Program established by the Drug Enforcement Administration.

"(d) States and local units of government are authorized to use a grant made under section 506 for the expenses associated with conducting the evaluations required under section 501(c) of this part.

"(e) The non-Federal portion of the cost of such program or project shall be in cash. State and local units of government may use cash received under the equitable sharing program to cover the non-Federal portion of the costs of programs funded under section 506.

"(f) No funds may be awarded under this subpart to a grant recipient for a program or project for which funds have been awarded under this title for 4 years (in the aggregate), including any period occurring before the effective date of this subsection.

"REVIEW OF STATE APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 505. (a) The Bureau shall provide financial assistance to each State applicant under this subpart to carry out the programs or projects submitted by such applicant upon determining that—

"(1) the application or amendment thereto is consistent with the requirements of this subpart; and

"(2) before the approval of the application and any amendment thereto the Bureau has made an affirmative finding in writing that the program or project has been reviewed in accordance with this subpart.

"(b) Each application or amendment made and submitted for approval to the Bureau pursuant to section 503 shall be deemed approved, in whole or in part, by the Bureau not later than 45 days after first received unless the Bureau informs the applicant of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(c) Grant funds awarded under this subpart shall not be used for land acquisition or construction projects, other than penal and correctional institutions.

"(d) The Bureau shall not finally disapprove any application, or any amendment thereto, submitted to the Director under this section without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and opportunity for reconsideration.

"ALLOCATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS UNDER FORMULA GRANTS

"SEC. 506. (a) Of the total amount appropriated for this part in any fiscal year, the amount remaining after setting aside the amount required to be reserved to carry out section 511 of this title shall be set aside for section 502 and allocated to States as follows:

"(1) $500,000 shall be allocated to each of the participating States; and

"(2) of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (1), there shall be allocated to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the population of such State bears to the population of all the States.

"(b)(1) Each State which receives funds under subsection (a) of this section in a fiscal year shall distribute among units of local government, or combinations of units of local government, in such State for the purposes specified in section 501(b) that portion of such funds which bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount of such funds as the amount of funds expended by all units of local government for criminal justice in the preceding fiscal year bears to the aggregate amount of funds expended by the State and all units of local government in such State for criminal justice in such preceding fiscal year.

"(2) In distributing funds received under this part among urban, rural, and suburban units of local government and combinations thereof, the State shall give priority to those jurisdictions with the greatest need.

"(3) Any funds not distributed to units of local government under paragraph (2) shall be available for expenditure by the State involved.

"(4) For purposes of determining the distribution of funds under paragraphs (1) and (2), the most accurate and complete data available for the fiscal year involved shall be used. If data for such fiscal year are not available, then the most accurate and complete data available for the most recent fiscal year preceding such fiscal year shall be used.

"(d) No funds allocated to a State under subsection (a) or received by a State for distribution under subsections (b) and (c) may be distributed by the Director or by the State involved for any program other than a program contained in an approved application.

"(e) If the Director determines, on the basis of information available during any fiscal year, that a portion of the funds allocated to a State for that fiscal year will not be required or that a State will be unable to qualify or receive funds under section 502, or that a State chooses not to participate in the program established under such section, then such portion shall be awarded by the Director to urban, rural, and suburban units of local government or combinations thereof within such State giving priority to those jurisdictions with greatest need.

"(f) Any funds allocated under subsection (a) or (e) that are not distributed under this section shall be available for obligation under subpart 2.

"STATE OFFICE

"SEC. 507. (a) The chief executive of each participating State shall designate a State office for purposes of—

"(1) preparing an application to obtain funds under section 503;

"(2) administering funds received under such section from the Director, including receipt, review, processing, monitoring, progress and financial report review, technical assistance, grant adjustments, accounting, auditing and fund disbursements; and

"(3) coordinating the distribution of funds provided under this part with State agencies receiving Federal funds for drug abuse education, prevention, treatment, and research activities and programs.

"(b) An office or agency performing other functions within the executive branch of a State may be designated to carry out the functions specified in subsection (a).

"DISTRIBUTION OF GRANTS TO LOCAL GOVERNMENT

"SEC. 508. (a) Each application made by a local unit of government, or a combination of units of local government, to a State for funds under this subchapter shall be deemed approved, in whole or in part, by the State not later than 45 days after first received unless the State informs the applicant in writing of specific reasons for disapproval. The State shall not finally disapprove any application submitted to the State without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and opportunity for reconsideration.

"(b) Each State which receives funds under section 506 in a fiscal year shall make such funds available to local units of government, or combinations thereof, whose application has been submitted to, approved and awarded by the State, within 45 days after the Bureau has approved the State application and has made funds available to such State. The Director shall have the authority to waive the 45-day requirement in this section upon a finding that the State cannot satisfy that requirement consistent with State statutes.

"Subpart 2—Discretionary Grants

"PURPOSES

"SEC. 510. (a) The purpose of this subpart is to provide additional Federal financial assistance to public or private agencies and private nonprofit organizations for purposes of—

"(1) undertaking educational and training programs for criminal justice personnel;

"(2) providing technical assistance to States and local units of governments;

"(3) undertaking projects which are national or multijurisdictional in scope and which address the purposes specified in section 502; and

"(4) providing financial assistance to public agencies and private nonprofit organizations for demonstration programs which, in view of previous research or experience, are likely to be a success in more than one jurisdiction.

"(b) In carrying out this subpart, the Director is authorized to make grants to, or enter into contracts with public or private agencies, institutions, or organizations or individuals to carry out any purpose specified in section 501(b). The Director shall have final authority over all funds awarded under this subpart.

"ALLOCATION OF FUNDS FOR DISCRETIONARY GRANTS

"SEC. 511. Of the total amount appropriated for this part in any fiscal year, 20 percent or $50,000,000, whichever is less, shall be reserved and set aside for this section in a special discretionary fund for use by the Director in carrying out the purposes specified in section 503. Grants under this section may be made for amounts up to 100 percent of the costs of the programs or projects contained in the approved application.

"LIMITATION ON USE OF DISCRETIONARY GRANT FUNDS

"SEC. 512. Grant funds awarded under section 511 shall not be used for land acquisition or construction projects.

"APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS

"SEC. 513. (a) No grant may be made under this subpart unless an application has been submitted to the Director in which the applicant—

"(1) sets forth a program or project which is eligible for funding pursuant to section 511;

"(2) describes the services to be provided, performance goals, and the manner in which the program is to be carried out;

"(3) describes the method to be used to evaluate the program or project in order to determine its impact and effectiveness in achieving the stated goals; and

"(4) agrees to conduct such evaluation according to the procedures and terms established by the Bureau.

"(b) Each applicant for funds under this subpart shall certify that its program or project meets all the requirements of this section, that all the information contained in the application is correct, and that the applicant will comply with all the provisions of this subpart and all other applicable Federal laws. Such certification shall be made in a form acceptable to the Director.

"PERIOD OF AWARD

"SEC. 514. The Bureau may provide financial aid and assistance to programs or projects under this subpart for a period of not to exceed 4 years. Grants made pursuant to this subpart may be extended or renewed by the Bureau for an additional period of up to 2 years if—

"(1) an evaluation of the program or project indicates that it has been effective in achieving the stated goals or offers the potential for improving the functioning of the criminal justice system; and

"(2) the public agency or private nonprofit organization within which the program or project has been conducted agrees to provide at least one-half of the total cost of such program or project from any source of funds, including Federal grants, available to the eligible jurisdiction.

"Subpart 3—Administrative Provisions

"EVALUATION

"SEC. 520. (a) To increase the efficiency and effectiveness of programs funded under this part, the National Institute of Justice shall—

"(1) develop guidelines, in cooperation with the Bureau of Justice Assistance, to assist State and local units of government to conduct the program evaluations as required by section 501(c) of this part; and

"(2) conduct a reasonable number of comprehensive evaluations of programs funded under section 506 (formula grants) and section 511 (discretionary grants) of this part.

"(b) In selecting programs for review, the Director of the National Institute of Justice should consider—

"(1) whether the program establishes or demonstrates a new and innovative approach to drug or crime control;

"(2) the cost of the program to be evaluated and the number of similar programs funded under section 506 (formula grants) and section 511 (discretionary grants);

"(3) whether the program has a high potential to be replicated in other jurisdictions; and

"(4) whether there is substantial public awareness and community involvement in the program. Routine auditing, monitoring, and internal assessment of a State and local drug control program's progress shall be the sole responsibility of the Bureau of Justice Assistance.

"(c) The Director of the National Institute of Justice shall annually report to the President, the Attorney General, and the Congress on the nature and findings of the evaluation and research and development activities funded under this section.

"GENERAL PROVISIONS

"SEC. 521. (a) The Bureau shall prepare both a 'Program Brief' and 'Implementation Guide' document for proven programs and projects to be funded under this part.

"(b) The functions, powers, and duties specified in this part to be carried out by the Bureau shall not be transferred elsewhere in the Department of Justice unless specifically hereafter authorized by the Congress by law.

"REPORTS

"SEC. 522. (a) Each State which receives a grant under section 506 shall submit to the Director, for each year in which any part of such grant is expended by a State or unit of local government, a report which contains—

"(1) a summary of the activities carried out with such grant and an assessment of the impact of such activities on meeting the needs identified in the State strategy submitted under section 503;

"(2) a summary of the activities carried out in such year with any grant received under subpart 2 by such State;

"(3) the evaluation result of programs and projects;

"(4) an explanation of how the Federal funds provided under this part were coordinated with State agencies receiving Federal funds for drug abuse education, prevention, treatment, and research activities; and

"(5) such other information as the Director may require by rule.

Such report shall be submitted in such form and by such time as the Director may require by rule.

"(b) Not later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate a report that includes with respect to each State—

"(1) the aggregate amount of grants made under subpart 1 and subpart 2 to such State for such fiscal year;

"(2) the amount of such grants awarded for each of the purposes specified in subpart 1;

"(3) a summary of the information provided in compliance with paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a);

"(4) an explanation of how Federal funds provided under this part have been coordinated with Federal funds provided to States for drug abuse education, prevention, treatment, and research activities; and

"(5) evaluation results of programs and projects and State strategy implementation.".

(b) AMENDMENT TO TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by striking the items relating to parts D and E and inserting the following:

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 302 of part C of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. section 3732) is amended in subsection (c) by redesignating paragraphs (16), (17), (18) and (19) as paragraphs (20), (21), (22) and (23), respectively, and inserting the following new paragraphs:

"(16) provide for the collection, compilation, analysis, publication and dissemination of information and statistics about the prevalence, incidence, rates, extent, distribution and attributes of drug offenses, drug related offenses and drug dependent offenders and further provide for the establishment of a national clearinghouse to maintain and update a comprehensive and timely data base on all criminal justice aspects of the drug crisis and to disseminate such information;

"(17) provide for the collection, analysis, dissemination and publication of statistics on the condition and progress of drug control activities at the Federal, State and local levels with particular attention to programs and intervention efforts demonstrated to be of value in the overall national anti-drug strategy and to provide for the establishment of a national clearinghouse for the gathering of data generated by Federal, State, and local criminal justice agencies on their drug enforcement activities;

"(18) provide for the development and enhancement of State and local criminal justice information systems, and the standardization of data reporting relating to the collection, analysis or dissemination of data and statistics about drug offenses, drug related offenses, or drug dependent offenders;

"(19) provide for research and improvements in the accuracy, completeness, and inclusiveness of criminal history record information, information systems, arrest warrant, and stolen vehicle record information and information systems and support research concerning the accuracy, completeness, and inclusiveness of other criminal justice record information.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 901(a)(2) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended by striking "407(a)" and inserting "506(a)".

SEC. 6093. JUSTICE ASSISTANCE ACT REAUTHORIZATION.

Section 1001 of part J of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended to read as follows:

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 1001. (a)(1) There is authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1989, 1990, 1991, and 1992 to carry out the functions of the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

"(2) There is authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1989, 1990, 1991, and 1992 to carry out the functions of the National Institute of Justice.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $25,500,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992 to carry out the remaining functions of the Office of Justice Programs and the Bureau of Justice Assistance, other than functions under parts D, E, F, G, L, and M.

"(4) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to carry out part L of this title.

"(5) There are authorized to be appropriated $275,000,000 for fiscal year 1989; $350,000,000 for fiscal year 1990; $400,000,000 for fiscal year 1991; and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1992 to carry out the programs under parts D and E of this title.

"(6) There are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992 to carry out the programs under part M of this title.

"(b) Funds appropriated for any fiscal year may remain available for obligation until expended.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds appropriated under this section for part E of this title may be transferred or reprogrammed for carrying out any activity which is not authorized under such parts.".

PART 2—REGIONAL INFORMATION SHARING SYSTEMS GRANTS

SEC. 6101. REGIONAL INFORMATION SHARING SYSTEMS GRANTS.

(a) GRANT AUTHORIZED.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by striking part M and inserting the following:

"PART M—REGIONAL INFORMATION SHARING SYSTEMS GRANTS

"SEC. 1301. REGIONAL INFORMATION SHARING SYSTEMS GRANTS.

"(a) The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance is authorized to make grants and enter into contracts with State and local criminal justice agencies and nonprofit organizations for the purposes of identifying, targeting, and removing criminal conspiracies and activities spanning jurisdictional boundaries.

"(b) Grants and contracts awarded under this part shall be made for—

"(1) maintaining and operating information sharing systems that are responsive to the needs of participating enforcement agencies in addressing multijurisdictional offenses and conspiracies, and that are capable of providing controlling input, dissemination, rapid retrieval, and systematized updating of information to authorized agencies;

"(2) establishing and operating an analytical component to assist participating agencies and projects in the compilation, interpretation, and presentation of information provided to a project;

"(3) establishing and maintaining a telecommunication of the information sharing and analytical programs in clauses (1) and (2); and

"(4) other programs designated by the Director that are designed to further the purposes of this part.

"(c) The Director is authorized to promulgate such rules and regulations as are necessary to carry out the purposes of this section, including rules and regulations for submitting and reviewing applications."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by striking out the items relating to part N and section 1401, and inserting in lieu thereof the following new items:

"PART M—REGIONAL INFORMATION SHARING SYSTEMS GRANTS

"PART N—TRANSITION; EFFECTIVE DATE; REPEALER

"Sec. 1401. Continuation of rules, authorities, and proceedings."

PART 3—PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS' DEATH BENEFITS IMPROVEMENT

SEC. 6105. PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS' DEATH BENEFITS IMPROVEMENT.

(a) BASIC LEVEL OF DEATH BENEFIT PAYABLE.—Section 1201(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796) is amended by striking out "$50,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$100,000, adjusted in accordance with subsection (g)".

(b) ANNUAL ADJUSTMENT OF BENEFIT LEVEL.—Section 1201 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(g) On October 1 of each fiscal year beginning after the effective date of this subsection, the Bureau shall adjust the level of the benefit payable immediately before such October 1 under subsection (a), to reflect the annual percentage change in the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, occurring in the 1-year period ending on June 1 immediately preceding such October 1.

"(h) The amount payable under subsection (a) with respect to the death of a public safety officer shall be the amount payable under subsection (a) as of the date of death of such officer.".

(c) PARENTS AS BENEFICIARIES.—Section 1201(a)(4) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796(a)(4)) is amended by striking out "dependent".

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 1203 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796b) is amended by striking out paragraph (2) and redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), (5), (6), and (7), as paragraphs (2), (3), (4), (5), and (6), respectively.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on June 1, 1988.

SEC. 6106. NATIONAL PROGRAMS FOR FAMILIES OF PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS WHO HAVE DIED IN THE LINE OF DUTY.

PROGRAM AUTHORIZATION.—Part L of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act (42 U.S.C. 3796a) is amended by—

(1) redesignating sections 1203 and 1204 as sections 1204 and 1205, respectively; and

(2) adding after section 1202 the following new section:

"NATIONAL PROGRAMS FOR FAMILIES OF PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS WHO HAVE DIED IN THE LINE OF DUTY

"SEC. 1203. The Director is authorized and directed to use up to $150,000 of the funds appropriated for this part to establish national programs to assist the families of public safety officers who have died in the line of duty.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents for title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended by—

(1) redesignating the items for section 1203 and 1204 as sections 1204 and 1205, respectively; and

(2) inserting after section 1203 the following:

"Sec. 1203. National program for families of public safety officers who have died in the line of duty.".

Subtitle D—Authorizations of Appropriations for the Department of Justice, Prisons, and Related Law Enforcement Purposes

SEC. 6151. IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE PERSONNEL ENHANCEMENT.

(a) SALARIES AND EXPENSES.—There is authorized to be appropriated for salaries and expenses for the Immigration and Naturalization Service for fiscal year 1989, $12,300,000: Provided, That such appropriation shall be in addition to any appropriations provided in regular appropriations Acts or continuing resolutions for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989: Provided further, That of such additional appropriations authorized in this section, $4,100,000 shall be used to increase the number of inspectors of the Immigration and Naturalization Service by no fewer than 70 over such personnel levels on board at the Service as of September 30, 1988, and for related equipment.

(b) ORGANIZED CRIME DRUG ENFORCEMENT TASK FORCE PILOT PROJECT AND REPORT.—(1) That of such additional appropriation authorized in this section, $8,200,000 shall be used to increase the commitment of Immigration and Naturalization Service personnel to the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces (OCDETF) for additional special agent and support positions; and for associated training and equipment; and for costs incurred during INS agent participation in OCDETF operations with other Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(2) The positions described in paragraph (1) shall, under the supervision of a director for the pilot project, be used exclusively to assist Federal and local law enforcement agencies in combating illegal alien involvement in drug trafficking and crimes of violence.

(3) The Director of the pilot project shall report to the Assistant Commissioner—Investigations and will have the authority to—

(A) hire a limited number of non-Federal law enforcement officers with substantive experience in narcotics investigations should insufficient senior Federal agents be available. Non-Federal law enforcement officers hired under this provision may be over the age of 35, but in that event would only be eligible for nonlaw enforcement retirement benefits; and

(B) grant extensions of stay and other discretionary immigration benefits and waivers to witnesses, informants, and others whose presence in the United States is essential to the investigation and prosecution of criminal aliens involved in drug trafficking and crimes of violence.

(4) After the first year of the establishment of this pilot project the Attorney General will provide for an evaluation of its effectiveness, including an assessment by Federal, State, and local prosecutors and enforcement agencies.

SEC. 6160. THE NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMISSION ON LAW ENFORCEMENT.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) the term "Commission" means the National Advisory Commission on Law Enforcement;

(2) the term "Commissioner" means a member of the National Advisory Commission on Law Enforcement; and

(3) the term "law enforcement officer" has the same meaning as provided in section 8401(17) of title 5, United States Code.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a National Advisory Commission on Law Enforcement, which shall consist of the following members:

(1) four members of the United States Senate, 2 of whom shall be selected by the Majority Leader and 2 of whom shall be selected by the Minority Leader;

(2) four members of the United States House of Representatives, 2 of whom shall be selected by the Speaker and 2 of whom shall be selected by the Minority Leader;

(3) the Comptroller General of the United States, who shall also serve as Chairman of the Commission;

(4) the Director of the Office of Personnel Management;

(5) the Attorney General of the United States and three other officials of the Department of Justice who shall be designated by the Attorney General;

(6) the Secretary of the Treasury and 2 other officials of the Department of the Treasury who shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury;

(7) the Inspector Generals of 3 departments or agencies of the executive branch of the United States who shall be designated by the President of the United States; and

(8) three representatives from Federal employee groups to be selected by the Office of Personnel Management after consultation with the Speaker of the House and the Majority Leader of the Senate.

(c) STUDY.—The Commission shall study the methods and rates of compensation, including salary, overtime pay, retirement policies, and other benefits of law enforcement officers in all Federal agencies, as well as the methods and rates of compensation of State and local law enforcement officers in a representative number of areas where Federal law enforcement officers are assigned, in order to determine—

(1) the differences which exist among Federal agencies with regard to the methods and rates of compensation for law enforcement officers;

(2) the rational basis, if any, for such differences, considering the nature of the responsibilities of the law enforcement officers in each agency; the qualifications and training required to perform such responsibilities; the degree of personal risk to which the law enforcement officers in each agency are normally exposed in the performance of their duties; and such other factors as the Commission deems relevant in evaluating the differences in compensation among the various agencies;

(3) the extent to which inequities appear to exist among Federal agencies with regard to the methods and rates of compensation of law enforcement officers, based on consideration of the factors mentioned in paragraph (2) of this subsection;

(4) the feasibility of devising a uniform system of overtime compensation for law enforcement officers in all or most Federal agencies, with due regard for both the special needs of law enforcement officers and the relative cost effectiveness to the Government of such a system compared to those currently in use;

(5) how the salaries paid to Federal law enforcement officers compare to those of State and local officers in the same geographical area, especially those in "high cost-of-living" areas;

(6) the impact of the rates of compensation paid by various Federal agencies on the lifestyle, morale, and general well-being of law enforcement officers, including their ability to subsist;

(7) the recruiting and retention problems experienced by Federal agencies due to: inequities in compensation among such agencies; the differences between rates of compensation paid to Federal law enforcement officers and State and local officers in the same geographical areas; and other factors related to compensation;

(8) the extent to which Federal legislation and administrative regulations may be necessary or appropriate to rectify inequities among Federal agencies in the methods and rates of compensation for law enforcement officers; to address the lack of uniformity among agencies with regard to overtime pay; to provide premiums or special rates of pay for Federal law enforcement officers in high cost-of-living areas; to ensure that the levels of compensation paid to Federal law enforcement officers will be competitive with those paid to State and local officers in the same geographical areas; and to address such other matters related to the determinations made under this subsection as the Commission deems appropriate in the interests of enhancing the ability of Federal agencies to recruit and retain the most qualified and capable law enforcement officers; and

(9) the average retirement age of the Federal agencies and the retirement and benefits policies of Federal agencies.

(d) Powers of the Commission.—The Commission shall have the power to—

(1) utilize, with their consent, the services, equipment, personnel, information, and facilities of other Federal, State, local, and private agencies and instrumentalities with or without reimbursement therefor;

(2) enter into and perform, without regard to section 3324 of title 31, United States Code, such contracts, leases, cooperative agreements, and other transactions as may be necessary in the conduct of the functions of the Commission, with any public agency, or with any person, firm, association, corporation, educational institution, or nonprofit organization;

(3) request such information, data, and reports from any Federal agency or instrumentality as the Commission may from time to time require and as may be produced consistent with other law; and

(4) hold hearings and call witnesses that might assist the Commission in the exercise of its powers or duties.

The Commission shall have such other powers as may be necessary to carry out its functions under this Act and may delegate to any member or designated person such powers as may be appropriate in the conduct of its functions.

(e) Resources.—(1) Upon the request of the Commission, each Federal agency is authorized and directed to make its resources, services, equipment, personnel, facilities, and information available to the greatest practicable extent to the Commission in the execution of its functions.

(2) Each Commissioner may utilize the resources, services, equipment, personnel, information, and facilities of his or her Federal agency or, in the case of the Commissioners who are Members of Congress, his or her congressional office, as may be necessary in the conduct of the Commissioner's respective functions as a member of the Commission.

(f) Quorum.—A simple majority of the Commissioners then serving shall constitute a quorum for the conduct of business by the Commission, and the Commission may exercise its powers and fulfill its duties by the vote of a simple majority of the Commissioners present.

(g) Meeting.—The Chairman of the Commission shall call and preside at meetings of the Commission, but the Chairman may delegate to any other Commissioner the authority to preside at meetings of the Commission.

(h) Report and Dissolution of Commission.—(1) Within 6 months following the date of enactment of this Act, the Commission shall prepare and deliver to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, a written report setting forth—

(A) the findings and determinations made by the Commission pursuant to section 176(b); and

(B) specific proposals for such legislation and administrative regulations as the Commission has determined to be necessary or appropriate pursuant to section 176(b)(8).

(2) The Commission shall be terminated 60 days following submission of the report mandated by this section.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—No financial institution may issue or sell a bank check, cashier's check, traveler's check, or money order to any individual in connection with a transaction or group of such contemporaneous transactions which involves United States coins or currency (or such other monetary instruments as the Secretary may prescribe) in amounts or denominations of $3,000 or more unless—

"(1) the individual has a transaction account with such financial institution and the financial institution—

"(A) verifies that fact through a signature card or other information maintained by such institution in connection with the account of such individual; and

"(B) records the method of verification in accordance with regulations which the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; or

"(2) the individual furnishes the financial institution with such forms of identification as the Secretary of the Treasury may require in regulations which the Secretary shall prescribe and the financial institution verifies and records such information in accordance with regulations which such Secretary shall prescribe.

"(b) REPORT TO SECRETARY UPON REQUEST.—Any information required to be recorded by any financial institution under paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) shall be reported by such institution to the Secretary of the Treasury at the request of such Secretary.

"(c) TRANSACTION ACCOUNT DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'transaction account' has the meaning given to such term in section 19(b)(1)(C) of the Federal Reserve Act.".

(c) SECRETARY AUTHORIZED TO REQUIRE RECORDKEEPING FOR DOMESTIC COIN AND CURRENCY TRANSACTIONS.—Subchapter II of chapter 53 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 5325 (as added by subsection (b) of this section) the following new section:

"§ 5326. Records of certain domestic coin and currency transactions

"(a) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary of the Treasury finds, upon the Secretary's own initiative or at the request of an appropriate Federal or State law enforcement official, that reasonable grounds exist for concluding that additional recordkeeping and reporting requirements are necessary to carry out the purposes of this subtitle and prevent evasions thereof, the Secretary may issue an order requiring any domestic financial institution or group of domestic financial institutions in a geographic area—

"(1) to obtain such information as the Secretary may describe in such order concerning—

"(A) any transaction in which such financial institution is involved for the payment, receipt, or transfer of United States coins or currency (or such other monetary instruments as the Secretary may describe in such order) the total amounts or denominations of which are equal to or greater than an amount which the Secretary may prescribe; and

"(B) any other person participating in such transaction;

"(2) to maintain a record of such information for such period of time as the Secretary may require; and

"(3) to file a report with respect to any transaction described in paragraph (1)(A) in the manner and to the extent specified in the order.

"(b) MAXIMUM EFFECTIVE PERIOD FOR ORDER.—No order issued under subsection (a) shall be effective for more than 60 days unless renewed pursuant to the requirements of subsection (a).".

(d) REGULATIONS AND PENALTIES.—

(1) INSURED BANKS.—Section 21 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1829b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j) CIVIL PENALTIES.—

"(1) PENALTY IMPOSED.—Any insured bank and any director, officer, or employee of an insured bank who willfully or through gross negligence violates any regulation prescribed under subsection (b) shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000.

"(2) TREATMENT OF CONTINUING VIOLATION.—A separate violation of any regulation prescribed under subsection (b) of this section occurs for each day the violation continues and at each office, branch, or place of business at which such violation occurs.

"(3) ASSESSMENT.—Any penalty imposed under paragraph (1) shall be assessed, mitigated, and collected in the manner provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 5321 of title 31, United States Code.".

(2) INSURED INSTITUTIONS.—Section 411 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1730d) is amended—

(A) by striking out "The Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "(a) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary"; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) CIVIL PENALTIES.—

"(1) PENALTY IMPOSED.—Any insured institution and any director, officer, or employee of an insured institution who willfully or through gross negligence violates any regulation prescribed under subsection (a) of this section shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000.

"(2) TREATMENT OF CONTINUING VIOLATION.—A separate violation of any regulation prescribed under subsection (a) of this section occurs for each day the violation continues and at each office, branch, or place of business at which such violation occurs.

"(3) ASSESSMENT.—Any penalty imposed under paragraph (1) shall be assessed, mitigated, and collected in the manner provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 5321 of title 31, United States Code.".

(3) OTHER FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—

(A) INSTITUTIONS SUBJECT TO RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENT.—Section 123(b) of Public Law 91-508 (12 U.S.C. 1953(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) INSTITUTIONS SUBJECT TO RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.—The authority of the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (a) extends to any financial institution (as defined in section 5312(a)(2) of title 31, United States Code), other than any insured bank (as defined in section 3(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) and any insured institution (as defined in section 401(a) of the National Housing Act), and any partner, officer, director, or employee of any such financial institution.".

(B) CIVIL PENALTIES.—Section 125(a) of Public Law 91-508 (12 U.S.C. 1955(a)) is amended—

(i) by striking out "$1,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$10,000";

(ii) by inserting "or grossly negligent" after "willful"; and

"(iii) by inserting "or through gross negligence" after "willfully".

(e) DELEGATION OF ENFORCEMENT POWER TO POSTAL SERVICE.—Section 5318(a)(1) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting "and the Postal Service" after "appropriate supervising agency".

(f) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 53 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new items:

"5325. Identification required to purchase certain monetary instruments.
"5326. Records of certain domestic coin and currency transactions.".

(g) TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.—

(1) Section 5312(a)(5) of title 31, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by inserting a comma after "Puerto Rico"; and

(B) by striking the second comma after "Pacific Islands".

(2) The first sentence of section 5321(a)(1) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting "(if any)" after "transaction".

SEC. 6186. RIGHT TO FINANCIAL PRIVACY ACT AMENDMENTS.

(a) CLARIFICATION OF RIGHT OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO REPORT SUSPECTED VIOLATIONS.—Section 1103(c) of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3403(c)) is amended by inserting ", corporation," after "individual".

(b) TRANSFER BY GOVERNMENT AGENCY OF RECORDS TO ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION.—Section 1112 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3412) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) TRANSFER TO ATTORNEY GENERAL.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this title shall apply when financial records obtained by an agency or department of the United States are disclosed or transferred to the Attorney General upon the certification by a supervisory level official of the transferring agency or department that—

"(A) there is reason to believe that the records may be relevant to a violation of Federal criminal law; and

"(B) the records were obtained in the exercise of the agency's or department's supervisory or regulatory functions.

"(2) LIMITATION ON USE.—Records so transferred shall be used only for criminal investigative or prosecutive purposes by the Department of Justice and shall, upon completion of the investigation or prosecution (including any appeal), be returned only to the transferring agency or department.".

(c) FINANCIAL RECORDS OF INSIDERS.—Section 1113 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3413) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(l) CRIMES AGAINST FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS BY INSIDERS.—Nothing in this title shall apply when any financial institution or supervisory agency provides any financial record of any officer, director, employee, or controlling shareholder (within the meaning of subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 2(a)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 or subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 408(a)(2) of the National Housing Act) of such institution, or of any major borrower from such institution who there is reason to believe may be acting in concert with any such officer, director, employee, or controlling shareholder, to the Attorney General of the United States, to a State law enforcement agency, or, in the case of a possible violation of subchapter II of chapter 53 of title 31, United States Code, to the Secretary of the Treasury if there is reason to believe that such record is relevant to a possible violation by such person of—

"(1) any law relating to crimes against financial institutions or supervisory agencies by directors, officers, employees, or controlling shareholders of, or by borrowers from, financial institutions; or

"(2) any provision of subchapter II of chapter 53 of title 31, United States Code.".

(d) GOOD FAITH AS A DEFENSE FROM LIABILITY FOR DISCLOSURE OF FINANCIAL RECORDS OF INSIDERS.—Section 1117(c) of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3417(c)) is amended—

SEC. 6187. STUDY OF WITHDRAWAL OF LEGAL TENDER STATUS OF $100 FEDERAL RESERVE NOTES.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with appropriate law enforcement agencies, shall conduct a study of the feasibility of withdrawing the legal tender status of $100 Federal Reserve notes.

(b) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—The study conducted pursuant to subsection (a) by the Secretary of the Treasury shall include an analysis of the following factors:

(1) Whether $100 Federal Reserve notes are being used predominately for illegal activities, especially drug-related transactions.

(2) Whether withdrawing the legal tender status of $100 Federal Reserve notes would help deter such illegal activities.

(3) Whether withdrawing the legal tender status of $100 Federal Reserve notes would impair legitimate business transactions.

(4) Whether withdrawing the legal tender status of $50 Federal Reserve notes (in addition to the $100 notes) would result in even greater deterrence of illegal activities.

(c) REPORT REQUIRED.—Before the end of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit a report to the Congress on the study conducted pursuant to subsection (a).

Subtitle F—Sense of Congress That Proposals To Legalize Illicit Drugs Should Be Rejected

SEC. 6201. SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT PROPOSALS TO LEGALIZE ILLICIT DRUGS SHOULD BE REJECTED.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) proposals to combat sale and use of illicit drugs by legalization should be rejected; and

(2) consideration should be given only to proposals to attack directly the supply of, and demand for, illicit drugs, such as proposals to strengthen and expand penalties for sale and use, proposals to encourage greater multinational cooperation in eradication and interdiction, and proposals to promote educational awareness programs for young people.

Subtitle G—Firearms Provisions

SEC. 6211. INTERDICTION OF SUPPLY OF FIREARMS TO DRUG TRAFFICKERS.

Section 924 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) Whoever, with the intent to engage in conduct which—

"(1) constitutes an offense listed in section 1961(1),

"(2) is punishable under the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.),

"(3) violates any State law relating to any controlled substance (as defined in section 102(6) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802(6))), or

"(4) constitutes a crime of violence (as defined in subsection (c)(3)), travels from any State or foreign country into any other State and acquires, transfers, or attempts to acquire or transfer, a firearm in such other State in furtherance of such purpose, shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, fined in accordance with this title, or both.

"(g) Whoever knowingly transfers a firearm, knowing that such firearm will be used to commit a crime of violence (as defined in subsection (c)(3)) or drug trafficking crime (as defined in subsection (c)(2)) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, fined in accordance with this title, or both.".

SEC. 6212. CLARIFICATION OF DEFINITION OF DRUG TRAFFICKING CRIMES IN WHICH USE OR CARRYING OF FIREARMS AND ARMOR PIERCING AMMUNITION IS PROHIBITED.

Paragraph (2) of section 924(c) of title 18, United States Code, and paragraph (2) of section 929(a) of title 18, United States Code, are each amended to read as follows:

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'drug trafficking crime' means any felony punishable under the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.).".

SEC. 6213. IDENTIFICATION OF FELONS AND OTHER PERSONS INELIGIBLE TO PURCHASE HANDGUNS.

(a) IDENTIFICATION OF FELONS INELIGIBLE TO PURCHASE HANDGUNS.—The Attorney General shall develop a system for immediate and accurate identification of felons who attempt to purchase 1 or more firearms but are ineligible to purchase firearms by reason of section 922(g)(1) of title 18, United States Code. The system shall be accessible to dealers but only for the purpose of determining whether a potential purchaser is a convicted felon. The Attorney General shall establish a plan (including a cost analysis of the proposed system) for implementation of the system. In developing the system, the Attorney General shall consult with the Secretary of the Treasury, other Federal, State, and local law enforcement officials with expertise in the area, and other experts. The Attorney General shall begin implementation of the system 30 days after the report to the Congress as provided in subsection (b).

(b) Report to Congress.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall report to the Congress a description of the system referred to in subsection (a) and a plan (including a cost analysis of the proposed system) for implementation of the system. Such report may include, if appropriate, recommendations for modifications of the system and legislation necessary in order to fully implement such system.

(c) Additional Study of Other Persons Ineligible To Purchase Firearms.—The Attorney General in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury shall conduct a study to determine if an effective method for immediate and accurate identification of other persons who attempt to purchase 1 or more firearms but are ineligible to purchase firearms by reason of section 922(g) of title 18, United States Code. In conducting the study, the Attorney General shall consult with the Secretary of the Treasury, other Federal, State, and local law enforcement officials with expertise in the area, and other experts. Such study shall be completed within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall be submitted to the Congress and made available to the public. Such study may include, if appropriate, recommendations for legislation.

(d) Definitions.—As used in this section, the terms "firearm" and "dealer" shall have the meanings given such terms in section 921(a) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 6214. REVOCATION OF PROBATION.

Section 3565 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) Mandatory Revocation for Possession of a Firearm.—If the defendant is in actual possession of a firearm, as that term is defined in section 921 of this title, at any time prior to the expiration or termination of the term of probation, the court shall, after a hearing pursuant to Rule 32.1 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, revoke the sentence of probation and impose any other sentence that was available under subchapter A at the time of the initial sentencing.".

SEC. 6215. PROHIBITION AGAINST FIREARMS AND DANGEROUS WEAPONS IN FEDERAL FACILITIES.

(a) In General.—Chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§930. Possession of firearms and dangerous weapons in Federal facilities

"(a) Except as provided in subsection (c), whoever knowingly possesses or causes to be present a firearm or other dangerous weapon in a Federal facility, or attempts to do so, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

"(b) Whoever, with intent that a firearm or other dangerous weapon be used in the commission of a crime, knowingly possesses or causes to be present such firearm or dangerous weapon in a Federal facility, or attempts to do so, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(1) the lawful performance of official duties by an officer, agent, or employee of the United States, a State, or a political subdivision thereof, who is authorized by law to engage in or supervise the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of any violation of law;

"(2) the possession of a firearm or other dangerous weapon by a Federal official or a member of the Armed Forces if such possession is authorized by law; or

"(3) the lawful carrying of firearms or other dangerous weapons in a Federal facility incident to hunting or other lawful purposes.

"(d) Nothing in this section limits the power of a court of the United States to punish for contempt or to promulgate rules or orders regulating, restricting, or prohibiting the possession of weapons within any building housing such court or any of its proceedings, or upon any grounds appurtenant to such building.

"(e) As used in this section:

"(1) The term 'Federal facility' means a building or part thereof owned or leased by the Federal Government, where Federal employees are regularly present for the purpose of performing their official duties.

"(2) The term 'dangerous weapon' means a weapon, device, instrument, material, or substance, animate or inanimate, that is used for, or is readily capable of, causing death or serious bodily injury, except that such term does not include a pocket knife with a blade of less than 2½ inches in length.

"(f) Notice of the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) shall be posted conspicuously at each public entrance to each Federal facility, and no person shall be convicted of an offense under subsection (a) with respect to a Federal facility if such notice is not so posted at such facility, unless such person had actual notice of subsection (a).".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections for chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"930. Possession of firearms and dangerous weapons in Federal facilities.".

Subtitle H—Investigative Powers of Postal Service Personnel and National Forest System Drug Control

SEC. 6251. INVESTIGATIVE POWERS OF POSTAL SERVICE PERSONNEL.

(a) In General.—Section 3061 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§3061. Investigative powers of Postal Service personnel

"(a) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, Postal Inspectors and other agents of the United States Postal Service designated by the Board of Governors to investigate criminal matters related to the Postal Service and the mails may—

"(1) serve warrants and subpoenas issued under the authority of the United States;

"(2) make arrests without warrant for offenses against the United States committed in their presence;

"(3) make arrests without warrant for felonies cognizable under the laws of the United States if they have reasonable grounds to believe that the person to be arrested has committed or is committing such a felony;

"(4) carry firearms; and

"(5) make seizures of property as provided by law.

"(b) The powers granted by subsection (a) of this section shall be exercised only—

"(1) in the enforcement of laws regarding property in the custody of the Postal Service, property of the Postal Service, the use of the mails, and other postal offenses; and

"(2) to the extent authorized by the Attorney General pursuant to agreement between the Attorney General and the Postal Service, in the enforcement of other laws of the United States, if the Attorney General determines that violations of such laws have a detrimental effect upon the operations of the Postal Service.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The item relating to section 3061 in the table of sections of chapter 203 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"3061. Investigative powers of Postal Service personnel.

SEC. 6252. POSTAL SERVICE FUND AMENDMENTS.

Section 2003(b)(7) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out "administrative"; and

(2) by striking out "under title 18".

SEC. 6253. CIVIL FORFEITURE AUTHORITY OF THE POSTAL SERVICE UNDER THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.

(a) In General.—Section 511 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881), as amended by section 6159, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(l) The functions of the Attorney General under this section shall be carried out by the Postal Service pursuant to such agreement as may be entered into between the Attorney General and the Postal Service.".

(b) Deposits of Proceeds in Postal Service Fund.—Section 511(e)(2)(B) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(e)(2)(B)) is amended by striking out the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof the following: ", except that, with respect to forfeitures conducted by the Postal Service, the Postal Service shall deposit in the Postal Service Fund, under section 2003(b)(7) of title 39, United States Code, such moneys and proceeds.".

SEC. 6254. NATIONAL FOREST SYSTEM, NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM, AND BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT PUBLIC LANDS SAFETY.

(a) Findings.—Congress finds that—

(1) National Forest System lands continue to be a haven for the unlawful production of marijuana and other controlled substances, which—

(A) endangers the public in its use of National Forest System lands;

(B) interferes with the ability of the Forest Service to effectively manage the natural resources and activities within the National Forest System; and

(C) causes damage and destruction of the natural resources and facilities managed by the Forest Service;

(2) the unlawful production of marijuana and other controlled substances often—

(A) is generally harmful to the environment and public health and safety;

(B) pollutes the air, soil, and water; and

(C) is harmful to wildlife;

(3) the Forest Service needs additional authority to adequately deal with the problem of controlled substance production that affects the administration of the National Forest System;

(4) the Forest Service needs to be able to exercise its investigative authorities outside the boundaries of the National Forest System for drug-related crimes arising from within the National Forest System in order to be effective in deterring such crime;

(5) the authority and powers of the Forest Service are not intended to be in conflict or interfere with the statutory authority, powers, or responsibilities of any State or political subdivision thereof; and

(6) the Forest Service, in the exercise of its law enforcement powers, should cooperate to every extent possible with any other Federal, State, or local law enforcement authority having jurisdiction in areas where national forests are located, particularly where coordinated investigative and enforcement actions can be effective to control crime which affects multiple agencies.

(b) Powers.—Section 15003 of the National Forest System Drug Control Act of 1986 (16 U.S.C. 559c) is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "500 officers and employees" and inserting in lieu thereof "1,000 special agents and law enforcement officers"; and

(B) by striking out "within the boundaries of the National Forest System";

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting after "conduct" the following: ", within the exterior boundaries of the National Forest System,"; and

(B) by inserting before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: "and to conduct such investigations and enforcement of such laws outside the exterior boundaries of the National Forest System for offenses committed within the National Forest System or which affect the administration of the National Forest System (including the pursuit of persons suspected of such offenses who flee the National Forest System to avoid arrest)"; and

(3) in paragraph (3), by inserting before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: ", for offenses committed within the National Forest System or which affect the administration of the National Forest System;".

(c) Cooperation.—Section 15004 of the National Forest System Drug Control Act of 1986 (16 U.S.C. 559d) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking out "and" at the end thereof;

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking out ", within the boundaries of the National Forest System." and inserting in lieu thereof "for offenses committed within the National Forest System or which affect the administration of the National Forest System."; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(3) the Forest Service shall cooperate with the Attorney General in carrying out the seizure and forfeiture provisions of section 511 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881) for violations of the Controlled Substances Act relating to offenses committed within the National Forest System, or which affect the administration of the National Forest System;

"(4) the Secretary is authorized to designate law enforcement officers of any other Federal agency, when the Secretary determines such designation to be economical and in the public interest, and with the concurrence of that agency, to exercise the powers and authorities of the Forest Service while assisting the Forest Service in the National Forest System, or for activities administered by the Forest Service; and

"(5) the Forest Service is authorized to accept law enforcement designation from any other Federal agency or agency of a State or political subdivision thereof for the purpose of cooperating in a multi-agency law enforcement task force investigation of violations of the Controlled Substances Act and other offenses committed in the course of or in connection with such violations.".

(d) Authorization of Appropriations.—

(1) National forest system.—Section 15006 of title XV of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 (16 U.S.C. 559e) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 15006. FOREST SERVICE AUTHORIZATION.

"In order to improve Federal law enforcement activities relating to the use and production of narcotics and controlled substances on lands administered by the Forest Service, from amounts appropriated there shall be made available to the Secretary, in addition to sums made available under other authority of law, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, and for each fiscal year thereafter, to be used for employment and training of additional and existing Forest Service law enforcement personnel, for expenses related to such employment, training, equipment, and facilities, and for cooperative programs with State and local law enforcement agencies.".

(2) National park service police.—Section 5052 of title V of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 (16 U.S.C. 1 note) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5052. NATIONAL PARK AUTHORIZATION.

"In order to improve Federal law enforcement activities relating to the use and production of narcotics and controlled substances in National Park System units, from amounts appropriated there shall be made available to the Secretary of the Interior, in addition to sums made available under other authority of law, $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, and for each fiscal year thereafter, to be used for the employment and training of officers or employees of the Department of the Interior designated pursuant to section 10(b) of the Act of August 18, 1970 (16 U.S.C. 1a-6), for equipment and facilities to be used by such personnel, and for expenses related to such employment, training, equipment, and facilities.".

(3) Bureau of land management.—Title V of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subtitle:

"Subtitle C—Bureau of Land Management Program

"SEC. 5061. SHORT TITLE.

"This subtitle may be cited as the 'Bureau of Land Management Drug Enforcement Supplemental Authority Act'.

"SEC. 5062. BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT AUTHORIZATION.

"In order to improve Federal law enforcement activities relating to the use and production of narcotics and controlled substances on Bureau of Land Management public lands, from amounts appropriated there are made available to the Secretary of the Interior, in addition to sums made available under other authority of law, $1,500,000 for fiscal year 1989, and for each fiscal year thereafter, to be used for the employment and training of additional and existing personnel, for equipment and facilities to be used by such personnel, and for expenses related to such employment, training, equipment, and facilities.".

(e) Designation of Authority.—The National Forest System Drug Control Act of 1986 is amended by inserting after section 15007 (16 U.S.C. 559f) the following new section:

"SEC. 15008. DESIGNATION AUTHORITY OF SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE.

"(a) Purpose.—It is the purpose of this section to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make law enforcement operations more efficient in connection with the administration and use of the National Forest System.

"(b) Officers of Other Agencies.—The Secretary is authorized to designate law enforcement officers of any other Federal agency, when the Secretary determines such designation to be economical and in the public interest, and with the concurrence of that agency, to exercise the powers and authorities of the Forest Service while assisting the Forest Service in the National Forest System, or for activities administered by the Forest Service.

"(c) Acceptance by Forest Service.—The Forest Service is authorized to accept law enforcement designation from any other Federal agency or agency of a State or political subdivision thereof for the purpose of cooperating in the investigation and enforcement of any Federal or State law or ordinance and regulation of any such agency, when such investigation or enforcement is mutually beneficial to the National Forest System and the cooperating agency or jurisdiction, upon entering into a memorandum of understanding or cooperative agreement with such agency or jurisdiction.".

(f) Criminal Penalty for Placing Hazardous or Injurious Devices on Federal Lands.—Chapter 91 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§1864. Hazardous or injurious devices on Federal lands

"(a) Whoever—

"(1) with the intent to violate the Controlled Substances Act,

"(2) with the intent to obstruct or harass the harvesting of timber, or

"(3) with reckless disregard to the risk that another person will be placed in danger of death or bodily injury and under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to such risk, uses a hazardous or injurious device on Federal land, on an Indian reservation, or on an Indian allotment while the title to such allotment is held in trust by the United States or while such allotment remains inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States shall be punished under subsection (b).

"(b) An individual who violates subsection (a) shall—

"(1) if death of an individual results, be fined under this title or imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both;

"(2) if serious bodily injury to any individual results, be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than twenty years, or both;

"(3) if bodily injury to any individual results, be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both;

"(4) if damage exceeding $10,000 to the property of any individual results, be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both; and

"(5) in any other case, be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than one year.

"(c) Any individual who is punished under subsections (b)(3), (4), or (5) after one or more prior convictions under any such subsection shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both.

"(d) As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'serious bodily injury' means bodily injury which involves—

"(A) a substantial risk of death;

"(B) extreme physical pain;

"(C) protracted and obvious disfigurement; and

"(D) protracted loss or impairment of the function of bodily member, organ, or mental faculty; and

(A) a defendant convicted of violating section 342 of title 18, United States Code, under circumstances in which death results, shall be assigned an offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is not less than level 26; and

(B) a defendant convicted of violating section 342 of title 18, United States Code, under circumstances in which serious bodily injury results, shall be assigned an offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is not less than level 21.

(2) If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instruction set forth in paragraph (1) so as to achieve a comparable result.

SEC. 6483. AMENDMENT TO THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure are amended by adding after Rule 12.2 the following:

"Rule 12.3. Notice of Defense Based Upon Public Authority

"(a) Notice by Defendant; Government Response; Disclosure of Witnesses.—

"(1) Defendant's notice and government's response.—A defendant intending to claim a defense of actual or believed exercise of public authority on behalf of a law enforcement or Federal intelligence agency at the time of the alleged offense shall, within the time provided for the filing of pretrial motions or at such later time as the court may direct, serve upon the attorney for the Government a written notice of such intention and file a copy of such notice with the clerk. Such notice shall identify the law enforcement or Federal intelligence agency and any member of such agency on behalf of which and the period of time in which the defendant claims the actual or believed exercise of public authority occurred. If the notice identifies a Federal intelligence agency, the copy filed with the clerk shall be under seal. Within ten days after receiving the defendant's notice, but in no event less than twenty days before the trial, the attorney for the Government shall serve upon the defendant or the defendant's attorney a written response which shall admit or deny that the defendant exercised the public authority identified in the defendant's notice.

"(2) Disclosure of witnesses.—At the time that the Government serves its response to the notice or thereafter, but in no event less than twenty days before the trial, the attorney for the Government may serve upon the defendant or the defendant's attorney a written demand for the names and addresses of the witnesses, if any, upon whom the defendant intends to rely in establishing the defense identified in the notice. Within seven days after receiving the Government's demand, the defendant shall serve upon the attorney for the Government a written statement of the names and addresses of any such witnesses. Within seven days after receiving the defendant's written statement, the attorney for the Government shall serve upon the defendant or the defendant's attorney a written statement of the names and addresses of the witnesses, if any, upon whom the Government intends to rely in opposing the defense identified in the notice.

"(3) Additional time.—If good cause is shown, the court may allow a party additional time to comply with any obligation imposed by this rule.

"(b) Continuing Duty to Disclose.—If, prior to or during trial, a party learns of any additional witness whose identity, if known, should have been included in the written statement furnished under subdivision (a)(2) of this rule, that party shall promptly notify in writing the other party or the other party's attorney of the name and address of any such witness.

"(c) Failure to Comply.—If a party fails to comply with the requirements of this rule, the court may exclude the testimony of any undisclosed witness offered in support of or in opposition to the defense, or enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances. This rule shall not limit the right of the defendant to testify.

"(d) Protective Procedures Unaffected.—This rule shall be in addition to and shall not supersede the authority of the court to issue appropriate protective orders, or the authority of the court to order that any pleading be filed under seal.

"(e) Inadmissibility of Withdrawn Defense Based Upon Public Authority.—Evidence of an intention as to which notice was given under subdivision (a), later withdrawn, is not, in any civil or criminal proceeding, admissible against the person who gave notice of the intention.".

SEC. 6484. WITNESS SERVING SENTENCE ABROAD.

(a) In General.—Chapter 223 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 3508. Custody and return of foreign witnesses

"(a) When the testimony of a person who is serving a sentence, is in pretrial detention, or is otherwise being held in custody, in a foreign country, is needed in a State or Federal criminal proceeding, the Attorney General shall, when he deems it appropriate in the exercise of his discretion, have the authority to request the temporary transfer of that person to the United States for the purposes of giving such testimony, to transport such person to the United States in custody, to maintain the custody of such person while he is in the United States, and to return such person to the foreign country.

"(b) Where the transfer to the United States of a person in custody for the purposes of giving testimony is provided for by treaty or convention, by this section, or both, that person shall be returned to the foreign country from which he is transferred. In no event shall the return of such person require any request for extradition or extradition proceedings, or proceedings under the immigration laws.

"(c) Where there is a treaty or convention between the United States and the foreign country in which the witness is being held in custody which provides for the transfer, custody and return of such witnesses, the terms and conditions of that treaty shall apply. Where there is no such treaty or convention, the Attorney General may exercise the authority described in paragraph (a) if both the foreign country and the witness give their consent.".

(b) Table of Contents.—The table of contents for chapter 223 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"3508. Custody and return of foreign witnesses.".

SEC. 6485. CLARIFICATIONS REGARDING DRUG PARAPHERNALIA.

Section 1822 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-570; 21 U.S.C. 857) is amended—

(1) in subsection (d), by striking out "in violation of the Controlled Substances Act" and inserting ", possession of which is unlawful under the Controlled Substances Act"; and

(2) in subsection (f)(2) by striking out "primarily intended for use with" and inserting "traditionally intended for use with".

SEC. 6486. CIVIL PENALTY FOR POSSESSION OF SMALL AMOUNTS OF CERTAIN CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.

(a) In General.—Any individual who knowingly possesses a controlled substance that is listed in section 401(b)(1)(A) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1)(A)) in violation of section 404 of that Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1)(A)) in an amount that, as specified by regulation of the Attorney General, is a personal use amount shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty in an amount not to exceed $10,000 for each such violation.

(b) Income and Net Assets.—The income and net assets of an individual shall not be relevant to the determination whether to assess a civil penalty under this section or to prosecute the individual criminally. However, in determining the amount of a penalty under this section, the income and net assets of an individual shall be considered.

(c) Prior Conviction.—A civil penalty may not be assessed under this section if the individual previously was convicted of a Federal or State offense relating to a controlled substance as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802).

(d) Limitation on Number of Assessments.—A civil penalty may not be assessed on an individual under this section on more than two separate occasions.

(e) Assessment.—A civil penalty under this section may be assessed by the Attorney General only by an order made on the record after opportunity for a hearing in accordance with section 554 of title 5, United States Code. The Attorney General shall provide written notice to the individual who is the subject of the proposed order informing the individual of the opportunity to receive such a hearing with respect to the proposed order. The hearing may be held only if the individual makes a request for the hearing before the expiration of the 30-day period beginning on the date such notice is issued.

(f) Compromise.—The Attorney General may compromise, modify, or remit, with or without conditions, any civil penalty imposed under this section.

(g) Judicial Review.—If the Attorney General issues an order pursuant to subsection (e) after a hearing described in such subsection, the individual who is subject of the order may, before the expiration of the 30-day period beginning on the date the order is issued, bring a civil action in the appropriate district court of the United States. In such action, the law and the facts of the violation and the assessment of the civil penalty shall be determined de novo, and shall include the right of a trial by jury, the right to counsel, and the right to confront witnesses. The facts of the violation shall be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

(h) Civil Action.—If an individual does not request a hearing pursuant to subsection (e) and the Attorney General issues an order pursuant to such subsection, or if an individual does not under subsection (g) seek judicial review of such an order, the Attorney General may commence a civil action in any appropriate district court of the United States for the purpose of recovering the amount assessed and an amount representing interest at a rate computed in accordance with section 1961 of title 28, United States Code. Such interest shall accrue from the expiration of the 30-day period described in subsection (g). In such an action, the decision of the Attorney General to issue the order, and the amount of the penalty assessed by the Attorney General, shall not be subject to review.

(i) Limitation.—The Attorney General may not under this subsection commence proceeding against an individual after the expiration of the 5-year period beginning on the date on which the individual allegedly violated subsection (a).

(j) Expungement Procedures.—The Attorney General shall dismiss the proceedings under this section against an individual upon application of such individual at any time after the expiration of 3 years if—

(1) the individual has not previously been assessed a civil penalty under this section;

(2) the individual has paid the assessment;

(3) the individual has complied with any conditions imposed by the Attorney General;

(4) the individual has not been convicted of a Federal or State offense relating to a controlled substance as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802); and

(5) the individual agrees to submit to a drug test, and such test shows the individual to be drug free.

A nonpublic record of a disposition under this subsection shall be retained by the Department of Justice solely for the purpose of determining in any subsequent proceeding whether the person qualified for a civil penalty or expungement under this section. If a record is expunged under this subsection, an individual concerning whom such an expungement has been made shall not be held thereafter under any provision of law to be guilty of perjury, false swearing, or making a false statement by reason of his failure to recite or acknowledge a proceeding under this section or the results thereof in response to an inquiry made of him for any purpose.

SEC. 6487. PROTECTION OF FORMER FEDERAL OFFICIALS AND MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY OF FORMER FEDERAL OFFICIALS.

(a) Former Federal Officials.—Section 111 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 111. Assaulting, resisting, or impeding certain officers or employees

"(a) In General.—Whoever—

"(1) forcibly assaults, resists, opposes, impedes, intimidates, or interferes with any person designated in section 1114 of this title while engaged in or on account of the performance of official duties; or

"(2) forcibly assaults or intimidates any person who formerly served as a person designated in section 1114 on account of the performance of official duties during such person's term of service, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

"(b) ENHANCED PENALTY.—Whoever, in the commission of any acts described in subsection (a), uses a deadly or dangerous weapon, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.".

(f) FAMILY MEMBERS OF FORMER FEDERAL OFFICIALS.—Section 115(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) Whoever—

"(A) assaults, kidnaps, or murders, or attempts to kidnap or murder, or threatens to assault kidnap or murder a member of the immediate family of a United States official, a United States judge, a Federal law enforcement officer, or an official whose killing would be a crime under section 1114 of this title; or

"(B) threatens to assault, kidnap, or murder, a United States official, a United States judge, a Federal law enforcement officer, or an official whose killing would be a crime under such section, with intent to impede, intimidate, or interfere with such official, judge, or law enforcement officer while engaged in the performance of official duties, or with intent to retaliate against such official, judge, or law enforcement officer on account of the performance of official duties, shall be punished as provided in subsection (b).

"(2) Whoever assaults, kidnaps, or murders, or attempts to kidnap or murder a member of the immediate family of any person who formerly served as a person designated in paragraph (1), with intent to retaliate against such person on account of the performance of official duties during the term of service of such person, shall be punished as provided in subsection (b).".

Subtitle A—Death Penalty

SEC. 7001. DEATH PENALTY FOR DRUG-RELATED KILLINGS.

(a) ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.—Section 408 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

"Death Penalty

"(e)(1) In addition to the other penalties set forth in this section—

"(A) any person engaging in or working in furtherance of a continuing criminal enterprise, or any person engaging in an offense punishable under section 841(b)(1)(A) or section 960(b)(1) who intentionally kills or counsels, commands, induces, procures, or causes the intentional killing of an individual and such killing results, shall be sentenced to any term of imprisonment, which shall not be less than 20 years, and which may be up to life imprisonment, or may be sentenced to death; and

"(B) any person, during the commission of, in furtherance of, or while attempting to avoid apprehension, prosecution or service of a prison sentence for, a felony violation of this title or title III who intentionally kills or counsels, commands, induces, procures, or causes the intentional killing of any Federal, State, or local law enforcement officer engaged in, or on account of, the performance of such officer's official duties and such killing results, shall be sentenced to any term of imprisonment, which shall not be less than 20 years, and which may be up to life imprisonment, or may be sentenced to death.

"(2) As used in paragraph (1)(b), the term 'law enforcement officer' means a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, prosecution or adjudication of an offense, and includes those engaged in corrections, probation, or parole functions.".

(b) PROCEDURE APPLICABLE WITH RESPECT TO THE DEATH PENALTY.—Section 408 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Hearing Required with Respect to the Death Penalty

"(g) A person shall be subjected to the penalty of death for any offense under this section only if a hearing is held in accordance with this section.

"Notice by the Government in Death Penalty Cases

"(h)(1) Whenever the Government intends to seek the death penalty for an offense under this section for which one of the sentences provided is death, the attorney for the Government, a reasonable time before trial or acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, shall sign and file with the court, and serve upon the defendant, a notice—

"(A) that the Government in the event of conviction will seek the sentence of death; and

"(B) setting forth the aggravating factors enumerated in subsection (n) and any other aggravating factors which the Government will seek to prove as the basis for the death penalty.

"(2) The court may permit the attorney for the Government to amend this notice for good cause shown.

"Hearing Before Court or Jury

"(i)(1) When the attorney for the Government has filed a notice as required under subsection (h) and the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense under subsection (e), the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or any other judge if the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. The hearing shall be conducted—

"(A) before the jury which determined the defendant's guilt;

"(B) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

"(i) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

"(ii) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

"(iii) the jury which determined the defendant's guilt has been discharged for good cause; or

"(iv) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, redetermination of the sentence under this section is necessary; or

"(C) before the court alone, upon the motion of the defendant and with the approval of the Government.

"(2) A jury impaneled under paragraph (1)(B) shall consist of 12 members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate with the approval of the court that it shall consist of any number less than 12.

"Proof of Aggravating and Mitigating Factors

"(j) Notwithstanding rule 32(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, when a defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense under subsection (e), no presentence report shall be prepared. In the sentencing hearing, information may be presented as to matters relating to any of the aggravating or mitigating factors set forth in subsections (m) and (n), or any other mitigating factor or any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (h)(1)(B). Where information is presented relating to any of the aggravating factors set forth in subsection (n), information may be presented relating to any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (h)(1)(B). Information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits if the hearing is held before a jury or judge not present during the trial, or at the trial judge's discretion. Any other information relevant to such mitigating or aggravating factors may be presented by either the Government or the defendant, regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury. The Government and the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any of the aggravating or mitigating factors and as to appropriateness in that case of imposing a sentence of death. The Government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The Government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of any aggravating factor is on the Government, and is not satisfied unless established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless established by a preponderance of the evidence.

"Return of Findings

"(k) The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factors set forth in subsection (n), found to exist. If one of the aggravating factors set forth in subsection (n)(1) and another of the aggravating factors set forth in paragraphs (2) through (12) of subsection (n) is found to exist, a special finding identifying any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (h)(1)(B), may be returned. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by one or more of the members of the jury, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such a factor established for purposes of this subsection, regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established. A finding with respect to any aggravating factor must be unanimous. If an aggravating factor set forth in subsection (n)(1) is not found to exist or an aggravating factor set forth in subsection (n)(1) is found to exist but no other aggravating factor set forth in subsection (n) is found to exist, the court shall impose a sentence, other than death, authorized by law. If an aggravating factor set forth in subsection (n)(1) and one or more of the other aggravating factors set forth in subsection (n) are found to exist, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall then consider whether the aggravating factors found to exist sufficiently outweigh any mitigating factor or factors found to exist, or in the absence of mitigating factors, whether the aggravating factors are themselves sufficient to justify a sentence of death. Based upon this consideration, the jury by unanimous vote, or if there is no jury, the court, shall recommend that a sentence of death shall be imposed rather than a sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of release or some other lesser sentence. The jury or the court, regardless of its findings with respect to aggravating and mitigating factors, is never required to impose a death sentence and the jury shall be so instructed.

"Imposition of Sentence

"(l) Upon the recommendation that the sentence of death be imposed, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise the court shall impose a sentence, other than death, authorized by law. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who is under 18 years of age at the time the crime was committed. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who is mentally retarded. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who, as a result of mental disability—

"(1) cannot understand the nature of the pending proceedings, what such person was tried for, the reason for the punishment, or the nature of the punishment; or

"(2) lacks the capacity to recognize or understand facts which would make the punishment unjust or unlawful, or lacks the ability to convey such information to counsel or to the court.

"Mitigating Factors

"(m) In determining whether a sentence of death is to be imposed on a defendant, the finder of fact shall consider mitigating factors, including the following:

"(1) The defendant's capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, regardless of whether the capacity was so impaired as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(2) The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, regardless of whether the duress was of such a degree as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(3) The defendant is punishable as a principal (as defined in section 2 of title 18 of the United States Code) in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, regardless of whether the participation was so minor as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(4) The defendant could not reasonably have foreseen that the defendant's conduct in the course of the commission of murder, or other offense resulting in death for which the defendant was convicted, would cause, or would create a grave risk of causing, death to any person.

"(5) The defendant was youthful, although not under the age of 18.

"(6) The defendant did not have a significant prior criminal record.

"(7) The defendant committed the offense under severe mental or emotional disturbance.

"(8) Another defendant or defendants, equally culpable in the crime, will not be punished by death.

"(9) The victim consented to the criminal conduct that resulted in the victim's death.

"(10) That other factors in the defendant's background or character mitigate against imposition of the death sentence.

"Aggravating Factors for Homicide

"(n) If the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense under subsection (e), the following aggravating factors are the only aggravating factors that shall be considered, unless notice of additional aggravating factors is provided under subsection (h)(1)(B):

"(1) The defendant—

"(A) intentionally killed the victim;

"(B) intentionally inflicted serious bodily injury which resulted in the death of the victim;

"(C) intentionally engaged in conduct intending that the victim be killed or that lethal force be employed against the victim, which resulted in the death of the victim;

"(D) intentionally engaged in conduct which—

"(i) the defendant knew would create a grave risk of death to a person, other than one of the participants in the offense; and

"(ii) resulted in the death of the victim.

"(2) The defendant has been convicted of another Federal offense, or a State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or a sentence of death was authorized by statute.

"(3) The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury upon another person.

"(4) The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the distribution of a controlled substance.

"(5) In the commission of the offense or in escaping apprehension for a violation of subsection (e), the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victims of the offense.

"(6) The defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(7) The defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(8) The defendant committed the offense after substantial planning and premeditation.

"(9) The victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity.

"(10) The defendant had previously been convicted of violating this title or title III for which a sentence of five or more years may be imposed or had previously been convicted of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise.

"(11) The violation of this title in relation to which the conduct described in subsection (e) occurred was a violation of section 405.

"(12) The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner in that it involved torture or serious physical abuse to the victim.

"Right of the Defendant to Justice Without Discrimination

"(o)(1) In any hearing held before a jury under this section, the court shall instruct the jury that in its consideration of whether the sentence of death is justified it shall not consider the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or the victim, and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant, or the victim, may be. The jury shall return to the court a certificate signed by each juror that consideration of the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or the victim was not involved in reaching his or her individual decision, and that the individual juror would have made the same recommendation regarding a sentence for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant, or the victim, may be.

"(2) Not later than one year from the date of enactment of the Anti-Drug Abuse Amendments Act of 1988, the Comptroller General shall conduct a study of the various procedures used by the several States for determining whether or not to impose the death penalty in particular cases, and shall report to the Congress on whether or not any or all of the various procedures create a significant risk that the race of a defendant, or the race of a victim against whom a crime was committed, influence the likelihood that defendants in those States will be sentenced to death. In conducting the study required by this paragraph, the General Accounting Office shall—

"(A) use ordinary methods of statistical analysis, including methods comparable to those ruled admissible by the courts in race discrimination cases under title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964;

"(B) study only crimes occurring after January 1, 1976; and

"(C) determine what, if any, other factors, including any relation between any aggravating or mitigating factors and the race of the victim or the defendant, may account for any evidence that the race of the defendant, or the race of the victim, influences the likelihood that defendants will be sentenced to death. In addition, the General Accounting Office shall examine separately and include in the report, death penalty cases involving crimes similar to those covered under this section.

"Sentencing in Capital Cases in Which Death Penalty is not Sought or Imposed

"(p) If a person is convicted for an offense under subsection (e) and the court does not impose the penalty of death, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

"Appeal in Capital Cases; Counsel for Financially Unable Defendants

"(q)(1) In any case in which the sentence of death is imposed under this section, the sentence of death shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal must be filed within the time prescribed for appeal of judgment in section 2107 of title 28, United States Code. An appeal under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction. Such review shall have priority over all other cases.

"(2) On review of the sentence, the court of appeals shall consider the record, the evidence submitted during the trial, the information submitted during the sentencing hearing, the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing, and the special findings returned under this section.

"(3) The court shall affirm the sentence if it determines that—

"(A) the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor; and

"(B) the information supports the special finding of the existence of every aggravating factor upon which the sentence was based, together with, or the failure to find, any mitigating factors as set forth or allowed in this section.

In all other cases the court shall remand the case for reconsideration under this section. The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of the review of the sentence.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, in every criminal action in which a defendant is charged with a crime which may be punishable by death, a defendant who is or becomes financially unable to obtain adequate representation or investigative, expert, or other reasonably necessary services at any time either—

"(i) before judgment; or

"(ii) after the entry of a judgment imposing a sentence of death but before the execution of that judgment; shall be entitled to the appointment of one or more attorneys and the furnishing of such other services in accordance with paragraphs (5), (6), (7), (8), and (9).

"(B) In any post conviction proceeding under section 2254 or 2255 of title 28, United States Code, seeking to vacate or set aside a death sentence, any defendant who is or becomes financially unable to obtain adequate representation or investigative, expert, or other reasonably necessary services shall be entitled to the appointment of one or more attorneys and the furnishing of such other services in accordance with paragraphs (5), (6), (7), (8), and (9).

"(5) If the appointment is made before judgment, at least one attorney so appointed must have been admitted to practice in the court in which the prosecution is to be tried for not less than five years, and must have had not less than three years experience in the actual trial of felony prosecutions in that court.

"(6) If the appointment is made after judgment, at least one attorney so appointed must have been admitted to practice in the court of appeals for not less than five years, and must have had not less than three years experience in the handling of appeals in that court in felony cases.

"(7) With respect to paragraphs (5) and (6), the court, for good cause, may appoint another attorney whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable him or her to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration to the seriousness of the possible penalty and to the unique and complex nature of the litigation.

"(8) Unless replaced by similarly qualified counsel upon the attorney's own motion or upon motion of the defendant, each attorney so appointed shall represent the defendant throughout every subsequent stage of available judicial proceedings, including pretrial proceedings, trial, sentencing, motions for new trial, appeals, applications, for writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of the United States, and all available post-conviction process, together with applications for stays of execution and other appropriate motions and procedures, and shall also represent the defendant in such competency proceedings and proceedings for executive or other clemency as may be available to the defendant.

"(9) Upon a finding in ex parte proceedings that investigative, expert or other services are reasonably necessary for the representation of the defendant, whether in connection with issues relating to guilt or sentence, the court shall authorize the defendant's attorneys to obtain such services on behalf of the defendant and shall order the payment of fees and expenses therefore, under paragraph (10). Upon a finding that timely procurement of such services could not practicably await prior authorization, the court may authorize the provision of and payment for such services nunc pro tunc.

"(10) Notwithstanding the rates and maximum limits generally applicable to criminal cases and any other provision of law to the contrary, the court shall fix the compensation to be paid to attorneys appointed under this subsection and the fees and expenses to be paid for investigative, expert, and other reasonably necessary services authorized under paragraph (9), at such rates or amounts as the court determines to be reasonably necessary to carry out the requirements of paragraphs (4) through (9).

"Refusal to Participate by State and Federal Correctional Employees

"(r) No employee of any State department of corrections or the Federal Bureau of Prisons and no employee providing services to that department or bureau under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment, or contractual obligation to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participation in executions' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for execution and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.".

SEC. 7002. GAO STUDY OF THE COST OF EXECUTIONS.

(a) STUDY.—No later than three years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall carry out a study to review the cost of implementing the procedures for imposing and carrying out a death sentence prescribed by this title.

(b) SPECIFIC REQUIREMENT.—Such study shall consider, but not be limited to, information concerning impact on workload of the Federal prosecutors and judiciary and law enforcement necessary to obtain capital sentences and executions under this Act.

(c) SUBMISSION OF REPORT.—Not later than four years after date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report describing the results of the study.

(d) Section 3124(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the words "shall be furnished" the words ", pursuant to subsection 3123(b) or section 3125 of this title,".

SEC. 7093. AUTHORITY OF FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES TO BORROW AND INVEST FUNDS.

(a) Grant of Authority.—Chapter 307 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 4128 the following new section:

"§ 4129. Authority to borrow and invest

"(a)(1) As approved by the board of directors, Federal Prison Industries, to such extent and in such amounts as are provided in appropriations Acts, is authorized to issue its obligations to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury, in the Secretary's discretion, may purchase or agree to purchase any such obligations, except that the aggregate amount of obligations issued by Federal Prison Industries under this paragraph that are outstanding at any time may not exceed 25 percent of the net worth of the corporation. For purchases of such obligations by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds of the sale of any securities issued under chapter 31 of title 31 after the date of the enactment of this section, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under that chapter are extended to include such purchases. Each purchase of obligations by the Secretary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be upon such terms and conditions as to yield a return at a rate not less than a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturity. For purposes of the first sentence of this paragraph, the net worth of Federal Prison Industries is the amount by which its assets (including capital) exceed its liabilities.

"(2) The Secretary of the Treasury may sell, upon such terms and conditions and at such price or prices as the Secretary shall determine, any of the obligations acquired by the Secretary under this subsection. All purchases and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this subsection shall be treated as public debt transactions of the United States.

"(b) Federal Prison Industries may request the Secretary of the Treasury to invest excess moneys from the Prison Industries Fund. Such investments shall be in public debt securities with maturities suitable to the needs of the corporation as determined by the board directors, and bearing interest at rates determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration current market yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 307 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"4129. Authority to borrow and invest.".

SEC. 7094. USE OF FUNDS.

Section 4126 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by designating the first through fifth paragraphs as subsections (a) through (e), respectively;

(2) by amending subsection (c), as designated by paragraph (1) of this section, to read as follows:

"(c) The corporation, in accordance with the laws generally applicable to the expenditures of the several departments, agencies, and establishments of the Government, is authorized to employ the fund, and any earnings that may accrue to the corporation—

"(1) as operating capital in performing the duties imposed by this chapter;

"(2) in the lease, purchase, other acquisition, repair, alteration, erection, and maintenance of industrial buildings and equipment;

"(3) in the vocational training of inmates without regard to their industrial or other assignments;

"(4) in paying, under rules and regulations promulgated by the Attorney General, compensation to inmates employed in any industry, or performing outstanding services in institutional operations, and compensation to inmates or their dependents for injuries suffered in any industry or in any work activity in connection with the maintenance or operation of the institution in which the inmates are confined.

In no event may compensation for such injuries be paid in an amount greater than that provided in chapter 81 of title 5."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(f) Funds available to the corporation may be used for the lease, purchase, other acquisition, repair, alteration, erection, or maintenance of facilities only to the extent such facilities are necessary for the industrial operations of the corporation under this chapter. Such funds may not be used for the construction or acquisition of penal or correctional institutions, including camps described in section 4125.".

SEC. 7095. REPORTS TO CONGRESS.

Section 4127 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"The board of directors of Federal Prison Industries shall submit an annual report to the Congress on the conduct of the business of the corporation during each fiscal year, and on the condition of its funds during such fiscal year. Such report shall include a statement of the amount of obligations issued under section 4129(a)(1) during such fiscal year, and an estimate of the amount of obligations that will be so issued in the following fiscal year.".

SEC. 7096. GUIDELINES AND PUBLIC COMMENT ON NEW OR EXPANDED PRODUCTION BY FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES.

Section 4122(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(b)";

(2) by striking out "all physically fit inmates in the United States penal and correctional institutions" and inserting in lieu thereof "the greatest number of those inmates in the United States penal and correctional institutions who are eligible to work as is reasonably possible"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) Federal Prison Industries shall conduct its operations so as to produce products on an economic basis, but shall avoid capturing more than a reasonable share of the market among Federal departments, agencies, and institutions for any specific product. Federal Prison Industries shall concentrate on providing to the Federal Government only those products which permit employment of the greatest number of those inmates who are eligible to work as is reasonably possible.

"(3) Federal Prison Industries shall diversify its products so that its sales are distributed among its industries as broadly as possible.

"(4) Any decision by Federal Prison Industries to produce a new product or to significantly expand the production of an existing product shall be made by the board of directors of the corporation. Before the board of directors makes a final decision, the corporation shall do the following:

"(A) The corporation shall prepare a detailed written analysis of the probable impact on industry and free labor of the plans for new production or expanded production. In such written analysis the corporation shall, at a minimum, identify and consider—

"(i) the number of vendors currently meeting the requirements of the Federal Government for the product;

"(ii) the proportion of the Federal Government market for the product currently served by small businesses, small disadvantaged businesses, or businesses operating in labor surplus areas;

"(iii) the size of the Federal Government and non-Federal Government markets for the product;

"(iv) the projected growth in the Federal Government demand for the product; and

"(v) the projected ability of the Federal Government market to sustain both Federal Prison Industries and private vendors.

"(B) The corporation shall announce in a publication designed to most effectively provide notice to potentially affected private vendors the plans to produce any new product or to significantly expand production of an existing product. The announcement shall also indicate that the analysis prepared under subparagraph (A) is available through the corporation and shall invite comments from private industry regarding the new production or expanded production.

"(C) The corporation shall directly advise those affected trade associations that the corporation can reasonably identify the plans for new production or expanded production, and the corporation shall invite such trade associations to submit comments on those plans.

"(D) The corporation shall provide to the board of directors—

"(i) the analysis prepared under subparagraph (A) on the proposal to produce a new product or to significantly expand the production of an existing product,

"(ii) comments submitted to the corporation on the proposal, and

"(iii) the corporation's recommendations for action on the proposal in light of such comments.

In addition, the board of directors, before making a final decision under this paragraph on a proposal, shall, upon the request of an established trade association or other interested representatives of private industry, provide a reasonable opportunity to such trade association or other representatives to present comments directly to the board of directors on the proposal.

"(5) Federal Prison Industries shall publish in the manner specified in paragraph (4)(B) the final decision of the board with respect to the production of a new product or the significant expansion of the production of an existing product.

"(6) Federal Prison Industries shall publish, after the end of each 6-month period, a list of sales by the corporation for that 6-month period. Such list shall be made available to all interested parties.".

Subtitle C—Sentencing Amendments

SEC. 7101. PRISONERS TRANSFERRED TO THE UNITED STATES.

(a) PRISONERS TRANSFERRED TO THE UNITED STATES.—Chapter 306 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 4106 the following:

"§ 4106A. Transfer of offenders on parole; parole offenders transferred

"(a) Upon the receipt of an offender who is on parole from the authorities of a foreign country, the Attorney General shall assign the offender to the United States Parole Commission for supervision.

"(b)(1)(A) The United States Parole Commission shall, without unnecessary delay, determine a release date and a period and conditions of supervised release for an offender transferred to the United States to serve a sentence of imprisonment, as though the offender were convicted in a United States district court of a similar offense.

"(B) In making such determination, the United States Parole Commission shall consider—

"(i) any recommendation of the United States Probation Service, including any recommendation as to the applicable guideline range; and

"(ii) any documents provided by the transferring country; relating to that offender.

"(C) The combined periods of imprisonment and supervised release that result from such determination shall not exceed the term of imprisonment imposed by the foreign court on that offender.

"(D) The duties conferred on a United States probation officer with respect to a defendant by section 3552 of this title shall, with respect to an offender so transferred, be carried out by the United States Probation Service.

"(2)(A) A determination by the United States Parole Commission under this subsection may be appealed to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the offender is imprisoned at the time of the determination of such Commission. Notice of appeal must be filed not later than 45 days after receipt of notice of such determination.

"(B) The court of appeals shall decide and dispose of the appeal in accordance with section 3742 of this title as though the determination appealed had been a sentence imposed by a United States district court.

"(3) During the supervised release of an offender under this subsection, the United States district court for the district in which the offender resides shall supervise the offender.

"(c) This section shall apply only to offenses committed on or after November 1, 1987.".

An amount equivalent to those sums which would have been placed in the Fund under section 1402(b) of the Victims of Crime Act, but for the effect of section 1402(c)(2) of such Act, is hereby transferred to the Fund from any sums not appropriated from the general treasury.

Subtitle E—Federal Aviation Administration Drug Enforcement Assistance

SEC. 7201. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Federal Aviation Administration Drug Enforcement Assistance Act of 1988".

SEC. 7202. FINDINGS AND POLICY.

(a) Findings.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Illegal drug consumption and the trafficking in illegal drugs is a major problem in the United States.

(2) The smuggling of drugs into the United States through the use of general aviation aircraft is a major contributing factor in the illegal drug crisis facing our Nation.

(3) The Federal Government has a significant role in combatting such drug crisis.

(4) The Federal Aviation Administration has played an important role in assisting law enforcement agencies in certain aspects of drug interdiction and enforcement activities.

(5) The current systems of registering aircraft, certificating pilots, and processing major aircraft repair and alteration forms and enforcement of the requirements associated with such systems need to be improved in order to more effectively contribute to drug interdiction and enforcement efforts.

(6) Improving such systems and enforcement of such requirements will require providing the Federal Aviation Administration with additional funding and other resources.

(7) Improved systems of registering aircraft, certificating pilots, and processing major aircraft repair and alteration forms and increased enforcement of requirements associated with such systems will benefit all users of such systems (including law enforcement officials) and the general public.

(b) Policy.—Section 103 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1303) is amended by redesignating paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) (and any references thereto) as paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), and (5), respectively, by striking out the semicolons at the end of each of paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (4) (as so redesignated) and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) The provision of assistance to law enforcement agencies in the enforcement of laws relating to the regulation of controlled substances, to the extent consistent with aviation safety.".

SEC. 7203. AIRCRAFT REGISTRATION SYSTEM.

(a) Modification Authority.—Section 501 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1401) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) Modification of System.—The Administrator is authorized and directed to make such modifications in the system established under this title for registration and recordation of aircraft as may be necessary to make such system more effective in serving the needs of buyers and sellers of aircraft, officials responsible for enforcement of laws relating to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act), and other users of such system. Such modifications may include a system of titling aircraft or of registering all aircraft whether or not operated, shall assure positive, verifiable, and timely identification of the true owner, and shall address, at a minimum, each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

"(1) The registration of aircraft to fictitious persons.

"(2) The use of false or nonexistent addresses by persons registering aircraft.

"(3) The use by a person registering an aircraft of a post office box or 'mail drop' as a return address for the purpose of evading identification of such person's address.

"(4) The registration of aircraft to corporations and other entities established to facilitate unlawful activities.

"(5) The submission of names of individuals on applications for registration of aircraft which are not identifiable.

"(6) The ability to make frequent legal changes in the registration markings which are assigned to aircraft.

"(7) The use of false registration markings on aircraft.

"(8) The illegal use of 'reserved' registration markings on aircraft.

"(9) The large number of aircraft which are classified as being in 'self-reported status'.

"(10) The lack of a system to assure timely and adequate notice of the transfer of ownership of aircraft.

"(11) The practice of allowing temporary operation and navigation of aircraft without issuance of a certificate of registration under this section.".

(b) Conforming Amendment to Table of Contents.—That portion of the table of contents contained in section 1 of such Act relating to section 501 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(h) Modification of system.".

SEC. 7204. REVOCATION OF AIRMAN CERTIFICATES.

(a) Limitation on Reissuance of Revoked Certificates.—Section 602(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1422(b)) is amended by striking out subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) LIMITATION ON REISSUANCE OF REVOKED CERTIFICATES.—

"(A) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), the Administrator shall not issue an airman certificate to any person whose airman certificate has been revoked under section 609(c).

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT PURPOSES.—The Administrator may issue an airman certificate to any person whose airman certificate has been revoked under section 609(c) if the Administrator determines that issuance of such certificate will facilitate law enforcement efforts.".

(b) WAIVER OF REVOCATION REQUIREMENT.—Section 609(c) of such Act (49 U.S.C. 1429(c)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) WAIVER OF REVOCATION REQUIREMENT.—Upon request of a Federal or State law enforcement official, the Administrator may waive the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) that an airman certificate of any person be revoked if the Administrator determines that such waiver will facilitate law enforcement efforts.".

SEC. 7205. MODIFICATION OF SYSTEM FOR ISSUING AIRMAN'S CERTIFICATES TO PILOTS.

(a) MODIFICATION AUTHORITY.—Section 602 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1422) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) MODIFICATION OF SYSTEM.—The Administrator is authorized and directed to make such modifications in the system established under this title for issuance of airman's certificates to pilots as may be necessary to make such system more effective in serving the needs of pilots and officials responsible for enforcement of laws relating to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act). Such modifications shall assure positive and verifiable identification of each person applying for or holding such a certificate and shall address, at a minimum, each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

"(1) The use of fictitious names and addresses by applicants for such certificates.

"(2) The use of stolen or fraudulent identification in applying for such certificates.

"(3) The use by a person applying for such a certificate of a post office box or 'mail drop' as a return address for the purpose of evading identification of such person's address.

"(4) The use of counterfeit and stolen airman's certificates by pilots.

"(5) The absence of information concerning physical characteristics of holders of such certificates.".

"(d) Modification of system.".

SEC. 7206. MODIFICATION OF SYSTEM FOR PROCESSING FORMS FOR ALTERATIONS OF FUEL SYSTEMS.

(a) MODIFICATION AUTHORITY.—Section 605 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1425) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) MODIFICATION OF SYSTEM.—The Administrator is authorized and directed to make such modifications in the system established under this title for processing forms for major repairs or alterations of fuel tanks and fuel systems of aircraft as may be necessary to make such system more effective in serving the needs of users of such system, including officials responsible for enforcement of laws relating to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act). Such modifications shall address, at a minimum, each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

"(1) The lack of a special identification feature to permit such forms to be easily distinguished from other major repair and alteration forms.

"(2) The excessive amount of time required for receiving such forms at the Airmen and Aircraft Registry of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"(3) The backlog of such forms which are awaiting processing at the Airmen and Aircraft Registry.

"(4) The lack of ready access by law enforcement officials to information contained on such forms.".

"(c) Modification of system.".

SEC. 7207. REGISTRATION, CERTIFICATION, AND FUEL SYSTEM ALTERATION REGULATIONS.

(a) RULEMAKING.—Not later than 10 months after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Administrator shall issue final regulations for carrying out the objectives of sections 501(h), 602(d), and 605(c) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and provide a written explanation of how such regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses required to be addressed by such sections. Such regulations shall include, but not limited to, a requirement that each individual listed in an application for registration of an aircraft provide, together with such application, his or her driver's license number and each person (other than an individual) listed in such an application provide, together with such application, its Federal tax identification number.

(b) CONSULTATION REQUIREMENT.—In issuing regulations in accordance with this section, the Administrator shall consult the Drug Enforcement Administration of the Department of Justice, the United States Customs Service, other Federal law enforcement officials, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

(c) FEES.—

(1) GENERAL RULES.—Section 313 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1354) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) PROCESSING FEES.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT AND COLLECTION.—The Administrator may establish and collect such fees as may be necessary to cover the costs associated with issuance of certificates of registration of aircraft, issuance of airman certificates to pilots, and processing of forms for major repairs and alterations of fuel tanks and fuel systems of aircraft.

"(2) MAXIMUM FEE SCHEDULE.—The amount of any fee which may be collected under this subsection—

"(A) with respect to issuance of an airman's certificate to a pilot may not exceed $12;

"(B) with respect to registration of an aircraft after transfer of ownership may not exceed $25;

"(C) with respect to renewal of an aircraft registration may not exceed $15; and

"(D) with respect to processing of a form for a major repair or alteration of a fuel tank or fuel system of an aircraft may not exceed $7.50.

The amounts established by this paragraph shall be adjusted by the Administrator for changes in the Consumer Price Index of All Urban Consumers published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor.

"(3) LIMITATION.—No fee may be collected under this subsection before the date on which the final regulations referred to in section 7207(a) of the Federal Aviation Administration Drug Enforcement Assistance Act of 1988 take effect.

"(4) CREDIT TO ACCOUNT; AVAILABILITY.—The amount of fees collected under this subsection shall be credited to the account in the United States Treasury from which expenses were incurred by the Administrator for carrying out titles V and VI of this Act and shall be available to the Administrator for paying expenses for which such fees are collected.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO TABLE OF CONTENTS.—That portion of the table of contents contained in section 1 of such Act relating to section 313 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(f) Processing fees.".

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO SECTION 334 OF TITLE 49.—The first sentence of section 334 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by striking out "only when" and all that follows through the period and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"only when—

"(1) the charge—

"(A) was in effect on January 1, 1973, and

"(B) is not more than the charge that was in effect on such date, adjusted in proportion to changes in the Consumer Price Index of All Urban Consumers published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor between January 1, 1973, and the date the charge is imposed; or

"(2) the charge is a fee established and collected in accordance with section 313(f) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958.".

(4) GAO AUDIT.—During the 5-year period beginning after the date on which fees are first collected under section 313(f) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, the Comptroller General shall conduct an annual audit of the collection and use of such fees for the purpose of ensuring that such fees do not exceed the costs for which they are collected and submit to Congress a report on the results of such audit.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle and annually thereafter during the 5-year period beginning on such 180th day, the Administrator shall prepare and transmit to Congress a report on the following:

(1) The status of the rulemaking process, issuance of regulations, and implementation of regulations in accordance with this section.

(2) The progress being made in reducing the number of aircraft classified by the Federal Aviation Administration as being in "sale-reported status".

(3) The progress being made in expediting the filing and processing of forms for major repairs and alterations of fuel tanks and fuel systems of aircraft.

(4) The status of establishing and collecting fees under section 313(f) of the Federal Aviation Act.

(e) Definitions.—For purposes of this subtitle—

(1) Administrator.—The term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

(2) Aircraft.—The term "aircraft" has the meaning such term has under section 101 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958.

SEC. 7208. CIVIL PENALTIES.

(a) Relating to Ownership and Registration.—Section 901(a)(1) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1471(a)(1)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: "and for each such violation which relates to registration or recordation of an aircraft under title V".

(b) Administrative Assessment.—Section 901(a) of such Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1471(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Administrative assessment of certain registration and recordation violations.—

"(A) General authority.—The Administrator, or his delegate, may assess a civil penalty for a violation of title V, or a rule, regulation, or order issued thereunder, which relates to registration or recordation of an aircraft upon written notice and finding of violation by the Administrator.

"(B) No reexamination of liability or amount.—In the case of a civil penalty assessed by the Administrator under this paragraph, the issue of liability or amount of civil penalty shall not be reexamined in any subsequent suit for collection of such civil penalty.

"(C) Continuing jurisdiction of district courts.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the United States district courts shall have exclusive jurisdiction of any civil penalty action initiated by the Administrator—

"(i) which involves an amount in controversy in excess of $50,000;

"(ii) which is an in rem action or in which an in rem action based on the same violation has been brought;

"(iii) regarding which an aircraft subject to lien has been seized by the United States; and

"(iv) in which a suit for injunctive relief based on the violation giving rise to the civil penalty has also been brought.

"(D) Limitations.—

"(i) Hearing.—A civil penalty may be assessed by the Administrator under this paragraph only after notice and opportunity for a hearing on the record in accordance with section 554 of title 5, United States Code.

"(ii) Violations.—This paragraph only applies to civil penalties initiated by the Administrator after the date of the enactment of this paragraph.

"(iii) Maximum amount.—The maximum amount of a civil penalty which may be assessed by the Administrator under this paragraph in any case may not exceed $50,000.".

SEC. 7209. CRIMINAL PENALTIES.

(a) In General.—Subsection (b) of section 902 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1472) is amended by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (5) and by striking out the subsection heading and paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) Forgery of Certificates, False Marking of Aircraft, and Other Aircraft Registration Violations.—

"(1) Description of violations.—It shall be unlawful for any person—

"(A) to knowingly and willfully forge, counterfeit, alter, or falsely make any certificate authorized to be issued under this Act, or to knowingly sell, use, attempt to use, or possess with the intent to use any such fraudulent certificate;

"(B) to obtain any certificate authorized to be issued under this Act by knowingly and willfully falsifying, concealing, or covering up a material fact, or making a false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or representation, or making or using any false writing or document knowing the writing or document to contain any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry;

"(C) who is the owner of an aircraft eligible for registration under section 501, to knowingly and willfully operate, attempt to operate, or permit any other person to operate such aircraft if such aircraft is not registered under section 501 or the certificate of registration of such aircraft is suspended or revoked, or if such owner knows or has reason to know that such person does not have proper authorization to operate or navigate the aircraft without registration for a period of time after transfer of ownership;

"(D) to knowingly and willfully operate or attempt to operate an aircraft eligible for registration under section 501 knowing that such aircraft is not registered under section 501, that the certificate of registration of such aircraft is suspended or revoked, or that such person does not have proper authorization to operate or navigate such aircraft without registration for a period of time after transfer of ownership;

"(E) to knowingly and willfully serve, or attempt to serve, in any capacity as an airman without a valid airman certificate authorizing such person to serve in such capacity;

"(F) to knowingly and willfully employ for service or utilize any airman who does not possess a valid airman certificate authorizing such person to serve in such capacity;

"(G) to operate an aircraft with a fuel tank or fuel system which has been installed or modified on the aircraft knowing that such tank or system or the installation or modification of such tank or system is not in accordance with all applicable rules, regulations, and requirements of the Administrator; or

"(H) to knowingly and willfully display or cause to be displayed on any aircraft any marks which are false or misleading as to the nationality or registration of the aircraft.

"(2) Penalties.—Any person who commits a violation of paragraph (1) shall be, upon conviction, subject to—

"(A) a fine of not more than $15,000 or imprisonment for a term of not more than 3 years, or both; or

"(B) a fine of not more than $25,000 or imprisonment for a term of not more than 5 years, or both, if such violation was in connection with the act of transportation by aircraft of a controlled substance or of the aiding or facilitating of a controlled substance offense where such act is punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding 1 year under a State or Federal law or is provided in connection with any act which is punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding 1 year under a State or Federal law relating to a controlled substance (other than a law relating to simple possession of a controlled substance).

Any term of imprisonment imposed under subparagraph (B) shall be in addition to, and shall not be served concurrently with, any other term of imprisonment imposed on such person.

"(3) Seizure of aircraft.—

"(A) By DEA or customs.—An aircraft used in connection with, or in aiding or facilitating, a violation of paragraph (1) whether or not a person is charged in connection with such violation, may be seized and forfeited by the Drug Enforcement Administration of the Department of Justice or the United States Customs Service in accordance with the customs laws.

"(B) Presumptions.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), an aircraft shall be presumed to have been used in connection with, or to aid or facilitate a violation of—

"(i) paragraph (1)(B) if the aircraft is registered to a fictitious or false person;

"(ii) paragraph (1)(B) if the application form used to obtain the aircraft registration certificate contains a material false statement;

"(iii) paragraph (1)(A) if the registration for the aircraft has been forged, counterfeited, altered, or falsely made;

"(iv) paragraph (1)(C) if the aircraft has been operated while it is not registered under section 501;

"(v) paragraph (1)(H) if there is an external display of false or misleading registration numbers or false or misleading country of registration;

"(vi) paragraph (1)(G) if there is on the aircraft a fuel tank or fuel system which has not been installed or modified in accordance with all applicable rules, regulations, and requirements of the Administrator; and

"(vii) paragraph (1)(G) if, in the case of an aircraft on which a fuel tank or fuel system has been installed or modified, a certificate required to be issued by the Administrator for such installation or modification is not carried aboard the aircraft.

"(C) Memorandum of understanding.—The Federal Aviation Administration, the Drug Enforcement Administration, and the United States Customs Service shall enter into a memorandum of understanding for the purpose of establishing procedures for carrying out the objectives of this paragraph.

"(4) Controlled substance defined.—For purposes of this section, the term 'controlled substance' has the meaning that such term has under section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802).".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Section 902(b)(5).—Paragraph (5) of section 902(b) of such Act, as redesignated by subsection (a) of this section, is amended by inserting "Effect on state law.—" before "Nothing" and by aligning such paragraph with paragraph (2) of such subsection, as inserted by subsection (a) of this section.

(2) Table of contents.—That portion of the table of contents contained in section 1 of such Act relating to section 902 is amended by striking out

"(b) Forgery of certificates and false marking of aircraft."

and by inserting in lieu thereof

"(b) Forgery of certificates, false marking of aircraft, and other aircraft registration violations.".

SEC. 7210. INFORMATION COORDINATION.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle and annually thereafter during the 3-year period beginning on such 180th day, the Administrator shall prepare and transmit to Congress a report on the following:

(1) The progress made in establishing a process for provision of informational assistance by such Administration to officials of Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(2) The progress made in establishing a process for effectively pursuing suspensions and revocations of certificates of registration and airman certificates in accordance with the amendments made to the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 by the Aviation Drug-Trafficking Control Act, section 3401 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, and this subtitle.

(3) The efforts of such Administration in assessing and defining the appropriate relationship of such Administration's informational assistance resources (including the El Paso Intelligence Center and the Law Enforcement Assistance Unit of the Aeronautical Center of such Administration).

(4) The progress made in issuing guidelines on (A) the reporting of aviation sensitive drug-related information, and (B) the development, in coordination with the Drug Enforcement Administration of the Department of Justice and the United States Customs Service, of training and educational policies to assist employees of such Administration to better understand (i) the trafficking of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act), and (ii) the role of such Administration with respect to such trafficking.

(5) The progress made in improving and expanding such Administration's role in the El Paso Intelligence Center.

SEC. 7211. FUNDING AND OTHER RESOURCES.

(a) 5-Year Cost Report.—No later than 30 days after the date on which the final regulations referred to in section 7207(a) of this subtitle are issued, the Administrator shall prepare and transmit to Congress a report on the resources (including funding and positions) which will be necessary on an annual basis during the 5-year period beginning after such 30th day to implement the objectives of this subtitle (including the amendments made by this subtitle).

(b) Applicability of Paperwork Reduction Act.—No information collection requests necessary to carry out the objectives of this subtitle (including the amendments made by this subtitle) shall be subject to or affect, directly or indirectly, the annual information collection budget goals established for the Federal Aviation Administration and the Department of Transportation under chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code.

(c) Review of Certain Grade-Level Classifications.—

(1) Applicability.—This subsection applies with respect to—

(A) positions within the Airmen and Aircraft Registry of the Federal Aviation Administration; and

(B) positions within the Law Enforcement Assistance Unit of the Aeronautical Center of the Federal Aviation Administration.

(2) Review; remedy; report.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Office of Personnel Management shall—

(A) in accordance with section 5110(a) of title 5, United States Code, review a sufficient number of positions under paragraphs (1)(A) and (1)(B), respectively, to determine whether positions under those respective paragraphs are being placed in appropriate classes and grades;

(B) if the Office finds that positions have not been placed in appropriate classes and grades, and after consulting with appropriate officials of the Federal Aviation Administration, exercise any authority under section 5110(b) of title 5, United States Code, which may be necessary to ensure that those positions are placed in their appropriate classes and grades; and

(C) transmit to Congress a report on the results of such review and any actions taken in accordance with subparagraph (B).

SEC. 7212. USE OF TRANSPONDERS ON AIRCRAFT ENTERING THE UNITED STATES.

(a) Study.—The Secretary of Transportation shall study the feasibility, costs, and benefits with respect to drug interdiction of requiring each aircraft entering the continental United States—

(1) to have installed an operating transponder;

(2) to have a flight plan filed with the Federal Aviation Administration before such entry;

(3) to have the signal from such transponder identify, in the most efficient manner, such aircraft; and

(4) to have the signal from such transponder which identifies such aircraft provide information which ensures that such aircraft is following its filed flight plan.

(b) Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Secretary of Transportation shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the study conducted under this section.

SEC. 7213. ESTABLISHMENT OF FLIGHT CORRIDORS.

(a) Study.—The Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury, shall study—

(1) the feasibility of establishing flight corridors across the borders of the continental United States and intercepting any aircraft which deviate from such corridors; and

(2) the impact of the establishment of such corridors on the safe and efficient movement of aircraft and on drug interdiction.

(b) Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Secretary of Transportation shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the study conducted under this section.

SEC. 7214. LIMITATION ON APPLICABILITY.

This subtitle (including any amendments made by this subtitle) shall only apply to aircraft which are not used to provide air transportation (as defined in section 101 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958).

"Subpart II—Special Emphasis Prevention and Treatment Programs

"AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

"SEC. 261. (a) The Administrator shall, by making grants to and entering into contracts with public and private nonprofit agencies, organizations, institutions, and individuals provide for each of the following during each fiscal year:

"(1) Establishing or maintaining community-based alternatives to traditional forms of institutionalization of juvenile offenders.

"(2) Establishing or implementing effective means of diverting juveniles from the traditional juvenile justice and correctional system, including restitution and reconciliation projects which test and validate selected arbitration models, such as neighborhood courts or panels, and increase victim satisfaction while providing alternatives to incarceration for detained or adjudicated delinquents.

"(3) Establishing or supporting programs stressing advocacy activities aimed at improving services to juveniles impacted by the juvenile justice system, including services which encourage the improvement of due process available to juveniles in the juvenile justice system, which improve the quality of legal representation of such juveniles, and which provide for the appointment of special advocates by courts for such juveniles.

"(4) Developing or supporting model programs to strengthen and maintain the family unit in order to prevent or treat juvenile delinquency.

"(5) Establishing or implementing special emphasis prevention and treatment programs relating to juveniles who commit serious crimes (including such crimes committed in schools), including programs designed to deter involvement in illegal activities or to promote involvement in lawful activities on the part of gangs whose membership is substantially composed of juveniles.

"(6) Developing or implementing further a coordinated, national law-related education program of—

"(A) delinquency prevention in elementary and secondary schools, and other local sites;

"(B) training for persons responsible for the implementation of law-related education programs; and

"(C) disseminating information regarding model, innovative, law-related education programs to juvenile delinquency programs, including those that are community based, and to law enforcement and criminal justice agencies for activities related to juveniles.

"(7) Addressing efforts to reduce the proportion of juveniles detained or confined in secure detention facilities, secure correctional facilities, jails, and lockups who are members of minority groups if such proportion exceeds the proportion such groups represent in the general population.

"(b) The Administrator is authorized, by making grants to and entering into contracts with public and private nonprofit agencies, organizations, institutions, and individuals, to develop and implement new approaches, techniques, and methods designed to—

"(1) improve the capability of public and private agencies and organizations to provide services for delinquents and other juveniles to help prevent juvenile delinquency;

"(2) develop and implement, in coordination with the Secretary of Education, model programs and methods to keep students in elementary and secondary schools, to prevent unwarranted and arbitrary suspensions and expulsions, and to encourage new approaches and techniques with respect to the prevention of school violence and vandalism;

"(3) develop, implement, and support, in conjunction with the Secretary of Labor, other public and private agencies, organizations, business, and industry, programs for the employment of juveniles;

"(4) develop and support programs designed to encourage and assist State legislatures to consider and establish policies consistent with this title, both by amending State laws, if necessary, and devoting greater resources to effectuate such policies;

"(5) develop and implement programs relating to juvenile delinquency and learning disabilities, including on-the-job training programs to assist law enforcement personnel and juvenile justice personnel to more effectively recognize and provide for learning-disabled and other handicapped juveniles;

"(6) develop statewide programs through the use of subsidies or other financial incentives designed to—

"(A) remove juveniles from jails and lockups for adults;

"(B) replicate juvenile programs designated as exemplary by the National Institute of Justice; or

"(C) establish and adopt, based upon the recommendations of the National Advisory Committee for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention made before the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice, Runaway Youth, and Missing Children's Act Amendments of 1984, standards for the improvement of juvenile justice within each State involved; and

"(7) develop and implement model programs, relating to the special education needs of delinquent and other juveniles, which develop locally coordinated policies and programs among education, juvenile justice, and social service agencies.

"(c) Not less than 30 percent of the funds available for grants and contracts under this section shall be available for grants to and contracts with private nonprofit agencies, organizations, and institutions which have experience in dealing with juveniles.

"(d) Assistance provided under this section shall be available on an equitable basis to deal with female, minority, and disadvantaged juveniles, including juveniles who are mentally, emotionally, or physically handicapped.

"(e) Not less than 5 percent of the funds available for grants and contracts under this section shall be available for grants and contracts designed to address the special needs and problems of juvenile delinquency in the Virgin Islands of the United States, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

"CONSIDERATIONS FOR APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 262. (a) Any agency, institution, or individual desiring to receive a grant, or enter into a contract, under this part shall submit an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Administrator may prescribe.

"(b) In accordance with guidelines established by the Administrator, each application for assistance under this part shall—

"(1) set forth a program for carrying out one or more of the purposes set forth in this part and specifically identify each such purpose such program is designed to carry out;

"(2) provide that such program shall be administered by or under the supervision of the applicant;

"(3) provide for the proper and efficient administration of such program;

"(4) provide for regular evaluation of such program;

"(5) certify that the applicant has requested the State planning agency and local agency designated in section 223, if any, to review and comment on such application and indicate the responses of such State planning agency and local agency to such request;

"(6) attach a copy of the responses of such State planning agency and local agency to such request;

"(7) provide that regular reports on such program shall be sent to the Administrator and to such State planning agency and local agency; and

"(8) provide for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to ensure prudent use, proper disbursement, and accurate accounting of funds received under this title.

"(c) In determining whether or not to approve applications for grants and for contracts under this part, the Administrator shall consider—

"(1) the relative cost and effectiveness of the proposed program in carrying out this part;

"(2) the extent to which such program will incorporate new or innovative techniques;

"(3) if a State plan has been approved by the Administrator under section 223(c), the extent to which such program meets the objectives and priorities of the State plan, taking into consideration the location and scope of such program;

"(4) the increase in capacity of the public and private agency, institution, or individual involved to provide services to address juvenile delinquency and juvenile delinquency prevention;

"(5) the extent to which such program serves communities which have high rates of juvenile unemployment, school dropout, and delinquency; and

"(6) the adverse impact that may result from the restriction of eligibility, based upon population, for cities with a population greater than 40,000 located within States which have no city with a population over 250,000.

"(d)(1)(A) Programs selected for assistance through grants or contracts under this part (other than section 241(f)) shall be selected through a competitive process to be established by rule by the Administrator. As part of such a process, the Administrator shall announce in the Federal Register—

"(i) the availability of funds for such assistance;

"(ii) the general criteria applicable to the selection of applicants to receive such assistance; and

"(iii) a description of the procedures applicable to submitting and reviewing applications for such assistance.

"(B) The competitive process described in subparagraph (A) shall not be required if the Administrator makes a written determination that—

"(i)(I) the proposed program is not within the scope of any announcement issued, or expected to be issued, by the Administrator regarding the availability of funds to carry out programs under this part, but can be supported by a grant or contract in accordance with this part; and

"(II) such program is of such outstanding merit, as determined through peer review conducted under paragraph (2), that the award of a grant or contract without competition is justified; or

"(ii) the applicant is uniquely qualified to provide proposed training services as provided in section 244 and other qualified sources are not capable of providing such services, and includes in such determination the factual and other bases thereof.

"(C) If a program is selected for assistance without competition pursuant to the exception provided in subparagraph (B), the Administrator shall promptly so notify the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate. Such notification shall include copies of the Administrator's determination made under such subparagraph and the peer review determination required by paragraph (2).

"(2)(A) Programs selected for assistance through grants or contracts under this part (other than section 241(f)) shall be reviewed before selection, and thereafter as appropriate, through a formal peer review process utilizing experts (other than officers and employees of the Department of Justice) in fields related to the subject matter of the proposed program.

"(B) Such process shall be established by the Administrator in consultation with the Directors and other appropriate officials of the National Science Foundation and the National Institute of Mental Health. Before implementation of such process, the Administrator shall submit such process to such Directors, each of whom shall prepare and furnish to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate a final report containing their comments on such process as proposed to be established.

"(3) The Administrator, in establishing the processes required under paragraphs (1) and (2), shall provide for emergency expedited consideration of the proposed programs if necessary to avoid any delay which would preclude carrying out such programs.

"(e) A city shall not be denied assistance under this part solely on the basis of its population.

"(f) Notification of grants and contracts made under this part (and the applications submitted for such grants and contracts) shall, upon being made, be transmitted by the Administrator, to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 223(a)(1) of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5633(a)(1)) is amended by striking "section 261(c)(1)" and inserting "section 291(c)(1)".

(2) Section 246 of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5660), as so redesignated by section (a)(2)(E), is amended by striking "section 248" and inserting "section 245".

SEC. 7264. SPECIAL STUDIES AND REPORTS.

The Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5601) is amended by inserting after section 247, as so redesignated by section 7263(a)(2)(E), the following:

"SPECIAL STUDIES AND REPORTS

"SEC. 248. (a) Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Administrator shall begin to conduct a study with respect to the juvenile justice system—

"(1) to review—

"(A) conditions in detention and correctional facilities for juveniles; and

"(B) the extent to which such facilities meet recognized national professional standards; and

"(2) to make recommendations to improve conditions in such facilities.

"(b)(1) Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Administrator shall begin to conduct a study to determine—

"(A) how juveniles who are American Indians and Alaskan Natives and who are accused of committing offenses on and near Indian reservations and Alaskan Native villages, respectively, are treated under the systems of justice administered by Indian tribes and Alaskan Native organizations, respectively, that perform law enforcement functions;

"(B) the amount of financial resources (including financial assistance provided by governmental entities) available to Indian tribes and Alaskan Native organizations that perform law enforcement functions, to support community-based alternatives to incarcerating juveniles; and

"(C) the extent to which such tribes and organizations comply with the requirements specified in paragraphs (12)(A), (13), and (14) of section 223(a), applicable to the detention and confinement of juveniles.

"(2)(A) For purposes of section 7(b) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450e(b)), any contract, subcontract, grant, or subgrant made under paragraph (1) shall be deemed to be a contract, subcontract, grant, or subgrant made for the benefit of Indians.

"(B) For purposes of section 7(b) of such Act and subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, references to Indians and Indian organizations shall be deemed to include Alaskan Natives and Alaskan Native organizations, respectively.

"(c) Not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Administrator shall submit a report to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate containing a description, and a summary of the results, of the study conducted under subsection (a) or (b), as the case may be.".

SEC. 7265. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) FUNDS AUTHORIZED FOR FISCAL YEARS.—Section 261(a) of part D of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5671(a)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(a)",

(2) by inserting "(other than part D)" after "this title",

(3) by striking "1985, 1986, 1987, and 1988",

(4) by inserting "1989, 1990, 1991, and 1992", and

(5) by adding at the end the following:

"(2)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), to carry out part D, there are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992.

"(B) No funds may be appropriated to carry out part D of this title for a fiscal year unless the aggregate amount appropriated to carry out this title (other than part D) for such fiscal year is not less than the aggregate amount appropriated to carry out this title (other than part D) for the preceding fiscal year.".

(b) ALLOCATIONS.—Section 261(b) of part D of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5671(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(other than part D)" after "this title",

(2) in paragraph (1) by striking "7.5 percent" and inserting "5 percent",

(3) in paragraph (2) by striking "81.5 percent" and inserting "70 percent", and

(4) in paragraph (3) by striking "11 percent" and inserting "25 percent".

SEC. 7266. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO PART D OF TITLE II.

Part D of title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5671-5672 note) is amended—

(1) by amending the heading of such part to read as follows:

"PART E—GENERAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS",

(2) by striking section 263,

(3) by redesignating sections 261 and 262 as sections 291 and 292, respectively, and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

"WITHHOLDING

"SEC. 293. Whenever the Administrator, after giving reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to a recipient of financial assistance under this title, finds that—

"(1) the program or activity for which the grant or contract involved was made has been so changed that it no longer complies with this title; or

"(2) in the operation of such program or activity there is failure to comply substantially with any provision of this title;

the Administrator shall initiate such proceedings as are appropriate.

"USE OF FUNDS

"SEC. 294. (a) Funds paid pursuant to this title to any public or private agency, organization, or institution, or to any individual (either directly or through a State planning agency) may be used for—

"(1) planning, developing, or operating the program designed to carry out this title; and

"(2) not more than 50 per centum of the cost of the construction of any innovative community-based facility for fewer than 20 persons which, in the judgment of the Administrator, is necessary to carry out this title.

"(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), no funds paid to any public or private agency, or institution or to any individual under this title (either directly or through a State agency or local agency) may be used for construction.

"(c)(1) Funds paid pursuant to section 223(a)(10)(D) and section 261(a)(3) to any public or private agency, organization, or institution or to any individual shall not be used to pay for any personal service, advertisement, telegram, telephone communication, letter, printed or written matter, or other device intended or designed to influence a Member of Congress or any other Federal, State, or local elected official to favor or oppose any Acts, bills, resolutions, or similar legislation, or any referendum, initiative, constitutional amendment, or any similar procedure of the Congress, any State legislature, any local council, or any similar governing body, except that this paragraph shall not preclude such funds from being used in connection with communications to Federal, State, or local elected officials, upon the request of such officials through proper official channels, pertaining to authorization, appropriation, or oversight measures directly affecting the operation of the program involved.

"(2) The Administrator shall take such action as may be necessary to ensure that no funds paid under section 223(a)(10)(D) or section 261(a)(3) are used either directly or indirectly in any manner prohibited in this paragraph.

"PAYMENTS

"SEC. 295. (a) Payments under this title, pursuant to a grant or contract, may be made (after necessary adjustment, in the case of grants, on account of previously made overpayments or underpayments) in advance or by way of reimbursement, in such installments and on such conditions as the Administrator may determine.

"(b) Except as provided in the second sentence of section 222(c), financial assistance extended under this title shall be 100 per centum of the approved costs of the program or activity involved.

"(c)(1) In the case of a grant under this title to an Indian tribe, if the Administrator determines that the tribe does not have sufficient funds available to meet the local share of the cost of any program or activity to be funded under the grant, the Administrator may increase the Federal share of the cost thereof to the extent the Administrator deems necessary.

"(2) If a State does not have an adequate forum to enforce grant provisions imposing any liability on Indian tribes, the Administrator may waive State liability attributable to the liability of such tribes and may pursue such legal remedies as are necessary.

"(d) If the Administrator determines, on the basis of information available to the Administrator during any fiscal year, that a portion of the funds granted to an applicant under part C for such fiscal year will not be required by the applicant or will become available by virtue of the application of the provisions of section 802 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended from time to time, that portion shall be available for reallocation in an equitable manner to States which comply with the requirements in paragraphs (12)(A) and (13) of section 223(a), under section 261(b)(6).

"CONFIDENTIALITY OF PROGRAM RECORDS

"SEC. 296. Except as authorized by law, program records containing the identity of individual juveniles gathered for purposes pursuant to this title may not be disclosed without the consent of the service recipient or legally authorized representative, or as may be necessary to carry out this title. Under no circumstances may program reports or findings available for public dissemination contain the actual names of individual service recipients.".

SEC. 7267. PREVENTION AND TREATMENT PROGRAMS RELATING TO JUVENILE GANGS.

Title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5671-5672 note) is amended by inserting after part C, as amended by this subtitle, the following:

"PART D—PREVENTION AND TREATMENT PROGRAMS RELATING TO JUVENILE GANGS AND DRUG ABUSE AND DRUG TRAFFICKING

"AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

"SEC. 281. The Administrator shall, by making grants to and entering into contracts with public and private non-profit agencies, organizations, institutions, and individuals, establish and support programs and activities that involve families and communities and that are designed to carry out any of the following purposes:

"(1) To reduce the participation of juveniles in drug-related crimes (including drug trafficking and drug use), particularly in elementary and secondary schools.

"(2) To develop within the juvenile adjudicatory and correctional systems new and innovative means to address the problems of juveniles convicted of serious drug-related and gang-related offenses.

"(3) To reduce juvenile involvement in gang-related activity, particularly activities that involve the distribution of drugs by or to juveniles.

"(4) To promote the involvement of juveniles in lawful activities in geographical areas in which gangs commit crimes.

"(5) To provide treatment to juveniles who are members of such gangs, including members who are accused of committing a serious crime and members who have been adjudicated as being delinquent.

"(6) To support activities to inform juveniles of the availability of treatment and services for which financial assistance is provided under this part.

"(7) To facilitate Federal and State cooperation with local school officials to assist juveniles who are likely to participate in the activities of gangs that commit crimes and to establish and support programs that facilitate coordination and cooperation among local education, juvenile justice, employment, and social service agencies, for the purpose of preventing or reducing the participation of juveniles in activities of gangs that commit crimes.

"(8) To provide personnel, personnel training, equipment, and supplies in conjunction with programs and activities designed to prevent or reduce the participation of juveniles in unlawful gang activities or unlawful drug activities, to assist in improving the adjudicative and correctional components of the juvenile justice system.

"(9) To provide pre- and post-trial drug abuse treatment to juveniles in the juvenile justice system.

"(10) To provide drug abuse education, prevention and treatment involving police and juvenile justice officials in demand reduction programs.

"APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 282. (a) Any agency, institution, or individual desiring to receive a grant, or to enter into a contract, under this part shall submit an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Administrator may prescribe.

"(b) In accordance with guidelines established by the Administrator, each application for assistance under this part shall—

"(1) set forth a program or activity for carrying out one or more of the purposes specified in section 281 and specifically identify each such purpose, such program or activity is designed to carry out;

"(2) provide that such program or activity shall be administered by or under the supervision of the applicant;

"(3) provide for the proper and efficient administration of such program or activity;

"(4) provide for regular evaluation of such program or activity;

"(5) certify that the applicant has requested the State planning agency and local agency designated in section 223, if any, to review and comment on such application and indicate the responses of such State planning agency and local agency to such request;

"(6) attach a copy of the responses of such State planning agency and local agency to such request;

"(7) provide that regular reports on such program or activity shall be sent to the Administrator and to such State planning agency and local agency; and

"(8) provide for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to ensure prudent use, proper disbursement, and accurate accounting of funds received under this title.

"(c) In reviewing applications for grants and contracts under this part, the Administrator shall give priority to applications—

"(1) based on the incidence and severity of crimes committed by gangs whose membership is composed primarily of juveniles or the incidence of juvenile drug abuse and drug trafficking, in the geographical area in which the applicants propose to carry out the programs and activities for which such grants and contracts are requested; and

"(2) for assistance for programs and activities that have the broad support of organizations operating in such geographical areas, as demonstrated by the applicants.".

CHAPTER 2—AMENDMENTS TO THE RUNAWAY AND HOMELESS YOUTH ACT

SEC. 7271. GRANTS FOR RUNAWAY AND HOMELESS YOUTH CENTERS.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The heading for section 311 of the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5711) is amended to read as follows:

"AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS".

(b) GRANT PROGRAM.—Subsections (a) and (b) of section 311 of the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5711) are amended to read as follows:

"(a) The Secretary shall make grants to public and private entities (and combinations of such entities) to establish and operate (including renovation) local runaway and homeless youth centers to provide services to deal primarily with the immediate needs of runaway or otherwise homeless youth, and their families, in a manner which is outside the law enforcement structure and the juvenile justice system.

"(b)(1) Subject to paragraph (2) and in accordance with regulations promulgated under this title, funds for grants under subsection (a) shall be allotted annually with respect to the States on the basis of their relative population of individuals who are less than 18 years of age.

"(2) Subject to paragraph (3), the amount allotted under paragraph (1) with respect to each State for a fiscal year shall be not less than $75,000, except that the amount allotted to the Virgin Islands of the United States, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands shall be not less than $30,000 each.

"(3) If, as a result of paragraph (2), the amount allotted under paragraph (1) with respect to a State for a fiscal year would be less than the aggregate amount of grants made under this part to recipients in such State for fiscal year 1988, then the amounts allotted to satisfy the requirements of such paragraph shall be reduced pro rata to the extent necessary to allot under paragraph (1) with respect to such State for the fiscal year an amount equal to the aggregate amount of grants made under this part to recipients in such State for fiscal year 1988.

"(4) In selecting among applicants for grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to private entities that have experience in providing the services described in such subsection.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Sections 312 and 313 of the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5712, 5713) are each amended by striking "this part" each place it appears and inserting "section 311(a)".

"PART B—TRANSITIONAL LIVING GRANT PROGRAM

"PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY FOR PROGRAM

"SEC. 321. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make grants and to provide technical assistance to public and nonprofit private entities to establish and operate transitional living youth projects for homeless youth.

"(b) For purposes of this part—

"(1) the term 'homeless youth' means any individual—

"(A) who is not less than 16 years of age and not more than 21 years of age;

"(B) for whom it is not possible to live in a safe environment with a relative; and

"(C) who has no other safe alternative living arrangement; and

"(2) the term 'transitional living youth project' means a project that provides shelter and services designed to promote a transition to self-sufficient living and to prevent long-term dependency on social services.

"ELIGIBILITY

"SEC. 322. (a) To be eligible for assistance under this part, an applicant shall propose to establish, strengthen, or fund a transitional living youth project for homeless youth and shall submit to the Secretary a plan in which such applicant agrees, as part of such project—

"(1) to provide, directly or indirectly, shelter (such as group homes, host family homes, and supervised apartments) and services (including information and counseling services in basic life skills, interpersonal skill building, educational advancement, job attainment skills, and mental and physical health care) to homeless youth;

"(2) to provide such shelter and such services to individual homeless youth throughout a continuous period not to exceed 540 days;

"(3) to provide, directly or indirectly, onsite supervision at each shelter facility that is not a family home;

"(4) that such shelter facility used to carry out such project shall have the capacity to accommodate not more than 20 individuals (excluding staff);

"(5) to provide a number of staff sufficient to ensure that all homeless youth participating in such project receive adequate supervision and services;

"(6) to provide a written transitional living plan to each youth based on an assessment of such youth's needs, designed to help the transition from supervised participation in such project to independent living or another appropriate living arrangement;

"(7) to develop an adequate plan to ensure proper referral of homeless youth to social service, law enforcement, educational, vocational, training, welfare, legal service, and health care programs and to help integrate and coordinate such services for youths;

"(8) to provide for the establishment of outreach programs designed to attract individuals who are eligible to participate in the project;

"(9) to submit to the Secretary an annual report that includes information regarding the activities carried out with funds under this part, the achievements of the project under this part carried out by the applicant and statistical summaries describing the number and the characteristics of the homeless youth who participate in such project in the year for which the report is submitted;

"(10) to implement such accounting procedures and fiscal control devices as the Secretary may require;

"(11) to submit to the Secretary an annual budget that estimates the itemized costs to be incurred in the year for which the applicant requests a grant under this part;

"(12) to keep adequate statistical records profiling homeless youth which it serves and not to disclose the identity of individual homeless youth in reports or other documents based on such statistical records;

"(13) not to disclose records maintained on individual homeless youth without the consent of the individual youth and parent or legal guardian to anyone other than an agency compiling statistical records or a government agency involved in the disposition of criminal charges against youth; and

"(14) to provide to the Secretary such other information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) In selecting eligible applicants to receive grants under this part, the Secretary shall give priority to entities that have experience in providing to homeless youth shelter and services of the types described in subsection (a)(1).".

SEC. 7274. REPORTS.

Section 361 of the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5715), as so redesignated by section 7273(e)(2), is amended by striking "The Secretary shall annually" and inserting "Not later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall".

SEC. 7275. NATIONAL COMMUNICATION SYSTEM.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Sections 313 and 314 of the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5713-5714) are redesignated as sections 316 and 317, respectively.

(b) AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5701-5751) is amended by inserting after section 312 the following:

"GRANTS FOR A NATIONAL COMMUNICATION SYSTEM

"SEC. 313. (a) With funds reserved under subsection (b), the Secretary shall make grants for a national communication system to assist runaway and homeless youth in communicating with their families and with service providers.

"(b) From funds appropriated to carry out this part and after making the allocation required by section 366(a)(2), the Secretary shall reserve—

"(1) for fiscal year 1989 not less than $500,000;

"(2) for fiscal year 1990 not less than $600,000; and

"(3) for each of the fiscal years 1991 and 1992 not less than $750,000; to carry out subsection (a).".

SEC. 7276. GRANTS FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND TRAINING.

The Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5701-5751) is amended by inserting after section 313, as added by section 7275, the following:

"GRANTS FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND TRAINING

"SEC. 314. The Secretary may make grants to statewide and regional nonprofit organizations (and combinations of such organizations) to provide technical assistance and training to public and private entities (and combinations of such entities) that are eligible to receive grants under section 311(a), for the purpose of assisting such entities to establish and operate runaway and homeless youth centers.".

SEC. 7277. GRANTS FOR RESEARCH, DEMONSTRATION, AND SERVICE PROJECTS.

The Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5701-5751) is amended by inserting after section 314, as added by section 7276, the following:

"AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS FOR RESEARCH, DEMONSTRATION, AND SERVICE PROJECTS

"SEC. 315. (a) The Secretary may make grants to States, localities, and private entities (and combinations of such entities) to carry out research, demonstration, and service projects designed to increase knowledge concerning, and to improve services for, runaway and homeless youth.

"(b) In selecting among applications for grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give special consideration to proposed projects relating to—

"(1) juveniles who repeatedly leave and remain away from their homes;

"(2) outreach to runaway and homeless youth;

"(3) transportation of runaway and homeless youth in connection with services authorized to be provided under this part;

"(4) the special needs of runaway and homeless youth programs in rural areas;

"(5) the special needs of foster care home programs for runaway and homeless youth;

"(6) transitional living programs for runaway and homeless youth; and

"(7) innovative methods of developing resources that enhance the establishment or operation of runaway and homeless youth centers.

"(c) In selecting among applicants for grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to applicants who provide services directly to runaway and homeless youth.".

SEC. 7278. ANNUAL PROGRAM PRIORITIES.

The Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5701-5751) is amended by inserting after section 363, as so redesignated by section 7273(e)(2), the following:

"ANNUAL PROGRAM PRIORITIES

"SEC. 364. (a) The Secretary shall develop for each fiscal year, and publish annually in the Federal Register for public comment a proposed plan specifying the subject priorities the Secretary will follow in making grants under this title for such fiscal year.

"(b) Taking into consideration comments received in the 45-day period beginning on the date the proposed plan is published, the Secretary shall develop and publish, before December 31 of such fiscal year, a final plan specifying the priorities referred to in subsection (a).".

The Missing Children's Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5771-5777) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SPECIAL STUDY AND REPORT

“SEC. 408. (a) Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Administrator shall begin to conduct a study to determine the obstacles that prevent or impede individuals who have legal custody of children from recovering such children from parents who have removed such children from such individuals in violation of law.

"(b) Not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Secretary shall submit a report to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate containing a description, and a summary of the results, of the study conducted under subsection (a).".

CHAPTER 4—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 7295. INVESTIGATION AND REPORT BY THE COMPTROLLER GENERAL.

(a) INVESTIGATION.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Comptroller General of the United States shall begin to conduct an investigation of the extent to which—

(1) valid court orders, and

(2) court orders other than valid court orders, are used in the 5-year period ending on December 31, 1988, to place juveniles in secure detention facilities, in secure correctional facilities, and in jails and lockups for adults.

(b) REPORT.—(1) Not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate containing a description, and a summary of the results, of the investigation conducted under subsection (a).

(2) In such report, the Comptroller shall specify separately with respect to secure detention facilities, secure correctional facilities, and jails and lockups for adults—

(A) the frequency with which juveniles were confined,

(B) the length of confinement of juveniles, and

(C) the types of conduct of juveniles for which confinement was imposed, as a result of the enforcement of court orders of the 2 types described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a).

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "juvenile" means an individual who is less than 18 years of age,

(2) the term "secure correctional facility" has the meaning given it in section 103(13) of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5603(13)),

(3) the term "secure detention facility" has the meaning given it in section 103(12) of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5603(12)), and

(4) the term "valid court order" has the meaning given it in section 103(16) of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5603(16)).

SEC. 7296. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), this subtitle and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on October 1, 1988.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.—(1) The amendments made by section 7258(a) shall not apply to a State with respect to a fiscal year beginning before the date of the enactment of this Act if the State plan is approved before such date by the Administrator for such fiscal year.

(2) The amendments made by section 7274(b)(1) and section 7278 shall not apply with respect to fiscal year 1989.

(3) Notwithstanding the 180-day period provided in section 7277 of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, as added by section 7255, the report required by such section to be submitted with respect to fiscal year 1988 shall be submitted not later than August 1, 1989.

Subtitle G—Provisions Relating to Prisons, Probation, Parole, and Supervised Release

SEC. 7301. PAYMENT OF COSTS OF INCARCERATION BY FEDERAL PRISONERS.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, the United States Sentencing Commission shall study the feasibility of requiring prisoners incarcerated in Federal correctional institutions to pay some or all of the costs incident to the prisoner's confinement, including, but not limited to, the costs of food, housing, and shelter. The study shall review measures which would allow prisoners unable to pay such costs to work at paid employment within the community, during incarceration or after release, in order to pay the costs incident to the prisoner's confinement.

SEC. 7302. ADMINISTRATION OF CONFINEMENT FACILITIES LOCATED ON MILITARY INSTALLATIONS BY THE BUREAU OF PRISONS.

In conjunction with the Department of Defense and the Commission on Alternative Utilization of Military Facilities as established in the National Defense Authorization Act of Fiscal Year 1989, the Bureau of Prisons shall be responsible for—

(1) administering Bureau of Prisons confinement facilities for civilian nonviolent prisoners located on military installations in cooperation with the Secretary of Defense, with an emphasis on placing women inmates in such facilities, or in similar minimum security confinement facilities not located on military installations, so that the percentage of eligible women equals the percentage of eligible men housed in such or similar minimum security confinement facilities (i.e., prison camps);

(2) establishing and regulating drug treatment programs for inmates held in such facilities in coordination and cooperation with the National Institute on Drug Abuse; and

(3) establishing and managing work programs in accordance with guidelines under the Bureau of Prisons for persons held in such facilities and in cooperation with the installation commander.

SEC. 7303. REVOCATION OF PROBATION, PAROLE, AND SUPERVISED RELEASE FOR POSSESSION OF A CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE.

(a) PROBATION.—(1) Section 3563(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(A) striking "and" after the semicolon in paragraph (1);

(B) striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting "; and"; and

(C) inserting after paragraph (2) the following:

"(3) for a felony, a misdemeanor, or an infraction, that the defendant not possess illegal controlled substances.".

(2) Section 3565(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if a defendant is found by the court to be in possession of a controlled substance, thereby violating the condition imposed by section 3563(a)(3), the court shall revoke the sentence of probation and sentence the defendant to not less than one-third of the original sentence.".

(b) SUPERVISED RELEASE.—(1) Section 3583(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking the period and inserting "and that the defendant not possess illegal controlled substances.".

(2) Section 3583 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(g) POSSESSION OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.—If the defendant is found by the court to be in the possession of a controlled substance, the court shall terminate the term of supervised release and require the defendant to serve in prison not less than one-third of the term of supervised release.".

(c) PAROLE.—(1) Section 4209(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by inserting after "local crime" the following: ", that the parolee not possess illegal controlled substances.".

(2) Subsection (c) of section 4209 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(A) striking the dash and "(1)";

(B) striking the semicolon at the end of paragraph (1) and all of paragraph (2) and inserting a period; and

(C) striking "subparagraph (1) or (2) of".

(3) Section 4214 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a parolee who is found by the Commission to be in possession of a controlled substance shall have his parole revoked.".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to persons whose probation, supervised release, or parole begins after December 31, 1988.

SEC. 7304. DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM FOR DRUG TESTING OF ARRESTED PERSONS AND DEFENDANTS ON PROBATION OR SUPERVISED RELEASE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall establish a demonstration program of mandatory testing of criminal defendants.

(b) LENGTH OF PROGRAM.—The demonstration program shall begin not later than January 1, 1989, and shall last two years.

(c) SELECTION OF DISTRICTS.—The Judicial Conference of the United States shall select 8 Federal judicial districts in which to carry out the demonstration program, so that the group selected represents a mix of districts on the basis of criminal caseload and the types of cases in that caseload.

(d) INCLUSION IN PRETRIAL SERVICES.—In each of the districts in which the demonstration program takes place, pretrial services under chapter 207 of title 18, United States Code, shall arrange for the drug testing of defendants in criminal cases. To the extent feasible, such testing shall be completed before the defendant makes the defendant's initial appearance in the case before a judicial officer. The results of such testing shall be included in the report to the judicial officer under section 3154 of title 18, United States Code.

(e) MANDATORY CONDITION OF PROBATION AND SUPERVISED RELEASE.—In each of the judicial districts in which the demonstration program is in effect, it shall be an additional, mandatory condition of probation, and an additional mandatory condition of supervised release for offenses occurring or completed on or after January 1, 1989, for any defendant convicted of a felony, that such defendant refrain from any illegal use of any controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act) and submit to periodic drug tests for use of controlled substances at least once every 60 days. The requirement that drug tests be administered at least once every 60 days may be suspended upon motion of the Director of the Administrative Office, or the Director's designee, if, after at least one year of probation or supervised release, the defendant has passed all drug tests administered pursuant to this section. No action may be taken against a defendant pursuant to a drug test administered in accordance with this subsection unless the drug test confirmation is a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography techniques or such test as the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy.

(f) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 90 days after the first year of the demonstration program and not later than 90 days after the end of the demonstration program, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall report to Congress on the effectiveness of the demonstration program and include in such report recommendations as to whether mandatory drug testing of defendants should be made more general and permanent.

SEC. 7305. HOUSE PROBATION AS A CONDITION FOR PROBATION, PAROLE, OR SUPERVISED RELEASE.

(a) PROBATION.—Section 3563(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking "or" after the semicolon in paragraph (19);

(2) redesignating paragraph (20) as paragraph (21); and

(3) inserting after paragraph (19) the following new paragraph:

"(20) remain at his place of residence during nonworking hours and, if the court finds it appropriate, that compliance with this condition be monitored by telephonic or electronic signaling devices, except that a condition under this paragraph may be imposed only as an alternative to incarceration; or".

(B) striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting "; or"; and

(C) inserting at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) order the person to remain at his place of residence during nonworking hours and, if the court so directs, to have compliance monitored by telephone or electronic signaling devices, except that an order under this paragraph may be imposed only as an alternative to incarceration.".

(c) PAROLE.—Section 4209(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Release on parole or release as if on parole (or probation, or supervised release where applicable) may as a condition of such release require—

"(1) a parolee to reside in or participate in the program of a residential community treatment center, or both, for all or part of the period of such parole; or

"(2) a parolee to remain at his place of residence during nonworking hours and, if the Commission so directs, to have compliance with this condition monitored by telephone or electronic signaling devices, except that a condition under this paragraph may be imposed only as an alternative to incarceration.

A parolee residing in a residential community treatment center pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection may be required to pay such costs incident to such residence as the Commission deems appropriate.".

Subtitle H—Provisions Relating to Courts

SEC. 7321. STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE REAUTHORIZATION.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—Section 215 of the State Justice Institute Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-620; 42 U.S.C. 10713) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 215. There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the purposes of this title $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1990, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1992.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 203(f) of the State Justice Institute Act of 1984 is amended—

(A) by striking out ", at least thirty days prior to their effective date,"; and

(B) by adding to the end thereof the following: "The publication of a substantive rule shall not be made less than thirty days before the effective date of such rule, except as otherwise provided by the Institute for good cause found and published with the rule.".

(2) Section 205(d)(2) of the State Justice Institute Act of 1984 is amended by striking out "chapter 83" and inserting in lieu thereof "chapters 83 and 84".

(3) Section 206(c) of the State Justice Institute Act of 1984 is amended by—

(A) inserting "judicial and" before "nonjudicial" in paragraph (3);

(B) striking out paragraph (4); and

(C) redesignating paragraphs (5) through (15) as paragraphs (4) through (14), respectively.

(4) Section 206(d) of the State Justice Institute Act of 1984 is amended by striking out "judicial system" and inserting in lieu thereof "court (or other unit of State or local government)".

SEC. 7322. SENTENCING JURISDICTION.

Section 636(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (2);

(2) striking out the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

"(4) the power to enter a sentence for a misdemeanor or infraction with the consent of the parties.".

SEC. 7323. CONSIDERATION OF HABEAS CORPUS REFORM LEGISLATION.

(a) INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY OF THE SENATE.—Beginning on the date the Chief Justice of the United States forwards to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives the report and recommendation of the Special Committee on Habeas Corpus Review of Capital Sentences, appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States and chaired by Justice Lewis Powell (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Special Committee"), the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate shall have 15 days of session thereafter to introduce a bill to modify Federal habeas corpus procedure after having faithfully considered the report and recommendations of the Special Committee. If no such bill is introduced by the chairman within the 15-day period, such bill may be introduced by the ranking minority Member of the committee within an additional 10 days of session.

(b) REPORTING OF LEGISLATION BY THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY OF THE SENATE.—(1) The bill introduced pursuant to subsection (a) shall be reported with or without recommendation by the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate by the end of the 60th day of session after the submission of the report by the Chief Justice or the bill shall be discharged automatically from such committee and such bill shall be placed on the appropriate calendar of the Senate.

(2) It is in order at any time after the 30th day of session after the bill has been placed on the calendar pursuant to paragraph (1), notwithstanding any rule or precedent of the Senate, including Rule 22, for any Member of the Senate to move to proceed to the consideration of the bill. The motion is not debatable. The motion is not subject to a motion to postpone. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to shall not be in order. Only one motion in the Senate shall be in order pursuant to this paragraph and such motion shall be decided by a roll call vote.

(3) This subsection is enacted by Congress—

(A) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and as such it is deemed a part of the rules of the Senate, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in the Senate in the case of a bill described in paragraph (1), and it supersedes other rules only to the extent that it is inconsistent with such rules; and

(B) with full recognition of the constitutional right of the Senate to change the rules (so far as relating to the procedure of the Senate) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of the Senate.

(c) REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE.—The Special Committee is urged to expedite the filing of its report and to include options for legislative action among its findings. The House of Representatives shall give fair, appropriate, and expeditious consideration to the report of the Special Committee.

Subtitle I—Provisions Relating to the Federal Bureau of Investigation

SEC. 7331. AUTHORITY FOR THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION TO INVESTIGATE, UPON REQUEST, FELONIOUS KILLINGS OF STATE OR LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Chapter 33 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 540. Investigation of felonious killings of State or local law enforcement officers

"The Attorney General and the Federal Bureau of Investigation may investigate felonious killings of officials and employees of a State or political subdivision thereof while engaged in or on account of the performance of official duties relating to the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of an offense against the criminal laws of a State or political subdivision, when such investigation is requested by the head of the agency employing the official or employee killed, and under such guidelines as the Attorney General or his designee may establish.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections of such chapter is amended by adding at the end thereof the following item:

"540. Investigation of felonious killings of State or local law enforcement officers.".

SEC. 7332. UNIFORM FEDERAL CRIME REPORTING ACT OF 1988.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Uniform Federal Crime Reporting Act of 1988".

(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term "Uniform Crime Reports" means the reports authorized under section 534 of title 28, United States Code, and administered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation which compiles nationwide criminal statistics for use in law enforcement administration, operation, and management and to assess the nature and type of crime in the United States.

(c) ESTABLISHMENT OF SYSTEM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall acquire, collect, classify, and preserve national data on Federal criminal offenses as part of the Uniform Crime Reports.

(2) REPORTING BY FEDERAL AGENCIES.—All departments and agencies within the Federal government (including the Department of Defense) which routinely investigate complaints of criminal activity, shall report details about crime within their respective jurisdiction to the Attorney General in a uniform manner and on a form prescribed by the Attorney General. The reporting required by this subsection shall be limited to the reporting of those crimes comprising the Uniform Crime Reports.

(3) DISTRIBUTION OF DATA.—The Attorney General shall distribute data received pursuant to paragraph (2), in the form of annual Uniform Crime Reports for the United States, to the President, Members of the Congress, State governments, and officials of localities and penal and other institutions participating in the Uniform Crime Reports program.

(d) ROLE OF FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION.—The Attorney General may designate the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the lead agency for purposes of performing the functions authorized by this section and may appoint or establish such advisory and oversight boards as may be necessary to assist the Bureau in ensuring uniformity, quality, and maximum use of the data collected.

(e) INCLUSION OF OFFENSES INVOLVING ILLEGAL DRUGS.—The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is authorized to classify offenses involving illegal drugs and drug trafficking as a part I crime in the Uniform Crime Reports.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $350,000 for fiscal year 1989 and such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section after fiscal year 1989.

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this section shall be effective on January 1, 1989.

SEC. 7333. COLLEGE AND RAILROAD POLICE INFORMATION.

Section 534 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) For purposes of this section, the term 'other institutions' includes—

"(1) railroad police departments which perform the administration of criminal justice and have arrest powers pursuant to a State statute, which allocate a substantial part of their annual budget to the administration of criminal justice, and which meet training requirements established by law or ordinance for law enforcement officers; and

"(2) police departments of private colleges or universities which perform the administration of criminal justice and have arrest powers pursuant to a State statute, which allocate a substantial part of their annual budget to the administration of criminal justice, and which meet training requirements established by law or ordinance for law enforcement officers.".

Subtitle J—Provisions Relating to the Deportation of Aliens Who Commit Aggravated Felonies

SEC. 7341. AMENDMENTS TO THE IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT.

Except as otherwise specifically provided in this subtitle, whenever in this subtitle an amendment or repeal is expressed as an amendment to, or repeal of, a provision, the reference shall be deemed to be made to the Immigration and Nationality Act.

SEC. 7342. DEFINITION.

Section 101(a) (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(43) The term 'aggravated felony' means murder, any drug trafficking crime as defined in section 924(c)(2) of title 18, United States Code, or any illicit trafficking in any firearms or destructive devices as defined in section 921 of such title, or any attempt or conspiracy to commit any such act, committed within the United States.".

SEC. 7343. DEPORTATION OF ALIENS COMMITTING AGGRAVATED FELONIES.

(a) RETENTION IN CUSTODY BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Section 242(a) (8 U.S.C. 1252(a)) is amended—

"EXPEDITED PROCEDURES FOR DEPORTATION OF ALIENS CONVICTED OF COMMITTING AGGRAVATED FELONIES

"SEC. 242A. (a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall provide for the availability of special deportation proceedings at certain Federal, State, and local correctional facilities for aliens convicted of aggravated felonies (as defined in section 101(a)(43). Such proceedings shall be conducted in conformity with section 242 (except as otherwise provided in this section), and in a manner which eliminates the need for additional detention at any processing center of the Service and in a manner which assures expeditious deportation, where warranted, following the end of the alien's incarceration for the underlying sentence.

"(b) IMPLEMENTATION.—With respect to an alien convicted of an aggravated felony who is taken into custody by the Attorney General pursuant to section 242(a)(2), the Attorney General shall, to the maximum extent practicable, detain any such felon at a facility at which other such aliens are detained. In the selection of such facility, the Attorney General shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the alien's access to counsel and right to counsel under section 292 are not impaired.

"(c) PRESUMPTION OF DEPORTABILITY.—An alien convicted of an aggravated felony shall be conclusively presumed to be deportable from the United States.

"(d) EXPEDITED PROCEEDINGS.—(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General shall provide for the initiation and, to the extent possible, the completion of deportation proceedings, and any administrative appeals thereof, in the case of any alien convicted of an aggravated felony before the alien's release from incarceration for the underlying aggravated felony."

"(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring the Attorney General to effect the deportation of any alien sentenced to actual incarceration, before release from the penitentiary or correctional institution where such alien is confined, unless the chief prosecutor or the judge in whose jurisdiction conviction occurred submits a written request to the Attorney General that such alien be so deported.

"(e) REVIEW.—(1) The Attorney General shall review and evaluate deportation proceedings conducted under this section. Within 12 months after the effective date of this section, the Attorney General shall submit a report to the Committees on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and of the Senate concerning the effectiveness of such deportation proceedings in facilitating the deportation of aliens convicted of aggravated felonies.

"(2) The Comptroller General shall monitor, review, and evaluate deportation proceedings conducted under this section. Within 18 months after the effective date of this section, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to such Committees concerning the extent to which deportation proceedings conducted under this section may adversely affect the ability of such aliens to contest deportation effectively.".

(b) APPEALS.—Paragraph (1) of section 106(a) (8 U.S.C. 1105a(a)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) a petition for review may be filed not later than 6 months after the date of the issuance of the final deportation order, or, in the case of an alien convicted of an aggravated felony, not later than 60 days after the issuance of such order;".

(c) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply in the case of any alien convicted of an aggravated felony on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of such Act is further amended by inserting after the item relating to section 242 the following new item:

"Sec. 242A. Expedited Procedures for deportation of aliens convicted of committing aggravated felonies.".

SEC. 7348. DEPORTATION FOR WEAPONS VIOLATION.

SEC. 7349. BAR ON REENTRY OF ALIENS CONVICTED OF AGGRAVATED FELONIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 212(a)(17) (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(17)) is amended by inserting "(or within ten years in the case of an alien convicted of an aggravated felony)" after "within five years".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any alien convicted of an aggravated felony who seeks admission to the United States on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7350. IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE PERSONNEL ENHANCEMENT.

(a) PILOT PROGRAM REGARDING THE IDENTIFICATION OF CERTAIN ALIENS.—

(1) Within 6 months after the effective date of this subtitle, the Attorney General shall establish, out of funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (c)(2), a pilot program in 4 cities to improve the capabilities of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Service") to respond to inquiries from Federal, State, and local law enforcement authorities concerning aliens who have been arrested for or convicted of, or who are the subject of any criminal investigation relating to, a violation of any law relating to controlled substances (other than an aggravated felony as defined in section 101(a)(43) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by section 7342 of this subtitle).

(2) At the end of the 12-month period after the establishment of such pilot program, the Attorney General shall provide for an evaluation of its effectiveness, including an assessment by Federal, State, and local prosecutors and law enforcement agencies. The Attorney General shall submit a report containing the conclusions of such evaluation to the Committees on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and of the Senate within 60 days after the completion of such evaluation.

(b) HIRING OF INVESTIGATIVE AGENTS.—

(1) Any investigative agent hired by the Attorney General for purposes of this section shall be employed exclusively to assist Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies in combating drug trafficking and crimes of violence by aliens.

(2) Any investigative agent hired under this section who is older than 35 years of age shall not be eligible for Federal retirement benefits made available to individuals who perform hazardous law enforcement activities.

"(B) Transfer any of the property to any—

"(i) other Federal agency; or

"(ii) State or local law enforcement agency that participated directly or indirectly in the seizure or forfeiture of the property.

"(2) The Secretary may transfer any forfeited personal property or the proceeds of the sale of any forfeited personal or real property to any foreign country which participated directly or indirectly in the seizure or forfeiture of the property, if such a transfer—

"(A) has been agreed to by the Secretary of State;

"(B) is authorized in an international agreement between the United States and the foreign country; and

"(C) is made to a country which, if applicable, has been certified under section 481(h) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) applies with respect to property forfeited under the Tariff Act of 1930 on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7367. AMENDMENTS TO THE TARIFF ACT OF 1930.

(a) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO DECLARE.—Section 497(a)(2)(A) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1497), is amended by striking out "200 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "1,000 percent".

(b) EFFECT OF A DECLARATION OF FORFEITURE.—Section 609 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1609) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 609. SEIZURE; SUMMARY FORFEITURE AND SALE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—If no such claim is filed or bond given within the twenty days hereinbefore specified, the appropriate customs officer shall declare the vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage forfeited, and shall sell the same at public auction in the same manner as merchandise abandoned to the United States is sold or otherwise dispose of the same according to law, and shall deposit the proceeds of sale, after deducting the expenses described in section 613, into the Customs Forfeiture Fund.

"(b) EFFECT.—A declaration of forfeiture under this section shall have the same force and effect as a final decree and order of forfeiture in a judicial forfeiture proceeding in a district court of the United States. Title shall be deemed to vest in the United States free and clear of any liens or encumbrances (except for first preferred ship mortgages pursuant to subsection O of section 30 of the Ship Mortgage Act, 1920 (46 U.S.C. App. 961) or any corresponding revision, consolidation, and enactment of such subsection in title 46, United States Code) from the date of the act for which the forfeiture was incurred. Officials of the various States, insular possessions, territories, and commonwealths of the United States shall, upon application of the appropriate customs officer accompanied by a certified copy of the declaration of forfeiture, remove any recorded liens or encumbrances which apply to such property and issue or reissue the necessary certificates of title, registration certificates, or similar documents to the United States or to any transferee of the United States.".

(c) TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.—

(1) Section 431(c)(1)(G) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1431(c)(1)(G)) is amended by striking out "or" and inserting in lieu thereof "of".

(2) Section 608 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1608) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 608. SEIZURE; CLAIMS; JUDICIAL CONDEMNATION.

"Any person claiming such vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage may at any time within twenty days from the date of the first publication of the notice of seizure file with the appropriate customs officer a claim stating his interest therein. Upon the filing of such claim, and the giving of a bond to the United States in the penal sum of $5,000 or 10 percent of the value of the claimed property, whichever is lower, but not less than $250, with sureties to be approved by such customs officer, conditioned that in case of condemnation of the articles so claimed the obligor shall pay all the costs and expenses of the proceedings to obtain such condemnation, such customs officer shall transmit such claim and bond, with a duplicate list and description of the articles seized, to the United States attorney for the district in which seizure was made, who shall proceed to a condemnation of the merchandise or other property in the manner prescribed by law.".

(3) Section 610 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1610) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 610. SEIZURE; JUDICIAL FORFEITURE PROCEEDINGS.

"If any vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage is not subject to section 607, the appropriate customs officer shall transmit a report of the case, with the names of available witnesses, to the United States attorney for the district in which the seizure was made for the institution of the proper proceedings for the condemnation of such property.".

(4) Section 612 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1612) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 612. SEIZURE; SUMMARY SALE.

"(a) Whenever it appears to the appropriate customs officer that any vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage seized under the customs laws is liable to perish or to waste or to be greatly reduced in value by keeping, or that the expense of keeping the same is disproportionate to the value thereof, and such vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage is subject to section 607, and such vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage has not been delivered under bond, such officer shall proceed forthwith to advertise and sell the same at auction under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. If such vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage is not subject to section 607, such officer shall forthwith transmit the appraiser's return and his report of the seizure to the United States attorney, who shall petition the court to order an immediate sale of such vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage, and if the ends of justice require it the court shall order such immediate sale, the proceeds thereof to be deposited with the court to await the final determination of the condemnation proceedings. Whether such sale be made by the customs officer or by order of the court, the proceeds thereof shall be held subject to claims of parties in interest to the same extent as the vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage so sold would have been subject to such claim.

"(b) If the expense of keeping the vessel, vehicle, aircraft, merchandise, or baggage is disproportionate to the value thereof, and such value is less than $1,000, such officer may proceed forthwith to order destruction or other appropriate disposition of such property, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.".

(5) Section 589 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1589), as added by section 320 of the Comprehensive Forfeiture Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-473; 98 Stat. 2056), is hereby repealed.

(6) Section 627 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1627), as added by section 302 of the Motor Vehicle Theft Law Enforcement Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 2771), is hereby repealed.

SEC. 7368. CARGO CONTAINER DRUG DETECTION RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

Up to $10,900,000 of funds appropriated under section 301(b)(1) of the Customs Procedural Reform and Simplification Act of 1978 may be used for the purpose set forth in this subsection.

(b) COORDINATION.—The Commissioner of Customs shall coordinate and share the findings of the research and development authorized in subsection (a) with other Federal departments and agencies with possible mission requirements for such technology, including the Federal Aviation Administration and United States Coast Guard in the Department of Transportation; the Drug Enforcement Administration in the Department of Justice; and the appropriate State and local law enforcement agencies, including airport authorities, port authorities, and other interested parties.

(c) REPORT.—The Commissioner of Customs shall report his findings in either classified, or unclassified form, to the appropriate Committees of Congress in conjunction with the President's submission of his fiscal year 1990 Budget of the United States.

SEC. 7369. STANDARDS OF CARE IN DISCOVERING CONTRABAND.

(a) IN GENERAL.—By no later than the date that is 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act and after an opportunity for public comment, the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe regulations which set forth criteria for use by the owner, master, pilot, operator, or officer of, or other employee in charge of, any common carrier in meeting the standards under sections 584(a)(2) and 594(c) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1584(a)(2) and 1594(c)) for the exercise of the highest degree of care and diligence to know whether controlled substances imported into the United States are on board the common carrier.

(b) AIR CARRIER SMUGGLING PREVENTION PROGRAM.—

(1) The Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall issue controlled substances regulations for a 2-year demonstration program within 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act. The regulations shall apply to at least three United States International Airports classified as high-risk by the United States Customs Service and based upon the volume of cargo and number of aircraft arriving from high-risk points of departure. Such regulations shall establish procedures for air carrier development and Customs Service approval of foreign and domestic security and inspection practices. The regulations shall permit air carriers to request the Secretary of the Treasury to permit air carriers, the Customs Service, or an approved agent of the Customs Service to inspect at United States airports of entry, and aircraft arriving from foreign locations. The Secretary of the Treasury shall approve such request if the applicant meets the requirements of the regulations. Taking into account all considerations of security, law enforcement, and commercial needs, inspections of aircraft and cargo shall be conducted and completed within a reasonable period of time.

(2) Air carriers which have applied to the Secretary of the Treasury and which the Secretary determines to be in compliance with the regulations and inspection requirements promulgated under paragraph (1) shall be considered participating air carriers. The Secretary of the Treasury shall establish by regulation a procedure for finding a carrier to be a participating carrier and procedures for subsequent removal of that status. The Secretary shall not remove an air carrier from the status of participating air carrier unless the Secretary has first provided to the air carrier a written notice that the air carrier is not in compliance with the regulations or inspection requirements promulgated under paragraph (1), which notice shall include the reasons for that determination, and has provided to the air carrier a reasonable opportunity to correct such noncompliance.

(3) Participating air carriers shall be considered to have met the test of the highest degree of care and diligence required under law, and shall not be subject to the penalty or seizure provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930, if a controlled substance is discovered aboard an aircraft that they may own or operate or in the cargo they carried, if the participating air carrier establishes at an oral presentation that the air carrier was not grossly negligent nor engaged in willful misconduct, and complied with the applicable procedures established in the regulations promulgated under paragraph (1).

(4) For the purpose of this subsection, the term "air carrier" means an air carrier or foreign air carrier as those terms are defined in section 101 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1301).

(5) No provision of this section shall have any effect on air transportation security requirements prescribed pursuant to the Federal Aviation Act of 1958.

SEC. 7370. COMMENDATION OF UNITED STATES CUSTOMS SERVICE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) on October 11, 1988, the United States Customs Service announced the results of Operation C-Chase, a 2-year investigation of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International and its top managers;

(2) this investigation culminated in simultaneous arrest, search and seizure warrants in the United States, France, and the United Kingdom;

(3) Operation C-Chase is the first indictment of an international financial institution for laundering illegal narcotics proceeds; and

(4) Operation C-Chase ended in 39 arrests, including of Amjad Awan—General Manuel Antonio Noriega's personal banker—and other alleged international drug and money laundering kingpins known as Gonzalo Mora, Jr., Roberto Alcaino, and Don Chepe, some of whom are intimately tied to the Medellin Cartel.

(b) COMMENDATION BY THE CONGRESS.—The Congress—

(1) commends Commissioner William von Raab, for his outstanding leadership and dedication over the last 7 years as Commissioner of the United States Customs Service, and specifically for his direction of Operation C-Chase;

(2) commends and expresses its gratitude to the undercover agents involved in Operation C-Chase, who risked their lives and well-being for the sake of combatting the international drug trade; and

(3) expresses its appreciation for the efforts of Special Agent in Charge Bonni Tischler of the Customs Service, and all other United States Customs officials who participated in Operation C-Chase.

(c) TRANSMITTAL.—The Secretary of the Senate is directed to transmit copies of this section to President Reagan, Commissioner von Raab, and Special Agent Tischler.

Subtitle L—Coast Guard Drug Law Enforcement

SEC. 7401. AUTHORITY AND PROTECTION OF COMMANDING OFFICERS ON NAVAL VESSELS TO WHICH COAST GUARD PERSONNEL ARE ASSIGNED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 637 of title 14, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 637. Stopping vessels; immunity for firing at or into vessel

"(a) Whenever any vessel liable to seizure or examination does not stop on being ordered to do so or on being pursued by an authorized vessel or authorized aircraft which has displayed the ensign, pennant, or other identifying insignia prescribed for an authorized vessel or authorized aircraft, the person in command or in charge of the authorized vessel or authorized aircraft may, after a gun has been fired by the authorized vessel or authorized aircraft as a warning signal, fire at or into the vessel which does not stop.

"(b) The person in command of an authorized vessel or authorized aircraft and all persons acting under that person's direction shall be indemnified from any penalties or actions for damages for firing at or into a vessel pursuant to subsection (a). If any person is killed or wounded by the firing, and the person in command of the authorized vessel or authorized aircraft or any person acting pursuant to their orders is prosecuted or arrested therefor, they shall be forthwith admitted to bail.

"(c) A vessel or aircraft is an authorized vessel or authorized aircraft for purposes of this section if—

"(1) it is a Coast Guard vessel or aircraft; or

"(2) it is a surface naval vessel on which one or more members of the Coast Guard are assigned pursuant to section 379 of title 10.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The item relating to section 637 in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 17 of title 14, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"637. Stopping vessels; immunity for firing at or into vessel.".

SEC. 7402. MARITIME DRUG LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT AMENDMENTS.

(a) SECTION 3(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 3(a) of the Act entitled "An Act to facilitate increased enforcement by the Coast Guard of laws relating to the importation of controlled substances, and for other purposes", approved September 15, 1980 (46 U.S.C. App. 1903(a)), is amended by inserting after "jurisdiction of the United States," the following: "or who is a citizen of the United States or a resident alien of the United States on board any vessel,".

(b) SECTION 3(b) AMENDMENT.—Section 3(b)(2) of such Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1903(b)(2)) is amended by inserting after "High Seas" the following: "and a claim of nationality or registry for the vessel is made by the master or individual in charge at the time of the enforcement action by an officer or employee of the United States authorized to enforce applicable provisions of United States law".

SEC. 7403. COAST GUARD LAW ENFORCEMENT DUTIES.

Section 2 of title 14, United States Code, is amended by striking "United States;" the first place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "United States; shall engage in maritime air surveillance or interdiction to enforce or assist in the enforcement of the laws of the United States;".

SEC. 7404. GREAT LAKES DRUG INTERDICTION.

(a) INTERAGENCY AGREEMENT.—The Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of the Treasury shall enter into an agreement for the purpose of increasing the effectiveness of maritime drug interdiction activities of the Coast Guard and the Customs Service in the Great Lakes area.

(b) NEGOTIATIONS WITH CANADA ON DRUG ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION.—The Secretary of State is encouraged to enter into negotiations with appropriate officials of the Government of Canada for the purpose of establishing an agreement between the United States and Canada which provides for increased cooperation and sharing of information between United States and Canadian law enforcement officials with respect to law enforcement efforts conducted on the Great Lakes between the United States and Canada.

SEC. 7405. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) ADDITIONAL AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE COAST GUARD.—

(1) ACQUISITION, CONSTRUCTION, AND IMPROVEMENTS.—Subject to subsection (c), there are authorized to be appropriated for acquisition, construction, and improvements of the Coast Guard $200,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, to remain available until expended.

(2) Operating expenses.—Subject to subsection (c), there are authorized to be appropriated for operating expenses of the Coast Guard $80,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and $20,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992, to remain available until expended. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this paragraph shall be used to increase by 500 the full-time equivalent strength level for the Coast Guard for active duty personnel for fiscal years 1989, 1990, 1991, and 1992, and to procure, enhance, relocate, operate, and maintain vessels, aircraft, radar, equipment, and structures by the Coast Guard for drug interdiction purposes.

(b) Amounts in Addition to Other Amounts.—Amounts and personnel authorized by this section are in addition to any other amounts or personnel strengths authorized for the Coast Guard for any fiscal year.

(c) Authorization Enhancement.—Nothing in this Act shall authorize the Coast Guard to recruit, compensate, train, purchase, or deploy any personnel or equipment except to the extent that—

(1) additional appropriations are made available in appropriations Acts for that purpose; or

(2) funds are transferred to the Secretary of Transportation for that purpose pursuant to this Act.

Subtitle M—Interpol Provisions

SEC. 7451. AUTHORIZATION TO ACCEPT MONEY, GOODS, AND SERVICES FOR THE INTERPOL CONFERENCE AND FOR A COMMEMORATIVE GIFT TO THE INTERPOL GENERAL SECRETARIAT.

(a) Interpol Conference.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1342 of title 31, United States Code, the Attorney General is hereby authorized to accept, receive, hold, and administer on behalf of the United States, gifts of money, personal property and services, for the purpose of hosting the International Criminal Police Organization's (INTERPOL) American Regional Conference in the United States in May and June of 1989.

(b) Commemorative Gift.—The Attorney General is authorized to accept, receive, hold, and administer on behalf of the United States, gifts of money, personal property and services, for the purpose of making a commemorative gift, the value of which shall not exceed $10,000 without the prior concurrence of the Secretary of State, to the INTERPOL General Secretariat on the opening of its headquarters in Lyon, France.

(c) Use of Moneys Received.—All moneys received for the purposes provided in this section shall be credited to the appropriation "Salaries and Expenses, general legal activities" for fiscal year 1989. The Attorney General shall use such amounts as he deems necessary to pay expenses of such commemorative gift and hosting such conference, including (but not limited to) reception and representation expenses. The authority of the Attorney General under this section shall continue through September 30, 1989.

Subtitle N—Child Pornography and Obscenity

SEC. 7501. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Child Protection and Obscenity Enforcement Act of 1988".

(c) Definition.—Section 2256 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof: "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(6) 'computer' has the meaning given that term in section 1030 of this title.".

SEC. 7512. SELLING OR BUYING OF CHILDREN.

(a) In General.—Chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2251 the following:

"§ 2251A. Selling or buying of children

"(a) Any parent, legal guardian, or other person having custody or control of a minor who sells or otherwise transfers custody or control of such minor, or offers to sell or otherwise transfer custody of such minor either—

"(1) with knowledge that, as a consequence of the sale or transfer, the minor will be portrayed in a visual depiction engaging in, or assisting another person to engage in, sexually explicit conduct; or

"(2) with intent to promote either—

"(A) the engaging in of sexually explicit conduct by such minor for the purpose of producing any visual depiction of such conduct; or

"(B) the rendering of assistance by the minor to any other person to engage in sexually explicit conduct for the purpose of producing any visual depiction of such conduct;

shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 20 years or for life and by a fine under this title, if any of the circumstances described in subsection (c) of this section exist.

"(b) Whoever purchases or otherwise obtains custody or control of a minor, or offers to purchase or otherwise obtain custody or control of a minor either—

"(1) with knowledge that, as a consequence of the purchase or obtaining of custody, the minor will be portrayed in a visual depiction engaging in, or assisting another person to engage in, sexually explicit conduct; or

"(2) with intent to promote either—

"(A) the engaging in of sexually explicit conduct by such minor for the purpose of producing any visual depiction of such conduct; or

"(B) the rendering of assistance by the minor to any other person to engage in sexually explicit conduct for the purpose of producing any visual depiction of such conduct;

shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 20 years or for life and by a fine under this title, if any of the circumstances described in subsection (c) of this section exist.

"(c) The circumstances referred to in subsections (a) and (b) are that—

"(1) in the course of the conduct described in such subsections the minor or the actor traveled in or was transported in interstate or foreign commerce;

"(2) any offer described in such subsections was communicated or transported in interstate or foreign commerce by any means including by computer or mail; or

"(3) the conduct described in such subsections took place in any territory or possession of the United States.".

(b) Definition.—Section 2256 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 201 of this Act, is further amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting "; and" in lieu thereof; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(7) 'custody or control' includes temporary supervision over or responsibility for a minor whether legally or illegally obtained.".

(c) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2251 the following:

"2251A. Selling or buying of children.".

SEC. 7513. RECORD KEEPING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) In General.—Chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§2257. Record keeping requirements

"(a) Whoever produces any book, magazine, periodical, film, videotape, or other matter which—

"(1) contains one or more visual depictions made after February 6, 1978 of actual sexually explicit conduct; and

"(2) is produced in whole or in part with materials which have been mailed or shipped in interstate or foreign commerce, or is shipped or transported or is intended for shipment or transportation in interstate or foreign commerce; shall create and maintain individually identifiable records pertaining to every performer portrayed in such a visual depiction.

"(b) Any person to whom subsection (a) applies shall, with respect to every performer portrayed in a visual depiction of actual sexually explicit conduct—

"(1) ascertain, by examination of an identification document containing such information, the performer's name and date of birth, and require the performer to provide such other indicia of his or her identity as may be prescribed by regulations;

"(2) ascertain any name, other than the performer's present and correct name, ever used by the performer including maiden name, alias, nickname, stage, or professional name; and

"(3) record in the records required by subsection (a) the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection and such other identifying information as may be prescribed by regulation.

"(c) Any person to whom subsection (a) applies shall maintain the records required by this section at his business premises, or at such other place as the Attorney General may by regulation prescribe and shall make such records available to the Attorney General for inspection at all reasonable times.

"(d)(1) No information or evidence obtained from records required to be created or maintained by this section shall, except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), be used, directly or indirectly, as evidence against any person with respect to any violation of law.

"(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not preclude the use of such information or evidence in a prosecution or other action for a violation of any applicable provision of law with respect to the furnishing of false information.

"(3) In a prosecution of any person to whom subsection (a) applies for an offense in violation of subsection 2251(a) of this title which has as an element the production of a visual depiction of a minor engaging in or assisting another person to engage in sexually explicit conduct and in which that element is sought to be established by showing that a performer within the meaning of this section is a minor—

"(A) proof that the person failed to comply with the provisions of subsection (a) or (b) of this section concerning the creation and maintenance of records, or a regulation issued pursuant thereto, shall raise a rebuttable presumption that such performer was a minor; and

"(B) proof that the person failed to comply with the provisions of subsection (e) of this section concerning the statement required by that subsection shall raise the rebuttable presumption that every performer in the matter was a minor.

"(e)(1) Any person to whom subsection (a) applies shall cause to be affixed to every copy of any matter described in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this section, in such manner and in such form as the Attorney General shall by regulations prescribe, a statement describing where the records required by this section with respect to all performers depicted in that copy of the matter may be located.

"(2) If the person to whom subsection (a) of this section applies is an organization the statement required by this subsection shall include the name, title, and business address of the individual employed by such organization responsible for maintaining the records required by this section.

"(3) In any prosecution of a person for an offense in violation of section 2252 of this title which has as an element the transporting, mailing, or distribution of a visual depiction involving the use of a minor engaging in sexually explicit conduct, and in which that element is sought to be established by a showing that a performer within the meaning of this section is a minor, proof that the matter in which the visual depiction is contained did not contain the statement required by this section shall raise a rebuttable presumption that such performer was a minor.

"(f) The Attorney General shall issue appropriate regulations to carry out this section.

"(g) As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'actual sexually explicit conduct' means actual but not simulated conduct as defined in subparagraphs (A) through (E) of paragraph (2) of section 2256 of this title;

"(2) 'identification document' has the meaning given that term in subsection 1028(d) of this title;

"(3) the term 'produces' means to produce, manufacture, or publish and includes the duplication, reproduction, or reissuing of any material; and

"(4) the term 'performer' includes any person portrayed in a visual depiction engaging in, or assisting another person to engage in, actual sexually explicit conduct.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 2256 the following:

"2257. Record keeping requirements.".

(c) Effective Date.—Section 2257 of title 18, United States Code, as added by this section shall take effect 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act except—

(1) the Attorney General shall prepare the initial set of regulations required or authorized by section 2257 within 90 days of the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) subsection (e) of section 2257 of such title and of any regulation issued pursuant thereto shall take effect 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7514. R.I.C.O. AMENDMENT.

Subsection 1961(1)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "section 1957 (relating to engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity)" the following: "sections 2251 through 2252 (relating to sexual exploitation of children),".

CHAPTER 2—OBSCENITY

SEC. 7521. ENGAGING IN THE BUSINESS OF SELLING OR TRANSFERRING OBSCENE MATTER.

(a) In General.—Chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1465 the following:

"§ 1466. Engaging in the business of selling or transferring obscene matter

"(a) Whoever is engaged in the business of selling or transferring obscene matter, who knowingly receives or possesses with intent to distribute any obscene book, magazine, picture, paper, film, videotape, or phonograph or other audio recording, which has been shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 5 years or by a fine under this title, or both.

"(b) As used in this subsection, the term 'engaged in the business' means that the person who sells or transfers or offers to sell or transfer obscene matter devotes time, attention, or labor to such activities, as a regular course of trade or business, with the objective of earning a profit, although it is not necessary that the person make a profit or that the selling or transferring or offering to sell or transfer such material be the person's sole or principal business or source of income. The offering for sale of or to transfer, at one time, two or more copies of any obscene publication, or two or more of any obscene article, or a combined total of five or more such publications and articles, shall create a rebuttable presumption that the person so offering them is 'engaged in the business' as defined in subsection (b).".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 1465 the following:

"1466. Engaging in the business of selling or transferring obscene matter.
"1467. Criminal forfeiture.".

(c) Travel in Commerce.—The first paragraph of section 1465 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the word distribution: ", or knowingly travels in interstate commerce, or uses a facility or means of interstate commerce for the purpose of transporting obscene material in interstate or foreign commerce,".

(d) Presumptions.—Chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a) of this section and by section 302, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 1469. Presumptions

"(a) In any prosecution under this chapter in which an element of the offense is that the matter in question was transported, shipped, or carried in interstate commerce, proof, by either circumstantial or direct evidence, that such matter was produced or manufactured in one State and is subsequently located in another State shall raise a rebuttable presumption that such matter was transported, shipped, or carried in interstate commerce.

"(b) In any prosecution under this chapter in which an element of the offense is that the matter in question was transported, shipped, or carried in foreign commerce, proof, by either circumstantial or direct evidence, that such matter was produced or manufactured outside of the United States and is subsequently located in the United States shall raise a rebuttable presumption that such matter was transported, shipped, or carried in foreign commerce.".

(f) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 1468 the following:

"1469. Presumptions.".

SEC. 7522. FORFEITURE IN OBSCENITY CASES.

(a) In General.—Chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 1467. Criminal forfeiture

"(a) Property Subject to Criminal Forfeiture.—A person who is convicted of an offense involving obscene material under this chapter shall forfeit to the United States such person's interest in—

"(1) any obscene material produced, transported, mailed, shipped, or received in violation of this chapter;

"(2) any property, real or personal, constituting or traceable to gross profits or other proceeds obtained from such offense; and

"(3) any property, real or personal, used or intended to be used to commit or to promote the commission of such offense, if the court in its discretion so determines, taking into consideration the nature, scope, and proportionality of the use of the property in the offense.

"(b) Third Party Transfers.—All right, title, and interest in property described in subsection (a) of this section vests in the United States upon the commission of the act giving rise to forfeiture under this section. Any such property that is subsequently transferred to a person other than the defendant may be the subject of a special verdict of forfeiture and thereafter shall be ordered forfeited to the United States, unless the transferee establishes in a hearing pursuant to subsection (m) of this section that he is a bona fide purchaser for value of such property who at the time of purchase was reasonably without cause to believe that the property was subject to forfeiture under this section.

"(c) Protective Orders.—(1) Upon application of the United States, the court may enter a restraining order or injunction, require the execution of a satisfactory performance bond, or take any other action to preserve the availability of property described in subsection (a) of this section for forfeiture under this section—

"(A) upon the filing of an indictment or information charging a violation of this chapter for which criminal forfeiture may be ordered under this section and alleging that the property with respect to which the order is sought would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture under this section; or

"(B) prior to the filing of such an indictment or information, if, after notice to persons appearing to have an interest in the property and opportunity for a hearing, the court determines that—

"(i) there is a substantial probability that the United States will prevail on the issue of forfeiture and that failure to enter the order will result in the property being destroyed, removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or otherwise made unavailable for forfeiture; and

"(ii) the need to preserve the availability of the property through the entry of the requested order outweighs the hardship on any party against whom the order is to be entered;

except that an order entered under subparagraph (B) shall be effective for not more than 90 days, unless extended by the court for good cause shown or unless an indictment or information described in subparagraph (A) has been filed.

"(2) A temporary restraining order under this subsection may be entered upon application of the United States without notice or opportunity for a hearing when an information or indictment has not yet been filed with respect to the property, if the United States demonstrates that there is probable cause to believe that the property with respect to which the order is sought would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture under this section and that provision of notice will jeopardize the availability of the property for forfeiture. Such a temporary order shall expire not more than 10 days after the date on which it is entered, unless extended for good cause shown or unless the party against whom it is entered consents to an extension for a longer period. A hearing requested concerning an order entered under this paragraph shall be held at the earliest possible time and prior to the expiration of the temporary order.

"(3) The court may receive and consider, at a hearing held pursuant to this subsection, evidence and information that would be inadmissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence.

"(d) WARRANT OF SEIZURE.—The Government may request the issuance of a warrant authorizing the seizure of property subject to forfeiture under this section in the same manner as provided for a search warrant. If the court determines that there is probable cause to believe that the property to be seized would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture and that an order under subsection (c) of this section may not be sufficient to assure the availability of the property for forfeiture, the court shall issue a warrant authorizing the seizure of such property.

"(e) ORDER OF FORFEITURE.—The court shall order forfeiture of property referred to in subsection (a) if—

"(1) the trier of fact determines, beyond a reasonable doubt, that such property is subject to forfeiture; and

"(2) with respect to property referred to in subsection (a)(3), if the court exercises the court's discretion under that subsection.

"(f) EXECUTION.—Upon entry of an order of forfeiture under this section, the court shall authorize the Attorney General to seize all property ordered forfeited upon such terms and conditions as the court shall deem proper. Following entry of an order declaring the property forfeited, the court may, upon application of the United States, enter such appropriate restraining orders or injunctions, require the execution of satisfactory performance bonds, appoint receivers, conservators, appraisers, accountants, or trustees, or take any other action to protect the interest of the United States in the property ordered forfeited. Any income accruing to or derived from property ordered forfeited under this section may be used to offset ordinary and necessary expenses to the property which are required by law, or which are necessary to protect the interests of the United States or third parties.

"(g) DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY.—Following the seizure of property ordered forfeited under this section, the Attorney General shall destroy or retain for official use any property described in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) and shall direct the disposition of any property described in paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a) by sale or any other commercially feasible means, making due provision for the rights of any innocent persons. Any property right or interest not exercisable by, or transferable for value to, the United States shall expire and shall not revert to the defendant, nor shall the defendant or any person acting in concert with him or on his behalf be eligible to purchase forfeited property at any sale held by the United States. Upon application of a person, other than the defendant or person acting in concert with him or on his behalf, the court may restrain or stay the sale or disposition of the property pending the conclusion of any appeal of the criminal case giving rise to the forfeiture, if the applicant demonstrates that proceeding with the sale or disposition of the property will result in irreparable injury, harm, or loss to him.

"(h) AUTHORITY OF ATTORNEY GENERAL.—With respect to property ordered forfeited under this section, the Attorney General is authorized to—

"(1) grant petitions for mitigation or remission of forfeiture, restore forfeited property to victims of a violation of this chapter, or take any other action to protect the rights of innocent persons which is in the interest of justice and which is not inconsistent with the provisions of this section;

"(2) comprise claims arising under this section;

"(3) award compensation to persons providing information resulting in a forfeiture under this section;

"(4) direct the disposition by the United States, in accordance with the provisions of section 1616, title 19, United States Code, of all property ordered forfeited under this section by public sale or any other commercially feasible means, making due provision for the rights of innocent persons; and

"(5) take appropriate measures necessary to safeguard and maintain property ordered forfeited under this section pending its disposition.

"(i) BAR ON INTERVENTION.—Except as provided in subsection (l) of this section, no party claiming an interest in property subject to forfeiture under this section may—

"(1) intervene in a trial or appeal of a criminal case involving the forfeiture of such property under this section; or

"(2) commence an action at law or equity against the United States concerning the validity of his alleged interest in the property subsequent to the filing of an indictment or information alleging that the property is subject to forfeiture under this section.

"(j) JURISDICTION TO ENTER ORDERS.—The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to enter orders as provided in this section without regard to the location of any property which may be subject to forfeiture under this section or which has been ordered forfeited under this section.

"(k) DEPOSITIONS.—In order to facilitate the identification and location of property declared forfeited and to facilitate the disposition of petitions for remission or mitigation of forfeiture, after the entry of an order declaring property forfeited to the United States, the court may, upon application of the United States, order that the testimony of any witness relating to the property forfeited be taken by deposition and that any designated book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material not privileged be produced at the same time and place, in the same manner as provided for the taking of depositions under Rule 15 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

"(l) THIRD PARTY INTERESTS.—(1) Following the entry of an order of forfeiture under this section, the United States shall publish notice of the order and of its intent to dispose of the property in such manner as the Attorney General may direct. The Government may also, to the extent practicable, provide direct written notice to any person known to have alleged an interest in the property that is the subject of the order of forfeiture as a substitute for published notice as to those persons so notified.

"(2) Any person, other than the defendant, asserting a legal interest in property which has been ordered forfeited to the United States pursuant to this section may, within 30 days of the final publication of notice or his receipt of notice under paragraph (1), whichever is earlier, petition the court for a hearing to adjudicate the validity of his alleged interest in the property. The hearing shall be held before the court alone, without a jury.

"(3) The petition shall be signed by the petitioner under penalty of perjury and shall set forth the nature and extent of the petitioner's right, title, or interest in the property, the time and circumstances of the petitioner's acquisition of the right, title, or interest in the property, any additional facts supporting the petitioner's claim, and the relief sought.

"(4) The hearing on the petition shall, to the extent practicable and consistent with the interests of justice, be held within 30 days of the filing of the petition. The court may consolidate the hearing on the petition with a hearing on any other petition filed by a person other than the defendant under this subsection.

"(5) At the hearing, the petitioner may testify and present evidence and witnesses on his own behalf, and cross-examine witnesses who appear at the hearing. The United States may present evidence and witnesses in rebuttal and in defense of its claim to the property and cross-examine witnesses who appear at the hearing. In addition to testimony and evidence presented at the hearing, the court shall consider the relevant portions of the record of the criminal case which resulted in the order of forfeiture.

"(6) If, after the hearing, the court determines that the petitioner has established by a preponderance of the evidence that—

"(A) the petitioner has a legal right, title, or interest in the property, and such right, title, or interest renders the order of forfeiture invalid in whole or in part because the right, title, or interest was vested in the petitioner rather than the defendant or was superior to any right, title, or interest of the defendant at the time of the commission of the acts which gave rise to the forfeiture of the property under this section; or

"(B) the petitioner is a bona fide purchaser for value of the right, title, or interest in the property and was at the time of purchase reasonably without cause to believe that the property was subject to forfeiture under this section;

the court shall amend the order of forfeiture in accordance with its determination.

"(7) Following the court's disposition of all petitions filed under this subsection, or if no such petitions are filed following the expiration of the period provided in paragraph (2) for the filing of such petitions, the United States shall have clear title to property that is the subject of the order of forfeiture and may warrant good title to any subsequent purchaser or transferee.

"(m) CONSTRUCTION.—This section shall be liberally construed to effectuate its remedial purposes.

"(n) SUBSTITUTE ASSETS.—If any of the property described in subsection (a), as a result of any act or omission of the defendant—

"(1) cannot be located upon the exercise of due diligence;

"(2) has been transferred or sold to, or deposited with, a third party;

"(3) has been placed beyond the jurisdiction of the court;

"(4) has been substantially diminished in value; or

"(5) has been commingled with other property which cannot be divided without difficulty;

the court shall order the forfeiture of any other property of the defendant up to the value of any property described in paragraphs (1) through (5).".

(b) REPEAL.—The last paragraph of section 1465 of title 18, United States Code, is repealed.

(c) SEXUAL ABUSE OF CHILDREN.—Sections 2253 through 2254 of title 18, United States Code, are amended to read as follows:

"§ 2253. Criminal forfeiture

"(a) PROPERTY SUBJECT TO CRIMINAL FORFEITURE.—A person who is convicted of an offense under this chapter involving a visual depiction described in sections 2251, 2251A, or 2252 of this chapter shall forfeit to the United States such person's interest in—

"(1) any visual depiction described in sections 2251, 2251A, or 2252 of this chapter, or any book, magazine, periodical, film, videotape, or other matter which contains any such visual depiction, which was produced, transported, mailed, shipped or received in violation of this chapter;

"(2) any property, real or personal, constituting or traceable to gross profits or other proceeds obtained from such offense; and

"(3) any property, real or personal, used or intended to be used to commit or to promote the commission of such offense.

"(b) THIRD PARTY TRANSFERS.—All right, title, and interest in property described in subsection (a) of this section vests in the United States upon the commission of the act giving rise to forfeiture under this section. Any such property that is subsequently transferred to a person other than the defendant may be the subject of a special verdict of forfeiture and thereafter shall be ordered forfeited to the United States, unless the transferee establishes in a hearing pursuant to subsection (m) of this section that he is a bona fide purchaser for value of such property who at the time of purchase was reasonably without cause to believe that the property was subject to forfeiture under this section.

"(c) PROTECTIVE ORDERS.—(1) Upon application of the United States, the court may enter a restraining order or injunction, require the execution of a satisfactory performance bond, or take any other action to preserve the availability of property described in subsection (a) of this section for forfeiture under this section—

"(A) upon the filing of an indictment or information charging a violation of this chapter for which criminal forfeiture may be ordered under this section and alleging that the property with respect to which the order is sought would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture under this section; or

"(B) prior to the filing of such an indictment or information, if, after notice to persons appearing to have an interest in the property and opportunity for a hearing, the court determines that—

(i) there is a substantial probability that the United States will prevail on the issue of forfeiture and that failure to enter the order will result in the property being destroyed, removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or otherwise made unavailable for forfeiture; and

(ii) the need to preserve the availability of the property through the entry of the requested order outweighs the hardship on any party against whom the order is to be entered;

except that an order entered pursuant to subparagraph (B) shall be effective for not more than 90 days, unless extended by the court for good cause shown or unless an indictment or information described in subparagraph (A) has been filed.

"(2) A temporary restraining order under this subsection may be entered upon application of the United States without notice or opportunity for a hearing when an information or indictment has not yet been filed with respect to the property, if the United States demonstrates that there is probable cause to believe that the property with respect to which the order is sought would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture under this section and that provision of notice will jeopardize the availability of the property for forfeiture. Such a temporary order shall expire not more than 10 days after the date on which it is entered, unless extended for good cause shown or unless the party against whom it is entered consents to an extension for a longer period. A hearing requested concerning an order entered under this paragraph shall be held at the earliest possible time and prior to the expiration of the temporary order.

"(3) The court may receive and consider, at a hearing held pursuant to this subsection, evidence and information that would be inadmissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence.

"(d) WARRANT OF SEIZURE.—The Government may request the issuance of a warrant authorizing the seizure of property subject to forfeiture under this section in the same manner as provided for a search warrant. If the court determines that there is probable cause to believe that the property to be seized would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture and that an order under subsection (c) of this section may not be sufficient to assure the availability of the property for forfeiture, the court shall issue a warrant authorizing the seizure of such property.

"(e) ORDER OF FORFEITURE.—The court shall order forfeiture of property referred to in subsection (a) if the trier of fact determines, beyond a reasonable doubt, that such property is subject to forfeiture.

"(f) EXECUTION.—Upon entry of an order of forfeiture under this section, the court shall authorize the Attorney General to seize all property ordered forfeited upon such terms and conditions as the court shall deem proper. Following entry of an order declaring the property forfeited, the court may, upon application of the United States, enter such appropriate restraining orders or injunctions, require the execution of satisfactory performance bonds, appoint receivers, conservators, appraisers, accountants, or trustees, or take any other action to protect the interest of the United States in the property ordered forfeited. Any income accruing to or derived from property ordered forfeited under this section may be used to offset ordinary and necessary expenses to the property which are required by law, or which are necessary to protect the interests of the United States or third parties.

"(g) DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY.—Following the seizure of property ordered forfeited under this section, the Attorney General shall destroy or retain for official use any article described in paragraph (1) of subsection (a), and shall retain for official use or direct the disposition of any property described in paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a) by sale or any other commercially feasible means, making due provision for the rights of any innocent persons. Any property right or interest not exercisable by, or transferable for value to, the United States shall expire and shall not revert to the defendant, nor shall the defendant or any person acting in concert with him or on his behalf be eligible to purchase forfeited property at any sale held by the United States. Upon application of a person, other than the defendant or person acting in concert with him or on his behalf, the court may restrain or stay the sale or disposition of the property pending the conclusion of any appeal of the criminal case giving rise to the forfeiture, if the applicant demonstrates that proceeding with the sale or disposition of the property will result in irreparable injury, harm, or loss to him.

"(h) AUTHORITY OF ATTORNEY GENERAL.—With respect to property ordered forfeited under this section, the Attorney General is authorized to—

"(1) grant petitions for mitigation or remission of forfeiture, restore forfeited property to victims of a violation of this chapter, or take any other action to protect the rights of innocent persons which is in the interest of justice and which is not inconsistent with the provisions of this section;

"(2) compromise claims arising under this section;

"(3) award compensation to persons providing information resulting in a forfeiture under this section;

"(4) direct the disposition by the United States, in accordance with the provisions of section 1616, title 19, United States Code, of all property ordered forfeited under this section by public sale or any other commercially feasible means, making due provision for the rights of innocent persons; and

"(5) take appropriate measures necessary to safeguard and maintain property ordered forfeited under this section pending its disposition.

"(i) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL FORFEITURE PROVISIONS.—Except to the extent that they are inconsistent with the provisions of this section, the provisions of section 2254(d) of this title (18 U.S.C. 2254(d)) shall apply to a criminal forfeiture under this section.

"(j) BAR ON INTERVENTION.—Except as provided in subsection (m) of this section, no party claiming an interest in property subject to forfeiture under this section may—

"(1) intervene in a trial or appeal of a criminal case involving the forfeiture of such property under this section; or

"(2) commence an action at law or equity against the United States concerning the validity of his alleged interest in the property subsequent to the filing of an indictment or information alleging that the property is subject to forfeiture under this section.

"(k) Jurisdiction to Enter Orders.—The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to enter orders as provided in this section without regard to the location of any property which may be subject to forfeiture under this section or which has been ordered forfeited under this section.

"(l) Depositions.—In order to facilitate the identification and location of property declared forfeited and to facilitate the disposition of petitions for remission or mitigation of forfeiture, after the entry of an order declaring property forfeited to the United States, the court may, upon application of the United States, order that the testimony of any witness relating to the property forfeited be taken by deposition and that any designated book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material not privileged be produced at the same time and place, in the same manner as provided for the taking of depositions under rule 15 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

"(m) Third Party Interests.—(1) Following the entry of an order of forfeiture under this section, the United States shall publish notice of the order and of its intent to dispose of the property in such manner as the Attorney General may direct. The Government may also, to the extent practicable, provide direct written notice to any person known to have alleged an interest in the property that is the subject of the order of forfeiture as a substitute for published notice as to those persons so notified.

"(2) Any person, other than the defendant, asserting a legal interest in property which has been ordered forfeited to the United States pursuant to this section may, within 30 days of the final publication of notice or his receipt of notice under paragraph (1), whichever is earlier, petition the court for a hearing to adjudicate the validity of his alleged interest in the property. The hearing shall be held before the court alone, without a jury.

"(3) The petition shall be signed by the petitioner under penalty of perjury and shall set forth the nature and extent of the petitioner's right, title, or interest in the property, the time and circumstances of the petitioner's acquisition of the right, title, or interest in the property, any additional facts supporting the petitioner's claim, and the relief sought.

"(4) The hearing on the petition shall, to the extent practicable and consistent with the interests of justice, be held within 30 days of the filing of the petition. The court may consolidate the hearing on the petition with a hearing on any other petition filed by a person other than the defendant under this subsection.

"(5) At the hearing, the petitioner may testify and present evidence and witnesses on his own behalf, and cross-examine witnesses who appear at the hearing. The United States may present evidence and witnesses in rebuttal and in defense of its claim to the property and cross-examine witnesses who appear at the hearing. In addition to testimony and evidence presented at the hearing, the court shall consider the relevant portions of the record of the criminal case which resulted in the order of forfeiture.

"(6) If, after the hearing, the court determines that the petitioner has established by a preponderance of the evidence that—

"(A) the petitioner has a legal right, title, or interest in the property, and such right, title, or interest renders the order of forfeiture invalid in whole or in part because the right, title, or interest was vested in the petitioner rather than the defendant or was superior to any right, title, or interest of the defendant at the time of the commission of the acts which gave rise to the forfeiture of the property under this section; or

"(B) the petitioner is a bona fide purchaser for value of the right, title, or interest in the property and was at the time of purchase reasonably without cause to believe that the property was subject to forfeiture under this section;

the court shall amend the order of forfeiture in accordance with its determination.

"(7) Following the court's disposition of all petitions filed under this subsection, or if no such petitions are filed following the expiration of the period provided in paragraph (2) for the filing of such petitions, the United States shall have clear title to property that is the subject of the order of forfeiture and may warrant good title to any subsequent purchaser or transferee.

"(n) Construction.—This section shall be liberally construed to effectuate its remedial purposes.

"(o) Substitute Assets.—If any of the property described in subsection (a), as a result of any act or omission of the defendant—

"(1) cannot be located upon the exercise of due diligence;

"(2) has been transferred or sold to, or deposited with, a third party;

"(3) has been placed beyond the jurisdiction of the court;

"(4) has been substantially diminished in value; or

"(5) has been commingled with other property which cannot be divided without difficulty;

the court shall order the forfeiture of any other property of the defendant up to the value of any property described in paragraphs (1) through (5).

"§2254. Civil forfeiture

"(a) Property Subject to Civil Forfeiture.—The following property shall be subject to forfeiture by the United States:

"(1) Any visual depiction described in sections 2251, 2251A, or 2252 of this chapter, or any book, magazine, periodical, film, videotape or other matter which contains any such visual depiction, which was produced, transported, mailed, shipped, or received in violation of this chapter.

"(2) Any property, real or personal, used or intended to be used to commit or to promote the commission of an offense under this chapter involving a visual depiction described in sections 2251, 2251A, or 2252 of this chapter, except that no property shall be forfeited under this paragraph, to the extent of the interest of an owner, by reason of any act or omission established by that owner to have been committed or omitted without the knowledge or consent of that owner.

"(3) Any property, real or personal, constituting or traceable to gross profits or other proceeds obtained from a violation of this chapter involving a visual depiction described in sections 2251, 2251A, or 2252 of this chapter, except that no property shall be forfeited under this paragraph, to the extent of the interest of an owner, by reason of any act or omission established by that owner to have been committed or omitted without the knowledge or consent of that owner.

"(b) Seizure Pursuant to Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims.—Any property subject to forfeiture to the United States under this section may be seized by the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury, or the United States Postal Service upon process issued pursuant to the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims by any district court of the United States having jurisdiction over the property, except that seizure without such process may be made when the seizure is pursuant to a search under a search warrant or incident to an arrest. The Government may request the issuance of a warrant authorizing the seizure of property subject to forfeiture under this section in the same manner as provided for a search warrant under the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

"(c) Custody of Federal Official.—Property taken or detained under this section shall not be repleviable, but shall be deemed to be in the custody of the Attorney General, Secretary of the Treasury, or the United States Postal Service subject only to the orders and decrees of the court or the official having jurisdiction thereof. Whenever property is seized under any of the provisions of this subchapter, the Attorney General, Secretary of the Treasury, or the United States Postal Service may—

"(1) place the property under seal;

"(2) remove the property to a place designated by the official or agency; or

"(3) require that the General Services Administration take custody of the property and remove it, if practicable, to an appropriate location for disposition in accordance with law.

"(d) Other Laws and Proceedings Applicable.—All provisions of the customs laws relating to the seizure, summary and judicial forfeiture, and condemnation of property for violation of the customs laws, the disposition of such property or the proceeds from the sale thereof, the remission or mitigation of such forfeitures, and the compromise of claims, shall apply to seizures and forfeitures incurred, or alleged to have been incurred, under this section, insofar as applicable and not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, except that such duties as are imposed upon the customs officer or any other person with respect to the seizure and forfeiture of property under the customs laws shall be performed with respect to seizures and forfeitures of property under this section by such officers, agents, or other persons as may be authorized or designated for that purpose by the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury, or the Postal Service, except to the extent that such duties arise from seizures and forfeitures affected by any customs officer.

"(e) Sections 1606, 1613, 1614, 1617, and 1618 of title 19, United States Code, shall not apply with respect to any visual depiction or any matter containing a visual depiction subject to forfeiture under subsection (a)(1) of this section.

"(f) Disposition of Forfeited Property.—Whenever property is forfeited under this section the Attorney General shall destroy or retain for official use any property described in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) and, with respect to property described in paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a), may—

"(1) retain the property for official use or transfer the custody or ownership of any forfeited property to a Federal, State, or local agency pursuant to section 1616 of title 19;

"(2) sell any forfeited property which is not required to be destroyed by law and which is not harmful to the public; or

"(3) require that the General Services Administration take custody of the property and dispose of it in accordance with law.

The Attorney General, Secretary of the Treasury, or the United States Postal Service shall ensure the equitable transfer pursuant to paragraph (1) of any forfeited property to the appropriate State or local law enforcement agency so as to reflect generally the contribution of any such agency participating directly in any of the acts which led to the seizure or forfeiture of such property. A decision by an official or agency pursuant to paragraph (1) shall not be subject to judicial review. With respect to a forfeiture conducted by the Attorney General, the Attorney General shall forward to the Treasurer of the United States for deposit in accordance with section 524(c) of title 28 the proceeds from any sale under paragraph (2) and any moneys forfeited under this subchapter. With respect to a forfeiture conducted by the Postal Service, the proceeds from any sale under paragraph (2) and any moneys forfeited under this subchapter shall be deposited in the Postal Service Fund as required by section 2003(b)(7) of title 39.

"(g) Title to Property.—All right, title, and interest in property described in subsection (a) of this section shall vest in the United States upon commission of the act giving rise to forfeiture under this section.

"(h) Stay of Proceedings.—The filing of an indictment or information alleging a violation of this chapter which is also related to a civil forfeiture proceeding under this section shall, upon motion of the United States and for good cause shown, stay the civil forfeiture proceeding.

"(i) Venue.—In addition to the venue provided for in section 1395 of title 28 or any other provision of law, in the case of property of a defendant charged with a violation that is the basis for forfeiture of the property under this section, a proceeding for forfeiture under this section may be brought in the judicial district in which the defendant owning such property is found or in the judicial district in which the criminal prosecution is brought.".

(e) Tariff Act Amendment.—Section 305 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1305) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(b) Coordination of Forfeiture Proceedings with Criminal Proceedings.—(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a), whenever the Customs Service is of the opinion that criminal prosecution would be appropriate or that further criminal investigation is warranted in connection with allegedly obscene material seized at the time of entry, the appropriate customs officer shall immediately transmit information concerning such seizure to the United States Attorney of the district of the addressee's residence. No notice to the addressee or consignee concerning the seizure is required at the time of such transmittal.

"(2) Upon receipt of such information, such United States attorney shall promptly determine whether in such attorney's opinion the referral of the matter for forfeiture under this section would materially affect the Government's ability to conduct a criminal investigation with respect to such seizure.

"(3) If the United States attorney is of the opinion that no prejudice to such investigation will result from such referral, such attorney shall immediately so notify the Customs Service in writing. The appropriate customs officer shall immediately notify in writing the addressee or consignee of the seizure and shall transmit information concerning such seizure to the United States attorney of the district in which is situated the office at which such seizure has taken place. The actions described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this subsection shall take place within sufficient time to allow for the filing of a forfeiture complaint within 14 days of the seizure unless the United States attorney of the district of the addressee's residence certifies in writing and includes specific, articulable facts demonstrating that the determination required in paragraph (2) of this subsection could not be made in sufficient time to comply with this deadline. In such cases, the actions described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this subsection shall take place within sufficient time to allow for the filing of a forfeiture complaint within 21 days of seizure.

"(4) If the United States attorney for the district of the addressee's residence concludes that material prejudice to such investigation will result from such referral, such United States attorney shall place on file, within 14 days of the date of seizure, a dated certification stating that it is the United States attorney's judgment that referral of the matter for forfeiture under this section would materially affect the Government's ability to conduct a criminal investigation with respect to the seizure. The certification shall set forth specific, articulable facts demonstrating that withholding referral for forfeiture is necessary.

"(5)(A) As soon as the circumstances change so that withholding of referral for forfeiture is no longer necessary for purposes of the criminal investigation, the United States attorney shall immediately so notify the Customs Service in writing and shall furnish a copy of the certification described in paragraph (4) above to the Customs Service.

"(B) In any matter referred to a United States attorney for possible criminal prosecution wherein subparagraph (5)(A) does not apply, the United States attorney shall immediately notify the Customs Service in writing concerning the disposition of the matter, whether by institution of a prosecution or a letter of declination, and shall also furnish a copy of the certification described in paragraph (4) of this subsection to the Customs Service.

"(C) Upon receipt of the notification described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of this paragraph, the appropriate customs officer shall immediately notify the addressee or consignee of the seizure and shall transmit information concerning the seizure, including a copy of the certification described in paragraph (4) above and a copy of the notification described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of this paragraph, to the United States attorney of the district in which is situated the office at which such seizure has taken place, who shall institute forfeiture proceedings in accordance with subsection (a) hereof within 14 days of the date of the notification described in subparagraph (A) or (B) above. A copy of the certification described in paragraph (4) above and a copy of the notification described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of this paragraph shall be affixed to the complaint for forfeiture.

"(c) Stay on Motion.—Upon motion of the United States, a court, for good cause shown, shall stay civil forfeiture proceedings commenced under this section pending the completion of any related criminal matter whether in the same or in a different district.".

SEC. 7523. CABLE TELEVISION OBSCENITY.

(a) New Offense.—Chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end, the following new section:

"§1468. Distributing obscene material by cable or subscription television

"(a) Whoever knowingly utters any obscene language or distributes any obscene matter by means of cable television or subscription services on television, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 2 years or by a fine in accordance with this title, or both.

"(b) As used in this section, the term 'distribute' means to send, transmit, retransmit, telecast, broadcast, or cablecast, including by wire, microwave, or satellite, or to produce or provide material for such distribution.

"(c) Nothing in this chapter, or the Cable Communications Policy Act of 1984, or any other provision of Federal law, is intended to interfere with or preempt the power of the States, including political subdivisions thereof, to regulate the uttering of language that is obscene or otherwise unprotected by the Constitution or the distribution of matter that is obscene or otherwise unprotected by the Constitution, of any sort, by means of cable television or subscription services on television.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"1468. Distributing obscene material by cable or subscription television.".

SEC. 7524. COMMUNICATIONS ACT AMENDMENT.

Section 223(b) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 223(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1)(A) Whoever knowingly—

"(i) in the District of Columbia or in interstate or foreign communication, by means of telephone, makes (directly or by recording device) any obscene communication for commercial purposes to any person, regardless of whether the maker of such communication placed the call; or

"(ii) permits any telephone facility under such person's control to be used for an activity prohibited by clause (i); shall be fined in accordance with title 18 of the United States Code, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

"(2)(A) Whoever knowingly—

"(i) in the District of Columbia or in interstate or foreign communication, by means of telephone, makes (directly or by recording device) any indecent communication for commercial purposes to any person, regardless of whether the maker of such communication placed the call; or

"(ii) permits any telephone facility under such person's control to be used for an activity prohibited by clause (i), shall be fined not more than $50,000 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.".

SEC. 7525. ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE.

Subsection (1) of section 2516 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by redesignating paragraphs (i) and (j) as (j) and (k), respectively, and by adding a new paragraph (i) as follows:

"(i) any felony violation of chapter 71 (relating to obscenity) of this title;".

SEC. 7526. POSSESSION WITH INTENT TO SELL AND SALE OF OBSCENE MATTERS IN FEDERAL JURISDICTION OR ON FEDERAL PROPERTY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting before section 1461 the following:

"§1460. Possession with intent to sell, and sale, of obscene matter on Federal property

"(a) Whoever, either—

"(1) in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States, or on any land or building owned by, leased to, or otherwise used by or under the control of the Government of the United States; or

"(2) in the Indian country as defined in section 1151 of this title, knowingly sells or possesses with intent to sell an obscene visual depiction or a visual depiction of a minor engaging in or assisting another person to engage in sexually explicit conduct, shall be punished by a fine in accordance with the provisions of this title or imprisoned for not more than 2 years, or both.

"(b) For the purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'visual depiction' includes undeveloped film and videotape but does not include mere words; and

"(2) the terms 'minor' and 'sexually explicit conduct' have the meaning given those terms in chapter 110 of this title.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 71 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding before the item relating to section 1461 the following:

"1460. Possession with intent to sell and sale of obscene matter on Federal property.".

Subtitle O—Miscellaneous

SEC. 7601. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION ON CASH TRANSACTIONS; UNDERCOVER ACTIVITIES OF INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.

(a) DISCLOSURE PROVISION.—

(1) DISCLOSURE OF REPORTS UNDER SECTION 6050 I.—Section 6050I of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) ACTIONS BY PAYORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No person shall for the purpose of evading the return requirements of this section—

"(A) cause or attempt to cause a trade or business to fail to file a return required under this section,

"(B) cause or attempt to cause a trade or business to file a return required under this section that contains a material omission or misstatement of fact, or

"(C) structure or assist in structuring, or attempt to structure or assist in structuring, any transaction with one or more trades or businesses.

"(2) PENALTIES.—A person violating paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be subject to the same civil and criminal sanctions applicable to a person which fails to file or completes a false or incorrect return under this section.".

(2) PENALTY.—

(A) Section 6721(b)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by inserting "(or, if greater, in the case of a return filed under section 6050I, 10 percent of the taxable income derived from the transaction)" after "reported".

(B) Section 7203 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "In the case of a willful violation of any provision of section 6050I, the first sentence of this section shall be applied by substituting '5 years' for '1 year'."

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to actions after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) NO INFERENCE.—No inference shall be drawn from the amendment made by paragraph (1) on the application of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 without regard to such amendment.

(b) DISCLOSURE OF RETURNS ON CASH TRANSACTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (i) of section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) DISCLOSURE OF RETURNS FILED UNDER SECTION 6050I.—The Secretary may, upon written request, disclose returns filed under section 6050I to officers and employees of any Federal agency whose official duties require such disclosure for the administration of Federal criminal statutes not related to tax administration."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 6103(p)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking out "or (7)(A)(ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof ", (7)(A)(ii), or (8)".

(B) The material preceding subparagraph (A) of section 6103(p)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(i) by striking out "or (5)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(5), or (8)", and

(ii) by striking out "(i)(3)(B)(i)," and inserting in lieu thereof "(i)(3)(B)(i) or (8)".

(C) Clause (ii) of section 6103(p)(4)(F) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking out "or (5)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(5), or (8)".

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to requests made on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, but disclosures may be made pursuant to such amendments only during the 2-year period beginning on such date.

(c) ENHANCEMENT OF UNDERCOVER CAPABILITIES OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 7608(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(A) by striking out "or" before "any other" and inserting a comma, and

(B) by inserting ", or any other law for which the Secretary has delegated investigatory authority to the Internal Revenue Service," after "responsible".

(2) UNDERCOVER OPERATIONS.—Section 7608 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) RULES RELATING TO UNDERCOVER OPERATIONS.—

"(1) CERTIFICATION REQUIRED FOR EXEMPTION OF UNDERCOVER OPERATIONS FROM CERTAIN LAWS.—With respect to any undercover investigative operation of the Internal Revenue Service (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Service') which is necessary for the detection and prosecution of offenses under the internal revenue laws, any other criminal provisions of law relating to internal revenue, or any other law for which the Secretary has delegated investigatory authority to the Internal Revenue Service—

"(A) sums authorized to be appropriated for the Service may be used—

"(i) to purchase property, buildings, and other facilities, and to lease space, within the United States, the District of Columbia, and the territories and possessions of the United States without regard to—

"(I) sections 1341 and 3324 of title 31, United States Code,

"(II) sections 11(a) and 22 of title 41, United States Code,

"(III) section 255 of title 41, United States Code,

"(IV) section 34 of title 40, United States Code, and

"(V) section 254 (a) and (c) of title 41, United States Code, and

"(ii) to establish or to acquire proprietary corporations or business entities as part of the undercover operation, and to operate such corporations or business entities on a commercial basis, without regard to sections 9102 and 9103 of title 31, United States Code;

"(B) sums authorized to be appropriated for the Service and the proceeds from the undercover operations, may be deposited in banks or other financial institutions without regard to the provisions of section 648 of title 18, United States Code, and section 3302 of title 31, United States Code, and

"(C) the proceeds from the undercover operation may be used to offset necessary and reasonable expenses incurred in such operation without regard to the provisions of section 3302 of title 31, United States Code.

This paragraph shall apply only upon the written certification of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue (or, if designated by the Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner or an Assistant Commissioner of Internal Revenue) that any action authorized by subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) is necessary for the conduct of such undercover operation.

"(2) LIQUIDATION OF CORPORATIONS AND BUSINESS ENTITIES.—If a corporation or business entity established or acquired as part of an undercover operation under subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) with a net value over $50,000 is to be liquidated, sold, or otherwise disposed of, the Service, as much in advance as the Commissioner or his delegate determines is practicable, shall report the circumstances to the Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States. The proceeds of the liquidation, sale, or other disposition, after obligations are met, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts.

"(3) DEPOSIT OF PROCEEDS.—As soon as the proceeds from an undercover investigative operation with respect to which an action is authorized and carried out under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1) are no longer necessary for the conduct of such operation, such proceeds or the balance of such proceeds remaining at the time shall be deposited into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts.

"(4) AUDITS.—

"(A) The Service shall conduct a detailed financial audit of each undercover investigative operation which is closed in each fiscal year; and

"(i) submit the results of the audit in writing to the Secretary; and

"(ii) not later than 180 days after such undercover operation is closed, submit a report to the Congress concerning such audit.

"(B) The Service shall also submit a report annually to the Congress specifying as to its undercover investigative operations—

"(i) the number, by programs, of undercover investigative operations pending as of the end of the 1-year period for which such report is submitted;

"(ii) the number, by programs, of undercover investigative operations commenced in the 1-year period preceding the period for which such report is submitted; and

"(iii) the number, by programs, of undercover investigative operations closed in the 1-year period preceding the period for which such report is submitted and, with respect to each such closed undercover operation, the results obtained and any civil claims made with respect thereto.

"(5) Definitions.—For purposes of paragraph (4)—

"(A) Closed.—The term 'closed' means the date on which the later of the following occurs;

"(i) all criminal proceedings (other than appeals) are concluded, or

"(ii) covert activities are concluded, whichever occurs later.

"(B) Employees.—The term 'employees' has the meaning given such term by section 2105 of title 5, United States Code.

"(C) Undercover investigative operation.—The terms 'undercover investigative operation' and 'undercover operation' mean any undercover investigative operation of the Service—

"(i) in which—

"(I) the gross receipts (excluding interest earned) exceed $50,000; or

"(II) expenditures, both recoverable and nonrecoverable (other than expenditures for salaries of employees), exceed $150,000; and

"(ii) which is exempt from section 3302 or 9102 of title 3, United States Code.

Clauses (i) and (ii) shall not apply with respect to the report required under subparagraph (B) of paragraph (4).".

(3) Effective date.—The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall cease to apply after December 31, 1989; and all amounts expended pursuant to such amendments shall be recovered to the extent possible, and deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts, before January 1, 1990.

SEC. 7602. RECOVERY OF COSTS INCURRED BY STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

(a) In General.—Subchapter B of chapter 78 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to general powers and duties) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 7624. REIMBURSEMENT TO STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

"(a) Authorization of Reimbursement.—Whenever a State or local law enforcement agency provides information to the Internal Revenue Service that substantially contributes to the recovery of Federal taxes imposed with respect to illegal drug-related activities (or money laundering in connection with such activities), such agency may be reimbursed by the Internal Revenue Service for costs incurred in the investigation (including but not limited to reasonable expenses, per diem, salary, and overtime) not to exceed 10 percent of the sum recovered.

"(b) Records; 10 Percent Limitation.—The Internal Revenue Service shall maintain records of the receipt of information from a contributing agency and shall notify the agency when monies have been recovered as the result of such information. Following such notification, the agency shall submit a statement detailing the investigative costs it incurred. Where more than 1 State or local agency has given information that substantially contributes to the recovery of Federal taxes, the Internal Revenue Service shall equitably allocate investigative costs among such agencies not to exceed an aggregate amount of 10 percent of the taxes recovered.

"(c) No Reimbursement Where Duplicative.—No State or local agency may receive reimbursement under this section if reimbursement has been received by such agency under a Federal or State forfeiture program or under State revenue laws.".

(b) Establishment of Law Enforcement Agency Account.—Section 7809 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to deposit of collections) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Deposit of Funds for Law Enforcement Agency Account.—

"(1) In general.—In the case of any amounts recovered as the result of information provided to the Internal Revenue Service by State and local law enforcement agencies which substantially contributed to such recovery, an amount equal to 10 percent of such amounts shall be deposited in a separate account which shall be used to make the reimbursements required under section 7624.

"(2) Deposit in Treasury as internal revenue collections.—If any amounts remain in such account after payment of any qualified costs incurred under section 7624, such amounts shall be withdrawn from such account and deposited in the Treasury of the United States as internal revenue collections.".

(c) Disclosure of Return Information.—Section 6103(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to disclosure to State tax officials) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Exception for reimbursement under section 7624.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the Secretary from disclosing to any State or local law enforcement agency which may receive a payment under section 7624 the amount of the recovered taxes with respect to which such a payment may be made."

(d) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) The table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 78 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 7624. Reimbursement to State and local law enforcement agencies.".

(2) The heading for section 6103(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended to read as follows:

"(d) Disclosure to State Tax Officials and State and Local Law Enforcement Agencies.".

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to information first provided more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(f) Authorization of Appropriations.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the account referred to in section 7809(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 such sums as may be necessary to make the payments authorized by section 7624 of such Code.

(g) Regulations.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall, not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, prescribe such rules and regulations as shall be necessary and proper to carry out the provisions of this section, including regulations relating to the definition of information which substantially contributes to the recovery of Federal taxes and the substantiation of expenses required in order to receive a reimbursement.

SEC. 7603. DEFINITION FOR MAIL FRAUD CHAPTER OF TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) In General.—Chapter 63 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 1346. Definition of 'scheme or artifice to defraud'

"For the purposes of this chapter, the term 'scheme or artifice to defraud' includes a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 63 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"1346. Definition of 'scheme or artifice to defraud'.".

SEC. 7604. NATIONAL COMMISSION ON MEASURED RESPONSES TO ACHIEVE A DRUG-FREE AMERICA BY 1995 AUTHORIZATION ACT.

(a) Short Title.—This section may be cited as the "National Commission on Measured Responses to Achieve a Drug-Free America by 1995 Authorization Act".

(b) Commission.—(1) There is hereby established a Commission to be chaired by the Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy and consisting of 24 members appointed by the President within 120 days of the date of enactment of this section. Not more than one-half of the members of the Commission may be members of one political party. The members of the Commission shall include—

(A) State and local law enforcement officers;

(B) Attorneys General and District Attorneys;

(C) State and local elected officials;

(D) experts in the fields of drug abuse prevention, treatment, education, and law enforcement; and

(E) other appropriate individuals as determined by the President.

(2) The term of the Commission shall expire 6 months following the date of appointment of the members thereof.

(c) Duties of the Commission.—The Commission is established to develop a proposed uniform code of State laws that represent measured responses to achieve a Drug-Free America by 1995. Among the types of measured responses that the Commission should consider are—

(1) appropriate penalties for drug offenses;

(2) participation in rehabilitation and treatment programs;

(3) appropriate use of drug testing;

(4) efforts to educate the public on the dangers of drug abuse as a means of reducing demand;

(5) forfeiture of assets of violators of State drug laws;

(6) cooperative ventures among the Federal, State, and local levels;

(7) methods to interdict illegal drugs at our borders, eradicate crops of illegal drugs, and cease the manufacture of illegal drugs; and

(8) other means of preventing drug abuse.

(d) Report of Commission.—Within 6 months after the date of the appointment of its members, the Commission shall submit its proposed uniform code to the Governors of the 50 States and the Mayor of the District of Columbia.

(e) Vacancies.—A vacancy in the Commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment was made. A vacancy in the Commission shall not affect the powers of the Commission.

(f) QUORUM.—Fourteen members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may hold hearings.

(g) COMPENSATION.—(1) Each member of the Commission who is not an officer or employee of the United States shall be compensated at a rate established by the Commission not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for grade GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) during which such member is engaged in the actual performance of duties as a member of the Commission. Each member of the Commission who is an officer or employee of the United States shall receive no additional compensation for service on the Commission.

(2) While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of duties for the Commission, all members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at a rate established by the Commission not to exceed the rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(h) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—(1) The Commission shall appoint an Executive Director who shall be compensated at a rate established by the Commission not to exceed the rate of basic pay prescribed for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(3) Subject to such rules as may be issued by the Commission, the chairman may procure temporary and intermittent services of experts and consultants.

(4) The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

(5) Service of an individual as a member of the Commission, or employment of an individual by the Commission as an attorney or expert in any business or professional field, on a part-time or full-time basis, with or without compensation, shall not be considered as service or employment bringing such individual within the provisions of any Federal law relating to conflicts of interest or otherwise imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of services, or the payment or receipt of compensation in connection with claims, proceedings, or matters involving the United States. Service as a member of the Commission, or as an employee of the Commission, shall not be considered service in an appointive or elective position in the Government for purposes of section 8344 of title 5, United States Code, or comparable provisions of Federal law.

(i) POWERS OF COMMISSION.—(1) For the purpose of carrying out this section, the Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before the Commission.

(2) Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action which the Commission is authorized to take by this subsection.

(j) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS ON STATE CONFERENCES.—It is the sense of the Congress that the Governors of the 50 States and the Mayor of the District of Columbia should convene State conferences for a Drug-Free America by 1995. These conferences should include attorneys general, district attorneys, mayors, other elected officials, law enforcement officials, educators, drug prevention and treatment experts, and other interested parties. The State conferences should consider the proposed uniform code described in subsection (c) and make recommendations thereon.

(k) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, and they shall remain available for the term of the Commission. New spending authority or authority to enter contracts as provided in this section shall be effective only to such extent and in such amounts as are provided in advance in appropriation Acts.

SEC. 7605. USE OF EXISTING FEDERAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT FACILITIES FOR CIVILIAN LAW ENFORCEMENT.

(a) COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.—The President of the United States shall direct the Office of National Drug Control Policy, established in title I of this Act, to develop a comprehensive plan for utilizing no fewer than eight existing facilities of the Department of Defense, the Department of Justice, the Department of Energy, National Security Agency, and the Central Intelligence Agency, to develop technologies for application to Federal law enforcement agency missions, and to provide research, development, technology, and evaluation support to the law enforcement agencies of the Federal Government. Such plan shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress by no later than 90 days from the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) EXISTING FACILITIES TO BE EXAMINED.—The following existing United States Government facilities shall be examined in developing the comprehensive plan mandated in subsection (a):

(1) For night vision research and development—Department of Defense, Army Materiel Command, Night Vision Laboratory at Fort Belvoir, Virginia;

(2) For ground sensor research and development—Department of Defense, Army Materiel Command, Communications Electronic Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey;

(3) For physical/electronic security research and development—Department of Defense, Air Force Systems Command, Electronic Systems Division, Hanscom Field, Massachusetts;

(4) For imaging/electronic surveillance research and development—Central Intelligence Agency and National Security Agency, Washington, DC;

(5) For chemical/biosensor research and development—Department of Defense, Army Materiel Command, Chemical Research Development and Engineering Center, Aberdeen, Maryland;

(6) For chemical/molecular detector research and development—Department of Energy, Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, New Mexico;

(7) For physical/electronic surveillance and tracking, research and development—Department of Justice, Federal Bureau of Investigation and Drug Enforcement Administration, Washington, DC; and

(8) For explosives ordnance detection research and development—Department of Defense, Naval Ordinance Station, Indian Head, Maryland.

(c) PARTICIPATION.—In developing the plan mandated in subsection (a), the Director of National Drug Control Policy shall ensure that representatives of the Federal law enforcement agencies are provided an opportunity to participate in the formulation of the comprehensive plan and that their views and recommendations are integrated into the planning process.

(d) COMPTROLLER GENERAL OVERSIGHT.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall monitor the development of the plan mandated in subsection (a) and report periodically to the appropriate Committees of the Congress on the progress of the development of this research and development program. This subsection does not confer authority upon the Comptroller General, additional to that otherwise provided by law, to gain access to sensitive information held by any agency within the intelligence community.

SEC. 7606. CIVIL AIR PATROL.

(a) REGULATIONS.—Within 45 days, the Secretary of the Air Force shall issue such regulations as are necessary to ensure that the Civil Air Patrol has an integral role in drug interdiction and eradication activities.

(b) REPORTS.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives, quarterly reports which include a detailed description of the activities of the Civil Air Patrol in support of the Federal, State, and local government agencies' drug interdiction and eradication programs. The first report shall be submitted on the last day of the first quarter ending not less than 150 days after the date of the enactment.

SEC. 7607. DEFENSE DRUG INTERDICTION AMENDMENT.

Title VII of "An Act Making Appropriations For The Department of Defense For The Fiscal Year Ending September 30, 1989" is amended under the heading "DRUG INTERDICTION, DEFENSE" by inserting at the end of the first sentence after the word "United States" the following: "and drug enforcement and interdiction activities of the Army National Guard and Air National Guard", and by inserting in the second sentence "enforcement and" after the word "drug".

SEC. 7608. UNITED STATES MARSHALS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 37 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking out sections 561 through 571 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"§561. United States Marshals Service

"(a) There is hereby established a United States Marshals Service as a bureau within the Department of Justice under the authority and direction of the Attorney General. There shall be at the head of the United States Marshals Service (hereafter in this chapter referred to as the 'Service') a Director who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(b) The Director of the United States Marshals Service (hereafter in this chapter referred to as the 'Director') shall, in addition to the powers and duties set forth in this chapter, exercise such other functions as may be delegated by the Attorney General.

"(c) The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a United States marshal for each judicial district of the United States and for the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, except that any marshal appointed for the Northern Mariana Islands may at the same time serve as marshal in another judicial district. Each United States marshal shall be an official of the Service and shall serve under the direction of the Director.

"(d) Each marshal shall be appointed for a term of four years. A marshal shall, unless that marshal has resigned or been removed by the President, continue to perform the duties of that office after the end of that 4-year term until a successor is appointed and qualifies.

"(e) The Director shall designate places within a judicial district for the official station and offices of each marshal. Each marshal shall reside within the district for which such marshal is appointed, except that—

"(1) the marshal for the District of Columbia, for the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, and for the Southern District of New York may reside within 20 miles of the district for which the marshal is appointed; and

"(2) any marshal appointed for the Northern Mariana Islands who at the same time is serving as marshal in another district may reside in such other district.

"(f) The Director is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such employees as are necessary to carry out the powers and duties of the Service and may designate such employees as law enforcement officers in accordance with such policies and procedures as the Director shall establish pursuant to the applicable provisions of title 5 and regulations issued thereunder.

"(g) The Director shall supervise and direct the United States Marshals Service in the performance of its duties.

"(h) The Director may administer oaths and may take affirmations of officials and employees of the Service, but shall not demand or accept any fee or compensation therefor.

"(i) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Service.

"§ 562. Vacancies

"(a) In the case of a vacancy in the office of a United States marshal, the Attorney General may designate a person to perform the functions of and act as marshal, except that the Attorney General may not designate to act as marshal any person who was appointed by the President to that office but with respect to such appointment the Senate has refused to give its advice and consent.

"(b) A person designated by the Attorney General under subsection (a) may serve until the earliest of the following events:

"(1) The entry into office of a United States marshal appointed by the President, pursuant to section 561(c).

"(2) The expiration of the thirtieth day following the end of the next session of the Senate.

"(3) If such designee of the Attorney General is appointed by the President pursuant to section 561(c), but the Senate refuses to give its advice and consent to the appointment, the expiration of the thirtieth day following such refusal.

"§ 563. Oath of office

"The Director and each United States marshal and law enforcement officer of the Service, before taking office, shall take an oath or affirmation to faithfully execute the duties of that office.

"§ 564. Powers as sheriff

"United States marshals, deputy marshals and such other officials of the Service as may be designated by the Director, in executing the laws of the United States within a State, may exercise the same powers which a sheriff of the State may exercise in executing the laws thereof.

"§ 565. Expenses of the service

"The Director is authorized to use funds appropriated for the Service to make payments for expenses incurred pursuant to personal services contracts and cooperative agreements, authorized by the Attorney General, for security guards and for the service of summons on complaints, subpoenas, and notices in lieu of services by United States marshals and deputy marshals.

"§ 566. Powers and duties

"(a) It is the primary role and mission of the United States Marshals Service to provide for the security and to obey, execute, and enforce all orders of the United States District Courts, the United States Courts of Appeals and the Court of International Trade.

"(b) The United States marshal of each district is the marshal of the district court and of the court of appeals when sitting in that district, and of the Court of International Trade holding sessions in that district, and may, in the discretion of the respective courts, be required to attend any session of court.

"(c) Except as otherwise provided by law or Rule of Procedure, the United States Marshals Service shall execute all lawful writs, process, and orders issued under the authority of the United States, and shall command all necessary assistance to execute its duties.

"(d) Each United States marshal, deputy marshal, and any other official of the Service as may be designated by the Director may carry firearms and make arrests without warrant for any offense against the United States committed in his or her presence, or for any felony cognizable under the laws of the United States if he or she has reasonable grounds to believe that the person to be arrested has committed or is committing such felony.

"(e)(1) The United States Marshals Service is authorized to—

"(A) provide for the personal protection of Federal jurists, court officers, witnesses, and other threatened persons in the interests of justice where criminal intimidation impedes on the functioning of the judicial process or any other official proceeding; and

"(B) investigate such fugitive matters, both within and outside the United States, as directed by the Attorney General.

"(2) Nothing in paragraph (1)(B) shall be construed to interfere with or supersede the authority of other Federal agencies or bureaus.

"(f) In accordance with procedures established by the Director, and except for public money deposited under section 2041 of this title, each United States marshal shall deposit public moneys that the marshal collects into the Treasury, subject to disbursement by the marshal. At the end of each accounting period, the earned part of public moneys accruing to the United States shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriate receipt accounts.

"(g) Prior to resignation, retirement, or removal from office—

"(1) a United States marshal shall deliver to the marshal's successor all prisoners in his custody and all unserved process; and

"(2) a deputy marshal shall deliver to the marshal all process in the custody of the deputy marshal.

"(h) The United States marshals shall pay such office expenses of United States Attorneys as may be directed by the Attorney General.".

(2) ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS.—Chapter 37 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking out sections 572a, 573, and 574; and

(B) by redesignating sections 572, 575, and 576 as sections 567, 568, and 569, respectively.

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The chapter heading for chapter 37 of title 28, United States Code, and the table of sections at the beginning of such chapter, are amended to read as follows:

"Chapter 37—United States Marshals Service

"Sec.
"561. United States Marshals Service.
"562. Vacancies.
"563. Oath of office.
"564. Powers as sheriff.
"565. Expenses of the Service.
"566. Powers and duties.
"567. Collection of fees; accounting.
"568. Practice of law prohibited.
"569. Reemployment rights.".

(b) OTHER AMENDMENT.—Section 755 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking out the third paragraph.

(c) MARSHALS' FEES.—Section 1921 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (e); and

(2) by striking out subsections (a) and (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a)(1) The United States marshals or deputy marshals shall routinely collect, and a court may tax as costs, fees for the following:

"(A) Serving a writ of possession, partition, execution, attachment in rem, or libel in admiralty, warrant, attachment, summons, complaints, or any other writ, order or process in any case or proceeding.

"(B) Serving a subpoena or summons for a witness or appraiser.

"(C) Forwarding any writ, order, or process to another judicial district for service.

"(D) The preparation of any notice of sale, proclamation in admiralty, or other public notice or bill of sale.

"(E) The keeping of attached property (including boats, vessels, or other property attached or libeled), actual expenses incurred, such as storage, moving, boat hire, or other special transportation, watchmen's or keepers' fees, insurance, and an hourly rate, including overtime, for each deputy marshal required for special services, such as guarding, inventorying, and moving.

"(F) Copies of writs or other papers furnished at the request of any party.

"(G) Necessary travel in serving or endeavoring to serve any process, writ, or order, except in the District of Columbia, with mileage to be computed from the place where service is returnable to the place of service or endeavor.

"(H) Overtime expenses incurred by deputy marshals in the course of serving or executing civil process.

"(2) The marshals shall collect, in advance, a deposit to cover the initial expenses for special services required under paragraph (1)(E), and periodically thereafter such amounts as may be necessary to pay such expenses until the litigation is concluded. This paragraph applies to all private litigants, including seamen proceeding pursuant to section 1916 of this title.

"(3) For purposes of paragraph (1)(G), if two or more services or endeavors, or if an endeavor and a service, are made in behalf of the same party in the same case on the same trip, mileage shall be computed to the place of service or endeavor which is most remote from the place where service is returnable, adding thereto any additional mileage traveled in serving or endeavoring to serve in behalf of the party. If two or more writs of any kind, required to be served in behalf of the same party on the same person in the same case or proceeding, may be served at the same time, mileage on only one such writ shall be collected.

"(b) The Attorney General shall from time to time prescribe by regulation the fees to be taxed and collected under subsection (a). Such fees shall, to the extent practicable, reflect the actual and reasonable cost of the service provided.

"(c)(1) The United States Marshals Service shall collect a commission of 3 percent of the first $1,000 collected and 1½ percent on the excess of any sum over $1,000, for seizing or levying on property (including seizures in admiralty), disposing of such property by sale, setoff, or otherwise, and receiving and paying over money, except that the amount of commission shall be within the range set by the Attorney General. If the property is to be disposed of by marshal's sale, the commission shall be in such amount, within the range set by the Attorney General, as may be allowed by the court. In any case in which the vessel or other property is sold by a public auctioneer, or by some party other than a marshal or deputy marshal, the commission authorized under this subsection shall be reduced by the amount paid to such auctioneer or other party. This subsection applies to any judicially ordered sale or execution sale, without regard to whether the judicial order of sale constitutes a seizure or levy within the meaning of State law. This subsection shall not apply to any seizure, forfeiture, sale, or other disposition of property pursuant to the applicable provisions of law amended by the Comprehensive Forfeiture Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 2040).

"(2) The Attorney General shall prescribe from time to time regulations which establish a minimum and maximum amount for the commission collected under paragraph (1).

"(d) The United States marshals may require a deposit to cover the fees and expenses prescribed under this section.".

(d) Support of United States Prisoners in Non-Federal Institutions.—

(1) In general.—Chapter 301 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 4013. Support of United States prisoners in non-Federal institutions

"(a) The Attorney General, in support of United States prisoners in non-Federal institutions, is authorized to make payments from funds appropriated for the support of United States prisoners for—

"(1) necessary clothing;

"(2) medical care and necessary guard hire;

"(3) the housing, care, and security of persons held in custody of a United States marshal pursuant to Federal law under agreements with State or local units of government or contracts with private entities; and

"(4) entering into contracts or cooperative agreements with any State, territory, or political subdivision thereof, for the necessary construction, physical renovation, acquisition of equipment, supplies, or materials required to establish acceptable conditions of confinement and detention services in any State or local jurisdiction which agrees to provide guaranteed bed space for Federal detainees within that correctional system, in accordance with regulations which are issued by the Attorney General and are comparable to the regulations issued under section 4006 of this title, except that—

"(A) amounts made available for purposes of this paragraph shall not exceed the average per-inmate cost of constructing similar confinement facilities for the Federal prison population,

"(B) the availability of such federally assisted facility shall be assured for housing Federal prisoners, and

"(C) the per diem rate charged for housing such Federal prisoners shall not exceed allowable costs or other conditions specified in the contract or cooperative agreement.".

(2) Conforming amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 301 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"4013. Support of United States prisoners in non-Federal institutions.".

(e) Pay of Director of Service.—Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Director, United States Marshals Service.".

SEC. 7609. DATA COLLECTION AND REPORTING.

(a) Family Violence Reporting.—Under the authority of section 534 of title 28, United States Code, the Attorney General shall require, and include in uniform crime reports, data that indicate—

(1) the age of the victim; and

(2) the relationship of the victim to the offender, for crimes of murder, aggravated assault, simple assault, rape, sexual offenses, and offenses against children.

(b) National Crime Survey.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Statistics, through the annual National Crime Survey, shall collect and publish data that more accurately measures the extent of domestic violence in America, especially the physical and sexual abuse of children and the elderly.

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated in fiscal years 1989, 1990, 1991, and 1992, such sums as are necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

TITLE VIII—FEDERAL ALCOHOL ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 8001. FEDERAL ALCOHOL ADMINISTRATION.

(a) The Federal Alcohol Administration Act (27 U.S.C. 201 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by inserting immediately after the enacting clause the following centered heading:

"TITLE I—FEDERAL ALCOHOL ADMINISTRATION";

(2) by redesignating the first section and section 2 through 17 as sections 101 through 117, respectively; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE II—ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LABELING

"SHORT TITLE

"Sec. 201. This title may be cited as the "Alcoholic Beverage Labeling Act of 1988".

"DECLARATION OF POLICY AND PURPOSE

"Sec. 202. The Congress finds that the American public should be informed about the health hazards that may result from the consumption or abuse of alcoholic beverages, and has determined that it would be beneficial to provide a clear, nonconfusing reminder of such hazards, and that there is a need for national uniformity in such reminders in order to avoid the promulgation of incorrect or misleading information and to minimize burdens on interstate commerce. The Congress finds that requiring such reminders on all containers of alcoholic beverages is appropriate and necessary in view of the substantial role of the Federal Government in promoting the health and safety of the Nation's population. It is therefore the policy of the Congress, and the purpose of this title, to exercise the full reach of the Federal Government's constitutional powers in order to establish a comprehensive Federal program, in connection with the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages in or affecting interstate commerce, to deal with the provision of warning or other information with respect to any relationship between the consumption or abuse of alcoholic beverages and health, so that—

"(1) the public may be adequately reminded about any health hazards that may be associated with the consumption or abuse of alcoholic beverages through a nationally uniform, nonconfusing warning notice on each container of such beverages; and

"(2) commerce and the national economy may be—

"(A) protected to the maximum extent consistent with this declared policy,

"(B) not impeded by diverse, nonuniform, and confusing requirements for warnings or other information on alcoholic beverage containers with respect to any relationship between the consumption or abuse of alcoholic beverages and health, and

"(C) protected from the adverse effects that would result from a noncomprehensive program covering alcoholic beverage containers sold in interstate commerce, but not alcoholic beverage containers manufactured and sold within a single State.

"DEFINITIONS

"Sec. 203. As used in this title—

"(1) The term 'alcoholic beverage' includes any beverage in liquid form which contains not less than one-half of one percent of alcohol by volume and is intended for human consumption.

"(2) The term 'bottle' means to fill a container with an alcoholic beverage and to seal such container.

"(3) The term 'bottler' means a person who bottles an alcoholic beverage.

"(4) The term 'commerce' means—

"(A) commerce between any State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Wake Island, the Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, or Johnston Island and any place outside thereof;

"(B) commerce between points in any State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Wake Island, the Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, or Johnston Island, but through any place outside thereof; or

"(C) commerce wholly within the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Wake Island, the Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, or Johnston Island.

"(5) The term 'container' means the innermost sealed container irrespective of the material from which made, in which an alcoholic beverage is placed by the bottler and in which such beverage is offered for sale to members of the general public.

"(6) The term 'health' includes, but is not limited to, the prevention of accidents.

"(7) The term 'person' means an individual, partnership, joint stock company, business trust, association, corporation, or any other business or legal entity, including a receiver, trustee, or liquidating agent, and also includes any State, any State agency, or any officer or employee thereof.

"(8) The term 'sale' and 'distribution' include sampling or any other distribution not for sale.

"(9) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(10) The term 'State' includes any political subdivision of any State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Wake Island, the Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, or Johnston Island.

"(11) The term 'State law' includes State statutes, regulations, and principles and rules having the force of law.

"(12) The term 'United States', when used in geographical sense, includes the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Wake Island, the Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, and Johnston Island.

"LABELING REQUIREMENT; CONSPICUOUS STATEMENT

"SEC. 204. (a) On and after the expiration of the 12-month period following the date of enactment of this title, it shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, import, or bottle for sale or distribution in the United States any alcoholic beverage unless the container of such beverage bears the following statement:

"'GOVERNMENT WARNING: (1) According to the Surgeon General, women should not drink alcoholic beverages during pregnancy because of the risk of birth defects. (2) Consumption of alcoholic beverages impairs your ability to drive a car or operate machinery, and may cause health problems.'.

"(b) The statement required by subsection (a) of this section shall be located in a conspicuous and prominent place on the container of such beverage, as determined by the Secretary, shall be in type of a size determined by the Secretary, and shall appear on a contrasting background. The Secretary shall make such determinations within 90 days after the date of enactment of this title.

"(c) Subsection (a) of this section shall not apply with respect to alcoholic beverages that are manufactured, imported, bottled, or labeled for export from the United States, or for delivery to a vessel or aircraft, as supplies, for consumption beyond the jurisdiction of the internal revenue laws of the United States: Provided, That this exemption shall not apply with respect to alcoholic beverages that are manufactured, imported, bottled, or labeled for sale, distribution, or shipment to members or units of the Armed Forces of the United States, including those located outside the United States.

"(d) The Secretary shall—

"(1) have the power to—

"(A) ensure the enforcement of the provisions of this title, and

"(B) issue regulations to carry out this title, and

"(2) consult and coordinate the health awareness efforts of the labeling requirements of this title with the Surgeon General of the United States.

"PREEMPTION

"SEC. 205. No statement relating to alcoholic beverages and health, other than the statement required by section 204 of this title, shall be required under State law to be placed on any container of an alcoholic beverage, or on any box, carton, or other package, irrespective of the material from which made, that contains such a container.

"REPORT TO CONGRESS

"SEC. 206. If, after appropriate investigation and consultation with the Surgeon General carried out after the expiration of the 24-month period following the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary finds that available scientific information would justify a change in, addition to, or deletion of the statement, or any part thereof, set forth in section 204(a) of this title, the Secretary shall promptly report such information to the Congress together with specific recommendations for such amendments to this title as the Secretary determines to be appropriate and in the public interest.

"CIVIL PENALTIES

"SEC. 207. Any person who violates the provisions of this title shall be subject to a civil penalty of not more than $10,000, and each day shall constitute a separate offense.

"INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS; COMPROMISE OF LIABILITY

"SEC. 208. (a) The several district courts of the United States are vested with jurisdiction, for cause shown, to prevent and restrain violations of this title upon the application of the Attorney General of the United States acting through the several United States attorneys in their several districts.

"(b) The Secretary is authorized, with respect to any violation of this title, to compromise the liability arising with respect to such violation upon payment of a sum for each offense, to be collected by the Secretary and to be paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

"SEVERABILITY

"SEC. 209. If any provision of this title or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this title and this Act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

"EFFECTIVE DATE

"SEC. 210. Except as provided in section 204(a), this title shall take effect on the date of its enactment into law.".

(b) The Federal Alcohol Administration Act, as amended by this Act, is further amended—

(1) by amending section 101, as redesignated under subsection (a)(2) of this Act, to read as follows:

"SHORT TITLE

"SEC. 101. This title may be cited as the 'Federal Alcohol Administration Act'.";

(2) in sections 103, 104, 105, 107, 108, and 117, as so redesignated, by striking "this Act" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "this title";

(3) in section 104(d), as so redesignated, by striking "section 5" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 105" and by striking "section 6" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 106"; and

(4) in section 107, as so redesignated, by striking "section 3 or 5" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 103 or 105".

TITLE IX—MISCELLANEOUS

Subtitle A—Alcohol and Drug Traffic Safety

SEC. 9001. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Drunk Driving Prevention Act of 1988".

SEC. 9002. DRUNK DRIVING PREVENTION PROGRAMS.

(a) GENERAL RULES.—Chapter 4 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§410. Drunk driving prevention programs

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—Subject to the provisions of this section and to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts, the Secretary shall make basic and supplemental grants to those States which adopt and implement drunk driving prevention programs which include measures described in this section to improve the effectiveness of the enforcement of laws the purpose of which are to discourage individuals from operating motor vehicles while under the influence of alcohol. Such grants may only be used by recipient States to implement and enforce such programs.

"(b) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—No grant may be made to a State under this section in any fiscal year unless such State enters into such agreements with the Secretary as the Secretary may require to ensure that such State will maintain its aggregate expenditures from all other sources for drunk driving prevention programs at or above the average level of such expenditures in its 2 fiscal years preceding the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) FEDERAL SHARE.—No State may receive grants under this section in more than 3 fiscal years. The Federal share payable for any grant under this section shall not exceed—

"(1) in the first fiscal year a State receives a grant under this section, 75 percent of the cost of implementing and enforcing in such fiscal year the drunk driving prevention program adopted by the State pursuant to subsection (a) of this section;

"(2) in the second fiscal year the State receives a grant under this section, 50 percent of the cost of implementing and enforcing in such fiscal year such program; and

"(3) in the third fiscal year the State receives a grant under this section, 25 percent of the cost of implementing and enforcing in such fiscal year such program.

"(d) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF BASIC GRANTS.—Subject to subsection (c) of this section, the amount of a basic grant made under this section for any fiscal year to any State which is eligible for such a grant under subsection (e) of this section shall not exceed 30 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title.

"(e) ELIGIBILITY FOR BASIC GRANTS.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a basic grant if such State provides—

"(1) for an expedited driver's license suspension or revocation system for individuals who operate motor vehicles while under the influence of alcohol which requires that—

"(A) when a law enforcement officer has probable cause under State law to believe an individual has committed an alcohol-related traffic offense and such individual is determined, on the basis of a chemical test, to have been under the influence of alcohol while operating the motor vehicle or refuses to submit to such a test as proposed by the officer, the officer serve such individual with a written notice of suspension or revocation of the driver's license of such individual and take possession of such driver's license;

"(B) the notice of suspension or revocation referred to in subparagraph (A) provide information on the administrative procedures under which the State may suspend or revoke in accordance with the objectives of this section a driver's license of an individual for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and specify any rights of the operator under such procedures;

"(C) the State provide, in the administrative procedures referred to in subparagraph (B), for due process of law, including the right to an administrative review of a driver's license suspension or revocation within the time period specified in subparagraph (F);

"(D) after serving notice and taking possession of a driver's license in accordance with subparagraph (A), the law enforcement officer immediately report to the State entity responsible for administering drivers' licenses all information relevant to the action taken in accordance with this paragraph;

"(E) in the case of an individual who, in any 5-year period beginning after the date of the enactment of this section, is determined on the basis of a chemical test to have been operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol or is determined to have refused to submit to such a test as proposed by the law enforcement officer, the State entity responsible for administering driver's licenses, upon receipt of the report of the law enforcement officer—

"(i) suspend the driver's license of such individual for a period of not less than 90 days if such individual is a first offender in such 5-year period; and

"(ii) suspend the driver's license of such individual for a period of not less than 1 year, or revoke such license, if such individual is a repeat offender in such 5-year period; and

"(F) the suspension and revocation referred to under subparagraph (D) take effect not later than—

"(i) 15 days after the day on which the individual first received notice of the suspension or revocation in accordance with subparagraph (B); or

"(ii) 30 days after the day on which the individual first received notice of the suspension or revocation in accordance with subparagraph (B) if the Secretary determines that the requirements of clause (i) would impose a hardship upon the State; and

"(2) for a self-sustaining drunk driving prevention program under which the fines or surcharges collected from individuals convicted of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol are returned, or an equivalent amount of non-Federal funds are provided, to those communities which have comprehensive programs for the prevention of such operations of motor vehicles.

"(f) SUPPLEMENTAL GRANT PROGRAMS.—

"(1) MANDATORY BLOOD ALCOHOL CONCENTRATION TESTING PROGRAMS.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a supplemental grant for a fiscal year in an amount, subject to subsection (c) of this section, not to exceed 10 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title if such State is eligible for a basic grant and in addition such State provides for mandatory blood alcohol concentration testing whenever a law enforcement officer has probable cause under State law to believe that a driver of a motor vehicle involved in an accident resulting in the loss of human life or, as determined by the Secretary, serious bodily injury, has committed an alcohol-related traffic offense.

"(2) PROGRAM FOR PREVENTION OF OPERATORS UNDER AGE 21 FROM OBTAINING ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a supplemental grant for a fiscal year in an amount, subject to subsection (c) of this section, not to exceed 10 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title if such State is eligible for a basic grant and in addition such State provides for an effective system for preventing operators of motor vehicles under age 21 from obtaining alcoholic beverages, which may include the issuance of drivers' licenses to individuals under age 21 that are easily distinguishable in appearance from drivers' licenses issued to individuals 21 years of age and older.

"(3) UNLAWFUL OPEN CONTAINER AND CONSUMPTION OF ALCOHOL PROGRAMS.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a supplemental grant for a fiscal year in an amount, subject to subsection (c) of this section, not to exceed 25 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title if such State is eligible for a basic grant and in addition such State makes unlawful the possession of any open alcoholic beverage container, or the consumption of any alcoholic beverage, in the passenger area of any motor vehicle located on a public highway or the right-of-way of a public highway, except—

"(A) as allowed in the passenger area, by persons (other than the driver), of any motor vehicle designed to transport more than 10 passengers (including the driver) while being used to provide charter transportation of passengers; or

"(B) as otherwise specifically allowed by such State, with the approval of the Secretary, but in no event may the driver of such motor vehicle be allowed to possess or consume an alcoholic beverage in the passenger area.

"(4) SUSPENSION OF REGISTRATION AND RETURN OF LICENSE PLATE PROGRAM.—For purposes of this section, a State is eligible for a supplemental grant for a fiscal year in an amount, subject to subsection (c) of this section, not to exceed 10 percent of the amount apportioned to such State for fiscal year 1989 under section 402 of this title if such State is eligible for a basic grant and in addition such State provides for the suspension of the registration of, and the return to such State of the license plates for, any motor vehicle owned by an individual who—

"(A) has been convicted on more than 1 occasion of an alcohol-related traffic offense within any 5-year period after the date of the enactment of this section; or

"(B) has been convicted of driving while his or her driver's license is suspended or revoked by reason of a conviction for such an offense.

A State may provide limited exceptions to such suspension of registration or return of license plates, on an individual basis, to avoid undue hardship to any individual, including any family member of the convicted individual, and any co-owner of the motor vehicle, who is completely dependent on the motor vehicle for the necessities of life. Such exceptions may not result in unrestricted reinstatement of the registration or unrestricted return of the license plates of the motor vehicle.

"(5) GRANTS AS BEING IN ADDITION TO OTHER GRANTS.—A supplemental grant under this section shall be in addition to any basic grant or any other supplemental grant received by such State.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

"(1) ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE.—The term 'alcoholic beverage' has the meaning such term has under section 158(c) of this title.

"(2) MOTOR VEHICLE.—The term 'motor vehicle' has the meaning such term has under section 154(b) of this title.

"(3) OPEN ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTAINER.—The term 'open alcoholic beverage container' means any bottle, can, or other receptacle—

"(A) which contains any amount of an alcoholic beverage; and

"(B)(i) which is open or has a broken seal, or

"(ii) the contents of which are partially removed.

"(h) AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1989 and $50,000,000 per fiscal year for each of fiscal years 1990 and 1991. Such sums shall remain available until expended.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis of chapter 4 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"410. Drunk driving prevention programs.".

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall issue and publish in the Federal Register proposed regulations to implement section 410 of title 23, United States Code, not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this section. The final regulations for such implementation shall be issued, published in the Federal Register, and transmitted to Congress not later than 12 months after such date of enactment.

SEC. 9003. ALCOHOL IMPAIRMENT STANDARDS AND INFORMATION EXCHANGE.

(a) ALCOHOL IMPAIRMENT STANDARDS.—

(1) STUDY.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall undertake to enter into appropriate arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study to determine the blood alcohol concentration level at or above which any individual when operating any motor vehicle should be deemed to be driving while under the influence of alcohol.

(2) REPORT.—In entering into any arrangement with the National Academy of Sciences for conducting the study under this subsection, the Secretary shall request the National Academy of Sciences to submit, not later than 15 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, to the Secretary a report on the results of such study. Upon its receipt, the Secretary shall immediately transmit the report to Congress.

(b) Federal-State Exchange of Information.—

(1) Study.—The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a study regarding the exchange of information between the Federal Government and State law enforcement officials on all arrests for drunk driving offenses in all States. In conducting such study, the Secretary shall consider the usefulness of such information to law enforcement officials as well as any legal restraints on the exchange or use of such information. One purpose of such study shall be to identify effective methods, if any, for the exchange of such information.

(2) Report.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the study conducted under this section.

(c) Authorization of Appropriation.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $300,000 for fiscal year 1989.

SEC. 9004. PILOT PROGRAM FOR DRUG RECOGNITION EXPERT TRAINING.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary of Transportation, acting through the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, shall establish a 3-year pilot, regional program for training law enforcement officers to recognize and identify individuals who are operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or 1 or more controlled substances or other drugs.

(b) Report.—Not later than 1 year after the completion of the pilot program under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall transmit to Congress a report on the effectiveness of such pilot program together with any recommendations.

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, $7,000,000 for fiscal year 1990, and $9,000,000 for fiscal year 1991. Such sums shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 9005. PILOT GRANT PROGRAM FOR RANDOM TESTING FOR ILLEGAL DRUG USE.

(a) Establishment of Pilot Program.—The Secretary shall design, within 9 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, and implement, within 15 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, a pilot State grant program for the purpose of testing individuals described in subsection (e)(1) to determine whether such individuals have used, without lawful authorization, a controlled substance.

(b) State Participation.—The Secretary shall solicit the participation of States from those States interested in participating in such a program not more than 4 States to participate in the program.

(c) State Selection Process.—The Secretary shall ensure that the selection made pursuant to this section is representative of varying geographical and population characteristics of the Nation, and takes into consideration the historical geographical incidence of motor vehicle accidents involving loss of human life. In selecting the States for participation, the Secretary shall attempt to solicit States which meet the following criteria:

(1) One of the States shall be a western State which is one of the 3 most populous States, with numerous large cities, with at least one city exceeding 7,000,000 people. The State should have a diverse demographic population with larger than average drug use according to reliable surveys.

(2) One of the remaining States should be a southern State, one a northeastern State, and one a central State.

(3) One of the remaining States should be mainly rural and among the least populous States.

(4) One of the remaining States should have less than average drug use according to reliable surveys.

(d) Length of Program.—The pilot program authorized by this section shall continue for a period of 1 year. The Secretary shall consider alternative methodologies for implementing a system of random testing of such individuals.

(e) Requirements for State Participation.—

(1) Persons to be tested.—Each State participating in the test program shall test for controlled substances in accordance with paragraph (2) individuals who—

(A) are applicants seeking the privilege to drive, and

(B) have never been issued a driver's license by any State.

(2) Types of testing.—To deter drug use and promote highway safety, all individuals described in paragraph (1) shall be subject to random testing—

(A) prior to issuance of driver's licenses, and

(B) during the first year following the date of issuance of such licenses.

(3) Denial of driving privileges.—Each State participating in the test program shall deny an individual driving privileges if drug testing required by paragraph (1) indicates that such individual has used illicit drugs, with such denial lasting for a period of at least 1 year following such test or subsequent confirmatory test.

(4) Reinstitution of driving privileges.—The program described in paragraph (3) may allow for reinstitution of driving privileges after a period of 3 months if such reinstitution is accompanied by a requirement that the individual be available for a period of 9 months for drug testing on a regular basis. If any such test indicates that the individual has used illicit drugs, then driving privileges must be denied for 1 year following such test or confirmatory test.

(f) Regulations.—The Secretary may issue regulations to assist States in implementing the programs described in subsection (e) and to grant temporary exceptions in appropriate circumstances.

(g) Report.—Not later than 30 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall prepare and transmit to Congress a comprehensive report setting forth the results of the pilot program conducted under this section. Such report shall include any recommendations of the Secretary concerning the desirability and implementation of a system for random testing of such operators of motor vehicles.

(h) Authorization of Appropriations.—For purposes of carrying out this test program, there is authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1990.

(i) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

(1) Controlled substance.—The term "controlled substance" means any controlled substance as defined under section 102(6) of the Controlled Substance Act (21 U.S.C. 802(6)) whose use the Secretary has determined poses a risk to transportation safety.

(2) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Transportation.

(3) State.—The term "State" has the meaning such term has when used in chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code.

SEC. 9102. COMMERCIAL ZONE EXEMPTION.

(a) General Rule.—Section 206 of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 (49 U.S.C. 2505 App.) is amended by striking out subsection (h) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(h) Commercial Zone Exemption.—

"(1) General rule.—The Secretary may not—

"(A) exempt any person or commercial motor vehicle from complying with any regulation pertaining to commercial motor vehicle safety, or

"(B) waive application of any such regulation with respect to any person or commercial motor vehicle, solely on account that the operations of such person or vehicle are entirely in a municipality or commercial zone thereof.

"(2) Grandfather clause.—

"(A) General rule.—If any person was authorized to operate in the United States throughout the 1-year period ending on the date of the enactment of the Truck and Bus Safety and Regulatory Reform Act of 1988 a commercial motor vehicle in a municipality or commercial zone thereof and if such person is otherwise qualified to operate such a vehicle, such person may operate such a vehicle entirely in a municipality or commercial zone thereof notwithstanding paragraph (1), notwithstanding any Federal minimum age requirement for operation of such a vehicle, and notwithstanding any medical or physical condition of such person.

"(B) Definition of medical or physical condition.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'medical or physical condition' means a medical or physical condition of a person—

"(i) which would prevent such person from operating a commercial motor vehicle under the commercial motor vehicle safety regulations contained in title 49 of the Code of Federal Regulations,

"(ii) which existed on July 1, 1988,

"(iii) which has not substantially worsened, and

"(iv) which does not involve alcohol or drug abuse.

"(3) Limitation on Statutory Construction.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as having any effect on any State commercial motor vehicle safety law pertaining to intrastate commerce.".

(b) Delayed Application.—

(1) Foreign carriers.—Notwithstanding section 206(h)(1) of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 or any other provision of Federal law, the Secretary shall not apply, for a period of 1 year beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, part 393 of title 49 of the Code of Federal Regulations to any foreign motor carrier or foreign motor private carrier (as such terms are defined, or will be defined on January 1, 1990, in section 10530 of title 49, United States Code) if—

(A) such carrier is or will be required to obtain a certificate of registration under such section 10530 for operation of a commercial motor vehicle in a municipality or commercial zone thereof which encompasses a border between the United States and a contiguous foreign country;

(B) the State in which such municipality or commercial zone is located has in effect a law or regulation pertaining to commercial motor vehicle safety which applies to such carrier; and

(C) such State has adopted and is enforcing the North American Commercial Vehicle Critical Safety Inspection Items and Out-of-Service Criteria established by the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance.

(2) Report.—Within 9 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the effects of the delay in application of part 393 of title 49 of the Code of Federal Regulations provided by the Secretary under paragraph (1) together with recommendations on the extent to which foreign motor carriers and foreign motor private carriers may or should be required to comply with all or any of the requirements contained in such part 393.

(c) Savings Clause.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall not be construed as having any effect on the enactment of subsection (d) of section 3102 of title 49, United States Code, which subsection (d) was added to such section by section 206(h) of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 on October 30, 1984.

SEC. 9103. HOURS OF SERVICE.

(a) Study.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of the hours of service regulations pertaining to operators of commercial motor vehicles as in effect under title 49 of the Code of Federal Regulations on the date of the enactment of this Act. The purpose of such study shall be to determine if there is any relationship among (1) such regulations, (2) operator fatigue, and (3) the frequency of serious accidents involving such vehicles.

(b) Report.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the results of the study conducted under this section together with such recommendations (including legislative recommendations) for modifying the regulations referred to in subsection (a) as the Secretary determines appropriate taking into account the results of such study.

SEC. 9104. IMPROVED COMPLIANCE WITH HOURS OF SERVICE REGULATIONS.

(a) Rulemaking Proceeding.—Not later than 3 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding on the need to adopt methods for improving safety with respect to compliance by operators of commercial motor vehicles with hours of service regulations of the Department of Transportation, including the use of onboard monitoring devices on commercial motor vehicles to record speed, driving time, and other information. Such proceeding shall be completed within 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Limitation on the Use of Monitoring Devices.—Any rule which the Secretary issues regarding the use of onboard monitoring devices on commercial motor vehicles shall ensure that such devices are not used for the purpose of harassment of operators of such vehicles, but such devices may be used for the purpose of monitoring the productivity of such operators.

SEC. 9105. BIOMETRIC IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM.

(a) Regulations.—Not later than December 31, 1990, the Secretary shall issue regulations establishing, for purposes of sections 12007 and 12009 of the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986, minimum uniform standards for a biometric identification system to ensure identification of operators of commercial motor vehicles.

(b) Pilot Demonstration Project.—To carry out a pilot project to demonstrate the use of biometric identification systems for ensuring identification of operators of commercial motor vehicles, the Secretary may use not to exceed in each of fiscal years 1989 and 1990—

(1) $500,000 from the funds made available to carry out section 402 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982; and

(2) $1,000,000 from the funds made available to carry out section 12010 of the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986.

SEC. 9106. EMERGENCY FLARES.

Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding for the purposes of determining the appropriate use, as emergency warning devices for commercial motor vehicles, of fusees as an alternative or supplement to bidirectional emergency reflective triangles. The Secretary shall complete such rulemaking proceeding by October 31, 1989.

SEC. 9107. REPORT ON IMPROVED BRAKE SYSTEMS FOR COMMERCIAL MOTOR VEHICLES.

Not later than January 30, 1991, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on whether or not commercial motor vehicles operating on any Federal-aid highway system should be equipped with improved brakes and brake systems in order to enhance the safe operation of such vehicles. Such report shall include an examination of available information and data on antilock systems, means of improving brake compatibility, and methods of ensuring the effectiveness of brake timing and the results of any field testing conducted by the Department of Transportation on brakes and brakes systems for commercial motor vehicles.

SEC. 9108. SPEED CONTROL DEVICES.

(a) Study.—The Secretary shall conduct a study on whether or not devices which control the speed of commercial motor vehicles enhance safe operation of such vehicles.

(b) Report.—Not later than 30 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study conducted under this section together with recommendations of the Secretary on whether or not to make the use of speed control devices mandatory for commercial motor vehicles.

SEC. 9109. EXTENSION OF REVIEW AND PREEMPTION TIME PERIODS.

Section 208(h) of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 (49 U.S.C. App. 2507(h)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "Upon request of a State which has under consideration adoption of regulations which may be in effect and enforced under this section, the Secretary—

"(1) shall extend such 60-month period with respect to the State for such additional period as the State requests but not to exceed 12 months; and

"(2) may provide an extension in addition to the extension under paragraph (1) for a period not to exceed 12 months if such additional extension is not contrary to the public interest and does not diminish the safe operation of commercial motor vehicles.

With respect to any State, the aggregate amount of extensions under this subsection with respect to such 60-month period may not exceed 24 months.".

SEC. 9110. MAINTENANCE AND INSPECTION OF BRAKE SYSTEMS.

The Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 (49 U.S.C. App. 2501-2520) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 231. MAINTENANCE AND INSPECTION OF BRAKE SYSTEMS.

"(a) Initiation of Rulemaking Proceeding.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the Secretary shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding for the purpose of adopting improved standards or methods to ensure that brakes and brake systems of commercial motor vehicles are properly maintained and inspected by appropriate employees.

"(b) Regulations.—Not later than December 31, 1990, the Secretary shall issue regulations for the purpose of adopting improved standards or methods to ensure that brakes and brake systems of commercial motor vehicles are properly maintained and inspected by appropriate employees. At a minimum, such regulations shall establish minimum training requirements and qualifications for employees responsible for maintaining and inspecting such brakes and brake systems.".

CHAPTER IV—GENERAL PROVISION

No part of any appropriation contained in this title shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

This title may be cited as "the Urgant Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1989 to Meet the Dire Emergency Created by the Crisis of Drug Abuse".

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I shall take a very few minutes, and then I shall yield whatever time I have remaining to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], the chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics, but, before I yield to him, I should like to express my appreciation to our Speaker for his leadership in bringing this legislation to the floor and to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] and all of the committee chairmen, subcommittee chairmen, and ranking members who have had so important a part in this extremely important and far-reaching legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I am now going to read the names of some other people who made a very positive contribution to this effort: Bob Weinhagen, Wade Ballou, Douglass Bellis, Tim Brown, Ira Forstater, Peter Goodloe, Jim Grossman, Jean Harmann, Broderick Johnson, Maureen King, David Meade, David Mendelsohn, Bill Mohrman, Liz Powell, Hank Savage, Tim Sheane, Sandy Strokoff, Jim Wert, and Stanley Grimm, all of them attorneys, and the following secretaries: Nancy Hobson, Renate Stehr, Debby Birch, Elaine Sagman, Sybil Tudor, Lynne Richardson, Betty Gibson; publication coordinator, Fred Dichter; and receptionists, Chris Moncure and Meg Josepthal.

Mr. Speaker, those are the people of the legislative counsel's office who have worked all night last night and today to bring this document to the floor, and more than any Member of the House they have worked hard on this legislation, and I think they deserve a standing salute from the Members of the House.

In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the staffs of all the committees in the leadership who also have worked enormously hard on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield whatever time I have remaining to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the conference agreement on the omnibus drug initiative, and urge the House to adopt it. I want to give the highest praise to all the House and Senate Members who negotiated until very late in the night this entire last week to reach an agreement.

It is extremely difficult for those of us who oppose the death penalty to vote for a bill with the death penalty in it, but the Nation's deepening drug crisis and the administration's lack of any legislative initiative on their own make the expansion of antidrug programs under this bill necessary.

The bill includes a number of badly needed actions in drug law enforcement, health care, and foreign policy. While over $2 billion is authorized for 1989, the Gramm-Rudman deficit ceiling only permits spending of $500 million this fiscal year. To those who say we are not spending enough this year, let me say they are right—but it is only the beginning. The legislation includes programs for the next few fiscal years. Next year, when we are not forced into an end-of-the-Congress situation as we are now, I intend to fight for full funding.

I am very pleased with those parts of the legislation which were carefully studied and crafted in advance, without the counterproductive rush of amendments to prove how tough on drugs the Congress can be. I am pleased the final version includes assistance to State and local drug enforcement; enhancement in drug treatment, including preventing the spread of AIDS through intravenous drug abuse; increases for school-based drug prevention efforts and innovative drug education programs targeted at youth gangs, disadvantaged youth, runaways, homeless youth and other hard-to-reach populations; assistance to the Drug Enforcement Administration, Customs, the Coast Guard, and other Federal enforcement agencies; a call for a Western Hemisphere drug summit and an international antidrug strike force; opposition to legalization of illicit narcotics; and many other fine antidrug programs.

I am very pleased the agreement includes a national director of drug policy, a so-called drug czar. Under the current administration, we have never known who was in charge of dealing with the Nation's drug crisis; now we will, because this individual will coordinate enforcement, prevention, and foreign policy aspects of our war on drugs.

There are still provisions in the bill I do not support—specifically, inclusion of the death penalty; taking away Federal benefits of drug users, improved however from the House version because of allowing discretion and allowing the next President to review the provision; and imposing civil fines against drug users although improved by allowing appeal to a criminal court.

The House Narcotics Committee, which I chair, will monitor this entire legislation, to see what is working and what is not. I am extremely concerned about saying we will win the war against drugs by waging it against millions of our citizens. We are not locked into any of these provisions, and we can and will continually make changes.

It is unfortunate that no leadership came from the White House on antidrug legislation, either this time or before the omnibus drug bill in 1986. That is why the Congress has been in the forefront of fashioning a comprehensive response to the drug crisis facing our Nation, without any guidance from the administration.

This year, as our Nation's drug problem escalated, I had hoped that the administration would advise us how to improve the 1986 bill. I hoped the Secretary of Education would give us a plan for drug education. I hoped the Secretary of Health and Human Services would give us a strategy for treatment and rehabilitation. I hoped the Secretary of State would tell us what we need for a vigilant international antidrug effort. I hoped the Attorney General would advise us how to improve Federal enforcement, as well as provide much needed help to hard pressed State and local police, in combatting drug-related crime in our cities and communities.

But we didn't hear from any of them. Once again, congressional leaders had to act to address the drug crisis. Therefore, Speaker Wright, Majority Leader Thomas Foley, and Minority Leader Michel deserve our highest praise for initiating the congressional response this year, as does the Senate leadership for ensuring Senate action on this very important issue.

I want to say a few words about the funding for State and local drug enforcement included in this bill. Two years ago I sponsored legislation to provide Federal funding to assist State and local drug enforcement efforts. This program was substantially incorporated into the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986.

Earlier this year, I introduced legislation to alter the allocation of funds under this program so that eligible units of local government could receive awards directly. I did this because many local officials, including mayors and police chiefs, complained to the Select Committee on Narcotics that local officials were not adequately consulted in the preparation of statewide drug enforcement plans as required under the 1986 act, that States did not give adequate consideration to local drug enforcement priorities in developing statewide plans, that funds were long-delayed in coming from the State to the local level, and that many localities did not receive a share of funds proportionate to the resources and efforts they were expending on drug enforcement efforts.

The House Omnibus Drug bill incorporated the concept of direct funding to localities. It required States to pass through Federal funds directly to local governments eligible for awards of $25,000 or more based on a locality's criminal justice spending relative to such spending by all other units of local government within the State. The original Senate bill included a similar pass-through to localities with a population of 500,000 or more, but this provision was dropped.

I participated in the House-Senate negotiations to reconcile these differing positions. Conference negotiators were unable to reach an acceptable compromise and decided not to change the current allocation formula at this time. Members of both bodies agree, however, that the Congress should reconsider this issue next year. The lack of sufficient funding to appropriate the full amounts authorized for this program was a major factor in this decision.

Some have said that a direct pass-through would make it impossible for States to coordinate programs and allocate funds to those areas with the greatest need. The issue, however, is not one of need versus entitlement. It would be hard to find an area of our country today that does not face critical unmet needs in drug enforcement. The question is whether local law enforcement and criminal justice officials, who are in the frontline trenches of our Nation's drug war, will be able to receive and use their share of these Federal moneys to address their highest priority drug enforcement needs.

In the 1986 act, Congress intended to help both States and local governments meet their most pressing drug enforcement problems. Coordination of State and local efforts is an important goal, but in too many cases it appears that local priorities have not been given sufficient consideration. Congress should act quickly next year to remedy this situation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Kildee].

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I like parts of this bill. Other parts I do not like.

Mr. Speaker, subtitle of title VII of H.R. 5210 contains the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments of 1988.

The provisions of this subtitle are very similar to those in H.R. 1801, which passed the House on June 1 by a vote of 377 to 5.

While I do not support the drug bill overall, I find certain sections to be excellent, and I very strongly approve of the juvenile justice amendments, which were initially developed in my Human Resources Subcommittee.

On behalf of myself and the ranking Republican of the subcommittee, Mr. Tauke, I am including an explanation of the provisions of subtitle F of title VII of the bill.

EXPLANATION OF THE PROVISIONS OF SUBTITLE F OF TITLE VII OF H.R. 5210 THE JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION AMENDMENTS OF 1988

Subtitle F reauthorizes all titles of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act for four additional years at the existing authorization levels of "such sums as may be necessary." The bill contains numerous amendments designed to promote better administration of the programs, to facilitate congressional oversight of the programs, to focus existing resources more effectively, and to authorize transitional living programs for homeless youth as well as programs related to juvenile gangs and drug abuse and drug trafficking.

CHAPTER 1—AMENDMENTS TO THE JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION ACT OF 1974

Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention

Section 7252 of the bill makes a number of important changes in Part A of Title II of the Act. The first is the elimination of the language in current law prescribing that the Deputy Administrator's function shall be to supervise and direct the National Institute for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. This change leaves undisturbed the requirements that the Deputy Administrator be appointed by the Attorney General, perform such functions as the Administrator may assign, and act as Administrator during the absence or disability of the Administrator.

The second change is to require the Administrator to annually develop and publish in the Federal Register a proposed program plan for public comment. The purpose of the program plan is to provide a comprehensive description of the activities the Administrator proposes to support with the funding available for Parts C and D, with particular attention to how each of the required activities will be addressed. This provision requires that, after taking into account the public comments, the Administrator must publish the final plan by December 31 of the fiscal year to which it applies. This will result in a more timely and responsive program planning process. The new statutory requirement will ensure earlier publication of the program plan, enabling OJJDP to avoid lengthy delays in the publication of requests for proposals and the eventual awarding of grants and contracts. Additionally, timely publication will ensure an opportunity for input from the tremendous number of expert agencies, organizations, and individuals around the country that can be of assistance to OJJDP in developing a targeted and responsive plan.

The third change is to expand the mandate of the Coordinating Council on Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, which is chaired by the U.S. Attorney General. Currently the Coordinating Council is authorized to review the programs and practices of other federal agencies and to report on the extent to which these programs and practices are consistent with the provisions of section 223(a)(12)(A) and (13). The bill makes this authorized review and report a requirement and adds paragraph (14) of section 223(a). Additionally, the bill requires the Council to review the reasons why federal agencies take juveniles into custody and to make recommendations regarding how the practices and facilities of these agencies may be improved. The last comprehensive examination of this issue was begun in 1979. In September 1984, the Council received a report entitled, "Children in Federal Custody: An Assessment of Federal Policy and Practices" which stated:

"The findings presented in the following pages support two conclusions which are applicable to all five agencies. First, children are not a major priority; the amount of resources and energy directed towards the development of programs for the treatment or handling of youths in custody is minimal, often inadequate . . . Second, possibly because youths are not a priority, the monitoring systems of these agencies neither attempted nor succeeded in accounting for the identification, detention, or disposition of children in the federal system."

Since the submission of this report, the Coordinating Council has done very little, if anything, regarding children in federal custody. These amendments address this and represent a judgment that federal agencies should be encouraged to meet the same goals that the JJDPA holds out to the states.

The fourth change is to eliminate the current annual reporting requirements found in sections 204 and 245 of the Act and to substitute a new annual report to the President and the Congress. This amendment includes specific requirements in data collection and analysis. In this regard, OJJDP is encouraged to continue the annual Children in Custody survey and analysis. It should be noted that by requiring and expanding the activities currently authorized in section 242 (Information Function), the bill also makes provision for whatever resources may be necessary to collect the data needed to complete this annual report over and above the amounts provided for Part A. The annual report must also include information on the status, results, and evaluation of activities funded under the Act. The Committee on Education and Labor is particularly interested in the "determination of the feasibility and advisability of replicating such program or activity in other locations" required in the new section 207(4) of the JJDPA. Finally, the new report must contain a description of selected exemplary delinquency prevention programs for which assistance is provided under Title II of the Act. It is intended that this description should also include state and local programs and that the Administrator should enlist the assistance of the state advisory groups for this purpose.

Technical assistance to States

Section 7256 requires the Administrator, with up to two percent of the amount available for Formula Grants, to provide technical assistance to the states, units of local governments, and local private agencies to facilitate compliance with section 223 including implementation of the state plans. The Administrator must select a grantee or contractor with experience in providing this kind of technical assistance. Additionally, the grantee or contractor may not provide technical assistance to any local organization without first notifying the applicable state agency and appropriately coordinating its activities with that agency.

Minimum allocations to the States

Section 7257 of the bill increases the minimum formula grant allocation to the states from $225,000 to $325,000 and to the territories from $56,500 to $75,000. In the event appropriations for Parts A, B, and C of Title II exceeds $75 million, these minima would increase to $400,000 and $100,000, respectively.

The Committee on Education and Labor received convincing testimony in support of providing an increase in the minimum allocations for states and territories, which have not been increased since the enactment of the Juvenile Justice Amendments of 1977 (P.L. 95-115). Moreover, the increase is necessary to ensure that all states benefit from the increased percentage allocation for Part B. At the same time, the bill protects against any state receiving a disproportionate reduction in funding as a result of the minimum allocation increase.

Indian tribes

Section 7258 of the bill includes several new provisions related to Indian tribes. The first provision amends paragraph (8) of section 223(a) to include, in the state plan, analyses of juvenile crime problems in those geographical areas in which Indian tribes perform law enforcement functions. The second provision amends paragraph (5) of section 223(a) to provide funds for programs of Indian tribes that perform law enforcement functions (as determined by the Secretary of the Interior). In order to receive funding, the tribes must agree to attempt to comply with the mandates. Funding should be allocated among tribes within a state, with tribal input and based upon demonstrated need. However, because of the unique legal status of federally recognized Indian tribes, there should be a minimal number of requirements that these tribes need to satisfy in order to receive portions of formula grant funding from the states. These amendments respond to an interpretation of the Act by the Department of Justice providing that states are not responsible for compliance in those geographical areas within the state boundaries over which they have no law enforcement jurisdiction. While this interpretation is reasonable, it has also been a disincentive for states to fund programs on Indian reservations. Therefore, the bill seeks to ensure that those Indian tribes performing law enforcement functions and not subject to state jurisdiction are not excluded from the benefits of the Act.

Minority youth in the Juvenile Justice System

The bill contains three amendments designed to address the inequitable treatment of minority youth in the juvenile justice system. The first amendment requires that state plans "address efforts" to reduce the disproportionate incarceration of minority youth. It is important for the states to approach this in a comprehensive manner. They should employ a variety of strategies including: assessing the difference in arrest rates as well as the processing and handling (including rates and periods of incarceration) of minority white youth in the system; improving prevention and diversion programs in areas where minority youth are found; outreach to community-based organizations that serve minority youth; and reintegration programs for youth previously removed from the community so as to reduce the likelihood of recidivism.

The second and third amendments add a new required activity to the Special Emphasis Program and a new authorization in the National Institute for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention to support research. In designing its program announcements, OJJDP should take into consideration strategies and activities similar to those mentioned in the preceding paragraph relative to state plans. In all activities regarding minority youth, the term "minority youth" should be interpreted to include youth from ethnic as well as racial minority groups. In addition, data collection and federally-assisted services should distinguish between minority groups and between youth by gender.

These amendments come in response to numerous recommendations made to the Committee on Education and Labor. According to information made available to the Committee, Hispanic male juveniles are incarcerated at a rate 2.6 times that of white male juveniles. For black male juveniles, the comparison with white male juveniles produces an even more appalling ratio of 4 to one. Between 1977 and 1983, the number of incarcerated minority youth increased by 26 percent, even as the number of these youth being arrested was declining. Thus, even though these youth are not committing more crimes, they are more likely to be incarcerated. Furthermore, minority youth are much more likely than white youth to be incarcerated in public institutions as opposed to private facilities. OJJDP can provide important leadership and assistance through identifying, acknowledging, and disseminating for replication, policies and practices which are racially and ethnically neutral and which have proven to produce neutral results such as adopting objective criteria for determining the appropriate placement for youth.

Jail removal

Section 7258 of the bill proposes several changes in the Act's provisions requiring states to remove juveniles from adult jails and lockups. The first is a four-year extension of the so-called "rural exception". This permits a state, which has complied with the applicable OJJDP regulations, to hold a youth accused of a criminal offense in a rural jail or lockup for a period of up to 24 hours (excluding weekends and holidays). This extension constitutes an acknowledgement that rural jurisdictions frequently face difficult obstacles to compliance involving distance, transportation, and staffing. At the same time, statistics clearly show that youth are many times more likely to commit suicide in a secure adult facility than in juvenile detention. Thus, this simple extension assumes the continuation of the "continuous visual supervision" language in the current regulations and the six-hour "rule of reason" originally set out in the Committee report of 1980, House report 96-946.

The second amendment changes the jail removal compliance provisions. This amendment modifies section 223(c) of the Act to provide additional criteria for establishing whether a state is in substantial compliance.

The current standard of a 75 percent reduction in the number of juveniles held in adult jails and lockups is retained primarily for the benefit of those states that have satisfied it. For those states still attempting to demonstrate substantial compliance, they may satisfy either the current 75 percent reduction standard or the new standard which involves an assessment and determination by the Administrator based upon four criteria. One of the criteria requires a state to demonstrate "meaningful progress in removing other juveniles from jails and lockups for adults." This criterion should not be interpreted too narrowly. For example, a state may be able to demonstrate meaningful progress by showing a large reduction in the number of local jurisdictions that jail children. This amendment is necessary to ensure that states making satisfactory progress are permitted to continue participating in the Act. When the 1985 monitoring reports were completed, it became obvious that the rigid 75 percent reduction standard was producing some inconsistent results. At the same time, the new substantial compliance standard should not be construed to be a more lenient one.

The bill does not change either the requirement of unequivocal commitment to achieving full compliance or the December 8, 1988 deadline for full compliance with the jail removal requirement.

Section 7258 of the bill also amends section 223(c) of the Act to provide the Administrator with greater flexibility with regard to sanctions for states that fail to comply with the jail removal mandate. Regardless of circumstances, under current law, the Administrator has no choice but to terminate a state's eligibility. The bill changes this by permitting the Administrator to exercise his discretion to waive termination of eligibility on the condition that the noncompliant state agrees to spend all of its federal funding (excluding funds required to be expended to comply with section 222 (c) and (d) and section 223(a)(5)(C) on jail removal. It should be noted that the bill makes this alternative sanction available with regard to enforcing the substantial and full compliance requirements. However, this alternative sanction should be applied carefully to those cases in which the Administrator determines that (1) the noncompliant states have already made significant progress, and (2) additional funding is likely to produce further progress toward compliance.

There are still too many states having difficulty. It is critically important that OJJDP periodically reaffirm the value of state efforts to improve the treatment of juveniles and to complement this with sufficient levels of technical assistance, including a stronger commitment of resources within the Office to its State Relations and Assistant Division. The Committee on Education and Labor heard from many state agencies that frequent visits from OJJDP staff constitute a valuable source of technical assistance.

State advisory groups

Section 7259 of the bill amends section 241 of the Act to improve the provisions regarding the national activities of state advisory groups (SAGs). This amendment requires the Administrator to provide technical and financial assistance to an organization composed of member representatives of the state advisory groups appointed under section 223(a)(3). It further provides that the organization receiving the assistance shall conduct an annual conference relating to the activities of the SAGs.

The Juvenile Justice Runaway Youth, and Missing Children's Act Amendments of 1984 (P.L. 98-473) required the Administrator to provide, at least every other year, a conference for several enumerated purposes including advising the Congress and the President with regard to state perspectives on the operation of the Act and OJJDP. Unfortunately, the implementation of the 1984 provisions has been insufficient to enable the SAGs to meet their statutory responsibilities. For this reason, section 109 provides for assistance to be provided to an organization representing the SAGs. This should be handled in the manner of a grantor/grantee relationship. Accordingly, it is intended that the SAGs receive sufficent funding to accomplish all of their responsibilities under section 241, including the conducting of an annual conference.

National programs

The bill consolidates the major discretionary programs and activities of Title II in Part C, which is renamed "National Programs". This consolidation results in a more logical organization of the Act, simplifies the allocation of the annual appropriation among the various programs, and helps clarify the application of the competition and peer review requirements.

The Part C provisions of current law become "Subpart I—National Institute for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention". The bill amends section 242 (Information Function) to include the provision currently located in section 246(a) and makes the activities of section 242 mandatory. This is intended to strengthen OJJDP's role as a national resource for information on juvenile justice.

The bill also amends section 244 (Training Functions) to include the technical assistance and training provision currently located in section 204(b)(6) of the Act. The movement of this provision from section 204 should not be construed to place a lesser priority on this authority.

Section 7263 of the bill moves the Special Emphasis Prevention and Treatment Programs currently located in Subpart II of Part B, to Part C as a new Subpart II. This section modifies the provisions of the Special Emphasis Program by expanding the provision regarding youth advocacy to include services which improve legal representation of youth. In the 21 years since the landmark decision of In re Gault (holding that certain due process rights are applicable to juvenile proceedings), it appears that there has been little improvement in representation for youth. Another modification to the youth advocacy provision is the addition of services which provide for the appointment of special advocates by courts. The Committee on Education and Labor received compelling testimony showing the need for these sevices and describing the effective services provided by the Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) Program.

The bill also makes two changes in the Special Emphasis provision regarding law-related education (LRE). The first simply clarifies that Congress intends that these valuable programs be made available in a variety of community settings. Because of the effectiveness of LRE as a delinquency prevention strategy, its application should be expanded beyond elementary and secondary schools. The second change authorizes the dissemination of information regarding model, innovative LRE programs. The excellence of the products and assistance developed through the ongoing National Coordinated Law-Related Education program has been broadly recognized and this change seeks to ensure that these successful programs are widely and readily available throughout the country.

The bill also makes minor language changes to clarify congressional intent that grants under the Special Emphasis program should be primarily directed toward the provision of services. OJJDP in recent years has funded a number of research and development grants under this authority. Research and development should be funded under the National Institute for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (NIJJDP). Once developed and tested, new programs or approaches should be funded to provide services under Special Emphasis. Once evaluated and proven effective, they should be introduced where possible into state and local programs through the Formula Grant Program in Part B.

During reauthorization hearings, the Committee on Education and Labor received informative testimony relating to state subsidies and how they have supported important improvements in services for youth in such states as Oregon, Virginia, and Pennsylvania. While the bill does not make any changes in the Act regarding state subsidies, the Administrator is encouraged to pay closer attention to the current authorization in the Special Emphasis Program for such subsidies.

Under the bill, the new Part C, Subpart II also contains the provisions governing consideration of grant applications, currently found in section 225 of the Act. The bill makes several minor changes in the language of this section designed to clarify congressional intent. First, the competition and peer review requirements apply to all activities in the new Part C subject to the exceptions contained in current law. Second, the term "new" in subsections (d)(1)(A) and (d)(2)(A) has been removed. In doing so, the Congress intends that OJJDP apply the competition and peer review requirements to each application for a new grant activity as well as to each application which proposes to continue an activity for a new project period.

In response to the competition and peer review requirements added to the Act in 1984, OJJDP developed a Peer Review Manual which has have been published in the Federal Register. This oversight should be corrected as soon as possible.

Special studies and reports

Section 7264 of the bill requires OJJDP to conduct a study of conditions in detention and correctional facilities for juveniles and the extent to which these facilities meet recognized national professional standards.

This section also, requires OJJDP to conduct a study of how Indian and Alaskan native juveniles, accused of committing offenses on or near reservations or villages, are treated under tribal or village justice systems, what resources are available to support community-based alternatives to incarceration, and the extent to which Indian tribes and Alaskan native organizations comply with the mandates of Act. The bill makes the funding to support this study subject to section 7(b) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act. Therefore, the successful applicant for this study must, to the greatest extent feasible, provide preferences and opportunities to Indians for training and employment in connection with the administration of the grant, and provide preference in the award of subgrants to Indian organizations.

Each of these studies must be commenced within one year following the date of enactment of this bill and must be completed 3 years after such date.

Allocations

The bill changes the percentage allocation that each part receives from the total annual appropriation for Title II.

Under current law Part A receives no more than 7.5 percent of the total appropriation. The bill moves the technical assistance and training authority out of Part A to Part C, and, therefore, reduces the Part A allocation to 5 percent.

The Act currently requires that Part B receive no less than 81.5 percent of the total appropriation. Within that amount, the Administrator is required to allocate no less than 75 percent and no more than 85 percent of the Part B allocation to the Formula Grant Program. The remainder of the Part B allocation goes to the Special Emphasis Program. The Administrator has consistently exercised his authority to allocate the minimum amount to the Formula Grant Program which computes to 61 percent of the total appropriation. Allocating the maximum amount would have resulted in 69 percent of the total being available to the states.

Since the bill moves the Special Emphasis Program to Part C, this isolates the Formula Grant Program in Part B. To reflect this shift, the bill reduces the allocation for Part B from 81.5 percent of the total appropriation to 70 percent, thereby making it possible to increase the minimum formula grant allotment to states and territories while still producing a modest increase for the other states. Allocations to states have been virtually stagnant over the last several years. Yet, the Act places the greatest burden on states to implement its goals. Therefore, an increase in the Formual Grant Program is warranted.

Current law provides an 11 percent allocation for Part C to support the activities of NIJJDP. Under the bill, NIJJDP becomes Subpart I and the Special Emphasis Program moved from Part B becomes Subpart II of Part C. To reflect this change, the bill increases the allocation for Part C to 25 percent. Once the Special Emphasis and section 242 requirements have been met, the Administrator has complete discretion in expending the remainder of the 25 percent.

Programs relating to juvenile gangs, drug abuse and drug trafficking

Section 7267 of the bill establishes a new Part D for prevention and treatment programs relating to juvenile gangs and to drug abuse and drug trafficking. It is intended that OJJDP provide funding for services so as to immediate address these serious issues.

To carry out Part D, the Admininstrator is directed to make grants and enter into contracts with public and private nonprofit agencies, organizations, institutions, and individuals for the purpose of establishing and supporting programs and activities that involve families and communities. The Administrator shall give priority to applications from the areas which have high incidences and severity of crimes committed by gangs or have a high incidence of juvenile drug abuse and drug trafficking. Also, priority shall be given to those applicants who can demonstrate broad-based community support which includes social service agencies, local education agencies and other community organizations.

This amendment is particularly timely. The Congress is not only cognizant, but also concerned about the serious and increasing gang violence and drug use among our nation's youth. Recent studies have demonstrated that gang members commit crimes at a higher rate than nongang-related juveniles and that they also commit more violent crimes. Moreover, youth who join gangs at an early age have difficulty leaving the gang at some future point.

The problems associated with gangs are multifaceted. They include: weakening of the family structure, truancy and dropping out of school. Poverty is also a factor. The enormous amounts of money generated from drug sales is certainly attractive to poor youth you face the prospect of becoming poor adults. The lack of training and employment opportunities for youth plays a significant role, as does the absence of comprehensive prevention programs in the elementary schools.

In recent months, much has been written about gang warfare in Los Angeles and other cities such as Washington, D.C. Gang violence and warfare is not an isolated problem. A 1982 study confirmed that there were over 300 cities with populations of 50,000 or more with gang-related problems. Gang warfare is no longer concentrated solely on territory, rather it concerns markets and the illegal sale of drugs and other substances. Recent reports indicate that 46 states have a problem with violence associated with gangs and illegal substances.

Although this amendment is not a panacea for all of the ills associated with gang violence, it does provide a critical component of a comprehensive approach to addressing this problem.

Prevention, intervention, and treatment must be available to complement law enforcement activities and prosecution. In essence, this amendment will fill a void which currently exists in most local efforts to address these problems. It is in the nation's best interest to address the serious problem of gang warfare and violence through prevention and treatment programs rather than increased incarceration.

CHAPTER 2—AMENDMENTS TO THE RUNAWAY AND HOMELESS YOUTH ACT

The bill rewrites much of the current law to provide clear and distinct authorizations for each of the activities currently funded under the Act. While the bill contains a number of improvements to the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (RHA), it does not require any major redirection of the program as currently administered by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

From evidence available to the Committee on Education and Labor (e.g., testimony, information from visits to local programs, etc.), it is clear that this program should be considered a model in the federal government. In general, the programs assisted under this Act are providing services in the manner contemplated by the Congress. As will be further discussed later in the section on homeless youth, the RHYA is designed to primarily assist runaway youth and their families.

Troubled youth find their way to local shelters through a variety of methods, including telephone hotlines, recommendations from peers, referrals from other community agencies, and on an increasing basis from law enforcement officers. When they arrive at a shelter, these youth encounter trained professionals who meet their immediate physical and emotional needs, contact and obtain permission from the parents to provide treatment, and provide individual and family counseling. The goal is reunification with the family unless the circumstances show an abusive home environment. The services are free and may include aftercare counseling for the family for up to six months. The program strategy reflects the understanding that troubled youth frequently come from troubled families, and that unless the family situation is improved, the youth will likely run away again.

Grants for runaway and homeless youth centers

Section 7271 of the bill amends section 311 of the Act to direct the Secretary to make grants to public and private entities to establish and support local runaway and homeless youth centers. This simply mandates what the Secretary is currently authorized to do. While the bill speaks generically, these grants are what the Department calls "basic center grants." This section of the bill does not change the method of allotting funds to centers within states, except to establish minimum allotments. Under the bill, each state shall receive not less than $75,000 and each territory shall receive not less than $30,000. At the same time, section 7271 also protects any state from receiving a reduction in funding as a result of the minimum allotments.

National Communications System

Section 7275 of the bill separately and distinctly provides for a national communication system to assist runaway and homeless youth in communicating with their families and with service providers. While the authority is not new to the Act, the bill makes several signifiant changes. The first is that this is now a mandatory activity. Secondly, the bill requires gradually increasing levels of support to the national communication system.

The Committee on Education and Labor was very impressed with testimony regarding the National Runaway Switchboard. With only $350,000 from the federal government, it handles over 400,000 calls per year. However, the Committee understands that, given the increasing cost of telephone bills alone, the National Runaway Switchboard will not be able to maintain this level of service at the current level of federal assistance.

The Committee has also learned that in 1985, the Department assigned the National Runaway Switchboard the additional responsibility of serving as the Adolescent Suicide Hotline. However, the Department has never provided additional funding to support this service. Suicide prevention services are not authorized under the RHYA and, therefore, RHYA funding should not be diluted to support them. However, given the importance of the Adolescent Suicide Hotline, the Committee strongly encourages the Department to provide the necessary funding from other sources to properly support it.

Technical assistance and training

Section 7276 of the bill amends the RHYA to authorize grants to statewide and regional nonprofit organizations to provide technical assistance and training to organizations eligible to receive basic center grants under section 311. This amendment distinctly authorizes the so-called coordinated networking grants currently funded under the Act. No change is intended except to clarify that such grants may be made on a statewide or regional basis. There are some states that have a large number of shelters (some of which may not be federally assisted) and the Secretary should consider whether these states would be best served by statewide rather than by regional networks. In any case, this provision should not be construed to require the Secretary to make only statewide grants or only regional grants. A combination of statewide and regional grants may be most effective.

Discretionary grants

Section 7277 of the bill authorizes the Secretary to make grants to states, localities, and private entities to support research, demonstration, and service projects designed to increase knowledge concerning, and to improve services for, runaway and homeless youth. The bill also lists types of projects to which the Secretary shall give special consideration and requires that the Secretary give priority to applicants that directly provide services to runaway and homeless youth.

Section 7278 requires the Secretary to publish annual proposed program priorities in the Federal Register. The public must be given 45 days in which to comment on the proposed priorities. The Secretary must take the public comments into consideration and publish the final program priorities no later than December 31 of the fiscal year to which they apply.

These requirements are designed to ensure that grants made by the Secretary address needs identified by experts and service providers and that the grants assist local shelters to the maximum degree.

Coordination with health agencies

Section 7279 of the bill requires the Secretary, with respect to communicable diseases, to coordinate the activities of the various health agencies with the activities of entities eligible under this Act.

The purpose of this provision is to facilitate mutually beneficial grant arrangements between runaway shelters and health agencies in the Department. Because the shelters frequently assist youth exhibiting high-risk behaviors, they are in need of information, training, or other assistance in regard to communicable diseases. For this same reason, the system of federally supported runaway shelters present the Department with an excellent avenue for outreach and information dissemination.

Authorization and allocation

Section 7280 authorizes appropriations for Part A of the RHYA for an additional four years at the current level of "such sums as may be necessary."

Additionally, this section requires the Secretary to allocate 90 percent of the annual appropriations for Part A for section 311 basic center grants. This is designed to make more funding available to local shelters and to ensure sufficient funding to support minimum allocations to states and territories.

Testimony before the Committee on Education and Labor clearly showed that the major challenge facing most the local shelters is sufficient funding. Despite their successes in obtaining additional money from other sources, many find themselves barely able to stay ahead of inflation. A program director from Grand Rapids, Michigan testified that, while she knows that there are many more youth who need services, she is reluctant to advertise because her agency simply cannot handle the increased demand. A shelter director from Cleveland, Ohio testified that she can only afford to pay her youth workers around $10,000 and her counselors around $12,000 per year; long hours, high stress, and low salaries result in high staff turnover.

The Committee also received testimony regarding the Department's practice in recent years of steadily increasing the number of local shelters receiving federal assistance. While there are still many unserved areas of the country, it makes little sense to increase the number of grants by taking funding away from current grantees. Therefore, the Secretary should refrain from increasing the number of grants in those situations where the allotment for the state has not commensurately increased.

Transitional living programs for homeless youth

Section 7273 of the bill amends the RHYA to authorize a new program of assistance for homeless youth. The Secretary is directed to make grants and to provide technical assistance to public and nonprofit private entities to establish and operate transitional living projects for homeless youth 16 to 21 years of age. In order to be eligible, an applicant must submit a plan and agree (among other things) to: provide for appropriate shelter and a variety of services including counseling in interpersonal and life skills; provide shelter and services for not more than 18 months; provide proper supervision; accommodate not more than 20 homeless clients at a time; develop an outreach program; and submit an annual report to the Secretary. In making grants, the Secretary must give priority to entities with experience in providing these types of services.

The bill authorizes $5 million for FY 1989 and "such sums as may be necessary" for FYs 1990, 1991, and 1992. In order to ensure that funding is not taken form the regular RHYA appropriation to fund this new program, the bill requires that the appropriation for Part A of the RHYA must exceed $26.9 million.

The Runaway Youth Act was amended in 1977 to authorize services for homeless youth. Since that time, homeless youth have been eligible to receive services at runaway shelters, and many have done so. However, because the service goal for homeless youth is not the same as that for runaways (i.e., family reunification), and because youth can only stay at a runaway shelter for up to 15 days, the shelters have been able to provide only very limited assistance to homeless youth. With the availability of some discretionary grants under the RHYA, limited private funding, and occassional state funding, a number of local private agencies operating runaway programs have been able to establish separate independent living programs for homeless youth. However, testimony before the Committee on Education and Labor clearly indicated that, due to the absence of federal funding, these programs face difficulties in getting established and are limited in the number of youth they are able to serve. This new program fills that void by authorizing a program designed to meet the special needs of homeless youth and to provide federal funding without taking away from services for runaway youth.

CHAPTER 3—AMENDMENTS TO THE MISSING CHILDREN'S ASSISTANCE ACT

The Missing Children's Assistance Act (MCAA) was enacted in 1984 as a part of the Juvenile Justice, Runaway Youth, and Missing Children's Act Amendments of 1984 (P.L. 98-473). Accordingly, this is the first reauthorization of the MCAA.

In terms of being able to quantitatively describe the nature and extent of the problem, the Committee remains frustrated by the lack of empirical research and reliable data on the missing children issue. Even after three and a half years, the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP) still cannot give the Congress results from a completed national incidence study or from the study on the psychological consequences of abduction.

Consequently, the bill contains relatively minor amendments to the MCAA.

Annual report

Section 7285 of the bill amends section 404(a) of the Act by eliminating the currently mandated summary of research and demonstration projects related to missing children and by substituting a much more comprehensive annual report which must be submitted to the President and the Congress within 180 days following the fiscal year to which it applies. The information required by this amendment will be of great value to professionals in the field and to the Congress for oversight purposes.

The information required by paragraphs (B) and (C), relating to model programs, will undoubtedly be difficult for OJJDP to satisfy without the benefit of local project results. Thus, these requirements should be viewed as an encouragement by Congress to fund these types of projects under the MCAA grant program.

Paragraph (D) requires a description of how the Administrator provided adequate OJJDP staff and resources to carry out the MCAA. The Committee is concerned about the frequent turnover in the Missing Children Program Director position and delays in completing required activities.

The information required in paragraph (E), regarding the number and types of calls received in the preceding year over the toll-free telephone line, should be provided with great specificity. For example, how many of the calls were for information, to report a missing child (and what type), to report a possible sighting of a missing child, and for other purposes. Regarding calls on runaways, the report should indicate what types of persons who placed calls (parents, friends, other youth, etc.), how many calls provided sufficient information for the runaway child to be considered "missing"; in how many cases they were referred to the Title III national communication system, and in how many cases information was provided on the availability of runaway services under Title III.

National toll-free telephone line

Section 7285 amends section 404(a) of the Act to remove the statutory limitation providing that information received over the toll-free telephone can only be shared with law enforcement agencies. This still permits the Administrator to provide for the sharing of such information with "appropriate entities."

Section 7285 amends section 404(b)(1) of the MCAA to require the national toll-free telephone line to be operated 24 hours a day. Parents of missing children who call late in the night should have the benefit of immediate assistance.

The bill also requires the national toll-free telephone line to coordinate and cooperate with the Title III national communication system. The intent is not to require any kind of automatic switching device, but to facilitate the ultimate handling of calls regarding runaways by the Title III hotline.

Quarterly reports and other information regarding the activities of the toll-free telephone line indicate that it has been used to take calls on child exploitation and child pornography. Unless properly funded from other sources, these activities appear questionable in light of the criteria in section 404(b)(1). It is strongly suggested that OJJDP review this situation.

National Resource Center and Clearinghouse

Section 7285 of the bill amends section 404(b)(2) to consolidate two of the current requirements regarding technical assistance and to add two new provisions. The first requires the national resource center and clearinghouse to maintain information on free or low-cost services which may be available to missing children and their families.

The second new provision requires the national resource center to maintain information on other federal programs which assist missing children. Accordingly, the national resource center should not expand scarce resources developing materials and information on runaways. Instead, it is more cost-effective and appropriate to use materials developed by the Department of Health and Human Services and their grantees.

This section also provides to the national clearinghouse the authority to conduct training. However, the training activities of the national resource center and clearinghouse must be confined to cases involving a missing child, as that term is defined in section 403(1) of the Act.

Record checks

Section 7285 of the bill amends section 404(b) of the Act to provide information to state and local entities to facilitate the lawful use of school records and birth certificates to identify and locate missing children. The term "lawful" means taking into account all applicable federal and state privacy requirements.

Advisory Board

Section 7286 of the bill amends section 405 of the MCAA to repeal the authority establishing the Advisory Board on Missing Children. In the three years of its existence, the Advisory Board made one report and that report did not in any way comply with its mandate under the Act. To the extent that the Administrator wishes the benefit of advice and recommendations from professionals in the field, authority exists to provide for a conference on missing children issues.

Grants

Section 7287 of the bill amends section 406 of the Act to authorize three new eligible grant activities. The first is aftercare services. Over the last several years, the Committee on Education and Labor received convincing testimony regarding the need for counseling services for abducted children and their families following recovery of the children.

The second new eligible activity is mediation services for divorced or otherwise estranged parents. The object is to prevent a possible abduction by helping such parents reach agreement regarding the sharing or treatment of their children.

The third new activity is state missing children clearinghouses.

Definition

While the bill does not modify the definition of "missing child," the Committee on Education and Labor nevertheless has some concerns in this area.

The definition in current law provides that a missing child is any individual less than 18 years of age whose whereabouts are unknown to such individual's legal custodian if—(1) the circumstances suggest that he/she may possibly have been abducted, or (2) the circumstances strongly indicate that the child is likely to be abused or exploited.

It should be noted that for a runaway child to come within the definition, clause (2) must apply. In the October 4, 1984 Senate debate, during the consideration of the conference report to accompany H.J. Res. 648 (making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes), Senator Specter explained clause (2) of the definition as follows:

"It is intended that, in general, the need for actual evidence of a likelihood of abuse or exploitation should increase in proportion to the age of the child involved. Thus, for example, where credible evidence provides a strong indication that a 15-year-old is engaged in prostitution, the child would be considered a missing child, but no flat presumption that the child is at risk solely by virtue of being a 15-year-old runaway would be in order. Conversely, it would be appropriate to presume that a 7-year-old runaway is at risk, unless credible evidence indicates to the contrary."

Thus, for a report on a runaway to be taken over the toll-free telephone line, the circumstances must include a strong indication that the child is likely to be abused or exploited and the need for actual evidence of that likelihood increases with the child's age. If the circumstances of the case do not establish the requisite level of likelihood, then the information should not be taken and maintained by the organization operating the telephone line. However, as required by the bill, the caller should be referred to the Title III hotline.

OJJDP should develop guidelines for the proper use of the current definition in all of its MCAA activities.

Competition requirement

Section 7288 of the bill adds a new provision requiring the Administrator to utilize a competitive process in the making of any grant for an amount exceeding $50,000.

Special study and report

Section 7291 directs the Administrator to conduct a study of non-custodial parental abduction situations to identify and describe the obstacles that prevent or impede the custodial parent from recovering his/her child. Obstacles should include (but are not limited to) those that are financial and legal (e.g., intrastate, interstate, or international).

The Administrator is directed to begin the study within one year following the date of enactment of these amendments and to make a report thereon to the Congress within 3 years of such date.

CHAPTER 4—MISCELLANEOUS

GAO investigation

Section 7295 directs the Comptroller General to conduct an investigation into the use of valid court orders, as well as court orders that are not valid. The General Accounting Office must begin the investigation within 6 months following the enactment of this bill and must report to Congress not later than 3 years following enactment.

Effective date and application of amendments

Section 7696 provides that the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Amendments shall take effect as of October 1, 1988. It also provides that the program plan requirements of section 7253(b)(1) and the program priorities requirements of section 7278 shall not apply with respect to fiscal year 1989. Finally, this section provides for the first of the annual reports required by section 7255.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Hughes].

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I am going to be very brief also.

Mr. Speaker, the Antidrug Act of 1988 is a good piece of legislation. I think the bill that we are bringing back from conference in many respects is better than the bill we took to conference. We picked up a lot of extraneous provisions, including a major one that I know a lot of Members are interested in dealing with, child pornography and obscenity.

Mr. Speaker, the Subcommittee on Crime, which I am privileged to chair, has written two very strong child pornography bills in the last 4 years, and this bill will further strengthen the law in reference to child pornography. It navigates those mine fields, those navigational mine fields that exist in the area of obscenity, and is well balanced and in my judgment will pass constitutional muster.

While it will not make everybody happy, I believe it is a good bill.

Mr. Speaker, a lot of people have been mentioned that have worked very hard on this bill, and part of that bill deals with chemical tracking, something we have never had, Mr. Speaker, in this country.

Mr. Speaker, for a lot of the committees the work that went into this bill represents about 3 months' work, but for my Subcommittee on Crime it represents almost 2 years' work.

In the legislation there is something that has been ignored in all the debate over the death penalty, and the exclusionary rule and civil penalties and forfeiture. It is a provision called chemical tracking, and, if I had to point to any one single provision in that bill that is going to make a dramatic difference in the fight against drug and substance abuse on the supply side, it is the chemical tracking bill.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Gilman], the gentleman from California [Mr. Rangel] and I traveled to countries to convince them that they should have chemical-free zones when we do not have a chemical-free zone in our own country, and we find it embarrassing that most of the chemicals that are going into the manufacture of cocaine and heroin come from our country, and we are for the first time going to do something about it.

If I had to point to any one single provision that is going to do a lot of good, provide new tools, it is that provision, and that was possible because of a lot of work by a lot of people including my ranking Republican, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum] who worked very hard on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, roughly 85 percent of the controversy in this bill was in the Committee on the Judiciary, so it was our staff that had to resolve the differences, and I want to thank at this time Paul McNulty, the Republican staff member; Hayden Gregory, the chief counsel of my subcommittee; and Eric Sterling. Without their help, too, it would not have been possible. I also want to thank the distinguished chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics on which I serve, thank him for his cooperation and leadership.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I asume that the distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] will want to close debate. There are a few Members who would like to be recognized on our side, and then I will defer to him.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my support for H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. Of particular concern to the Committee on Agriculture are the provisions in the bill which would provide for enhanced authorities for the U.S. Forest Service to combat the production of marijuana and other controlled substances on Forest Service lands.

Among its many other benefits, the National Forest System provides thousands of Americans with a variety of recreational opportunities every year. Unfortunately, National Forest System lands could become a haven for marijuana growers and producers of other controlled substances. These drug merchants have been known to use armed guards, attack dogs, and lethal booby traps to protect their drugs from other growers, law enforcement officers, and the public. A sorry consequence of the use of these devices is the threat that they pose to life and limb of hunters, hikers, and Forest Service employees.

The Forest Service provisions of H.R. 5210 are designed to give the Forest Service additional tools to combat drug production on Federal lands, and to ensure that these lands are safe for the public to use and enjoy. The legislation will provide the Forest Service with limited authorities to better combat the production of drugs on Federal lands, within the existing legal framework established in the National Forest System Drug Control Act of 1986. The current law requires Forest Service drug control enforcement authorities to be exercised pursuant to an agreement between the Secretary of Agriculture and the Attorney General. The drug control authorities in this legislation are also subject to such an agreement.

It has taken the Secretary of Agriculture and the Attorney General almost 2 years to consummate an agreement to approve the implementation of the enhanced enforcement authorities provided for in the 1986 act. I am hopeful that the Secretary and the Attorney General can reach an agreement to implement the authorities provided for in H.R. 5210 in a much more timely fashion.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the cooperation and hard work contributed by Chairman UDALL of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and Chairman RODINO of the Committee on the Judiciary in helping to craft the Forest Service provisions of H.R. 5210. As chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, I am pleased that we were able to accommodate my colleagues on both of these committees on the important matters addressed in this legislation.

Following is a brief summary of the Forest Service provisions of H.R. 5210 so that the Members of the House will be able to familiarize themselves with these important provisions:

BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE SUBSTITUTE AMENDMENT TO SECTION 6254—NATIONAL FOREST SYSTEM SAFETY—OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 5210, THE OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT OF 1988

Subsection (a)—Findings.—Subsection (a) includes findings that the National Forest Service needs additional authority to adequately deal with the unlawful production of marijuana and other controlled substances on National Forest System lands, and that such production is often harmful to the environment, to wildlife, and to public health and safety.

Subsection (b)—Powers.—Subsection (b) will increase the authorization for Forest Service special agents and law enforcement officers from 500 to 1,000, and will authorize these agents and officers to conduct investigations and enforcement actions outside the exterior boundaries of the National Forest System, for offenses committed within or affecting the administration of the National Forest System.

Subsection (c)—Cooperation.—Subsection (c) will authorize Forest Service special agents and law enforcement officers to make arrests outside the exterior boundaries of the National Forest System, for offenses committed within or affecting the administration of the National Forest System. Subsection (c) will also require the Forest Service to cooperate with the United States Attorney General in carrying out the seizure and forfeiture provisions of the Controlled Substances Act. Finally, subsection (c) authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to designate law enforcement officers of any other Federal agency to assist the Forest Service in drug control efforts, or to accept the designation from any Federal or State agency of Forest Service law enforcement officers to cooperate in multi-agency drug control law enforcement efforts.

Subsection (d)—Authorization of Appropriations.—In order to improve U.S. Forest Service, National Park Service, and Bureau of Land Management law enforcement activities relating to the use and production of narcotics and controlled substances on public lands within their jurisdiction, subsection (d) authorizes the appropriation of $10 million annually for the Forest Service, $3 million annually for the National Park Service, and $1.5 million annually for the Bureau of Land Management.

Subsection (e)—Designation Authority of Secretary of Agriculture.—Subsection (e) authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to designate law enforcement officers of any other Federal agency to exercise the powers and authorities of the Forest Service while assisting the Forest Service. Subsection (e) will also authorize the Secretary to accept law enforcement designation from any other Federal or State agency responsible for land management, natural resources, or recreation to enhance cooperative law enforcement efforts.

Subsection (f)—Criminal Penalty for Placing Hazardous or Injurious Devices on Federal Lands.—Subsection (f) will establish as a crime the use of a hazardous or injurious device on Federal land with the intent to violate the Controlled Substances Act, to obstruct timber harvesting or other lawful use of the lands, to damage property, or with reckless disregard to the risk that another person will be placed in danger of death or bodily injury. Penaltities for the use of a hazardous or injurious device will include fines of up to $250,000 and imprisonment ranging from less than one year for minor violations, to any term of years or for life for violations resulting in the death of an individual.

A "hazardous or injurious device" is defined to include guns or explosive devices attached to trip wires, and similar devices capable of causing bodily injury or property damage.

Subsection (g)—Clerical Amendment.—Subsection (g) amends the table of sections for chapter 91 of title 18, United States Code, to add "Hazardous or injurious devices on Federal lands." in the appropriate place.

Subsection (h)—Criminal Penalty for Polluting Federal Lands.—Subsection (h) will establish as a crime the knowing or intentional use of a poison, chemical, or other hazardous substance on Federal land in connection with the manufacture or distribution of a controlled substance in violation of the Controlled Substances Act, if such use creates a hazard to humans or animals, pollutes a body of water, or degrades or harms the environment. Violators of this subsection could be fined up to $250,000, imprisoned for up to five years, or both.

Subsection (i)—Drug Pollution Fund.—Subsection (i) will establish a "Drug Pollution Fund" in the U.S. Treasury, which shall be funded by fines imposed against polluters for violation of the prohibition against the use of a poison, chemical, or other hazardous substance on Federal land in connection with the manufacture or distribution of a controlled substance. Funds from the Drug Pollution Fund will be made available, subject to an appropriation, to the heads or executive agencies or departments for the cleanup of hazardous substance pollution resulting from drug rleated pollution on Federal lands.

Subsection (j)—Arson Involving Timber.—Subsection (j) will remove the current $5,000 limit on fines for arson on Federal lands, and will authorize fines of up to $250,000 for arson on Federal lands.

Subsection (k)—Report.—Subsection (k) will require the Secretary of Agriculture and the Attorney General to report to Congress within 180 days after enactment of H.R. 5210 concerning their activities to expedite the investigation and enforcement of criminal violations relating to marijuana and other controlled substances that are manufactured, distributed, or dispensed on National Forest System lands.

I commend the House leadership for bringing this legislation to the floor prior to the adjournment of the 100th Congress, and urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES].

Mr. HAYES of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference agreement. While this report reflects the hard work of many of my colleagues to resolve the problems that plague us from the flood of illegal drugs into this country, I find myself unable to support it.

I understand that this agreement will not include any expansion of the "exclusionary rule" which limits the introduction into evidence in Federal trial, illegally seized items. The agreement also will provide for congressional consideration of changes in habeas corpus procedures.

But are these improvements real or illusionary? This legislation has an authorized spending level of more than $2 billion, but is only funded for $500 million in this fiscal year, evenly split between law enforcement efforts and rehabilitation, education and treatment programs. This very modest funding level undervalues the overall enforcement impact and implementation of this antidrug legislation.

In addition the conferees agreed on language giving the Justice Department 9 months to develop a system that would allow gun dealers to determine whether prospective handgun purchasers are convicted felons. This is a variation on the House provision substituted in place of the 7-day waiting period for gun purchasers.

Specifically, I am opposed to the provision which would provide for a Federal death penalty for drug related murders. The death penalty is, in all circumstances, cruel and unusual punishment which many feel violates the United States Constitution. I am concerned about the death penalty because the facts show that, in States which have enacted the death penalty provisions, black people are disproportionately represented on death row. The facts also show that juries have been more than reluctant to impose the death penalty when the defendant is a minor.

The addition of a Federal death penalty for drug-related killings to this bill will not be an effective deterrent to crime. The death penalty provision will, however, undermine U.S. efforts to go after the big drug kingpins operating overseas. Federal prosecutors and State Department legal experts agree that the vast majority of countries which we have extradition agreements with, will not agree to extradite any of their citizens to a nation where they face the prospect of the death penalty.

There are only two instances where Federal law imposes the death penalty in two very narrow circumstances: First, for espionage by a member of the Armed Forces; and second, for death resulting from an aircraft hijacking. This agreement imposes the death penalty for killings by someone involved with drugs. This broad language would include persons even remotely involved in illegal drugs.

Mr. Speaker, the inclusion of the death penalty amendment, the imposition of civil penalties on those not convicted of any offense, and the arbitrary deprivation of Federal benefits on individuals in addition to sanctions imposed by the courts, are among the controversial provisions which fly in the face of the Bill of Rights. I doubt that these expansive provisions are necessary or needed to win the war on illegal drugs in America.

The Reagan administration has not aggressively enforced existing laws to significantly reduce the flow of illegal drugs into our country. In addition, the current administration appears to lack a commitment to help turn this situation around to save our youth and to save our communities.

Therefore I am compelled to vote against passage of the conference report on the Omnibus Drug Bill.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALEXANDER].

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this conference agreement. This is a good bill. It is better late than never. Something is better than nothing.

There is something else that needs to be said in the discussion of this agreement.

There are many of us in the Congress who are still trying to find out what our Government is doing to stop complicity of foreign officials in other nations engaged in aiding drug traffickers who are sending the crippling and killing, illegal drugs to the United States.

We want to know what is going on. I know of a number of House committees conducting investigations on the issue of complicity of foreign officials in drug trafficking: Appropriations, Judiciary, Drug Abuse and Narcotics Control, and Government Operations. And, in the Senate the Committee on Foreign Relations is active.

We can pass bills all day long in this Congress. But, there are essentially two things that have to be done to stop drugs.

First, Congress and the American people must discourage the use of illegal drugs and abusing legal drugs.

Second, the United States must stop people in other nations from exporting illegal drugs to the United States.

An article in the October 8 edition of The Economist reports that the value of the underground drug economy in Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru is about $20 billion. That is billion with a capital B. Virtually all of the $20 billion is drained from Americans victimized by drug use. I ask that this article be made a part of the RECORD.

To achieve the goals set forth this drug bill requires consistent cooperation among executive branch agencies and between such agencies and the Congress with respect to information about foreign activities which would be illegal if carried out in the United States in connection with the production or distribution of drugs or the management of money generated by such drug activities.

Such information can be critical to the formulation and implementation of United States policy, both foreign and domestic, including the enforcement of Federal drug laws.

The Congress must have access to such information in order to perform its constitutional oversight and lawmaking functions, especially with respect to the formulation and implementation of United States foreign policy and with respect to law enforcement activities.

Therefore, the Congress intends that the executive branch will cooperate to the fullest extent possible to insure that the Congress has access to such information. The Congress also intends the executive branch to ensure that there is effective sharing and distribution of such information within the executive branch to facilitate the necessary interagency coordination of U.S. Government foreign policy and law enforcement activities.

The Economist article follows:

[From the Economist, Oct. 8, 1988]

THE COCAINE ECONOMIES—LATIN AMERICA'S KILLING FIELDS

"Latin America's only successful multinational" is how Mr. Alan Garcia, Peru's president, has accurately described the drug trade. Last year the retail sales of South America cocaine in North America and Western Europe were probably worth more than $20 billion—equivalent to world retail sales of diamonds in 1987, or Singapore's GDP or all liquor sales in America. If Colombia's Medellin cartel, a syndicate of cocaine dealers, were a corporation, it would rank among the Fortune 500 companies, alongside some of the oil giants.

Cocaine is produced from coca leaf. Most is grown in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru. (A small amount is grown in Ecuador and Argentina.) In Colombia cultivation is concentrated in the south and south-east, in, eg, the Amazonas territory. Peru's main cocaine-producing area is the central Upper Huallaga Valley, a 150-square-mile coca field. In Bolivia the Chapare, Beni and Yungas regions are big coca-growing areas. Coca and cocaine are among their leading exports, overhauling natural gas and tin in Bolivia, copper in Peru, and (probably) second only to coffee in Colombia. Yet, in all official statistics, coca does not exist.

It is easy to explain why. For one thing, it is politically explosive. Organisations like the IMF and World Bank are fearful of offending member governments by openly acknowledging that some countries earn large amounts of foreign exchange from drug trafficking. Cocaine money is also ignored because reliable data are hard to come by. Figures that are produced are never complete.

The most detailed estimates of cocaine production are produced by the United States government in two annual reports. One, from the State Department, is the International Narcotics Control Strategy Report (INCSR). The other is produced by the National Narcotics Intelligence Consumers Committee (NNICC), which is chaired by the intelligence chief of the Drug Enforcement Administration and includes representatives of 12 federal agencies. The NNICC report includes estimates of cultivation and production (of illegal drugs), statistics on drug abuse, prices and trends in trafficking.

Even these raw data are not precise. For example, cultivation estimates rely on aerial surveys which cannot hope to home in on all coca-producing areas. Many outside the United States government believe that the NNICC's estimates are too low. One critic is Mr. Renssalaer Lee, a foreign-policy consultant in Washington and an authority on the the cocaine trade. He says that Peru estimates that 300,000 hectares were planted with coca last year; the NNICC puts the figure at 98,000-121,000 hectares.

However, the NNICC figures are the best available and, at least, err on the side of caution. Based on these figures, it is reasonable to suppose that retail sales of South American cocaine mostly in North America and Europe were $22 billion last year. Of that, South Americans may have received $3 billion, with the rest going to middlemen. This figure is roughly in line with estimates made by drug-trade watchers. Mr. Renssalaer Lee puts the figure at $3 billion-5 billion. Mr. Francisco Thoumi, a Colombian economist, thinks gross export revenues for South America are just under $2 billion.

As a producer of coca, Colombia is in distant third place behind Bolivia and Peru. However, it is the center of refining and exporting. For the most part, Bolivians and Peruvians sell coca paste to Colombian traffickers, who convert it into cocaine and export it. The value added is impressive. In 1987 a Colombian refiner could purchase 2.5 kilos of paste for as little as $500, and then convert it into one kilo of cocaine with an export price of up to $6,000.

Colombians, involved heavily in trafficking ocerseas, receive the largest chunk of cocaine revenue—perhaps half the total—with the remainder divided more or less equally between Bolivians and Peruvians. On that basis, Colombians would have grossed about $1.5 billion last year; Bolivians and Peruvians each $750m.

It does not necessarily follow that the countries themselves received that much foreign exchange from the cocaine trade. A large portion of the money received abroad—by, for example, Colombian traffickers based in Miami—is not repatriated. And a lot of earned in South America does not stay there. Cash is not so much laundred as rinsed, then exported and invested abroad. Most drug-watchers reckon that coca-exporting countries receive in foreign exchange about half the export revenues earned by traffickers—or $1.5 billion. For 1987 this would mean $750m for Colombia and $375m each for Bolivia and Peru.

Relate these figures to official economic statistics and they look too low. Colombia's GDP is 50% bigger than Peru's and six and a half times the size of Bolivia's. Colombia's GDP last year was about $41 billion, which would make $750m in cocaine exports equivalent to just 1.8% of GDP. Peru's GDP was $27 billion, giving a ratio of 1.4%. In Bolivia, with a GDP of just $6 billion, the ratio jumps to 6%.

In the case of Bolivia, the cocaine boom coincided with a severe economic slump. Between 1981 and 1986, GDP declined every year. (A modest upturn occurred last year, with real growth of about 1.5%) Undoubtedly, the coca dollars cushioned the blow.

COCAINE INC.

Like any other business, cocaine trafficking needs capital and a distribution system. It also has overheads. Expenses include raw materials (coca), chemicals and laboratories, chemists, transport and business services (legal and financial). And security, which includes pay-offs to government officials: politicians, judges and policemen. Protection money is also paid to guerrillas, such as Colombia's Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia (FARC).

Coca money is invested in local economies through various routes. In Colombia most of the leading traffickers are based in Medellin, the country's second largest city, and Cali, a city in the south-west. The trafficers have used the accumulated profits from years of drug-dealing to invest in legitimate businesses. Pablo Escobar Gaviria, allegedly one of the leading traffickers, has put together a property empire worth around $2 billion and, in 1982, was elected to the Colombian Congress. In Bolivia, Santa Cruz—a one-horse town 20 years ago—has also become a boom town partly because of the drug trade.

One of the clearest effects on the three cokedoms is that drugs provide jobs. Mr. Lee estimates that at between 750,000 and 1.1m people are directly employed in the drug trade in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru. Since the total employed in the three countries is 20m, about 5% of the (officially defined) working population is employed in the cocaine business.

Farming is the most labour-intensive aspect of the business, and most leaf-pickers are employed in Bolivia and Peru. In 1983 a Bolivian government report estimated that 300,000 Bolivians were engaged in cultivating, processing or transporting coca and its derivatives. That was updated last year to 500,000. The official workforce of Bolivia is 1.7m. So (on that figure) the cocaine trade provides one in every three of four jobs. Even allowing for the underground economy (and assuming many of those employed in the cocaine trade are not on official employment registers), drug-trafficking accounts for around 20% of jobs.

In Peru, which produces twice as much coca leaf and has a workforce of 7m, those employed in the drugs business are probably close to the Bolivian figure. In Colombia (11m employed), the third largest grower of coca, the figure will be much lower.

EXPORT AND DIE

Ever since Latin America's debt saga began in 1982, bankers have paid great attention to the ability of debtor countries to boost foreign-exchange earnings so they could service their debts. Although coca dollars have had a big effect, they are nearly always ignored in economic analyses.

One exception is an unpublished study conducted a few years ago by an economist at the United States Department of Agriculture. He estimated cocaine revenues and then calculated some economic ratios. In Colombia, cocaine (and marijuana) exports were equivalent to 22-48% of legal exports in 1984; in Bolivia, 26% and in Peru 6-16%. Based on reasonable estimates of cocaine export-income for 1987, narcotics accounted for the equivalent of 13½% of Colombia's legal exports, 14½% of Peru's and 75% of Bolivia's.

The coca dollars are absorbed into the three economies in a fairly straightforward way. A State Department official describes how the system worked when he was based in Peru in the early 1980s. "Collectors" would purchase leaves from farmers, paying them in Peruvian currency (then the sol, now the inti), and then convert the leaves into coca paste. The collectors would then sell the paste to traffickers, who would typically pay them in American dollars. Since the collectors had no need for greenbacks, they would sell the dollars to money-changers for Peruvian currency. The moneymen, in turn, would sell the dollars at a profit to commercial banks. Says the official, "there was no real control over the dollars."

In fact, the governments of Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru have occasionally created financial mechanisms through which coca-dollars could be absorbed into the official economy. Some of these are described in "Hot Money" by Mr. R.T. Naylor, an economist at Montreal's McGill University. In Colombia so-called ventaillas siniestras—"left-handed windows"—were opened at the banks, where customers could exchange black-market dollars for local currency. In Peru cocaine money "returned home to a warm and officially sanctioned welcome." In the late 1970s "Peru deliberately abolished exchange controls to attract cocadollars, exchanging them for local currency or for dollar-denominated certificates of deposit (CDs) with no questions asked. Peruvian banks expanded rapidly into cocaine country to sop up the flow."

Bolivia got into the act of 1985, when its New Economic Policy was launched. The government and banking system, said Mr. Naylor, "officially went into the laundry business. In an appeal for dope money to come home—all would be forgiven—the new policy decreed that 'No proof need be given, at the national departmental, or municipal level, of the origins of assets invested during the next four months' The central bank began marketing bearers CDs in dollar denominations with a guaranteed 10% rate of return."

In addition, the traffickers' capital may move back and forth between their home countries and foreign boltholes. In the case of the Colombian traffickers, Mr. Thoumi suspects that the trend is now to bring home money invested outside Colombia—partly because traffickers fear that their assets may be seized by United States drug-busters. By contrast, they have relatively little fear of the Colombian authorities. Whatever the case, there is little doubt that cocadollars have helped all three countries cope with balance-of-payments problems and thus, foreign debts. In Colombia, the cocaine boom is probably a big reason why the government has been able to avoid rescheduling foreign debt. Even so, the coca-producing countries have had to pay a high economic price for their drug industry.

The influx of cocaine money has led to economic distortions. The surge of drug dollars into Colombia spurred inflation. The money encouraged banks to be less prudent about their lending, so bad debts soared. Mr. Thoumi argues that Colombia has experienced something akin to the "Dutch disease". This phenomenon occurred in Holland in the 1970s when a sudden surge of income from natural gas exports distorted the Dutch economy. Just as the energy boom pushed up the value of the guilder and made many other Dutch exports uncompetitive, the coca boom (coupled with rising income from coffee exports) pushed up the Colombian peso, which undermined Colombia's efforts to boost non-traditional exports.

Away from economics, the price has also been high. When an illegal business becomes big enough, a country's political system becomes corrupted. Colombia's fabulously wealthy traffickers have garnered tremendous political power, enabling them to undermine the authority of the state. "That is now a parallel organisation that is controlled by the narcos," says Mr. Thoumi. Mr. Renssalaer Lee has written that "drug barons today are major political forces in countries such as Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru, carving out states within states in coca-producing regions, sometimes forming alliances of convenience with local leftist guerrillas, undermining authority with bribery and assassinations, and amassing enough armed might to keep governments at bay. The erosion of the authority of the state has direct consequences for the economy. The government finds it more difficult to collect taxes, implement development programmes and protect property of honest citizens.

Production of coca leaf has grown drastically in recent years. A great deal of coca planted in the late 1970s began to filter on to the market in the early 1980s (see chart below). Coca, like any other commodity, is subject to the laws of supply and demand. With the extra output, wholesale and street prices of cocaine have been falling. Couple that with rising overheads and increasing competition and the result is predicable: traffickers have seen a profit squeeze. They have reacted like conventional businessmen.

In recent years non-Colombians have become "vertically integrated" in an effort to cut out the middlemen. In the early 1980s a Bolivian cocaine king, Roberto Suarez Gomez, moved heavily into refining. "The Colombians no longer have a stranglehold on the business", says one drugs-watcher.

The Colombians formed a cartel. Under a sort of market-sharing arrangement, the Medellin cartel enjoyed hegemony in the southeastern United States, including the huge Miami market, while traffickers from the city of Cali dominated the New York market. Just like a corporation expanding through acquisition, the Medellin cartel has mounted a takeover bid for the cocaine business in New York. (Colombians accounted for 10½% of all trafficking arrests by the Drug Enforcement Administration in the United States last year.)

Commercially, it makes sense: capture a larger share of the profits on each kilo of cocaine by becoming more involved in foreign distribution. But, like any hostile bid on Wall Street, the Colombians have met with fierce opposition—touching off wars in American cities that are fought with guns, not proxies. With a glut of cocaine on world markets, traffickers are also trying to bring in new customers. The main focus of this marketing drive is Western Europe.

UNHOOKING THE HOOKED

Are cocaine and cocadollars so crucial to the economies of the three South American countries that little can (or will) be done about drug-growing? Colombia, the largest and strongest of the three economies, cocaine revenues are relatively small in relation to GDP. The coca trade also provides relatively few jobs. But it is a useful export and Colombia's trade balance would suffer if the business suddenly disappeared. Peru is more vulnerable. The economy is weaker, and far more peasants depend on coca for their livelihood.

In Bolivia the cocaine trade has a huge impact on growth, employment and the balance of payments. In recent years, with the economy stagnating and unemployment high, legal exports have brought in only modest revenue. A 1987 report to Bolivia's chamber of deputies stated: "The illegal trafficking of coca leaves and its by-products has become the most dynamic sector in the economy. . . ." Flavio Machicado, a former finance minister, was quoted in 1986 as saying: "Bolivia has gone from the economy of tin to the economy of coca. If narcotics were to disappear overnight, we would have rampant unemployment. There would be open protest and violence." Bolivia appears to be addicted to cocaine.

In its latest narcotics control report, America's State Department says; "If we are to make a difference in cocaine control, a massive infusion of economic assistance to the region will be required." Unless the west can find ways of making the drug less lucrative it is unlikely that Bolivia, Peru and Colombia can ever be weaned off cocaine—even with massive foreign assistance.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I want to note, with respect to the so-called drug czar provisions contained in title I of the amendment, that the authorities conferred upon the drug czar and his office must be exercised in a manner consistent with the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended. These provisions include the congressional oversight provisions of title V of that statute and all the various responsibilities and authorities of the Director of Central Intelligence, in particular his responsibility to protect intelligence sources and methods. The amendment further requires the Director to issue such regulations as he determines to protect information regarding intelligence sources and methods furnished under the bill.

The amendment also gives the drug czar the authority to prepare a national drug control program budget, review the budget submission of all government elements with drug control responsibilities and to concur in certain transfers or reprogrammings of national drug control program funds.

The President, in Executive Order 12333, has also given the Director of Central Intelligence certain budget authorities unique within the Government. He must review and approve all the elements of the national foreign intelligence program, which embraces all of those activities of Government to collect, process and analyze national intelligence and counterintelligence, and to conduct covert action. These authorities are not affected by the responsibility of the drug czar to develop a national drug program budget, since these responsibilities and authorities do not abrogate those of the Director of Central Intelligence. To the extent that intelligence elements are included in the national drug control program budget, the Director of Central Intelligence will continue to be able to approve their budgets, thereby ensuring that they respond to intelligence collection priorities and overall budget constraints imposed upon the National Foreign Intelligence Program.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, the problem of drugs in our society today is one of great consequence. All over our Nation, communities are being devastated by drug abuse. As drug-related crime continues to rise, our neighborhoods are becoming playgrounds for pushers.

This is a problem that must be dealt with from all angles, including legislation and education. As a member of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime, I am proud to have been one of the original architects of H.R. 5210, an omnibus antidrug bill which attacks the drug problem from all sides. Not only does it establish stiffer penalties for drug pushers and users, but it also funds drug education and rehabilitation programs.

Legislation, however, is only part of the solution to this growing problem. Our communities must also help wage the war on drugs through education and social programs.

On October 23, Kentucky's Champions Against Drugs, in cooperation with the National Federation of Parents for a Drug Free Lifestyle, will be sponsoring a Red Ribbon Campaign to show its support in promoting a drug-free lifestyle. Red ribbons will be worn by members of the community in support of the program's theme, "The Choice for Me, Drug Free!"

Hats off to Kentucky Gov. Wallace Wilkinson and First Lady Martha Wilkinson, the honorary chairpersons of this important initiative. I believe that programs such as these are extremely important for community awareness and send out a positive message to our young people, showing them that a drug-free lifestyle is the right choice. I encourage other States to support programs such as this one in the Commonwealth of Kentucky and to attack the drug problem on all fronts.

The problem of drug abuse in our society cannot be tolerated any longer. It is a tragedy which affects everyone in our community, especially our youth. In order to build a strong healthy Nation we must educate our children as to the dangers of drugs and help them make the choice to say "no" to drugs. I urge everyone to help wage the war on drugs to end this crisis.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Scheuer].

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate my colleagues, particularly Chairman Rangel, Mr. Gilman, and Mr. Hughes for their outstanding efforts in producing a drug bill that provides for substantial increases in funding for drug education, treatment, and rehabilitation.

For the first time, a drug bill passed by the Congress provides approximately 50 percent of its total funding for education, rehabilitation, and treatment. This bill provides more money than ever before for such programs.

If our Nation is going to succeed in reducing drug abuse, we must devote far more of our attention and resources to the demand side of the problem.

We must perform the research necessary to learn what drug education techniques work and continue to increase funding for drug education until all of our nation's youth are taught about the dangers of drug abuse. We must provide the money necessary to insure that every addict who wants to "get the monkey off his back" has access on request to treatment and rehabilitation programs.

It is a national disgrace that drug abusers desperately seeking help must often wait a year or longer for treatment.

Hopefully, this bill makes the beginning of a major effort to deal with the demand side of the problem since our eradication and interdiction programs, although well-intentioned, are not working and dedicated local law enforcement professionals are overwhelmed.

On the one hand, spending is spiraling upward: federal funding for drug interdiction programs has tripled in the last 8 years, drug seizures have increased tenfold since 1982, drug related arrests are up, and authorities are confiscating record numbers of cars, boats, planes, and other drug-related equipment.

On the other hand, despite the billions of dollars spent each year on massive law enforcement efforts, there exists a parallel upward flow of illegal drugs which continue to flow across our borders and into the bodies of your youth in every city, town, and hamlet across America. Drugs are destabilizing our cities, two-thirds of all urban crime is drug-related, and drug dealing is still the job of choice for many inter-city kids.

I support this bill because it contains a substantial increase in education, treatment and rehabilitation funding. But I support it with reluctance because it also contains further increases in funding for interdiction. It is not a perfect bill, but many members of this body and the Senate have worked long hours to hammer out a compromise that we all hope will advance our efforts to reduce drug abuse in this country.

I am not suggesting that we should eliminate funding for eradication and interdiction. I do not believe, however, that we should continue to increase funding for programs that are not working and hold very little hope of working in the future. We should not throw good money after bad.

Mr. Speaker, an increasing number of law enforcement officials are expressing their concerns that policies aimed at interdicting the supply of drugs have proved futile.

Nearly 3 years ago, Col. Ralph Milstead of the Arizona Department of Public Safety, told the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control:

> Ultimately there will be no victory in the war on drugs until American attitudes undergo a fundamental change. The solution lies not in reducing supply, but in reducing demand for drugs—let's work on the demand side rather than keep pouring money on the supply side. I liken it to killing a snake tail first. We ought to start at the head and the head, of course is the demand.

In July, a group of 50 law enforcement officials, most of them chiefs of police, called on the President and Congress to provide for more research to evaluate current antidrug efforts, noting that "without such research we will be merely throwing money at the problem."

They said research should be done to determine how to reduce the demand for drugs, to ascertain which treatment programs will best keep addicts from committing crimes, and to weigh the costs and benefits of massive police crackdowns on drug dealing locations.

I am placing their letter in the Record today because I think their questions have a great deal of merit.

To the President of the United States and all Members of the U.S. Congress

We are police executives and criminologists concerned about the nation's crisis of drug abuse. We share your goal of reducing drug abuse and crime in America through major new legislation this year. But we urge you to amend the current legislative proposals.

As we understand it, none of the current proposals include new funding for action research and program evaluation. Such research is vital to winning the war against drugs. Without such research we will be merely throwing money at the problem. We urge you to include in any new drug abuse bill substantial funding for action research administered by agencies such as the National Institute of Justice and the Bureau of Justice Statistic. That finding can help us get better answers to such tough questions as:

How can we reduce the demand for illicit drugs?

Which treatment programs are most effective in keeping drug addicts from committing crimes?

How can we use drug tests of arrestees most effectively in planning enforcement policies?

What are the costs and benefits of massive police crackdown on drug dealing locations?

Throwing more money into existing programs will not answer these and other critical questions. We urge you to invest in better strategic knowledge for winning this war.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference agreement to H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. Although I have some reservations about several provisions in this legislation, nevertheless, on balance I believe that the conferees have made a reasonable effort and have markedly improved this legislation.

I am very pleased that the conference agreement retained important provisions I introduced relating to substance abuse among pregnant women. These provisions will offer hope and opportunity to the hundreds of thousands of women who are putting their infants at risk by using drugs during pregnancy. Federal leadership and direction is needed to meet the challenge of drug abuse by pregnant women, and this bill will help us to do just that.

Mr. Speaker, the past several years have seen an astronomical rise in the incidence of substance abuse among pregnant women, particularly the use of cocaine and crack. A recent study found that at least 11 percent of the pregnant women surveyed had exposed their babies to illegal drugs during pregnancy. These data suggest that nationwide, as many as 375,000 infants may suffer severe health effects as a result of their mother's drug yse each year. In one hospital in my congressional district alone, one to three babies are being born a week to mothers who use drugs. Harmful effects include miscarriages, premature birth, low birthweight, malformation, developmental disabilities, and crib death.

In looking at this problem, I found existing Federal programs to help pregnant women using drugs to be inadequate. Very few States have prevention and treatment programs targeted specifically to pregnant women. Innovative approaches must be developed to address the unique needs of pregnant women, who do not fit into traditional treatment programs.

In response to this epidemic, and to the lack of current Federal programs targeted to pregnant women, I introduced legislation earlier this year known as the Drug Free Mothers and Babies Act. Several provisions of this legislation were incorporated into the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. One provision directs the Office of Substance Abuse Prevention to make grants for model prevention, education, and treatment projects for substance abusing pregnant women. In addition, this legislation targets Federal research efforts on the effects of substance abuse on pregnant women and their infants. Finally, the bill establishes a program of demonstration projects for IV Drug Abuse and AIDS which could encourage treatment programs for pregnant women.

I would like to commend Congressman WAXMAN and Congressman SHAW for their steadfast commitment and response to my request for support and their diligent efforts on the Vento amendments. Their assistance was crucial to making these new programs to help pregnant women break the cycle of drug abuse a reality.

This bill contains important provisions that would help eradicate the production and trafficking of illegal drugs on the one-third of our Nation's lands that are in Federal ownership. The national parks, national forests, and public lands are being abused by the cultivation, production, and distribution of illegal substances. This abuse has become a threat to the health and safety of recreationists and is polluting the environment and hurting wildlife. H.R. 5210 is an important step toward ensuring that our parks, forests, and public lands have healthy environments that are safe places for Americans to visit and enjoy. These specific provisions have been worked out with the Park and Public Lands Subcommittee which I have the responsibility to chair.

H.R. 5210 combats illegal drugs on Federal lands in several significant ways:

First. It authorizes increased annual funding for drug-related law enforcement for the major land management agencies. It authorizes $1.5 million for the Bureau of Land Management, $3 million for the National Park Service, and $10 million for the Forest Service.

Second. The bill makes it a criminal act with stiff penalties to pollute national forests with poisons and hazardous substances while manufacturing or distributing illegal drugs.

Third. It gives the Forest Service, for the first time, the authority to combat drugs outside the boundaries of the national forests as long as these activities pertain to violations within the national forest. The agency now will be able to pursue drug traffickers who flee across national forest boundaries, to interview witnesses after they have left national forests and to make arrests wherever suspects are apprehended. The National Park Service and Bureau of Land Management already have this authority.

Fourth. The bill give the Forest Service the authority to deputize law enforcement officials from other agencies to help fight drugs on the national forests and to combat other types of violations as well. Similar authority already exists for the Park Service and the BLM.

Mr. Speaker, all these provisions that help our land management agencies fight the war on drugs are the result of a consensus. The Park and Public Lands Subcommittee of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee members and staff have spent many hours negotiating with the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, the House and Senate Agriculture Committees, and the Federal agencies involved. The resulting compromise has been agreed to by both the minority and majority of all the committees which have jurisdiction. The changes we have agreed to include:

First. Removing language from the Senate passed bill which would authorize the Attorney General to declare law-enforcement emergencies on Federal lands during which he could suspend the police powers of State and local governments.

Second. New language creating stiff new penalties for placing hazardous devices on Federal lands designed to injure innocent people.

Third. A new provision that establishes a fund from fines collected from drug traffickers who have been convicted of polluting Federal lands. The fund would be used to clean up the pollution.

I am proud that so many diverse interests were able to come to an agreement on how we should eradicate drugs from the Federal lands.

The war against drugs must be fought simultaneously on several levels. First, we must educate people, especially young people, about the dangers of illegal drugs so that they will know the dangers which they face. Second, we must increase our efforts at prevention and the interdiction of illegal drugs. This requires not only a strong domestic effort in curtailing the demand for illegal drugs here at home, but a coordinated effort with foreign nations as well which grow and export illegal drugs into the United States. We must find new ways to help people in those nations find economic alternatives to producing illegal drugs. Finally, we must make better efforts at treatment for those who use or are addicted to illegal drugs, such as the provisions added by the Vento amendments for drug-free mothers and babies. The costs to our society in terms of higher health care expenses, lost productivity, and the clogging of our judicial system are much too high to ignore. We must approach the issue of treatment with sensitivity for those who are trying to rebuild their lives.

The legislation before the House today addresses all three of these concerns in some measure.

I applaud the conferees for retaining stiff sentences for those who use children in the production of sexually explicit pornographic material and for dropping vague legislative language of dubious constitutionality which would have made it more difficult for prosecutors to obtain criminal convictions in certain cases. Judges and juries need clear and unambiguous standards to discharge their duty. The conference agreement is a significant improvement over the early versions of this initiative.

Similarly, the conferees' agreement to drop the so-called good faith exception to the exclusionary rule is a positive step in giving our police and judicial system a firm and clear standard which will make their jobs easier; not more difficult. Judges and juries should be able to devote their attention to assessing objective evidence of guilt or innocence, and not subjective arguments about whether or not the police acted in good faith before seizing evidence in drug-related crimes. The codification of the existing court decisions on the exclusionary rule is included in this legislation, which means that there will be no expansion of the exclusionary rule.

Mr. Speaker, while the conferees have made some progress in improving this legislation, I regret that they have provided for the reinstatement of a Federal death penalty. There is no doubt or argument whatsoever that drug-related homicides are dispicable crimes which deserve severe punishment. However, the numerous arguments against the death penalty do not lose their merit simply because the nature of the crime is drug-related rather than non-drug-related. Regrettably, legitimate concerns about bias, inequity, deterrence, and irreversible mistakes are ignored in favor of a rush to reinstate the death penalty so that we can look tough on drug-related crime. Indeed, it is ironic that this provision may, in fact, make it more difficult and in some instances impossible to bring certain defendants hiding in foreign countries to justice in a U.S. court of law because of certain treaties or policies of foreign nations which forbid extradition to the United States where a capital sentence would likely be imposed. Finally, the lengthy appeals process for those who are tried in our Federal courts and who receive the death sentence will insure that justice will be neither swift nor certain.

While I continue to have serious reservations about the so-called user accountability provisions of the bill which would suspend Federal aid for people who need that very same assistance to defeat the vicious circle of drug abuse, the conferees have delayed the effective date of these cuts until September 1, 1989, thereby giving the next President and Congress, and possibly the courts, an opportunity to reexamine this issue before it impacts the innocent or places a double-jeopardy type of penalty in law. I hope that following the election and early next year, the new Congress will bring more balance and sense to bear in addressing this matter.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that we face a serious problem with illegal drugs and drug abuse in this country. But we cannot legislate away drug abuse. We must put in place a good and fair policy which is based upon common sense. In a crisis, there is often a temptation to posture and to look tough, regardless of what the effect of legislative action might actually be upon constitutional rights. But it is in precisely those circumstances, in a crisis situation, where constitutional values are at risk of being abandoned that they must be protected most vigorously. I voted against H.R. 5210 when it was before the House on September 22 because it included numerous floor amendments that frankly were ill-conceived provisions that I believed made it more difficult in the final analysis to stem the drug problem. Today, I will support the legislation before the House because, while it is far from perfect, it is a more thoughtful and effective legislative product. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support the passage of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON].

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, and in particular that portion contributed by the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

In 1987, the drug trafficking industry in the United States expanded to an estimated $180 billion a year business that has permeated every segment of our society and has spawned an underground empire of crime, violence, and corruption.

Drug abuse is now a major national public health threat that continues to grow.

It was estimated for last year that there were 600,000 active heroin addicts in the United States, with the number increasing steadily because more heroin is available on the streets.

Whether one looks at overall trends or annual statistics, the picture is bleak. And, unfortunately, these figures are only the tip of the iceberg. The actual extent of the problem is even greater and may become even worse in the future because the sad fact is that drugs continue to infiltrate our borders.

Recognizing this, I applaud the Speaker and the distinguished majority leader of the House for taking the initiative many months ago in developing a proposal to combat this serious problem.

With its various components—education, enforcement, research, and so forth—I believe this bill takes a major step in trying to help win the war on drugs.

One issue which arose was that of drug testing. I support drug testing and it is my understanding that the administration will be issuing final regulations regarding testing for the rail, motor carrier, and aviation industries by November 1. Legislating testing in the drug bill, however, could have that process for up to another year.

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION DRUG ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE

Subtitle E of title VII marks the cumulation of an extensive, bipartisan committee investigation into the role and responsibilities of the Federal Aviation Administration in carrying out the 1984 and 1986 aviation drug laws and in providing assistance to Federal, State, and local agencies involved in the enforcement of the Nation's drug laws.

The amount of cocaine and marijuana seized from general aviation aircraft as a percent of the total volume of illegal drugs seized was 69 percent in 1984, 60 percent in 1985, 53 percent in 1986, and 64 percent in 1987. In the last year alone, some 40,000 pounds of cocaine and almost $13 billion worth in street value were confiscated.

The Office of Technology Assessment estimates 1,300 to 3,500 general aviation aircraft drug smuggling flights per year or about 3.5 to 10 per day. These are the ones law officials have tracked—there are undoubtedly countless others about which they are unaware.

Moreover, this method of drug smuggling, once generally limited to the gulf and Southern borders, is appearing increasingly at all our border areas. For example, less than a year ago, in New York, 610 pounds of cocaine were seized from a twin-engined Cessna. The flight originated in Colombia.

Drug-trafficking has become a national crisis—one that is eating at the fabric of American society. The law enforcement community, which is in the front line in this battle, experience one frustration after another. They are faced with limited personnel, facilities, equipment and funding, and confronted by a sophisticated and ruthless enemy. The frustration that law enforcement agencies have expressed with respect to the FAA's system for registering aircraft, certificating airmen, and filing major forms was the focus of the committee's investigation, and is the basis for title VII of H.R. 5210.

Basically, subtitle E of title VII focuses on three issues:

First, should the current FAA system of registering aircraft, certificating pilots and processing major repair and alteration forms be improved, especially as it relates to assisting law enforcement agencies in the enforcement of the Nation's drug laws?

Second, should current FAA drug aviation information activities be improved to assist in drug interdiction and enforcement?

Third, are the 1984 and 1986 aviation drug statutes being enforced and are they adequate to support effective drug enforcement and prosecution?

In so doing, subtitle E attempts to address complaints voiced by law enforcement officials that the FAA's "system" for registering aircraft, certificating airmen and filing major repair and alteration forms is too lax and is, therefore, subject to abuse by drug smugglers; and the FAA does not enforce what rules it does have in these areas.

DRUG RECOGNITION EXPERT PROGRAM

Section 9004 of the bill represents an agreement reached between the House and Senate on the House-passed Drug Recognition Expert Program. The provision establishes a 3-year pilot drug recognition expert program regionally in areas where the program can best be implemented throughout the Nation. At the end of the 3-year period, the Secretary of Transportation is required to evaluate the effectiveness of the program, in deterring drugged driving, and report those findings back to Congress within 1 year after the pilot program has been completed, together with any recommendations that the Secretary may have.

This program, which is based on a procedure developed by the Los Angeles Police Department, should be designed to assist States and communities in the detection, arrest and processing of drugged drivers of both private and commercial motor vehicles through the identification and classification of the different types of drug impairment. Although the pilot program should be a comprehensive approach which includes legislation, law enforcement, prosecution, adjudication, driver licensing, public information, and community involvement, the major portion of the program will involve orientation of enforcement personnel in initial techniques to detect impairment of any type and training a sufficient number of personnel to perform drug recognition evaluations. Other parts of the program will involve training procedures, judges, and traffic enforcement administrators in methods of implementing a total drugged driving enforcement countermeasures system in the community.

In order to assure that the program retains its high quality and accuracy, instructors within the prescribed regions or areas shall be certified to administer the program. In addition, classroom space may be necessary for the training of instructors by the Los Angeles Police Department; in that case, NHTSA shall provide cost-effective space for this purpose.

DRUNK DRIVING PREVENTION

The House and Senate yesterday also agreed to include in the bill a measure that, if adopted by a State, will go a long way toward deterring drinking and driving, thereby reducing the number of fatalities and serious injuries that occur each year as a result of drunk driving.

Section 9001, the Drunk Driving Prevention Act of 1988, provides incentive grants to States that provide for administrative suspension or revocation of the drivers' licenses of those who are determined to be under the influence of alcohol by traffic enforcement officials. Due process of law has been carefully crafted into this legislation, and any individual who is served a notice of revocation or suspension will have 15 days (or 30 days if the Secretary determines that 15 days represents a hardship to the State) in which to have an administrative review of the drunk driving charge.

The measure also provides for a self-sustaining drunk driving program funded by the fines, surcharges, or equivalent nonFederal funds collected from individuals convicted of drunk driving. These funds would be returned to communities with comprehensive drunk driving programs, as determined by the Secretary. However, in the case of largely rural States, the Secretary should determine comprehensive programs to include programs that are as effective in the context of smaller, agrarian communities as those programs that are determined to be comprehensive in large, urban populations.

Additional funds will be available to States that, in addition to establishing administrative revocation statutes and self-sustaining drunk-driving programs, (1) require mandatory blood alcohol concentration testing for a driver responsible for a fatality or serious bodily injury as a result of a drunk-driving accident; (2) provide for the issuance of a driver's license to drivers under the age of 21 distinguishable from those issued to drivers over 21; (3) prohibit open alcoholic containers and consumption of alcoholic beverages in the passenger area of motor vehicles located on a public highway; and (4) provide for the suspension of the registration and the return of the license plates of a motor vehicle to the State belonging to any repeat offender or individual operating a motor vehicle whose license has been suspended or revoked because of a drunk-driving offense.

Two studies are also provided for. One would address the blood alcohol concentration level at or above which a motor vehicle operator is deemed to be driving under the influence of alcohol, and the other would look at current information exchanges regarding offenses between States, the usefulness of such information, and any effective methods for such exchange of information.

The authorization for this legislation is $125 million over 3 years. The amount available upon eligibility for a basic grant is 30 percent of the State's highway safety allocations under section 402, title 23, United States Code; the amount available to States that, in addition, prohibit open containers in motor vehicles is an additional 25 percent of said highway safety allocation; and 10 percent for compliance with each of the remaining three supplemental criteria.

TRUCK AND BUS SAFETY

The House Committee on Public Works and Transportation and the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation have reached agreement on H.R. 5321, the Truck and Bus Safety and Regulatory Reform Act of 1988. Its passage today as subtitle B of title IX of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 will substantially contribute to increased safety on our Nation's highways.

Briefly, subtitle B closes a loophole in Federal motor carrier safety regulations by eliminating the commercial zone exemption. All public, interstate truck and bus operations occurring within a zone will now be subject to these regulations. Since these zones generally include heavily congested roadways with high volumes of traffic, the application of safety regulations should greatly improve highway safety within the zones.

In the application of these regulations, subtitle B accommodates the unique circumstances surrounding the operation of foreign motor carriers in border commercial zones. The bill also incorporates several other provisions addressing safety issues including the use of biometric identifiers for the issuance of a commercial driver's license, a study of current hours-of-service regulations to determine if any relationship exists between driver fatigue and serious accidents, and an examination of the use of emergency flares. The measure before you differs only slightly from the version passed by the House on October 6 of this year, and these slight modifications have made the bill completely acceptable to the Senate. For a more detailed explanation of the legislative history of the original House-passed bill, see Report 100-1009.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

I would like to thank all the members of the Public Works Committee, and in particular Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, the distinguished ranking Republican member, Mr. MINETA, the chairman of our Subcommittee on Aviation, Mr. SHUSTER, the ranking Republican member of our Subcommittee on Surface Transportation, and Mr. GINGRICH, the ranking Republican member of the Aviation Subcommittee, for their outstanding efforts in drafting this legislation. I know that they join with me and our Senate counterparts in feeling proud that these efforts will result in improved public health and safety in our Nation, and I urge my colleagues to support the bill.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GUARINI].

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to congratulate not only the chairman of the select committee, but to the many people here who have worked together so long to bring all of this before us. I want to say that our Committee on Appropriations was glad to comply with the request of the Speaker to include a supplemental as title V of this bill and in that way, to cooperate in this effort. I take this time to just let the Members know what we have done as a Congress.

Mr. Speaker, in fiscal year 1986, 1987, and 1988 we provided a total of $9½ billion to meet what perhaps is the greatest danger to happen to this country. Not only that, but the first $1.6 bilion dollars that we appropriated as a supplemental in fiscal year 1987, we did before we had an authorization and in the process made it authorized. At that time we called on the President to use $100,000 of available funds to come up with a plan.

Mr. Speaker, I say again that we owe a lot to all the people that got together to bring this about, but it does point out that we have to have a plan of procedure because 41 different Government agencies are in on the money that we have appropriated, and it took a great effort on the part of those who authorize those programs to get together on this bill.

Again I want to thank our Committee on Appropriations and say that we are glad to cooperate, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, in fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, a total of $9.5 billion was provided by the Committee and the Congress to fight the war on drugs.

On October 1, $4,271,000,000 was made available to continue fighting the war on drugs. On July 26, the Committee reported a supplemental that included $2.6 billion to enhance and speed up the war on illegal drugs. Although time ran out on that, it did set the stage for the $2.6 billion authorized in this bill for which we provide additional appropriations of $961,400,000 (with $479,819,000 in outlays) in accordance with the recommendations of the legislative committees involved in this drug bill.

This is divided evenly between supply reduction and demand reduction.

Mr. Speaker, recently we have been seeing headlines in newspapers concerning the U.S. drug abuse problem, as follows:

"Police Officer Shot to Death in Drug Raid," (in Forestville, Maryland), The Associated Press, September 1, 1988.

"Children Tangled in Drug Net, Ingestion Cases Found Among D.C. Young," The Washington Post, September 26, 1988.

"D.C Homicides Are One Short of 1987 Total; Turner Sees No End To Drug Slaying," The Washington Post, September 7, 1988.

"D.C Drug Deaths Surge," The Washington Post, September 19, 1988.

"Basque Gunmen Kill Alleged Drug Dealer," Los Angeles Times, September 18, 1988.

"Big Drug Stash in House Where Four Killed," (in New York), The United Press International, September 17, 1988.

"Mexican Ex-Officer Guilty in Murder of DEA Agent," The Washington Post, September 23, 1988.

"Slain in Drug War," The Washington Post, September 12, 1988.

"L.A. Gang Member's Arrest Concerns Police, Extension of Drug Network in East Seen," The Washington Post, September 27, 1988.

Mr. Speaker, anyone who reads newspapers and watches television knows we have a drug problem of crisis proportions. Your Committee on Appropriations and the Congress have provided a total of $9.5 billion in fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988. On October 1, 1988, an additional $4,271,000,000 became available and this bill provides additional appropriations of $961,400,000 and $479,819,000 in outlays. But, Mr. Speaker, money alone will not solve the drug crisis. This bill also provides what has been missing before—the establishment of a cabinet rank official with authority to cut across departmental and agency jurisdictions; with authority to develop and implement a plan to direct these resources in a comprehensive manner to combat this crisis.

Every section of our country is faced with a significant threat from illegal drug use. Anyone who reads the newspapers sees reports of violence and other problems associated with the growing drug problem and begins to understand its significance. We see these problems everywhere, everyday, not only in our cities but also in our towns and rural areas throughout this country. The problem affects all age groups, but our attention is drawn most often to the impact on the youth of America—this Nation's future. Some say the problem is so severe that we are in danger of losing an entire generation. We must not let this happen.

As bad as that is, the drug problem is made even worse because of the relationship between drug abuse and the spread of AIDS. By dealing effectively with the problem of drug abuse, we can also reduce the spread of AIDS.

SERIOUSNESS OF THE PROBLEM

The Committee on Appropriations is extremely concerned about the horrendous situation facing this Nation because of illegal drugs. Because of the urgent need for an immediate coordinated Federal effort to combat the war on drugs, the committee directed its surveys and investigations staff to conduct an investigation which would draw together the various facts regarding the drug problem in America. That investigation has been completed and a report prepared that describes how efforts taken thus far, as well intended and as aggressive as they have been, have not solved the problem.

NEED FOR CHANGE

The committee recognizes that numerous organizations are devoting financial resources to the problem and that hardworking people are involved in excellent efforts to combat the problem. But the surveys and investigations staff report clearly shows that simply not enough has been done in a coordinated, effective manner.

Federal funding for the war on drugs has consistently favored efforts designed to reduce the supply of drugs in America. Law enforcement agencies are quick to cite increases in the numbers of drug crops destroyed, investigations conducted, arrests made, convictions obtained, as well as narcotics and assets seized. But the fact remains that the supply of illegal drugs in the United States has not changed and those drugs will continue to be available until (1) the Nation's resources are mobilized in a coherent fashion to address the problem, (2) suppliers see a real risk of doing business in the United States, and (3) we reduce the demand for drugs in this country.

NEED FOR COORDINATED PLAN

The problem is not simply lack of money or organizations dealing with the problem. Increased funding has been appropriated to 41 Federal departments and agencies and their respective components since fiscal year 1980 when just under $1 billion was available. In fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, the committee and Congress provided a total of over $9.5 billion in funding Governmentwide to address the drug problem.

But this is war, and to fight a war effectively, we must have an overall plan which includes organizing the available programs and resources to meet an overall goal. The departments and agencies responsible for those multiple programs have done as well as they can, but the overlapping Federal, State, and local jurisdictions need to effectively coordinate activities to reduce the supply of, and the demand for, drugs in this country.

With input from the various departments and agencies, the National Drug Policy Board has developed nine strategy implementation plans in an effort to coordinate Federal drug efforts. However, the activities detailed in the Board's nine implementation plans essentially do not: (1) identify the financial or personnel resources to carry out the plans; (2) set priorities for the activities in terms of significance or importance so that available resources can be better allocated among various activities; or (3) establish timeframes for accomplishments of the plans.

Without such a plan, we can't know how best to spend our limited resources and interrelate the multiple programs and activities that must work in tandem to solve the problem.

NEED FOR A COORDINATOR WITH AUTHORITY

An overall coordinator is necessary to deal with this national emergency. The investigative staff report describes how there is no single person or organization to insure that a coherent, coordinated Federal plan is developed and carried out. The National Drug Policy Board has developed its nine implementation plans, but it does not have the authority to cut across jurisdictional lines to ensure that these, or any other, plans are carried out.

As an example of the problem, the September 16th Washington Post reported continued jurisdictional problems and bickering between the Customs Service, the DEA, and other agencies involved in the war on drugs. There presently is no central authority with the ability to stop this infighting. Even the Appropriations Committee, the only House committee that has annual responsibility for and jurisdiction in funding for the Federal Drug Program, lacks complete visibility over the total Federal program. Our oversight is hampered because drug funding is not always identified in annual budget requests; drug program activities are often collateral to agencies' missions. As a result, drug program funding is often only an estimate, based on cost allocations developed through less than precise methods.

Without an overall plan and coordinator to make sure the plan is carried out, we have no guarantee that all the programs that can contribute to an agreed upon national drug policy are in place and working together to best satisfy that policy goal. For example, increases in law enforcement funding for the FBI, DEA, and the Customs Service have resulted in greater numbers of cases for prosecution. Yet, we have shortages of U.S. attorneys to prosecute those cases and significant shortages of prison space to house those convicted. As a short-term fix, we see the recent proposal to fine those guilty of possession without criminal prosecution.

This amendment provides $3,500,000 to fully fund the Office of National Drug Control Policy. The purpose of this office and its Cabinet level director is to: First, establish policies, objectives, and priorities for the National Drug Control Program; second, annually promulgate a strategy for the National Drug Control Program; third, coordinate and oversee the implementation by National Drug Control Program agencies of the policies, objectives, and priorities established under the strategy; fourth, make such recommendations to the President as the Director determines are appropriate to implement the policies, priorities, and objectives; and fifth, consult with and assist State and local governments respecting their relations with the National Drug Control Program agencies.

NEED FOR A RISK TO BE SEEN BY DRUG SUPPLIERS

Without adequate resources to prosecute drug suppliers and to imprison those that could be convicted, the suppliers are likely to view arrests and fines as minor inconveniences and a reasonable cost of doing business. We have to ensure that drug trafficking is not a profitable enterprise in the United States as it is in certain Latin American countries such as Peru where 30 percent of its foreign exchange, or $700 million each year, is attributed to drug trafficking. To do this, among other things, we must take firm and aggressive steps to seize the assets, particularly the massive amounts of laundered cash that these drug lords have accumulated through their illegal activities. Moreover, we have to provide a deterrent to those suppliers doing business in this country by making sure we can carry out the complete law enforcement process.

NEED TO REDUCE THE DEMAND FOR DRUGS

Fining persons found guilty of possession could act as a deterrent for users or drugs in the United States. Similar restrictions such as denial of drivers licenses, employment, and Federal loans could also be effective deterrents. Drug testing has proved very effective in DOD. In a 1980 survey, 27 percent of the military respondents indicated that they had used drugs within the last month. But only 1.8 percent tested positive for drug use in fiscal year 1987. As we effectively reduce the demand for drugs in this country, we also eliminate the market.

It is vital that we deter Americans from ever using drugs in the first place through education and other prevention efforts. But we must also find some way to remove drug abusers and addicts from their present environment for their own rehabilitation and for the protection of all our citizens. Yet three out of four abusers and addicts who seek treatment face waiting lists of 4 to 8 weeks. Attempts to increase the number of publicly funded treatment programs face obstacles such as uncertainty over Federal funding levels, lack of staff, zoning restrictions, and strong community resistance.

It is time for a change in our approach to the drug problem. What we have been doing has not reduced the supply of, or demand for, illegal drugs in this country. The committee, as it has in the past, is prepared to take the steps necessary to implement any appropriate changes.

ALLOCATION OF FUNDS IN TITLE 8

Mr. Speaker, at this point, I want to take the time to spell out, agency by agency and account by account, the funds provided in this title and the purposes for which they are provided. This is to have the same effect as a committee report or a statement of the managers.

TITLE X

This title was approved by the Committee on Appropriations on October 20, 1988, to add to the existing funding of $4.3 billion appropriated in the 13 regular appropriations measures signed into law by the beginning of the 1989 fiscal year on October 1, 1988.

This title provides funding of $961,400,000 in budget authority and $479,819,000 in outlays to fund the various authorizations included in this measure. Specifically, this title provides funding as follows:

CHAPTER I—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

LEGAL ACTIVITIES

GENERAL LEGAL ACTIVITIES

The amendment provides an appropriation of $1,800,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriation to date of $242,994,000 for general legal activities.

The amendment provides $800,000 to INTERPOL—U.S. National Central Bureau to improve drug-related intelligence operations by increasing full-time permanent personnel levels by 23 positions for the purpose of maintaining 24-hour operations, and upgrading telecommunications equipment.

The amendment also provides $1,000,000 for salaries and expenses of field attorneys and related support staff attached to the Criminal Division's Organized Crime and Racketeering Strike Force Offices. This funding is to be used for asset forfeiture litigation and related civil enforcement actions. The additional funds will be used to increase the number of field attorneys and related support staff over levels on board as of September 30, 1988.

U.S. ATTORNEYS

The amendment provides an appropriation of $39,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $391,212,000 for the activities of U.S. attorneys. Of the additional $39,000,000 provided, $22,000,000 is earmarked in the bill for asset seizure and forfeiture activities which are expected to generate an additional $84,000,000 in receipts in the assets forfeiture fund.

The total amount provided shall be used to expand narcotics and other Federal law enforcement activities by increasing the number of assistant U.S. attorneys by 300 over the personnel level employed as of September 30, 1988, as well as related support staff.

ASSETS FORFEITURE FUND

The amendment provides for a transfer of $30,000,000 from the assets forfeiture fund to "Salaries and expenses, United States Attorneys". This amount is available for transfer from the fund due to an estimated increase of $84,000,000 in new receipts to be derived as a result of additional U.S. attorney asset forfeiture litigation and related civil enforcement actions. The $30,000,000 is transferred to the U.S. attorneys to further expand narcotics and other Federal law enforcement activities.

U.S. MARSHALS SERVICE

The amendment provides an appropriation of $16,400,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $190,000,000 for the U.S. Marshals Service. The amounts provided include additional funds for: asset seizure and forfeiture activities; criminal justice support activities, including prisoner protection and transportation; protection of the Federal judiciary and court facilities resulting from increased drug-related trials; and increased workloads of the Marshals Service Witness Security Program.

SUPPORT OF U.S. PRISONERS

The amendment provides an appropriation of $16,400,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $93,700,000 for Support of U.S. Prisons. The funds provided include an amount not to exceed $4,100,000 to be available under the Cooperative Agreement Program for the purpose of renovating, constructing, and equipping State and local correctional facilities. The remaining resources made available herein shall be used to cover the costs of care and housing of Federal prisoners in contract detention facilities.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

The amendment provides an appropriation of $15,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $1,424,000 for the FBI. The funds provided include resources for the FBI's National Drug Strategy including special agent support positions, equipment, and for contract linguists for various translation purposes. In addition, funds are provided to initiate an artificial intelligence system which will provide law enforcement officials a much-needed enhancememt in their Organized Crime Drug Enforcement activities.

DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION

The amendment provides an appropriation of $30,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $505,000,000 for the DEA. The amendment provides funds to increase DEA operations against criminals involved in youth gang-related crime, for additional anaylsts and equipment to enhance the El Paso Intelligence Center [EPIC], for special agent foreign language training, for support for the United States-Bahamas Drug Interdiction Task Force, and for items such as asset removal teams, laboratory equipment and support personnel, aircraft, pilots and airwing equipment and support personnel, additional equipment and support personnel for EPIC, radio technicians, office automation equipment, personnel for asset forefeiture processing, and other drug-related activities.

The amendment provides $2,500,000 for the establishment of a joint DEA-EPA task force to develop and publish guidelines for cleanup of clandestine drug laboratories, and for the disposal of the toxic contents thereof. This program is authorized in the Omnibus Anti-Substance Abuse Act of 1988.

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE

The amendment provides an appropriation of $26,200,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $800,000,000 for the INS. The amendment provides funds to increase the number of inspectors and related equipment, to increase the commitment of INS personnel to the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces [OCDETF], and for special agent foreign language training.

The amendment provides $16,400,000 for the Border Patrol for additional agents and support personnel, and procurement of drug interdiction-related equipment.

The amendment also provides $7,000,000 for the first year costs of development and implementation of a machine-readable visa security program in conjunction with the State Department as authorized by the Omnibus Anti-Substance Abuse Act of 1988. This program, when fully implemented, should significantly enhance Federal drug law enforcement against international drug smuggling into the United States and other Federal law enforcement efforts. These funds would be used for system design, software development and support, standard ADPE and nonstandard hardware, pilot projects, analysis and evaluation, training, travel, supplies, site preparation, and installation at border crossings into the United States.

FEDERAL PRISON SYSTEM

The amendment provides an appropriation of $95,600,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $203,693,000 for Federal prison buildings and facilities. The amendment provides funds for renovations and new construction projects necessary to expand prison capacity to handle the increased number of drug offenders.

OFFICE OF JUSTICE PROGRAMS

JUSTICE ASSISTANCE

The amendment provides an appropriation of $90,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $229,075,000 for Justice Assistance programs.

The amendment provides $80,000,000 for the Drug Control and System Improvement Grant Program to assist States and units of local governments in carrying out specific programs which offer a high probability of improving the functioning of the criminal justice system, with special emphasis on a nationwide and multilevel drug control strategy by developing programs and projects to assist multijurisdictional and multi-State organizations in the drug control problem and to support national drug control priorities.

The amendment provides up to $10,000,000 for the Public Safety Officers Benefits Program to fund the increased level of death benefits payable to the families of public safety officers who have died in the line of duty.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

ADMINISTRATION OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The amendment provides an appropriation of $5,000,000 for the Department of State for the first year costs of development and implementation of a machine-readable visa security program authorized by the Omnibus Anti-Substance Abuse Act of 1988. This program, when fully implemented, should significantly enhance Federal drug law enforcement against international drug smuggling into the United States and other Federal law enforcement efforts. These funds would be used for system design, software development and support, standard ADPE and nonstandard hardware, pilot projects, analysis and evaluation, training, travel, supplies, site preparation, and installation at several major U.S. missions abroad.

EMERGENCIES IN THE DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR SERVICE

The amendment provides authority to use funds previously appropriated in Public Law 99-88 for rewards for information concerning terrorist acts, for the additional purpose of paying rewards for information concerning certain narcotics-related offenses. The Department of State has notified the Committee on Appropriations that funds for rewards for information on narcotics-related offenses are needed at the present time. None of the funds appropriated in Public Law 99-88 for rewards for information for terrorism offenses has been obligated to date.

THE JUDICIARY

COURTS OF APPEALS, DISTRICT COURTS, AND OTHER JUDICIAL SERVICES

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The amendment provides an appropriation of $35,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $1,135,000,000. The amendment provides funds for additional deputy clerk positions and additional probation and pretrial services personnel for the judiciary's drug-related caseload, resources for the installation of drug-testing equipment, and for increased drug aftercare treatment services.

DEFENDER SERVICES

The amendment provides an appropriation of $15,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $95,100,000. The amendment provides for the increased costs associated with Federal public defender and community defender organizations, as well as private attorneys appointed pursuant to the Criminal Justice Act of 1964, as amended. Funds also have been included to provide for the establishment of five additional death penalty habeas corpus resource centers in the States of California, Florida, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Oklahoma.

FEES OF JURORS AND COMMISSIONERS

The amendment provides an appropriation of $1,000,000 over fiscal year 1989 appropriations to date of $43,135,000. The amendment provides funds to accommodate the grand and petit juror workload resulting from increased drug enforcement activities.

CHAPTER II

SUBCOMMITTEE ON LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES AND EDUCATION AND RELATED AGENCIES

The agreement includes new appropriations of $428,000,000 for programs and activities under the jurisdiction of the Subcommittee on the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education, and Related Agencies. The allocation of these funds is as follows:

Department of Labor:
Employee assistance programs	$2,000,000
Department of Health and Human Services:
Addiction treatment grants (categorical funding to reduce waiting times and treatment backlog)	75,000,000
Expanded Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Block Grant (new funding to be targeted to substance abuse)	125,000,000
Office of Substance Abuse Prevention (regular grants)	15,000,000
Community Prevention Grants	15,000,000
Drug Abuse Treatment Demonstration	10,000,000
Drug Abuse research, evaluations and data collection	30,000,000
(Development of new pharmacologic agents)	(10,000,000)
Substance abuse training of health personnel	3,000,000
Alcoholism and alcohol abuse research	10,000,000
Subtotal, Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health	283,000,000
National Youth Sports Programs	3,000,000
Runaway youth activities	15,000,000
Youth gang substance abuse prevention initiative	15,000,000
Total, Department of Health and Human Services	316,000,000
Department of Education:
Drug Free Schools Grants	101,000,000
(Set aside for Federal administration)	(500,000)
(Set aside for development of early childhood education materials)	(1,000,000)
Teacher training in substance abuse prevention	7,000,000
Subtotal, Education	108,000,000
Action	2,000,000
Total, Chapter II	428,000,000

In some cases, these amounts are to expand existing programs and in other cases they are to be used to initiate brand new activities. In either case, it is the intention that all funds be spent under the terms and conditions of the authorization sections of this act.

CHAPTER III—DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE—FOOD AND NUTRITION SERVICE

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENTAL FOOD PROGRAM FOR WOMEN, INFANTS AND CHILDREN [WIC]

The agreement recommends that up to $10,000,000 from within funds available to the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children [WIC] be used for drug abuse education for WIC participants. These funds may be used to study appropriate methods to carry out a drug abuse education program and to prepare and distribute drug abuse education material.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES—FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The agreement includes $5,000,000 for the Food and Drug Administration to assure the safety and effectiveness of approved drugs and enforcement activities related to detection and prevention of drug abuse. Activities include, but are not limited to, inspection and approval of methadone clinics and other drug abuse problems.

CHAPTER IV—DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION, COAST GUARD

The bill contains $116,000,000 in additional funds to expand Coast Guard drug interdiction activities. This includes $16,000,000 for "Operating expenses" and $100,000,000 for "Acquisition, construction, and improvements." The bill stipulates that the funds made available for operating expenses shall be used only to increase drug interdiction patrols and related activities above the level already programmed for fiscal year 1989 with funds previously appropriated.

The additional funds appropriated for acquisition, construction, and improvements are to be distributed as follows:

Medium range recovery helicopters	$52,000,000
APS-125/APS-138 radar installation	17,000,000
Cutter renovation and modernization	31,000,000

CHAPTER V—DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO AND FIREARMS

This amendment provides $7,000,000 in additional funding for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to be used to reduce the criminal use of firearms and to assist other Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies in reducing crime and violence by effective law enforcement of the Federal firearms laws. The increased use of sophisticated and illegal firearms in drug trafficking is both well known and well documented and has resulted in a significant increase in danger to both the law enforcement community and the public at large.

The Bureau is directed to use these additional resources in the enforcement of firearms laws and to the extent possible to specifically target these resources to those dangerous criminals who are using weapons in illegal drug trafficking. The Bureau is directed to report to the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate on the use of these funds.

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE

This amendment provides $15,500,000—$8,500,000 for salaries and expenses and $7,000,000 for equipment for the Air Interdiction Program—in additional funding for the Customs Service to be used to combat the illegal importation of drugs into this country. The Customs Service is the first line of defense against the smuggling of illegal narcotics into the United States. The funds are to be used in a coordinated and concentrated effort to interdict illegal narcotics at the borders and to prevent their entry into the country.

The Customs Service is directed to report to the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate on specifically what actions have been taken with regard to this appropriation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

OFFICE OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL POLICY

This amendment provides $3,500,000 to fully fund the Office of National Drug Control Policy. The purpose of this office and its cabinet level director is to—

(1) establish policies, objectives, and priorities for the National Drug Control Program;

(2) annually promulgate a strategy for the National Drug Control Program;

(3) coordinate and oversea the implementation by National Drug Control Program agencies of the policies, objectives, and priorities established under the strategy;

(4) make such recommendations to the President as the Director determines are appropriate to implement the policies, priorities, and objectives; and

(5) consult with and assist State and local governments respecting their relations with the National Drug Control Program agencies.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] who has done a phenomenal job on this bill. I also congratulate the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] who did yeoman's work for many years on this, but, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank somebody who shepherded this bill from the beginning, who made sure that it was capable of being conferenced in an unusual way with the body on the other side, an unusual body, and that is the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY], the majority leader, without whose help, I might add, this bill would not be a reality tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I also commend the Republicans who worked so hard, and I compliment our Speaker for his imprimatur.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time on our side, and I thank our Speaker, and the minority leader, as well as our majority leader, and all of the chairmen.

□ 0045

Mr. Speaker, we saw a very unusual legislative procedure for this Omnibus bill, and fortunately, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] were up to it and had the cooperation of the expertise of the chairman and the subcommittee chairman working not as Democrats and Republicans, but as people who wanted to go home and tell the American people that we were aware of the crisis and we were prepared to do something about it.

As has been pointed out by the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee, we have merely set out a legislative plan and it is up to us to come back next year and actually do the work to implement it and make certain that it works, but the leadership deserves all of the credit by finding this way to present the bill to the House and to the American people.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I know the hour is late. Nobody is going to be able to catch their plane yet tonight. We are all going to have to be there in the morning.

The reasons I say so, we have come to the conclusion of one of the most significant pieces of legislation that we have adopted in this Congress. It has been a rather Herculean effort.

The Speaker just gave us a charge earlier on to work in a bipartisan way, led by the distinguished majority leader helping to put the committee together on your side and it is my role and responsibility on this side.

It has been an outstanding chore. The majority leader gave credit to those staff people who have worked so hard, and rightly so. Maybe it is the prejudice of the distinguished majority leader and the minority leader who once served as staff people around here to have that extraordinary respect for those who are our backup around here and who really make us what we are on many occasions. So I want to doff my hat, too, to all those who worked so tirelessly on this piece of legislation.

I think we would look good as an institution if when we conclude here tonight to give attention to those who have made a considerable contribution to this piece of legislation, to at least give them the courtesy of a few moments of expressing the thoughts that are on their minds with respect to what we have accomplished.

Mr. Speaker, at this juncture I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM] who did an outstanding job in the field of the Judiciary on so many of the issues that were so contentious, several of which probably would not have been done, we probably could not have resolved, with the amicable kind of resolution that we are having here tonight without some contentious rollcall vote or two.

I want to pay my personal respects to the gentleman from Florida for the manner in which he has acquitted himself. We certainly owe him a debt of gratitude, and I am happy to yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I will not take the 4 minutes, but I am very much interested in saying a couple words about this bill that we put our hearts and souls into for a long time, and a lot of people in this room have tonight. I think it is important for us to remember all the staff that has been mentioned. I, like the gentleman from New Jersey a few minutes ago, are especially proud of the staff of the Subcommittee on Crime; but beyond thanking staff members, I want to thank Members generally.

I cannot remember in my time here in these 8 years a bill that has had more input from more different human being Members of this body than this one has. This is a fine product because of that; but no one bill, no one piece of legislation is going to win the war on drugs, not this bill, not the one we passed in 1986, and probably not some other legislation we have have to pass a couple years from now.

In fact is that we have to have a community effort, the American people, the Congress, the law enforcement people, everyone. That is why this bill is so comprehensive. It addresses eradication. It addresses interdiction. It addresses local and Federal law enforcement. It addresses the supply and the demand side. It addresses education. It addresses rehabilitation and, yes, it addresses user accountability. I would like to say that I am especially proud of those Members who worked so hard to make this concept of deterrence in the area of user accountability to exist, to be real, and to live in this legislation.

It is not perfect. We will probably have to come back and refine it, but we are sending a message in this bill for this first time to those who would be users and those who are users, that if they chose to go this path, yes, they can get rehabilitation; no, they should not do it, but if they chose to go anyway, there will be a price to pay that will be higher than they want to pay. There are civil fines in this legislation.

There is a provision to remove eligibility for certain Federal benefits if they cross that threshold, not the one I particularly would prefer, but the compromise decision that was made can be affected and we now for the first time have that deterrence.

Now, there is something else in this bill. There are quite a number of other things. I am going to be very brief. I want to mention some other things, though. I think it is very important that we know what is in this legislation.

No. 1 on the list is the question of the issue of what we do with regard to identifying felons who are about to purchase handguns. This legislation has the immediate and accurate identification system requirement, requiring the Attorney General to develop and begin implementation of that system, a very good provision.

It also has in it an enormously productive and new bill on child pornography and obscenity. A lot of work went into that.

My hat is particularly off to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] for all the extra effort that went into reaching a compromise on that in the last 24 hours.

This is a comprehensive bill with a lot of other features, but it misses the exclusionary rule we talked about earlier. It does not have that in there. It ought to have that in there.

There are many things that need to be put in that a lot of people did not get in, but it is one of the finest products that has ever been produced by this body or the other body ever, and I am proud of it.

I am not going to say any more about it, except to say thank you, let us pass it and let us get on with winning the war against drugs.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER].

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. The jurisdiction of this bill spans almost every committee, and it represents yet another bipartisan achievement of the 100th Congress on an issue the American public has identified as being of primary importance to them. I think we can be proud of our accomplishment.

The part of the bill in the jurisdiction of the Ways and Means Committee focuses primarily on the authorization of appropriations for the Customs Service, especially to significantly expand the resources of customs for drug interdiction and enforcement. This will better enable our frontline agency to successfully meet the challenge of the infiltration of drugs at our borders.

However, there is another provision in this bill that is especially important to me and to the Port of Houston. This provision would direct the Secretary of Treasury to establish procedures that would insure uniformity of Customs classification and inspection decisions at all ports. These new procedures must also allow importers and port authorities to petition for review of any inconsistent decisions and for Customs to resolve the inconsistency.

This provision is important to ports because it reduces, and hopefully soon will eliminate, the practice of port shopping by importers who find that tariff levels on the same or similar merchandise are different at different ports. Some ports therefore lose business to other ports as importers shop for the best tariff and inspection treatment. Customs must do a better job of insuring uniformity at all ports and of resolving individual problems of inconsistent rulings on a timely basis.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that H.R. 5210 provides a strong and effective response by Congress to the scourge of drug use and abuse in this country. I urge my colleagues to wholeheartedly support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, included in the drug bill is a provision requiring the Secretary of Treasury—Customs—to draft and implement regulations intended to provide greater uniformity of decisions between ports. It is expected that such regulations would allow interested parties, including port authorities, to petition the Secretary of Treasury to obtain such uniformity in an expedited and timely fashion. The proponents of this legislation intend that, absent some unforeseen circumstances or truly complex petition, Customs should be able to implement regulations which provide that these petitions be decided within a reasonably short time, such as 45 days. It also should be possible to fashion a mechanism that ensures that the time deadline for achieving uniformity is strictly observed by Congress.

Mr. GUARINI. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, the statement of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Archer] is correct. This provision gives Customs the opportunity to resolve the uniformity problem administratively. However, the Ways and Means Finance Committees will be watching the implementation process closely to ensure, among other things, that the new petition process be completed in an expedited and timely fashion. I agree that about 45 days appears to be a reasonable time period.

Mr. ARCHER. The provision also provides that Customs shall report to the Committees on Finance and Ways and Means by September 1, 1989 regarding the effectiveness of the proposed regulations. It is our hope that both committees would hold hearings on the uniformity issue and the proposed regulations, as well as other Customs' procedural reform issues, to determine whether further legislation is necessary to ensure uniformity at all ports. If the regulations are not adequate, would the committee be willing to consider legislation to address the uniformity problem?

Mr. GUARINI. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, yes, it is our intent to hold hearings to look at the uniformity problem and the proposed Customs regulations as soon as possible next year to determine whether additional legislative or administrative action may be required to ensure that uniformity of Customs' activity at all ports is achieved. If further legislation is required, the committee will certainly proceed expeditiously.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I rise just to say, as the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Hughes] has said, 85 percent of the contentious issues were referred to our committee. I could not be more proud of Members on both sides of the aisle of our committee for the way they have handled and brought this bill to the floor tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5210 not only for its many positive features in respect to combating America's drug problem but also for its treatment of the victims of our Nation's crime.

Concern for America's crime vicitms has been a consistent priority of mine, dating from long before the enactment of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 and the Victim Witness Protection Act of 1982—both of which I sought and actively supported.

Among its provisions, H.R. 5210 reauthorizes the Victims of Crime Act of 1984, the funding mechanism of which had expired on October 1 of this year.

Beyond merely renewing the funding for this worthy program, H.R. 5210 makes significant improvements to the act which will redound to the benefit not only of crime victims but also society at large.

First, H.R. 5210 reauthorizes the act for 6 years. Second, H.R. 5210 will raise the ceiling which has heretofore been placed over the fund so as to permit more money for victims. The act itself established a crime victims fund made up primarily of Federal criminal fines, forfeited appearance and bail bonds and forfeited collateral. The current ceiling on the fund provides that receipts in excess of $110,000 shall return to the general fund of the Treasury. H.R. 5210 will raise that level to $125 million for the first 3 years of the reauthorization and to $150 million for the second 3 years.

Receipts in excess of $110 million shall be divided in two equal 47.5 percent portions for grants to States for compensation and assistance. The remainder will be devoted to Federal crime victims.

The current Victims of Crime Act requires that States give priority in its assistance grants to programs for victims of sexual assault, spousal abuse, or child abuse. While these priorities are and continue to be necessary, H.R. 5210 provides that States must certify that funds will be made available for previously "underserved" victims. This is intended to promote the broadest effort possible to assist victims of violent crime and to ensure that no category of victim is ignored. The Director of the Office for Victims of Crime is to promulgate guidelines to implement this requirement after consultation with a broad spectrum of public officials and private representatives so as to provide flexibility to the States in determining the populations of crime victims that may be underserved.

There are many ways in which a State may ensure that its previously underserved victims populations are considered. It might be useful here to reference guidelines that currently are in effect from the Office for Victims of Crime concerning victims assistance grants for priority categories. For example, under the guidelines, a State may allocate at least 10 percent of the State's VOCA victims assistance grant to each of the three priority categories. Or a State may develop criteria for ensuring that each priority category receives grants commensurate with the needs of that category. Or a State may require that every subprogram receiving grant money must include as a principal mission or component services to one of the priority categories. Looking at these guidelines may be useful in deciding how a State should treat its underserved victims without requiring any particular approach.

I wish to highlight, also, the fact that H.R. 5210 contains a provision which I introduced as separate legislation earlier in the Congress (H.R.

2768). This would require that in order for a State to qualify for Federal victim compensation grants, it must compensate its own citizens who become victims of crime in a State which does not have a qualifying program. As I indicated when I introduced that bill, there are only a few States which do not have victim compensation programs but they present a gap which should be closed for as many innocent victims of crime as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation not only for what it will do against drugs, but also for what it will do for victims of crime.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, this bill represents a boldfaced announcement by the Representatives of the U.S. Congress to all the world to hear, that if the war on drugs is going to be fought on our turf, it is going to be fought under our rules, the rules we established through this legislation.

The death penalty will be imposed on drug dealers who would kill in the furtherance of their enterprise and an enhancement of the penalties across the board on law enforcement, this will give the proper warnings to the underworld.

I, too, want to extend my personal thanks to Ray Smietanka of my staff and Paul McNulty of the staff of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCOLLUM], and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SHAW], the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI], and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

And even those who are jeering, I thank you, too, because the moment has come for the first giant step in the war on drugs.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT].

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5210, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988.

It is obvious to all of us that illegal drugs are a growing threat to our society and that we need to strengthen our efforts to stem the tide of these drugs flowing across our borders.

Certainly, our awareness of the problem has been heightened by the tough initiatives undertaken by the drug task force headed by Vice President GEORGE BUSH, along with the ongoing hard work and commitment of our law enforcement officers who must deal on a daily basis with the problem.

With this legislation, we expect to build on those efforts that have already been made. The Vice President, in all of his public and private statements, continues to view the drug battle as one of his highest priorities.

We have learned from our experiences in dealing with the relentless and ruthless drug lords that there are loopholes in the system and that these people are more than savvy enough to take full advantage of them.

Subtitle E of title VII, drafted by the Public Works and Transportation Committee, specifically addresses the growing problem of using general aviation aircraft in illicit drug transportation. It reflects conclusions reached following many months of intensive investigation by our committee into this issue.

From start to finish, it was conducted on a strong bipartisan basis and in a very thorough manner.

At the conclusion of the investigation, our committee held a most enlightening hearing on our findings, during which we learned just how effective drug smugglers have been in transporting their illegal cargo by air.

I am pleased to be able to report to the House that the provisions in the bill before us today relating to aviation drug smuggling are identical, with two minor exceptions, to the provisions in title VIII of H.R. 5210 as it passed the House and in H.R. 4844 as it passed the House on October 6, 1988. For this reason, House Report 100-891 should be consulted for the legislative history of these provisions. The only two changes in the bill are relatively minor.

First, the House agreed to the Senate request to drop the requirement that budget requests of the aircraft and airmen registry and the FAA be transmitted concurrently to the appropriate House and Senate authorizing committees. This information can be gathered through the normal congressional oversight process.

The second change involved the provision exempting the information collection requirements of this bill relating to aircraft and airman registry from the Paperwork Reduction Act.

This provision was modified to clarify that any information collection activities would be subject to the normal OMB review and approval procedures. The exemption from the Paperwork Reduction Act has been limited to the annual information collection budget goals. What this means is that neither FAA nor any other agency or office of the DOT will in any way be required by OMB to reduce any other information collection activities in order to offset the additional information collected pursuant to the aviation drug smuggling provisions of this drug bill.

This increase in collection activities could be significant and it is the intent of Congress that OMB not use these increases to leverage FAA or DOT to reduce or modify any other information collection activities.

Essentially, subtitle E of title VII will tighten the Federal Aviation Administration's procedures governing aircraft registration, pilot certification, and major repairs and alterations.

It is imperative that we do this if we are to put an end to a variety of abuses, including the registration of aircraft to fictitious persons, the use of phony addresses and the use of illegal tail numbers on aircraft.

Subtitle E of title VII also adds criminal penalties, increases civil penalties, and authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to impose very reasonable user charges to finance the cost of the proposed changes in the system.

What we are not doing in this measure is succumbing to the temptation to micromanage the program. Perhaps the greatest strength of this legislation is the important balance it strikes between solving this very serious aviation drug trafficking problem and giving the executive branch enough discretion to come up with specific solutions to the problems we have targeted.

Finally, I think it is important to note that what is being proposed in no way minimizes the primary safety role of the FAA.

We should also recognize that the approach we are taking to improve the aircraft registration system will not only help law enforcement but also all users of the system.

I would also like to mention that title IX of the bill contains several important highway safety and motor carrier safety provisions. Subtitle A of title IX contains tough provisions on drunk driving. These provisions are urgently needed given the drunk driving epidemic on our Nation's highways—an epidemic that kills someone every 23 minutes.

Included in these drunk driving provisions in funding for States which establish a driver's suspension of revocation system. At a minimum, States are expected to suspend the licenses of first time offenders for a period of not less than 90 days and for second time offenders for not less than 1 year. A driver charged with multiple reoccurrences of the offense would risk revocation of the license.

One of the issues the members dealt with was whether the revocation should be absolute or whether the driving privilege should be conditional to allow the convicted offender to drive from his house to his place of employment and return. We are aware that the National Highway Traffic Safety Administratrion has recently supported a 30-day absolute or hard suspension with a 6-month to 1-year conditional driving privilege for such activities as driving to and from work if a State certified ignition interlock device which analyzes the blood alcohol content is used.

For repeat offenders, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration recommends a 1-year suspension with a 2-year probationary period if an interlock device is utilized. These ignition interlock devices require the driver to breathe into a breath analyzer and register an acceptable blood alcohol content prior to being able to start the car. This rest is a unique breath pulse identifier which would defeat anyone trying to start the vehicle for the owner if that person attempted to circumvent the system.

I believe this is a good policy and would greatly increase our ability to combat repeat offenders. I urge the Secretary in promulgating regulations to favorably consider this proposal to restrict the offender's ability to obtain driving privileges after suspension only in certain instances where interlock devices are used.

Subtitle B of title IX contains provisions dealing with truck and bus safety. Truck and bus safety has been an issue of ongoing concern not only to the Public Works and Transportation Committee but to the entire country. 5,000 Americans are killed in heavy truck and bus accidents each year. The bill before us addresses some motor carrier safety problems that contribute to this toll and will result in increased safety for all highway users.

The repeal of the commercial zone exemption, use of on-board recorders, and use of biometric identifier with the commerical drivers license are just a few of the valuable safety provisions addressed in this bill.

It should be noted that due to the lack of conference report on this bill, the House report language accompanying H.R. 5321 will serve as valid legislative history. The provisions of H.R. 5321 served as the basis for the provisions contained in subtitle B.

In particular, I would like to highlight the House report expressing the committee's interest in a review of hours-of-service regulations as they pertain to construction and seasonal operations. The committee is very interested in ensuring that the department investigate this matter.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the chairman of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON], for his leadership on this bill and especially for his hard work on the drug recognition expert training program.

Let me also congratulate the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA], the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH], and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SHUSTER], for their fine work on the bill. I would also like to pay a special tribute to the gentleman form Florida [Mr. SHAW], a former member of the Public Works Committee, for his outstanding work on the drug testing provision.

Even though the provision was not included in the final product, his advocacy role on this issue was instrumental in spurring the Department of Transportation to move forward with a drug testing program. One of the major reasons that the provision was dropped was because DOT is about to issue regulations requiring testing for all modes of transportation. Many of us felt that the Department could do a much better job than Congress could do in sorting out the complexities of establishing a drug testing program.

In addition, we were afraid that if we legislated in the area we might delay the issuance of DOT's rules which we understand are to be issued shortly. Secretary Burnley is to be congratulated for using his existing statutory authority to make our transportion systems drug free.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG].

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5210 and urge its adoption.

This bill is the result of tremendous effort by nearly every committee in the House and I want to commend the Members for their long effort to make our Nation drug-free. At the same time, I want to bring particular attention to certain excessive efforts by those involved in the drug war that we are correcting in this bill.

This bill contains a provision reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries that gives a defense to innocent owners of vessels seized for drug violations. Our committee was not being soft on drugs; but neither were we ignoring the basic rights that every American is guaranteed by the Constitution. I am satisfied that the bill we are passing tonight will prevent innocent owners of fishing vessels from being persecuted by well-meaning, but over-excited, enforcement agents.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to explain three sections of this bill that concern forfeiture proceedings. Section 6079 of this bill requires the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to prescribe joint regulations to provide an expedited administrative forfeiture proceeding for certain property seized by Federal authorities for violations of the drug laws involving possession of personal use quantities. Owners of property seized under section 511(a) (4), (6), and (7) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(A)(4), (6) and (7)); section 596 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1595a(a)); and section 2 of the act of August 9, 1939 (53 Stat. 1291; 49 U.S.C. App. 782) may petition the Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury for release of the property. The procedure must minimize the adverse impact upon owners of conveyances caused by prolonged detention. The procedure must provide for a final administrative determination within 21 days of seizure of the property, or provide a procedure by which a property owner may obtain release of the property pending a final determination.

Under the procedure provided in this section, the agency official making a final determination in the forfeithure proceeding shall immediately return the property to the owner or interested party if the owner establishes a valid, good faith interest in the seized property; that the owner did not know of or consent to the violation; that the owner had no knowledge or reason to believe that the owner's property was or would be used in a drug violation. If the owner had or should have had knowledge or reason to believe that the property was being or would be used in a violation, the owner must establish that the owner did what reasonably could be expected to prevent the violation. Paragraph (D) of this subsection requires that the property owner act in a normal, customary manner to ascertain how the property will be used in order to have the property returned under this subsection.

To establish that the owner did what reasonably could be expected to prevent the violation, an owner need only show that he acted reasonably under the circumstances. The phrase "what reasonably could be expected" does not require that the owner take any type of "step" or "precaution" established by regulation. In fact, setting up a checklist of steps to be taken only would serve as a roadmap to evade the law. Recently, the U.S. Customs Service and the Department of Transportation have published lists and attempted to negotiate agreements containing "reasonable steps" or precautions that commercial and recreational vessel operators should take in order to obtain favorable consideration by the Customs Service in forfeiture remission and mitigation proceedings. These "precautions" include ensuring that all business advertising contains a zero tolerance statement, providing drug education for the crew, establishing a written company policy in support of the administration's "zero tolerance program," and reporting, via radio telephone, to the Coast Guard any possession or use of illegal drugs discovered on board the vessel.

The U.S. Customs Service draft "agreements" for commercial fishing vessel operators and personnel contain clauses requiring a search of the vessel prior to leaving any port, which may include the use of dogs trained for narcotics searches. If contraband is found, the agreements would require that the Customs Service be notified and the contraband be turned over to the appropriate authorities. A similar exercise would be required prior to arrival at a U.S. port. The agreements would also require that vessel operators turn over to Customs agents conducting investigations "relevant identifying data" regarding crewmembers and applicants for employment.

None of the so-called "positive steps," "reasonable steps", or "reasonable precautions" contained in these documents may be required by the regulations issued under this section. The Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury may not use the phrase "reasonably expected" in this subsection to impose any type action on property owners in order to generally deter others from illegal drug use. While we wecome voluntary action on the part of private individuals to deter drug abuse and violations of the law and encourage it in fact, this amendment may not and should not be used to require them to take these actions as a condition of obtaining release of their property. While law abiding citizens should not condone drug abuses, enforcement of the drug laws is a governmental law enforcement responsibility, which should not be shifted to private, law-abiding citizens through this civil forfeiture procedure.

Paragraph (D) of this subsection requires that owners of property act in a normal and customary manner to ascertain how their property will be used. Normal and customary practice is that which is reasonable in the industry involved. In some instances, such as with the commercial fishing industry, there may be no nationwide practice. Again, this language may not be used to require any particular type of action on the part of property owners designed to generally deter drug use as circumstances vary in each case. It does not allow the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to establish standards for an industry or group. Nor does it allow the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to use this language to force businessmen or other individuals through regulations issued under this section to adopt a set of "steps" or "precautions" to deter drug use as a condition to obtaining release of the property from the Government.

Simply put, we are saying through these provisions that the Government expects individuals to use basic common sense and that they will be held accountable accordingly.

Subsection (d) of this section requires the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe regulations requiring the issuance of a summons to appear in lieu of seizure of a commercial fishing industry vessel for violations involving the possession of personal use quantities of a controlled substance. This summons is required when the violation is committed during times connected with fishing operations.

This section is not intended to limt the authority of the Attorney General, and the Secretaries of Treasury and Transportation to employ this procedure in other situations when immediate seizure has an unreasonable impact upon the owner of property.

The administrative procedures in section 6079 apply to those forfeiture cases in which the owner of the property eligible for the procedure does not post a claim and cost bond. Another administrative procedure for owners of conveyance seized for drug-related offenses who file a claim and cost bond is established under section 6080. Under this section, the Attorney General must make a decision on the owner's forfeiture proceeding within 20 days of the date on which the owner's petition is filed.

Sections 6075 and 6076 of this bill establish a defense in forfeiture proceeding for innocent owners of conveyances seized by the Federal agencies for drug-related offenses.

Under this defense an innocent owner of a conveyance must establish that the offense was committed without the knowledge, consent, or willful blindness of the owner. Willful blindness addresses the cases of individuals who have demonstrated a conscious purpose to avoid the truth. The concept of willful blindness is essentially part of the proof of lack of knowledge. For this reason, the defense for innocent owners of conveyances seized for drug-related offense is virtually identical to the existing defenses for innocent owners of real property, and money, negotiable instruments, securities, or other things of value under paragraphs (6) and (7) of section 511(a) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 811 (a)(6) and (7)).

Mr. Speaker, we have a drug bill that is tough but fair and I urge prompt passage of H.R. 5210.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS].

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. Speaker, like all of my colleagues, I feel it is important for Congress to take action to deal with the problem of illegal drugs. Drug abuse is destroying lives all over our country. Here in the city of Washington we have suffered through a year that has seen a record number of murders, most of them drug-related. The number of deaths caused by cocaine overdoses continues to grow. In the past few weeks we have witnessed the misfortune of yet another professional athlete, a hero in his community, who died of a drug overdose.

A few weeks ago I voted for passage of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. I felt it was important that Congress take prompt action to deal with the human tragedy of drug abuse. However, although the overwhelming vote in favor of the bill in the House might indicate otherwise, this was not an easy vote. while the bill contained many very good provisions, it also contained a handful of provisions about which I had grave reservations. I am pleased to see that the conference report before us today has removed many of my reservations.

The House bill contained a provision that would have created a "good faith" exemption to the exclusionary rule. Such an exemption would have the effect of gutting the Constitution's fourth amendment protection against illegal searches and seizures. I understand the desire to take a strong stand against criminals, however, I don't think we should take away the constitutional rights of all Americans, innocent or otherwise, in order to appear "tough" on drugs. I am pleased that the conference report does not include the "good faith" exemption.

I support the House and Senate language which will modify the administration's "zero tolerance" policy to protect innocent owners of vehicles that are seized by law enforcement authorities. The compromise bill will provide a reasonable method for an innocent owner to prove that he did not or could not have known that his vehicle was involved in illegal drug activities.

I agree that more must be done to promote user accountability and in general I agree with the concept of withholding the privileges and benefits of Federal programs from illegal drug users who refuse to seek treatment. However, I had some concern about rushing headlong down this path. I am pleased that the compromise reached by the House and Senate takes a cautious approach toward user accountability and will allow us time to study the effect of this policy.

In a similar issue of user accountability, I approve of the language in the final bill that should remove the constitutional objections to the Federal civil fines for drug users that were included in the original House bill.

The compromise bill also includes important provisions to help law enforcement agencies investigate and prosecute money launderers and creates a new "drug czar" to oversee and coordinate all Federal efforts to combat drug abuse.

At the ranking Republican on the Education and Labor Committee, I feel it is important to take the time to mention the often overlooked education and prevention provisions in the bill. I cannot overstress the importance of these provisions, which are non-controversial and have been largely ignored during the wrangling over other parts of the bill. These provisions would provide much needed additional Federal funding for drug abuse treatment, prevention, and education programs. These programs are absolutely essential to our efforts to reduce drug abuse. To large extent, the success of our law enforcement efforts is dependent on the success of our prevention and education programs.

There were several issues which came under the jurisdiction of the Education and Labor Committee contained in the omnibus drug bill, H.R. 5210. The following is a summary of the drug bill provisions which are included in the negotiated agreement between the House and the Senate.

First. Education provisions. Amendments to the Drug Free Schools and Communities Act of 1986. The agreement increases the authorization level over current appropriations by $100 million, with such sums in the out years. The Senate insisted on this increase in order to meet the supply/demand funding ratio that has been established in the bill. Generally, the provisions contained in the two bills were retained, including amendments by Mr. GOODLING creating a cap on funds used for administrative purposes and establishing a 10-percent eligibility "window" for students not at-risk. Sixteen million dollars is included for teacher training activities.

The WIC drug education provisions funded at $10 million were retained with language which assures that the Secretary of Agriculture can ulilize already developed materials or contact for the development and printing of materials for distribution to State and local WIC agencies.

Second. Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act amendments. The Senate reauthorized JJDP in its drug bill—the House had already passed a freestanding JJDP bill. In addition, the House bill included funding for youth gang provisions, runaway and homeless youth and supplemental juvenile justice provisions. Agreement was reached in all these provisions, and they are included in the final product.

Third. Children's Justice Act. The Senate drug bill moved this provision from HHS to the Department of Justice. The resolution was to retain the non-Indian provisions in HHS, with the portion—15 percent—of the program for Indians moved to Justice.

Fourth. Community youth activity grant. This provision was originally in the Senate bill as an amendment to the Public Health Service Act with a $40 million authorization. The agreement reached was to make this provision a freestanding program, not an amendment to the PHSA, with priority to fund projects that would provide after school, vacation, and weekend activities designed to give youth opportunities to actively participate in a variety of activities, such as the national youth sports program. Among its other provisions would be funding for programs aimed to dropout and projects that seek to involve youth gang members or those who might join gangs in education programs, community-based activities, training, or employment opportunities or other alternatives to gang involvement. Each State would receive a basic allocation, with a portion of the remainder reserved for national projects, and the rest to be distributed based on additional need through application from the Governors.

Fifth. Employee assistance programs. The Senate bill had a provision providing $4 million for the Secretary of Labor to make grants to employers to develop employee drug and alcohol abuse assistance programs. This program was retained in the agreement.

Sixth. ACTION amendments. The agreement provides $4 million in fiscal year 1989 and $5 million for the 2 succeeding fiscal years to extend the drug abuse prevention programs under the Domestic Volunteer Service Act. Not less than 15 percent, but not more than 25 percent shall be used for a grant program to fund public and nonprofit organizations for innovative, community-based volunteer demonstration projects which provide comprehensive drug abuse education and prevention services and activities to youth during the summer months.

Seventh. National Commission on Drug Free Schools. The Senate bill authorized a commission to develop recommendations for criteria for identifying drug free schools and campuses. Provisions were negotiated that made the directions to the commission less prescriptive. Such sums are authorized to carry out this provision.

These are the major issues that came under jurisdiction of the Education and Labor Committee. There were other items of interest to the committee, but were resolved by other committees of jurisdiction. These items included user accountability, drug-free workplace, and drug czar.

Finally, I want to congratulate all of my fellow colleagues who have worked so hard on this bill. The final bill that came out of conference improves upon the original House bill and I urge its passage.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to our ranking member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the leadership on both sides of the aisle, the Speaker and the majority leader and our minority leader for fashioning and crafting this important measure.

We laid a foundation in 1986. We are building on that foundation. This is not a political measure. It is a strong symbolic measure to the entire world.

One fallacy: we did not provide sufficient funding, and I hope when we come back in the next session we will be able to provide the appropriations that are needed to meet the authorizations of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of final passage of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. Today, Mr. Speaker, we are giving the American people a sound drug bill. I strongly commend the leadership on both sides of the aisle for their diligent efforts to make certain that this Congress did not come to a close without the passage of this critical legislation. Without the leadership of Speaker WRIGHT, Republican Leader MICHEL, Majority Leader FOLEY, the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM], chairman of the Republican drug task force, the distinguished chairman of Select Committee on Narcotics, Mr. RANGEL and in the other body, Senators BYRD, DOLE, NUNN, and RUDMAN, H.R. 5210 would not be before the House for final consideration.

There are many worthy elements in this bill. This legislation stiffens penalties on drug dealers and drug users; formulates programs targeted to help runaways, homeless youth and juvenile delinquents; creates controls on precursor chemicals used in drug processing; alters the existing law to crack down on money laundering; establishes a Federal drug czar; expresses the sense of Congress against the legislation of drugs and calls for a hemispheric drug summit.

Some desperately needed resources are provided to support those brave men and women who dedicate their lives to fighting drugs. Whether they are working to eradicate drug crops thousands of miles away from home or helping an addict regain control of his or her life in a local drug treatment center, they are serving this Nation well and we owe them our deepest gratitude.

But it is my understanding that only an additional $500 million will be provided in fiscal year 1989 to combat drugs. This amount is grossy inadequate to overcome a drug trafficking empire which nets over $150 billion annually in the United States. Let's think about these figures for a second. In 1989 Americans will spend 300 times more to buy drugs than we are dedicating today to fight drugs, 300 times. And some question why this war against drugs has not been won.

Poll after poll indicate that the American people overwhelmingly support a tax increase, if the funds are dedicated to combating drugs. I have introduced a very modest excise tax proposal which, if reelected, I plan to reintroduce in the next Congress. But regardless of how we do it, a mechanism must be found to properly finance the war against drugs, without busting the budget.

Without adequate funding, even the best legislative proposal imaginable would be nothing more than a paper tiger. The war against drugs will remain this Nation's mission impossible until the Congress appropriates the necessary funds.

It will fall upon the 101st Congress to finish the job we have begun today. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues, on this final day of the 100th Congress, to vote in favor of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. SHAW] who served also on the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

I would like to also congratulate the gentleman from Illinois, as well as the Members from both sides of the aisle who have done so much to put this bill together.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment at this time on the so-called innocent-owner defense to forfeiture contained in the House amendment to H.R. 5210. This will provide a defense in forfeiture proceedings for innocent owners of conveyances seized by Federal agencies for drug-related offenses. This defense is virtually identical to the existing defense for innocent owners of real property, and moneys, negotiable instruments, securities, or other things of value under paragraphs 6 and 7 of section 511(a) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(a) (6) and (7)).

In our conference the proponents of this section stated that this section is not intended to overturn existing case law rendered under the Supreme Court decision in Calero-Toledo v. Pearson Yacht Leasing Co., [94 S. Ct. 2080 (1974)]. In Calero-Toledo, the Supreme Court stated that it would be difficult to justify a forfeiture in a case in which the owner of the property was uninvolved or unaware of the wrongful activity and also had done all that could be reasonably expected to prevent the proscribed use of that property.

For example, one Circuit Court of Appeal, applying Calero-Toledo, disallowed the so-called innocent-owner defense in a case in which the owner did not inquire into the destination of a conveyance, or the purpose for which the conveyance was to be used. Owners who have demonstrated willful blindness have not been afforded the innocent-owner defense under the Calero-Toledo line of cases and should also not be granted relief under this provision. This language was designed to indicate that Government will not condone irresponsible actions on the part of owners.

The language of Calero-Toledo and the line of cases that follow require property owners to be reasonably informed concerning the purpose for which another person may use their property. This provision in the bill before us in intended to allow the courts to determine whether owners have taken the type of actions contemplated by the Supreme Court and the Circuit Courts of Appeal.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT].

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, passage of this tough anti-drug bill with its many provisions aimed at deterring violent drug crime will come too late to save the lives of two young New York City police officers who became the latest casualties in the ongoing drug war. Officer Michael Buczek and Officer Chris Hoban, both brutally murdered in separate drug-related incidents, are two names on a long and tragic list of police officers and innocent bystanders killed in this senseless conflict.

While many in this Chamber are eager to adjourn and begin campaigning in the few weeks remaining before election day, the fact that we are gathered here at the 11th hour is testament to Congress' determination to effectively address the Nation's insidious drug problem.

The violence and brutality that defines the drug world touches all of us leaving an indelible sense of grief and terror in its wake. A few months ago a resident of my own Fourth Congressional District, Officer Eddie Byrne, was murdered in cold-blood by a drug-dealer as he sat in his police car protecting the home of a witness in a drug crime. We were all devastated by the death of this brave young officer and my vote in favor of H.R. 5210 is cast in his memory and in the hope that it will save the lives of other courageous young law enforcement officers.

It's time that we start substituting "tough action" on the drug issue for "tough talk." The omnibus drug bill we vote on tonight brings out the heavy artillery in the war on drugs. It includes a provision for a Federal death penalty that can be levied against drug kingpins and others who kill or direct a killing the course of a drug-related felony. I support this provision which I believe will go a long way toward protecting the safety of our citizens and promoting our "zero tolerance" antidrug policy.

In closing, I would also like to bring to my colleagues attention another very important provision of the omnibus drug bill. Under H.R. 5210, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be authorized to make grants to public and private nonprofit drug treatment programs in order to reduce the waiting list for drug abuse services. The authorization level of $100 million is a "one time deal" with funds only available until they are expended.

This provision is particularly important to New York State which has hundreds of drug abusers who are unable to receive treatment because of the lengthy waiting lists. Drug abuse programs provide a vital service both to the abuser seeking treatment and to the community by promoting a "drug free" environment. I urge my colleagues to join with me in demonstrating our commitment to combating the drug epidemic in this country by voting in favor of H.R. 5210. I want to thank the staff of the Committee on Energy and Commerce for the herculean effort which went into the crafting of this comprehensive legislation and, particularly, Mary McGrane of the minority staff.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I say to our ranking member on the Appropriations Committee, we do have some money involved in this measure, and I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I want everyone to take note. Here we are facing a document that looks more like a telephone book than a piece of legislation. It is the last day of the session. And it is not a continuing resolution.

The Appropriations Committee did its work. We got our bills done. And yet here we are 2 weeks late, trying to pass a bill that contains Lord only knows what.

From this point forward, let it be said that you don't have the Appropriations Committee to kick around anymore.

I just hope they take off after whoever dreamed this thing up in the same way they've taken off after the Appropriations Committee on continuing resolutions in the past.

All I can do is tell you what's in the new appropriations title, a title in neither the House or the Senate bill, a title conceived yesterday and born here today.

We didn't fund everything. We had only $500 million to spend, compared with $1.3 billion in new outlays authorized in the original House bill. This translates into $961 million in budget authority, divided 50/50 between supply and demand reduction.

On the law enforcement side, $380 million in budget authority is provided to the Department of Justice and the Judiciary. Much of this is to provide further increases to the FBI, the DEA, the U.S. attorneys, the U.S. marshals, and the prisons. The Coast Guard receives $116 million.

But not all stays with the Feds; $80 million of the total is provided to grant programs to benefit State and local law enforcement authorities. Up to $10 million is provided to raise death benefits for families of public safety officers who die in the line of duty from $50,000 to $100,00.

On the demand side, we provide $200 million to our States and localities for expanded substance abuse treatment programs. We provide $100 million for education programs in our schools.

We provide another $100 million for antisubstance abuse prevention, treatment, research, and activities such as drug free workplaces.

All good things undoubtedly. We have provided as much as we could afford, under the budget deficit ceiling set by Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. This funding brings the fiscal year 1989 total for drug programs to $5.2 billion, compared to $2.2 billion in fiscal year 1986.

The fiscal year 1989 change purse is now completely emptied out. The next Congress and the next President will have to figure out how to fund more of the war on drugs and any other emergencies that come up. It is not going to be easy.

But let it not be said that we have left a pocket unturned, a scrap unused, a watch unpawned, or a hot check uncashed, in our effort to provide the dollars needed to fight the war on drugs.

AGRICULTURE

We have provided up to $10 million from within the funds available to WIC for a study to find out the best way to carry out the drug education program for persons using the WIC Program.

WIC is the most vital program we have to provide nutrition for the unborn and early developing children of our less fortunate families. More and more we see the need to get drug education information to expectant mothers in this program in order to protect the fetus from a host of drug-related effects.

In this bill we also have nearly $5 million in authority and outlays for fiscal year 1989 for the FDA with respect to new drugs that assist in combating drug addiction. The activities include inspection and maintenance of methadone clinics and assessment of the safety and effectiveness of approved drugs.

COMMERCE, JUSTICE, STATE, JUDICIARY AND RELATED AGENCIES—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

General legal activities—$1,800,000 in budget authority and $1,566,000 in outlays. Funds for Interpol to improve drug-related intelligence operations, and attorneys and support staff for the organized crime and racketeering strike force offices.

Support of U.S. prisoners—$16,400,000 in budget authority and $9,840,000 in outlays for housing additional Federal prisoners in contract facilities. Assisting State and local correctional facilities, $4,100,000.

U.S. Marshals Service—$16,400,000 in budget authority and $14,760,000 in outlays for asset forfeiture activities, criminal justice support activities, protection of Federal judiciary, and Witness Security Program.

U.S. attorneys—$39,000,000 in budget authority and $34,320,000 in outlays for 300 additional U.S. attorneys.

Federal Bureau of Investigation—$15,000,000 in budget authority and $12,000,000 in outlays for support of the FBI's national drug strategy, improve intelligence system for law enforcement officials, and provide contract linguists for translation purposes.

Drug Enforcement Administration—$30,000,000 in budget authority and $22,500,000 in outlays for increase operations against youth gang-related crime, enhance the El Paso Intelligence Center [EPIC], establish the United States-Bahamas Drug Interdiction Task Force, aircraft, pilots, and airwing equipment, personnel for asset forfeiture processing, and establish DEA-EPA Task Force for cleanup of illegal drug laboratories.

Immigration and Naturalization Service—$26,200,000 in budget authority and $20,960,000 in outlays for increase the number of inspectors, enhance the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces, special agent foreign language traning, additional Border Patrol agents and support personnel, and development with the State Department of a machine-readable VISA Security Program.

Federal prison system, buildings and facilities—$95,600,000 in budget authoirty and $9,560,000 in outlays for construction of a minimum of two new prisons renovation of acquired properties, and construction of a witness security unit.

Office of Justice programs—$90,000,000 in budget authority and $33,300,000 in outlays for additional State and local drug grants, $80,000,000. Increase in death benefits to families of public safety officers, $10,000,000.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Rewards for informants—Language allowing use of prior unobligated antiterrorism reward funds to be used for drug-related rewards.

Salaries and expenses—$5,000,000 in budget authority and $3,950,000 in outlays for development with the Immigration and Naturalization Service of a machine-readable VISA security program.

THE JUDICIARY

Salaries and expenses, courts—$35,000,000 in budget authority and $32,340,000 in outlays for additional deputy clerk positions, additional probation and pretrial services personnel, and installation of drug testing equipment.

Defender services—$15,000,000 in budget authority and $9,000,000 in outlays for increased support for Federal public defender and community defender organizations, which represent 70 percent of all drug offenders and five additional death penalty habeas corpus resource centers.

Fees of jurors and commissioners—$1,000,000 in budget authority and $930,000 in outlays provides sufficient funds for workload increases.

STATE AND LOCAL DRUG GRANTS

The bill provides $80 million for the Drug Control and System Improvement Grant Program of the Department of Justice. This program combines two earlier programs to provide grants to States and local governments to encourage and support improvements in their criminal justice systems. Special emphasis will be placed on multijurisdictional and multi-State organizations in an effort to bring better coordination in the national war on drugs. Eighty percent of the funds, or $64 million, will be allocated to the States and localities on a formula basis, and the remainder will be used for national discretionary grants. These funds are in addition to $70 million provided in the fiscal 1989 Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Appropriations Act.

PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS BENEFITS PROGRAM

The bill provides up to $10 million for the Public Safety Officers Benefits Program. This program pays death benefits to families of public safety officers killed in the line of duty. The level of those benefits is increased in another part of the bill from $50,000 per case to $100,000. All law enforcement and fire fighting personnel are eligible for the program.

LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

For the Labor Department, the drug abuse supplemental provides $2 million for a new employee assistance program. Under this program, the Secretary would make grants or enter into contracts with employers to help them provide substance-abuse programs for their employees.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

The biggest part of the funding allocated to the Labor-HHS Subcommittee has been targeted to block grant programs which will expand treatment and rehabilitation services for drug abusers. HHS Secretary Bowen has targeted treatment as a top priority that we must address, and I couldn't agree more.

Treatment isn't enough by itself—many people relapse after treatment, so we need to educate people and keep them off drugs for as long as possible. Also, we need to develop new and more effective kinds of treatment. But, right now, there are waiting lists all around the country representing people willing to get off drugs—if they can just get help. These people are reaching out for help—reaching back has got to be our first priority, and this spending plan recognizes that.

Most of the treatment money will be made available through the existing Block Grant Program which provides funding to States for alcohol and drug abuse services. Supplementing an existing program should enable the money to be put into the hands of treatment providers very quickly.

The remainder of the funding for treatment and rehabilitation services will be made available under a newly authorized grant program which will fund existing treatment programs with backlogs of people who are waiting for a treatment slot to open up. This funding will be made available specifically to bring down those backlogs. In other words, this program is not intended simply to offer more money to existing providers—instead. It requires that the funding be used to expand the treatment capacity of these programs, and to reduce their waiting lists.

This spending plan also supplements the other essential components of the war against drugs: It will fund demonstration programs aimed at studying populations that are particularly at risk, such as pregnant women; it offers funding directly to communities so that they can set up prevention programs tailored to their own population and community standards; it provides funding to demonstrate better methods of helping IV drug abusers; it provides funding for research, evaluation, and data collection responsibilities at the National Institute on Drug Abuse, including $10 million to be used to develop new pharmacologic agents which will make treatment programs more successful; it provides funding to train health professionals in how to cope with drug abuse, and how to counsel drug abusers; and, it provides additional research funding to the National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse.

Finally, and perhaps most important, this spending plan targets kids in trouble, and kids who can be kept out of trouble—it not only supplements existing funding for those kids who will be reachable through the National Youth Sports Program, it also fully funds newly authorized programs focused on runaway youth and youth gangs.

The specific amounts appropriated for Health and Human Services programs are as follows:

For newly authorized grants to treatment programs to reduce backlogs and waiting times, $75 million;

For the existing Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Block Grant, $125 million to be limited to substance abuse;

For grants to be awarded through the Office of Substance Abuse Prevention, $15 million;

For the newly created program of Community Prevention Grants, $15 million;

For the newly created programs of Drug Abuse Treatment Demonstrations intended to develop more effective treatments, $10 million;

For research, evaluations of programs, and expanded data collection requirements of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, $30 million, which includes $10 million for the development of new pharmacologic agents, through research, clinical trials, and cooperative agreements with outside organizations;

To provide substance abuse training for health personnel, $3 million;

For research at the National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse, $10 million;

For the National Youth Sports Program, $3 million;

For the Runaway Youth Program, $15 million; and

For the youth gang substance abuse prevention initiative, $15 million.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

For the Education Department, the supplemental provides an increase of $108 million for the Drug Free Schools and Communities Act, as amended by the 1988 drug bill.

Under the Drug Free Schools Act, the formula prescribes that 82.8 percent of the funds go for grants to States and outlying areas, and the remaining 17.2 percent for discretionary national programs. The national programs fund five regional drug abuse education centers, grants to institutions of higher education, and discretionary grants in areas determined by the Secretary. The supplemental provides $100 million for these programs, $82.8 million for the State Grant Program, and $17.2 million for the national programs.

In addition, for two new authorities authorized in this bill, the drug abuse supplemental provides $7 million for a new competitive Teacher Training Program and $1 million for early childhood curriculum, training, and program materials.

RELATED AGENCIES

The supplemental provides $2 million for the ACTION Agency to continue activities begun in fiscal year 1986 to involve the volunteer sector in drug abuse prevention.

TRANSPORTATION

There is $25 million in outlays for fiscal year 1989 for the Coast Guard in the appropriations title of the drug bill.

That amount of fiscal year 1989 spending translates into $16 million of budget authority for operations and $100 million for acquisition. I am happy to see the Coast Guard get additional funding. They have one of the most important missions in our Government in attacking the supply side of the drug problem.

However, I am a little concerned about the earmarking of the acquisition funds. There is $52 million in this bill for NH-60 helicopters, $17 million for radar equipment, and $32 million for cutter renovation and modernization.

I don't have a quarrel with any of these programs, but I do ask the question "why can't we simply give the Coast Guard the money and let them establish the priorities for spending in the war on drugs."

The commandant of the Coast Guard, Admiral Yost, is certainly happy to get this additional assistance, but if he had his druthers, he would have us take out these earmarkings.

TREASURY, POSTAL, GENERAL GOVERNMENT

This chapter includes $26 million in budget authority and $20 million in outlays for drug interdiction, law enforcement, and policy coordination programs.

In the Executive Office of the President, the drug bill created an "Office of National Drug Control Policy" or what is commonly called the drug czar. This White House office was allocated $3.5 million in budget authority and $3 million in outlays for the remainder of fiscal year 1989. The compromise authorized amount is $6.5 million.

For the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the drug bill authorized $10.6 million for the Armed Career Criminal Program and other law enforcement activities. The BATF has a major role in the apprehension of drug dealers, and their conviction record is one of the best. In this chapter, $7 million in budget authority is provided and from that amount, $6 million should be outlayed during the remainder of this fiscal year.

For the U.S. Customs Service, two appropriations are made available, $8.5 million for salaries and expenses and $7 million for the Air Interdiction Program. These funds will be used to increase staffing levels in Customs, primarily for inspectors and to properly maintain the Customs air operation.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, today the House has before it an omnibus drug bill. Many Members have worked long and hard on this bill. To these Members I offer my congratulations.

I must in all candor, however, note that the process we have adopted to take up this bill is not an example of Congress at its best. If we are going to realistically address the major social problems confronting this body, we need to adopt a more rational and deliberative process. I am particularly unhappy and disappointed that the bill before us contains provisions authorizing the imposition of a death penalty. I agree with the public policy of the State of Wisconsin that bars State-imposed executions. No amount of outrage can serve to justify the imposition of an irrevocable, ultimate sanction. I continue to have serious questions about the deterrence value of the death penalty. Until these issues and other concerns about racial justice can be satisfactorily resolved, I remain opposed to this sanction.

Having commented on the procedures, I should take a moment to detail for the record those portions of the bill that are within the jurisdiction of the subcommittee I chair, the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties, and the Administration of Justice of the Committee on the Judiciary. I will also note for the record certain provisions of the Senate bill that were not adopted in this bill or that were substantially modified in the negotiations with the other body.

There are five major initiatives contained in this bill that are the product of my subcommittee: First, vitally needed money—$200 million—for construction of new Federal prison facilities and $13 million for essential salary increases for Federal prison officers; second, statutory reform of the Federal Prison Industries, including borrowing authority; third, a statutory charter for the U.S. Marshals Service; fourth, additional funds—approximately $80 million—for the Federal courts; and fifth, additional funds for assistant U.S. attorneys. Set forth below is a more detailed description of the amendments relating to prison industries and the Marshals Service and a briefer description of other sections. My remarks conclude with the jurisdiction of my subcommittee.

Section 7093-96 Federal Prison Industry reform:

H.R. 4994, which is included as sections 7093–7096 of this bill, would authorize Federal Prison Industries to borrow funds from the Federal Government for purposes of expansion of its industrial programs. This bill, which I cosponsored with the ranking minority member of my subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD], has enjoyed bipartisan support among the members of the Judiciary Committee, as well as the support of the administration.

By providing Federal Prison Industries with borrowing authority, this bill recognizes the invaluable role that Federal Prison Industries, or UNICOR as it is more commonly known, plays in our penal institutions. Not only does UNICOR provide inmates with steady employment and educate them in certain job skills, but it also has proven to be an indispensable tool in managing the staggering problem of prison overcrowding, by providing employment opportunities for inmates. Inmate idleness, according to the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, poses one of the most significant threats to prison security. When inmates work, they are not idle.

For months we in this body have been working on a drug bill designed to identify and punish drug offenders. This drug bill is just one of several bills that we have passed in the last few years that has as its goals tougher sanctions for criminals. At the same time that we are enacting laws to send more criminals to prisons, however, we are faced with an enormous Federal prison overcrowding problem. We are 160 percent over capacity. This means that in some of our Federal penal institutions, two or three inmates are being housed in spaces designed for one. If we are going to overfill our prisons, we must give our prison officials the means to house and supervise the inmates. This bill provides them with one of those means, by providing Federal Prison Industries with the borrowing authority it needs to enable it to grow commensurate with the growth in the inmate population.

It is currently estimated that the number of inmates in our Federal penal institutions could double over the course of the next 10 years. At present, UNICOR employs approximately one-third to one-half of the 44,000 inmates incarcerated in Federal penal institutions. Just to maintain this ratio UNICOR will need to significantly expand its industries in the future.

Because Federal Prison Industries is a self-supporting corporation, it must fund this rapid expansion either through direct appropriations or through borrowing funds from the Government. This bill would enable UNICOR to do the latter, thus alleviating the need to fund UNICOR's growth through appropriations.

I understand that there are problems with our providing UNICOR with the tools to expand. There are some private industries that compete with UNICOR in the Federal market, and they fear that UNICOR's growth will have a negative impact on private industry. Indeed, UNICOR has been charged with the statutory mandate to operate in such a way that "no single private industry shall be forced to bear an undue burden of competition" from Prison Industries.

In recognition of this mandate, as well as in response to the concerns of private industry, section 7096 contains a set of guidelines to be followed by UNICOR when adding or significantly expanding an existing product line. The guidelines, which were written in cooperation with private industry and the Bureau of Prisons, are intended to provide more formal guidance to Prison Industries as to what constitutes an undue burden and to ensure the least amount of competition between UNICOR and the private sector. The guidelines are discussed in more detail in House Report 100-864, which accompanied H.R. 4994.

The Federal Prison Industry reforms contained in this bill strike a balance between the need to provide security in our prisons and the concerns of private industry.

Section 7321 reauthorizes the State Justice Institute for 4 additional years, fiscal years 1989, 1990, 1991, and 1992. Each year, funds are authorized to be appropriated up to the amount of $15,000,000. I note that a bill recently passed by the House and Senate (H.R. 4807) would reauthorize the State Justice Institute for 2 additional years. Given the importance of the fight against drugs, and the partnership of State and Federal courts in the fight, reauthorization of the institute for 4 years is deemed appropriate.

Section 7101 authorizes the U.S. Parole Commission to supervise prisoners who have been transferred from a foreign country.

Section 7301 of the bill authorizes the U.S. Sentencing Commisson to study the question of whether certain Federal inmates should be required to pay for the costs of their incarceration. This study is obviously aimed at the relatively narrow segment of the Federal prison population that has a clearly demonstrated ability to pay, including white-collar offenders.

Section 7302 authorizes the Bureau of Prisons, in cooperation with the Department of Defense, to use certain facilities to house Federal inmates. An amendment adopted by the conferees stresses the need to consider allowing of women inmates to be housed in Federal prison camps. Male inmates already have the opportunity to benefit from assignment to camps. This section is designed to encourage the Bureau of Prisons to move toward providing female inmates with an equivalent opportunity. The Bureau of Prisons should not construe this provision to urge that only women have the exclusive use of such military facilities for camps for prison camps.

Section 7303 relates to the revocation of probation, parole or supervised release when such a person has been adjudicated by the court to have violated a criminal law relating to possession of an illegal drug. The provisions in this section are derived from the Senate amendments to the bill, but have been modified to preserve essential elements of judicial or Parole Commission discretion.

Section 7304 authorizes the creation of a short experiment on drug tests for persons on probation and parole. This provision was derived from the House-passed bill, with modifications that preserve necessary administrative flexibility. For example, the Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, or the director's designee(s), is permitted to waive certain requirements.

Section 7305 relates to "house probation," and is derived from the Senate amendment. It is crafted carefully to create a new alternative to incarceration. The courts should be particularly sensitive about the need to avoid unwarranted discrimination against those offenders that do not have the resources to satisfy the requirements for house probation.

Section 7322 contains a technical amendment to authorize U.S. magistrates to impose sentences for infractions. Deleted from the bill are provisions contained in the Senate amendment that would have authorized magistrates to accept guilty pleas, and circuit judicial councils to create "drug days" in the Federal courts. The expanded authority for magistrates was rejected for two reasons; first, the Judicial Conference of the United States objected that the policy was flawed, and second, there are serious, and unresolved, constitutional objections to such authority.

Section 7902 authorizes the Department of Justice to seek for the emergency installation of pen registers and trap and trace devices.

Section 7323 contains language relating to habeas corpus. The amendment binds the Senate to certain procedures relating to the report of a special committee of the Judicial Conference on habeas corpus reform. The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties, and the Administration of Justice, which has jurisdiction over habeas corpus, will of course carefully review that report and consider any recommendations it makes. I know that the special committee will thoroughly review this issue and provide the Congress with a well-reasoned basis on which to begin any legislative consideration.

Section 7608 U.S. Marshals Service reform:

The time has come for the U.S. Marshals Service Act and it is particularly appropriate that this act be enacted as part of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

The Marshals Service Act has been introduced in the 98th, 99th, and 100th Congresses. During that time, legislative hearings have been held in both the House and the Senate, and we have received constructive comments and suggestions on the legislation from members of the Federal judiciary, the executive branch, the private bar, and others. That process has resulted in significant improvement in the proposal so that, as set forth in the amendment before us, it is legislation that will promote both good government and effective law enforcement.

My subcommittee exercises oversight responsibility for the Marshals Service, so I am very familiar with its activities. I know that the Service performs an extraordinary variety of law enforcement duties that are truly indispensable to our Federal Justice System. This is so, particularly in the war on drugs. In fact, fully half of the Service's workload today is related to drug law enforcement activities. Whether safeguarding witnesses, which has become the Government's most effective weapon in prosecuting drug traffickers or protecting the courts, apprehending drug fugitives, and managing seized drug assets, the Marshals do their jobs effectively and efficiently, and all too often their contributions go unheralded.

The U.S. Marshals Service Act will greatly assist the Service in the accomplishment of its law enforcement missions. It provides an explicit statutory basis for many current functions of the Service, including the authority to carry firearms and make arrests; to protect Federal judges, witnesses and their families; to manage seized drug assets; to conduct fugitive investigations; to enter cooperative agreements with State and local authorities to obtain jail space for Federal prisoners; and to enter into contracts to provide for security guards and the Service of process in noncriminal proceedings.

The Marshals Service Act has been strongly endorsed by the Judicial Conference of the United States. The act underscores the Marshals Service's traditional and premier responsibility of providing security for the Federal courts and executing court orders. It explicitly authorizes the Service to provide personal protection to judges, U.S. attorneys, and other Federal officials, which is frequently necessary in connection with drug cases.

In short, the U.S. Marshals Service Act is highly relevant and important to the antidrug legislation we are considering, and I therefore urge my colleagues to support its adoption as an amendment to H.R. 5210.

One provision of the bill that raises serious concern in the minds of some of my constituents relates to user accountability sanctions. While some elements of this concept are worth exploring, the potential for unfair treatment appears significant. I assume in voting for this bill that the penalties provided in the bill are not retroactive. If it is later determined that these sanctions are retroactive, then repeal of such provisions should be an early agenda item for the 101st Congress.

On balance I will support this bill because of its numerous constructive provisions. I remain troubled, however, by the severity of the approach taken in some sections of the bill. I hope that we review many provisions of the bill with an eye toward limiting the amount of governmental intrusion to that necessary to achieve the shared goal of dramatically reducing illegal drug use.

In conclusion, I think that there are many beneficial reforms to our criminal justice system in this bill. I am proud to have authored some of the meritorious provisions of the bill, and to have generally played a part in improving the final product.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the House and Senate have been able to reach an agreement on the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 and have it included as part of the Omibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 would impose new conditions and requirements on Federal Government contractors and grantees designed to ensure that their workplaces are drug free. The act would enlist in the Government's efforts to combat drug abuse in America those organizations and businesses in the private sector that receive Federal grants and contracts. The problem of drugs in our society is multifaceted. The Federal Government has responded with an array of initiatives, ranging from stiff criminal sanctions on drug possession and sales to the funding and support of community programs to educate citizens of the dangers associated with drug abuse and to assist those who are trapped in the nightmare cycle of drug addiction.

The act represents a new governmental initiative with its focus on drug abuse in the workplace. While the true extent of drug abuse in the workplace is not fully known, it is clear that the problem has special consequences—the safety of coworkers is threatened by those who are impaired by drugs, the danger of defective products is greatly increased and, in general, the productivity, and thus the strength, of the Nation is diminished.

The act, in the case of companies and grantees—other than individuals—would require the Government's contractors and grantees to follow six specific requirements in order to maintain their Federal contracts and grants, and their eligibility for future Government business or funds. As a separate requirement, individuals who are contractors and grantees would be required only to certify, prior to receiving an award or grant, that they will not engage in the unlawful manufacture, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance in the performance of the contract or grant.

Government contractors and grantees—other than individuals—would have to publish a statement notifying employees that drug abuse in the workplace is prohibited and specifying the actions that will be taken against those who violate that policy. Further, Government contractors and grantees must establish a drug-free awareness program to educate their employees about: First, the dangers of drug abuse in the workplace, Second, the penalties that can be imposed for such behavior, and Third, the services available to assist those with drug-related problems.

The grantee or contractor also must make it a requirement that each employee who is directly involved in the performance of a Government contract or grant, agree that they will abide by the contractor's or grantee's drug-free workplace statement and that they will notify that employer of any conviction for a criminal drug violation occurring in the workplace in a timely manner. The employer is also required to notify the Government agency managing that contract or grant of the conviction of an employee and is required to either take an appropriate personnel action against that convicted employee or require the employee's participation in an approved drug assistance or rehabilitation program. Finally, each Government contractor or grantee is required to continue, in good faith, ongoing compliance with these requirements. These six elements of the certification comprise the exclusive legislative and regulatory requirements of the act for contractors and grantees, other than individuals.

A false certification by the contractor or grantee or failure to fulfill these requirements, will constitute grounds for suspension and termination of the contract or grant and the debarment of the contractor or grantee from future Government contracts or grants for up to 5 years. Alternatively, if it is determined that a contractor or grantee has such a number of convictions for criminal drug statute violations occurring in the workplace as to indicate that the contractor or grantee has failed to make a good faith effort to provide a drug-free workplace, then the penalties of suspension, termination, and debarment may also be applied.

Determinations regarding compliance with these requirements will be made, in large measure, under existing procedures regarding procurement and grant matters. However, suspension, termination, and debarment proceedings for grants and grantees for a violation of these provisions will be conducted in accordance with special procedures to be published in the Federal acquisition regulation. These procedures shall require agencies to conduct suspension and debarment procedures in a fair and equitable manner.

The act is carefully crafted to provide specific, clear criteria aimed at curtailing drug abuse in the workplace. Entities that receive Government business or grants are required to fulfill these specific mandates in order to achieve and maintain advantageous financial relationships with the Federal Government. Failure to do so can result in the suspension or termination of their contract or grant and their debarment from future contracts or grants. These tough sanctions, however, are to be applied rationally with adequate due process procedures to protect the rights of those involved.

During our deliberations on the drug-free workplace provisions, questions were raised concerning the relationship of those provisions to the National Labor Relations Act. I would like to make it clear that it is not our intent in this piece of legislation to repeal any of the longstanding rights of employees under current labor laws. We fully intend that the provisions of the drug bill will operate in harmony with existing labor laws. Thus, if employees of a Federal contractor or grantee have selected a union to be their representative, the employees' agreement—as required by the drug-free workplace provisions—to abide by the employers' policy against drug use and to report drug convictions, is to be secured through the employees' representative, and not through individual contract.

Finally, a question has been raised with regard to the relationship of this act to other statutes that require contracts and grantees to maintain drug-free workplaces. An applicant for grant, contract, or other agreement who certifies to the department, agency, or instrumentality that the applicant has adopted and will administer in good faith a policy satisfying the requirements of the "Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988" should be considered in compliance with Federal laws requiring drug-free workplaces.

I urge my colleagues to give their full support to this important legislation.

Mr. ROE. I rise to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Brooks] and clarify further the relationship between the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 and the drug-free workplace provisions which have been included in five bills which passed the House this year which were reported by the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. The acts with drug-free workplace provisions are H.R. 4417, the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act for Fiscal Year 1989; S. 2209, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Authorization for Fiscal Years 1989 and 1990; H.R. 4418, the National Science Foundation Act of 1988; S. 1081, the National Nutrition Monitoring and Related Research Act of 1988; and S. 2470, the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988.

Mr. Brooks and I agree that there be only one drug-free workplace policy governing the agencies and departments of the Federal Government and the contractors and grantees of those organizations. Congress is overwhelmingly in support of the principles set out in the Drug-Free Workplace Act. We in no way intend for this program to be delayed, compromised, or complicated by agencies trying to follow, competing or conflicting.

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, I support the Alcoholic Beverage Labeling Act of 1988. The container warning required by this act is basically a reminder of what nearly all Americans already know—and, I am glad to say, have responsibly taken to heart. Thanks in part to the public education efforts of the beverage alcohol industry, the number of alcohol related traffic fatalities has decreased by more than 20 percent since 1980, according to the National Highway Safety Administration. According to the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, the incidence of liver cirrhosis also has declined by more than 20 percent since 1978.

As a combined result of public education and private counseling, 90 percent of all women believe drinking "can cause birth defects," according to an April 1987 Gallup survey, and a 1984 Harris poll survey found that fully 81 percent of all women abstain from drinking during pregnancy. According to a November 1985 Gallup survey, 97 percent of the public views alcoholism as a very serious or quite serious national problem. These figures indicate nearly universal awareness of the health risks associated with alcohol abuse or misuse.

The legislation before us today will complement the many programs of public education and private counseling on this regard by requiring a Federal health warning on all alcoholic beverage containers to remind the public about health risks that may be associated with the consumption or abuse of alcoholic beverages. I wish to comment on one aspect of this legislation that is critical to its success—the preemption provision, section 205. This provision expresses the intent of Congress that no statement relating to alcoholic beverages and health, other than the statement required by section 204 of the act, shall be required under State law to be placed on any container of an alcoholic beverage, or on any box, carton, or other package that contains an alcoholic beverage product.

In drafting the warning statement that appears in section 204 of the act, we carefully chose language that would communicate the statement to consumers in a clear and concise manner. Given the uncertainty of the state of scientific knowledge, the proposed warning is not intended to represent a medical judgment about the specific risks which may be involved with the use of abuse of alcoholic beverages. The intent of the warning is merely to remind the public of the possibility of health problems, which may be addressed most effectively in consultation with a personal physician.

We recognized that the effectiveness of the warning statement contained in the act would be diminished if other warning statements were added to alcoholic beverage containers. State and local government authorities should be precluded from imposing their own labeling requirements to assure that consumers will receive the same alcoholic beverage health warning regardless of when and where they happen to drink. Health warnings that varied from State to State, county to county and town to town would be confusing to consumers, and would impair the effectiveness of the Federal warning. Section 205 recognizes the need for national uniformity and the importance of avoiding the consumer confusion that would result form the promulgation of multiple, incorrect or misleading warning messages.

Finally, we wanted to avoid burdens on interstate commerce of the sort that would be presented by the placement on alcoholic beverage containers of a variety of different messages, depending upon the State or locality in which the product was offered for sale. Commerce and the national economy depend on uniform regulation of labeling of nationally marketed products. It would undermine the operation of the national economy if State and local government authorities were to pursue their public health objectives through the imposition of labeling requirements that inevitably would vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. To avoid a crazy quilt of inconsistent statutes, regulations and common law rules that would subject alcoholic beverages to intolerable burdens, section 205 makes clear that under the act the power to regulate the labeling of alcoholic beverages to achieve public health objectives rests exclusively with the Congress.

We intend section 205 of the act to be read and administered so as to preclude any State authority and any political subdivision of a State from interfering with the warning requirement of the bill by requiring any additional or different warnings on beverage alcohol containers relating to the consumption or abuse of alcoholic beverages. We intend by section 205 to preserve exclusively for Congress the task of considering whether, because of future developments or other considerations, any additional or different warnings should be placed on beverage alcohol containers.

In this regard, the term "State law" is defined in section 203(11) of the act to include State statutes, regulations, and principles and rules having the force of law. This definition encompasses decisions made or requirements imposed by legislative, regulatory or judicial authorities, including decisions rendered pursuant to the common law of any State.

Most Americans are responsible about drinking and it is my desire that S. 2047 will further encourage a responsible attitude toward drinking.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act and urge my colleagues to support passage of this measure.

On September 22, the House of Representatives approved H.R. 5210, the omnibus drug bill. Although I am concerned about illegal drug use in this country, I voted against the bill, at that time, for a number of reasons.

I wholeheartedly agree that it is important to deal with the curse of drugs in our society. But, the answer does not lie solely in politically inspired legislation enacted now, just prior to the adjournment of Congress, so that we can tout our opposition to drugs in an election year. I was concerned with several of the key provisions of the bill and was not convinced that these provisions would be corrected in conference.

I believe that a relaxation of the exclusionary rule would have done virtually nothing to enhance federal efforts to stop drug abuse and trafficking, rather it would have had a profound effect on the liberties of Americans.

The relaxation of the exclusionary rule would have totally undermined the constitutional protections the rule affords to all Americans. The exclusionary rule is what protects ordinary citizens against unreasonable searches and seizures and the invasion of privacy by law enforcement officers. Fortunately, the conferees agreed not to expand the exclusionary rule.

I was, and still am, concerned about producing a bill with a $2.1 billion price tag which far exceeds available funds. With projections that full funding of this bill would exceed the Gramm-Rudman spending ceiling, only a portion—about $500 million—in new drug funds can be spent without exceeding the ceiling. We have passed drug bills in the past and failed to fund them adequately and that problem continues to this day.

The death penalty amendment still concerns me. I am aware that the Federal death penalty amendment was offered as a way to get to drug kingpins, but many drug felonies occur without the participation of any drug kingpins. The imposition of the death penalty will undermine U.S. efforts to go after drug kingpins operating overseas because, according to Federal prosecutors and State Department legal experts, the vast majority of countries will not agree to extradite any of their citizens to a nation where they face the prospect of the death penalty.

I am opposed to the death penalty; however, I have opposed the death penalty in the past and still voted for final passage on legislation which included the death penalty. The last time we had a drug bill of this nature, we included the death penalty and I voted in favor of the bill, even though I had reservations about that aspect of it.

I want a bill aimed at the war on drugs, not at our Constitution. And, in my opinion, the initial resolution contained a number of highly controversial and constitutionally suspect amendments, which would have had altered the bill so much so that we would have done more harm than good. There are some aspects of this measure which I strongly support. I am glad to see that we will have one person in charge of our national effort to control drugs. Further, I am now satisfied with the provision which will protect our law-abiding boatowners and believe the two-tiered test is a reasonable one.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the joint House-Senate conference committee was able to produce a more responsible bill which I can support. And I am pleased to say that, while I do think this bill is far from perfect, I will support it. We must meet our drug crisis and act before it is too late.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, the problems confronting our Nation's cities as a result of the plague of drug abuse are complex and in many respects overwhelming. To solve them we must undertake the development of comprehensive and cohesive antidrug strategy which addresses both the eradication of the supply of drugs as well as the demand. To date, we have not had such a strategy. The bill that we have before us today, the Omnibus Anti-Drug Act of 1988, unfortunately, does not provide one.

In the last few years, we have witnessed a distressing rise in drug abuse and drug-related crime. Violence has become commonplace in most urban communities as the drug traffickers and users combat one another over turf, supply, and the quality of merchandise. Well organized gangs, composed of adults and young children, are increasingly becoming involved in the drug trade and are attempting to create regional and national networks to expand their market share.

This past summer, the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, which I chair, held two hearings on drug use, drug trafficking, and related violence. The testimony delivered at these hearings in Compton, CA, and Detroit, MI, made clear that we must not only do more to stop the flow of drugs into the United States, but more importantly, we must do more to provide treatment, educational, and employment opportunities to persons susceptible to drug abuse—positive alternatives to choose from.

The Omnibus Anti-Drug Act contains many provisions which are designed to address these needs. However, it also contains many which raise very serious constitutional and civil liberties concerns. These troubling provisions, which will require us to surrender some important rights, will do nothing to curtail the flow of drugs across our borders, or the willingness of people to abuse them. I am, therefore, constrained to vote against the bill.

The bill provides for the imposition of the death penalty for "drug kingpins" who kill or order the killing of a person. It also provides for the death penalty to be imposed on anyone who kills a law enforcement officer during the commission of a drug felony. I believe, as a matter of policy, that it is inappropriate for the Federal Government to impose the death penalty. A number of States have rejected the death penalty as a sanction. This bill effectively overrides those decisions, raising questions of federalism. In those States which already have death penalty statutes on the books, this bill will add nothing new to the arsenal of punishments available.

The proponents of this provision argue that it will have a deterrent effect on those who kill, as well as provide proper punishment to those who have. I disagree. My subcommittee has held extensive hearings on the death penalty. We heard convincing testimony that social scientists are unable to prove that the death penalty has a deterrent effect. Further, drug dealers already face the daily risk of being murdered by their competitors or dissatisfied customers. The prospect of being killed by the Government adds very little additional business risk for them to consider. As far as punishment goes, I believe that life in prison without the possibility of release is a severe and more appropriate sanction. It acknowledges the sanctity of life, and eliminates the possibility of executing innocent persons, while protecting society from those who kill.

The inclusion of the death penalty provision in the bill will make it more difficult for our prosecutors to bring to justice the highest level drug traffickers, who reside in safe havens abroad. Most of the countries in Europe and Central America will not extradite a defendant if that person will face the death penalty in the country seeking custody of them. This provision, therefore, is clearly self-defeating.

Our experience with the death penalty at the State level tells us that race continues to be a factor in determining who is executed and who is not. Research done in 13 States since the Furman case was decided in 1972 has shown that the chance of being executed is greater when the victim is white than when the victim is black. This, in my view, is a clear violation of the 14th amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the law. A bill I introduced earlier this year, H.R. 4442, the Racial Justice Act, would provide defendants in death penalty cases a remedy by allowing them to use statistics to establish a pattern of racial disproportionality, and thus a prima facie case of a constitutional violation. The Congress failed to act on the measure, so the problem still remains to be addressed.

The death penalty provision in the bill reflects some noteworthy improvements over the original versions passed by the House and other body. My colleagues and I who opposed the measures were able to negotiate a narrowing of the scope of coverage. The application of the penalty is now limited to those persons who: First, while engaging in, or working in furtherance of, a continuing criminal enterprise, intentionally kill or intentionally order the killing of a person, if such killing actually results; second, while engaging in an offense punishable under 21 U.S.C. § 841(b)(1)(A) or 21 U.S.C. § 960(b)(1)—pertaining to the distribution of major quantities of illegal drugs—intentionally kill or order the killing of a person, if such killing actually results; and third, during the commission of, while working in furtherance of, or while attempting to avoid prosecution or service of a prison sentence for a drug related felony, intentionally kill or order the killing of a law enforcement officer, if such killing actually results.

The original House passed bill was much broader and would have permitted the imposition of the death penalty for any intentional killing connected with any drug felony. The other body's bill originally limited the death penalty for the killing of persons other than law enforcement officers to those engaging in continuing criminal enterprises. However, it went beyond those who intentionally kill to include those who, with reckless indifference to human life, kill or participate substantially in the killing of any individual. The compromise language should result in far fewer persons being subjected to this inhumane punishment.

Some of the other modifications we were able to make include the addition of provisions requiring the appointment of experienced counsel for indigent defendants charged with crimes punishable by death, and a prohibition on the execution of the mentally retarded.

I regret that the death penalty is a part of the bill. I do not think it will have an impact on our efforts to deal with the drug problem. While I am going to vote against the bill, there are, as I indicated earlier, some worthwhile provisions in it.

MAIL FRAUD AMENDMENT (MC NALLY)

On June 24, 1987, the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of McNally v. United States, 107 S. Ct. 2875, held that the mail fraud statute, 18 U.S.C. 1341, was limited to schemes to defraud a victim of money or property. The Supreme Court reasoned that the words "to defraud" contained in that provision historically have only referred to "wronging one in his property" and that Congress by enacting 18 U.S.C. 1341 was merely codifying this understanding, 107 S. Ct. 2881.

The Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, which I chair, held a hearing on the McNally decision on May 12, 1988. At that hearing John C. Keeney, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division, U.S. Department of Justice, testified that as a result of the McNally decision many significant prosecutions of political corruption brought under the mail and wire fraud statutes have been dismissed or overturned on appeal. Mr. Keeney pointed out that cases involving bribery, money laundering, election fraud, and licensing fraud have been dismissed because there was no monetary loss to any victim.

Prior to the McNally decision, every Federal appellate court that had considered the scope of the mail and wire fraud provisions held that those provisions protect the right of the public to the honest services of public officials and others responsible for the conduct of public or public affairs, see, e.g., United States v. Margiotta, 688 F.2d 108, 121–22 (2d Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 461 U.S. 913 (1983); United States v. Mandel, 591 F.2d 1347, 1358–64 (4th Cir. 1979); cert. denied, 455 U.S. 961 (1983); the right of a member of an organization to the honest services of the leaders of that organization, United States v. Curry, 681 F.2d 406, 4111 (5th Cir. 1982); and the right of employers to the honest service of their employees, United States v. Von Barta, 635 F.2d 999, 1006–07 (2d Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 998 (1981).

This amendment restores the mail fraud provision to where that provision was before the McNally decision. The amendment also applies to the wire fraud provision, and precludes the McNally result with regard to that provision.

The amendment adds a new section to 18 U.S.C. 63 that defines the term "scheme or artifice to defraud" to include a scheme or artifice to defraud another of "the intangible right of honest services." Thus, it is no longer necessary to determine whether or not the scheme or artifice to defraud involved money or property. This amendment is intended merely to overturn the McNally decision. No other change in the law is intended.

Some questions were raised during the Criminal Justice Subcommittee's hearing on the McNally decision regarding the Federal Government's constitutional role in prosecuting State and local corruption. I believe that the guarantee clause of the U.S. Constitution, article IV, section 4 can be used as a constitutional basis for Congress to pass criminal legislation relating to corruption in local government. See, A. Kurland, "The Guarantee Clause as a Basis for Federal Prosecutions of State and Local Officials" 62 So. Cal. Rev. (forthcoming January 1989—CONGRESSIONAL RECORD 32959—daily edition November 19, 1987—remarks of Mr. CONYERS.

MANDATORY MINIMUMS

The mandatory minimums in this bill are ill-advised and ought not to have been included. In 1984, after many years of study and hard work, Congress enacted the Sentencing Reform Act. The purpose of the Sentencing Reform Act is to bring "truth in sentencing" and a more equitable and effective Federal sentencing system. To that end, parole was abolished and good time reduced substantially.

The centerpiece of the Sentencing Reform Act, however, was the creation of the U.S. Sentencing Commission, which is charged with the responsibility to promulgate sentencing guidelines. The act directs Federal courts to impose the sentence that the sentencing guidelines call for, unless there is an aggravating or mitigating factor present that the guidelines do not adequately account for. It was intended that, in all but a very few cases, the guideline would determine the sentence.

Congress has directed the Sentencing Commission to formulate a rational, cohesive sentencing system on the basis of "intelligent and dispassionate professional analysis" (Sen. Rep. No. 225, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 175 (1983)). Congress has recognized that, as an institutional matter, the Commission is well suited to resolve the technical, specialized issues involved in a guidelines system.

The boundaries of the Commission's decisionmaking are established by statute, but, as the Senate Judiciary Committee noted, within these boundaries there is a "broad responsibility imposed upon the Commission to assure that sentencing and the administration of sentences fulfill the purposes of sentencing enumerated in section 3553(a) of title 18." (Sen. Rep. No. 225, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 181 (1983)). The purposes of sentencing set forth in 18 U.S.C. 3553(a) include protecting the public from further crimes of the defendant, deterring criminal conduct, and promoting respect for the law.

The guidelines drafted by the Commission are sophisticated and complex. They base the sentence not only upon what occurred during the offense—so that, for example, a theft of $25,000 carries a longer sentence than theft of $100—but also upon the defendant's prior criminal history—so that, for example, a defendant with several prior convictions will, for exactly the same conduct, receive a longer sentence than a defendant with no prior convictions.

Now that the Commission is in place, Congress must begin to reassess the manner in which it sets sentencing policy. Mandatory minimum penalty statutes are inconsistent with the guidelines system. Such statutes mandate sentences without regard for either the particular circumstances of the offense or important offender characteristics. As a result, defendants with similar backgrounds who commit similar offenses may receive different sentences, while defendants with different backgrounds or who commit dissimilar offenses may receive the same sentence. This is precisely the injustice Congress sought to eliminate with the Sentencing Reform Act.

Drafting guidelines that fulfill the statutory purposes of sentencing is a difficult and complex task. The Sentencing Commission seems to be doing a creditable job. There is no evidence that the Commission—all of whose members President Reagan has appointed—has been lenient. Indeed, most of the complaints about the Commission's guidelines have been that they are too harsh. There is, in short, no need to fear that the Commission will coddle drug dealers and pushers, or other criminals, for that matter.

When Congress enacted the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984, Congress committed itself to a course of action that deserves a fair opportunity to succeed. We should not undercut the guidelines. We should leave the Commission free to do its work and develop guidelines that are consistent with the congressionally mandated purposes of sentencing.

PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS DEATH BENEFITS

Legislation I authored increasing the amount of the death benefit payable to the survivors of public safety officers killed in the line of duty from $50,000 to $100,000 has been included in Omnibus Anti-Drug Act of 1988. The measure also provides that the benefit amount be adjusted annually to reflect increases in the cost of living, eliminates the requirement that parents be financially dependent upon the deceased officer in order to qualify as beneficiaries, and provides funds to establish national programs to assist survivors.

The purpose of the Public Safety Officers' Benefits Act, which was signed into law in 1976, was to reduce the economic hardship of the families of slain officers, and to demonstrate the high value our Nation places on the lives all too often sacrificed by our police, firefighters, and other public safety personnel.

Earlier this week, two Detroit police officers were killed in a shootout with a mentally ill gunman. Two New York City police officers were also killed. My legislation, which took effect June 1, 1988, will make it possible for their survivors, and those of the approximately 50 other public safety officers who have died in the line of duty since that date, to receive the increased benefit payments.

The cost of living has risen 90 percent since the benefits program was created, while the amount of the death benefit did not increase at all. My legislation restores its real dollar value to the 1976 level in order to provide the families of slain officers with a more reasonable level of financial assistance—one that will enable them to adequately adjust to the sudden loss of current and future income.

Public safety officers often experience considerable difficulty in obtaining life insurance because of the dangers associated with their work. In addition, they earn an average of $24,000 per year, making it difficult to accumulate enough in savings to provide for future family needs.

The surviving parents of a deceased officer, even one living away from home, will now be eligible to receive the death benefit. Parents very often become dependent upon their children for financial support during their senior years, and by allowing them to collect this death benefit, regardless of dependency, we can help make those years less difficult to endure alone.

TITLE VII, SUBTITLE B

MINOR AND TECHNICAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1988

Subtitle B of title VII of the legislation makes many necessary and desirable changes to criminal law provisions of the United States Code. Subtitle B is based substantially on a bill that the House passed on suspension in June 1987, H.R. 2182. That bill had been worked out in conjunction with the Justice Department, the U.S. Sentencing Commission, the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts, the Federal Public and Community Defenders, and the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

We have negotiated with the Senate to work out a compromise that is acceptable to both Houses and the other interested parties. During these negotiations, it was agreed to drop some provisions and to keep others, most without any modifications. Subtitle B embodies the compromise worked out.

The provisions of subtitle B are explained in the following section-by-section analysis.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF TITLE VII, SUBTITLE B, MINOR AND TECHNICAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENTS

SECTION 7011

Section 7011 sets forth the short title of the Act and is identical to Section 101 of S. 2485.

Sections 7012 through 7050 in the nature of a substitute are derived from sections 102 through 140 of S. 2485. Those sections are, in turn, identical in substance to sections 102 through 140 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, except for Sections 133, 137, 139, and 140 of H.R. 2182. Those 4 sections were included in other legislation passed by the Senate or merged into other sections of S. 2485. Sections 7051 through 7092 are derived from Sections 141 through 196 of S. 2485. There are no comparable provisions in H.R. 2182.

SECTION 7012

Section 7012 is identical to Section 102 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 102 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 2 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 6 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7013

Section 7013 is identical to Section 103 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 103 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 3 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 6 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7014

Section 7014 is identical to Section 104 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 104 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 4 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 6 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7015

Section 7015 is identical to Section 105 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 105 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 5 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 6 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7016

Section 7016 is identical to Section 106 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 106 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 6 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 7 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7017

Section 7017 is identical to Section 107 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 107 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 7 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 7 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7018

Section 7018 is identical to Section 108 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 108 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 8 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 7 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7019

Section 7019 is identical to Section 109 of S. 2485 to Section 109 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 9 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 7 (1987).

SECTION 7020

Section 7020 is identical to Section 110 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 110 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 10 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 8 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7021

Section 7021 is identical to Section 111 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 111 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 11 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 9 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7022

Section 7022 is identical to Section 112 of S. 2485, Section 112 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 12 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 9 (1987).

SECTION 7023

Section 7023 is identical to Section 113 of S. 2485, Section 113 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 13 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 9 (1987).

SECTION 7024

Section 7024 amends 18 U.S.C. 1084(b), which regulates the transmission of wagering information, permitting such transmission between states where gambling is legal. Section 7024 amends 18 U.S.C. 1084(b) to permit transmission of wagering information from a state where gambling is legal to a foreign country where gambling is legal, and vice versa.

SECTION 7025

Section 7025 is identical to Section 115 of S. 2485, Section 115 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 15 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 10 (1987).

SECTION 7026

Section 7026 is identical to Section 116 of S. 2485, Section 116 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 16 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 10 (1987).

SECTION 7027

Section 7027 is identical to Section 117 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 117 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 17 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 10 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7028

Section 7028 is identical to Section 118 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 118 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 18 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 11 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7029

Section 7029 is identical to Section 119 of S. 2485, which is similar to Section 119 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 19 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 11 (1987). The Senate version differs from H.R. 2182 as passed and reported by including in section 119(b) the definition of "official proceeding" matters before special trial judges of the U.S. Tax Court.

SECTION 7030

Section 7030 is identical to Section 120 of S. 2485, Section 120 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 120 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1987).

SECTION 7031

Section 7031 is identical to Section 121 of S. 2485. Paragraph (1) of Section 121 of S. 2485 is identical in substance to Section 121 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 21 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1987). Paragraphs (2) and (3) of Section 121 of S. 2485 have no comparable provisions in H.R. 2182 as passed or reported. Section 121(2) of S. 2485 provides an additional cross-reference correction. Section 121(3) of S. 2485 adds new money laundering offenses to 18 U.S.C. 1956(c)(7)(D), which contains definitions relating to the laundering of monetary instruments. These new offenses are theft, fraud, or embezzlement at savings and loan associations and similar crimes related to pledges or mortgages of property offenses. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7032

Section 7032 is identical to Section 122 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 122 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 22 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1987).

SECTION 7033

Section 7033 is identical to Section 123 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 123 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 23 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7034

Section 7034 is identical to Section 124 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987) and Section 24 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7035

Section 7035 is identical to Section 125 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 125 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 25 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7036

Section 7036 is identical to Section 126 of S. 2485. Subsections (a)(1) and (b)(1) of Section 126 of S. 2485 are identical in substance to Sections 126 (a) and (b) of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Sections 26 (a) and (b) of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1987). Section 126(a)(2) of S. 2485 is identical to Section 141 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. H5333 (daily ed. June 22, 1987). Sections 126 (b)(2) and (c) of S. 2485 have no comparable House provisions and make additional cross reference and punctuation corrections. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7037

Section 7037 is identical to Section 127 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 127 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987, and Section 27 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7038

Section 7038 is identical to Section 128 of S. 2485, Sections 128 and 140 in H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 28 of H.R. 2128 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7039

Section 7039 is identical to S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 129 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 29 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong. 1st Sess. 15 (1987).

SECTION 7040

Section 7040 is identical to Section 130 of S. 2485, Section 130 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16903 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 30 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1987).

SECTION 7041

Section 7041 is identical to Section 131 of S. 2485. Sections 131 (a) and (b) of S. 2485 are identical in substance to Sections 131 (a) and (b) of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 31 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1987). S. 2485 does not include Section 131(c) of H.R. 2182 as passed, which provides an effective date for that section, because the date specified in Section 131(c) has already passed.

SECTION 7042

Section 7042 is identical to Section 132 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 132 of H.R. 2182, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 32 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7043

Section 7043 is identical to Section 133 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 134 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 34 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1987).

SECTION 7044

Section 7044 is identical to Section 134 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 135 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 35 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7045

Section 7045 is identical to Section 135 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 136 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 36 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7046

Section 7046 is identical to Section 136 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 138 of S. 2182, as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987), and Section 38 of H.R. 2182 as reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary, see H.R. Rep. No. 169, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7047

Section 7047 is identical to Section 137 of S. 2485. Section 137(a) of S. 2485 is identical in substance to Section 142 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987). Subsections (b) and (c) of Section 137 of S. 2485 have no comparable provisions in H.R. 2182 as passed or reported. Those subsections amend the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to permit a federal court to appoint a state-licensed or certified psychologist, as well as a psychiatrist (or a psychologist who is a physician), to conduct a mental examination of a party or a person in the legal control of a party in a civil action. The House declined to make this change in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure when H.R. 2182 was passed. See 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987). The House Committee on the Judiciary believes that, as a general rule, changes in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ought ordinarily to be made through the process established by the Rules Enabling Act. See 28 U.S.C. 2072. There is no doubt, however, that under Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence a psychologist could testify as an expert about the mental state of a party or a person in the legal control of a party. It makes little sense, therefore, to preclude a psychologist from conducting an examination of a party or a person in the legal control of a party when such an examination would assist the psychologist to prepare to testify. The amendments to Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in subsections (b) and (c) of Section 137 of S. 2485 are consistent with the amendment to 18 U.S.C. 4247(b) made by section 142 of H.R. 2182 as passed. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7048

Section 7048 is identical to Section 138 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 143 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7049

Section 7049 is identical to Section 139 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 144 of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987). The Senate version makes only technical, nonsubstantive changes in the language of H.R. 2182 as passed.

SECTION 7050

Section 7050 is identical to Section 140 of S. 2485, which is identical in substance to Section 145(a) of H.R. 2182 as passed by the House, see 133 Cong. Rec. 16904 (daily ed. June 22, 1987). S. 2485 has no language comparable to Section 145(b) of H.R. 2182 as passed, which provides an effective date for that section, because the date specified in Section 145(b) has already passed.

SECTION 7051

Section 7051, which is identical to Section 141 of S. 2485, makes a technical amendment to 18 U.S.C. 3077(4), which defines the term "United States" for the purposes of 18 U.S.C. ch. 204, relating to rewards for information concerning terrorist acts. That definition refers to a section 3073 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, which was never enacted. Section 7051 rewrites the definition of "United States" to delete the incorrect crossreference. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7052

Section 7052, which is identical to Section 142 of S. 2485, makes technical corrections to 18 U.S.C. 3062, which establishes the general arrest authority for violation of release conditions, defined in 18 U.S.C. 3142. Section 7052 amends 18 U.S.C. 3062 to conform to the new numbering of section 3142. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7053

Section 7053, which is identical to Section 143 of S. 2485, renumbers sections 1952A and 1952B of title 18, United States code, as sections 1958 and 1959, and makes appropriate corrections in the table of sections for 18 U.S.C. ch. 95. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed., June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7054

Section 7054, which is identical to Section 144 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 1961 to add as RICO predicates 18 U.S.C. 1958 (relating to murder-for-hire), 18 U.S.C. (relating to sexual exploitation of children), 18 U.S.C. 2252 (relaing to certain activities relating to material involving the sexual exploitation of minors), and 18 U.S.C. 1029 (relating to fraud in connection to credit cards, electronic banking cards, similar access devices). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13781 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7055

Section 7055, which is identical to Section 150 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 751(a) and 752(a) to penalize the escape of a person detained for exclusion or deportation proceedings under the immigration laws. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13782 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7056

Section 7056, which is identical to Section 151 of S. 2485, clarifies 18 U.S.C. 924(e) by adding language making explicit that the three previous convictions that trigger a mandatory minimum sentence must be offenses "committed on occasions different from one another." See 134 Cong. Rec. 13782 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7057

Section 7057 is identical to Section 153 of S. 2485. Section 146(a) amends 18 U.S.C. 2314, relating to transportation of stolen money. Section 7057 amends 18 U.S.C. 2314 to make clear that section 2314 proscribes the electronic transfer of stolen or fraudulently acquired money as well as physical transportation of such money. Three recent appellate court decisions have interpreted the current language of section 2314 to cover an electronic transfer.[1] Section 7057(a) would preclude further litigation of the issue. Section 7057(b) amends 18 U.S.C. 2314 and 2315 to clarify that those sections do not apply to foreign bank notes designed to circulate as currency. This clarification is designed to prevent further confusion over the current language and further litigation. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13783 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7058

Section 7058 is identical to Section 154 of S. 2485. Section 7058(a) raises the maximum prison term for the offenses of (1) knowingly engaging in sexual contact by means of force or of threats that any person will be subjected to death, serious bodily injury, or kidnapping, and (2) knowingly engaging in sexual contact with another who is at least 12 but not 16 years old and who is at least 4 years younger than the defendant. Section 7058(b) amends 18 U.S.C. 1958 (as renumbered by section 142) to raise the maximum penalty for an offense where neither death nor injury result. Section 7058(c) amends 18 U.S.C. 1113, raising the maximum penalty for attempted murder within the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States. Section 7058(d) amends 18 U.S.C. 1963(a) to increase the maximum penalty for a violation of that provision, a part of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization (RICO) chapter of title 18. Section 1963(a) presently provides for a maximum prison term of 20 years. It is possible, however, for a RICO prosecution to be based, in part, upon a "racketeering activity" (a term defined in 18 U.S.C. 1961(1)) that authorizes the imposition of a prison term in excess of 20 years. Section 7058(d) would, in such a case, authorize a maximum prison term of life. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13783 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7059

Section 7059, which is identical to Section 158 of S. 2485, amends the Interstate Agreement on Detainers (IAD), 84 Stat. 1397, which facilitates a jurisdiction's prosecution of a defendant imprisoned in another jurisdiction. The IAD requires the dismissal of an indictment with prejudice whenever a prisoner is transferred to another state and returned to the original state without having been tried. This provison in the IAD is designed to prevent abuse of a prisoner by lodging a detainer against the prisoner when there is no intent or ability to try the prisoner. The provision applies to the United States when it obtains custody of a state prisoner on federal charges. When the United States is involved, however, the potential for abuse is not as great because the transfer may only involve the defendant being taken across the street from the state court to the federal court. Section 7059 removes the sanction of automatic dismissal with prejudice when the United States is the "receiving state" and permits the United States to return prisoners to state custody where a court determines that a return is appropriate. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13784 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTIONS 7060–7075

Sections 7060 through 7075 are identical to Sections 161 through 176 of S. 2485, with only one technical correction in Section 7067 (Section 166 of S. 2485). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13784 (daily ed. June 8, 1988). These amendments make purely technical, clerical, and conforming changes.

SECTION 7076

Section 7076, which is identical to Section 177 of S. 2485, amends Rule 11(c)(1) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure to require a federal district court to advise a defendant not only of the possible imposition of a special parole term, but also of the possible imposition of a term of supervised release. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13784 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7077

Section 7077, which is identical in substance to Section 178 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 1345 to permit the United States to bring an action to enjoin a violation of 18 U.S.C. 287 (false claims), 18 U.S.C. 371 (conspiracy to defraud the government), and 18 U.S.C. 1001 (false statements to the government). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13784 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7078

Section 7078 is similar to Section 179 of S. 2485. Section 7078 amends 18 U.S.C. ch. 73 by adding a new section (1516) penalizing the obstruction of a federal audit. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13784 (daily ed. June 8, 1988). New section 1516(a), as proposed in section 179 of S. 2485, would have penalized conduct engaged in "with intent to deceive or defraud." New section 1516(a), as proposed in section 7078, narrows the provision by penalizing any person "with intent to deceive or defraud the United States" (emphasis added).

SECTION 7079

Section 7079, which is identical to Section 180 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 709 to prohibit the use of the name or the initials of the United States Secret Service without permission of that agency. The offense has misdemeanor penalties. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13784 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7080

Section 7080, which is identical to Section 181 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 2314, which establishes penalties for schemes to defraud victims of at least $5,000. Section 7080 clarifies that the provision applies to a scheme to defraud multiple victims if, in the aggregate, the amount involved is at least $5,000. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13785 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7081

Section 7081 is identical in substance to Section 182 of S. 2485. Section 7081 amends 18 U.S.C. 3288 and 3289, statute of limitations provisions that deal with what happens when a timely-brought charge is dismissed after or shortly before the limitation period expires. If the charge is dismissed after the period has run, 18 U.S.C. 3288 extends the limitations period by 6 months to permit the government to bring new charges. If the charge is dismissed within six months of the date of expiration of the period of limitations, 18 U.S.C. 3289 likewise extends the period by 6 months to permit the government to bring new charges. Section 7081 would amend both provisions, in the event of an appeal resulting in the dismissal of charges, to give the government an additional 60 days from the date of the dismissal in which to bring new charges. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13785 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7082

Section 7082 is similar to Section 184 of S. 2485. Section 7082(a) amends 18 U.S.C. 3573 to clarify that procedures to reduce or eliminate outstanding fines and penalty assessments apply to fines imposed before the enactment of the Criminal Fine Improvement Act of 1987 (CFIA).[2] Section 7082(b) amends 18 U.S.C. 3013(c) to make clear that the five-year statute of limitations established by that provision for special assessments also applies to assessments made before the CFIA took effect on December 11, 1987. Section 7082(c) amends 18 U.S.C. 3612 to clarify that the Attorney General may waive interest and penalties on pre-CFIA fines. Section 7082(d) amends 18 U.S.C. 3612(d) and (e) to remove the requirement that the government use certified mail to send notices of delinquency or default in collecting fines or penalties. See

SECTION 7083

Section 7083, which is identical to Section 185 of S. 2485, makes a grammatical correction in 28 U.S.C. 994(n). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13785 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7084

Section 7084, which is identical to Section 186 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. ch. 207 by adding a new section (3151) restoring the language of former 18 U.S.C. 3150(a), which was inadvertently repealed by the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984.[3] New section 3151 would reauthorize the government to refund bail in cases where bail was mistakenly forfeited or should be refunded due to extenuating circumstances.

SECTION 7085

Section 7085, amends 18 U.S.C. 3013 which requires the court to impose a special assessment upon every person convicted of a federal offense. Section 7085 revises the amount of the special assessment that is to be levied upon a defendant convicted of a misdemeanor. At present, 18 U.S.C. 3013(a)(1) requires a $25 special assessment for an individual and $100 for an organization, without regard to the seriousness of the misdemeanor. Section 7085 establishes an amount based upon the seriousness of the offense. For the most serious misdemeanors, those carrying a maximum prison term of more than 6 months, the special assessment will be $25 for individuals and $125 for organizations. For misdemeanors carrying a maximum prison term of at least 30 days, the special assessment will be $10 for individuals and $50 for organizations. For the least serious misdemeanors, those carrying a maximum of no more than 30 days imprisonment, the special assessment will be $5 for individuals and $25 for organizations.

A United States district court has found unconstitutional the practice of imposing a special assessment for an offense when a person is convicted of that offense after trial but not when a person posts and forfeits collateral for that offense.[4] Section 187 of S. 2485 sought to address that situation by providing that a special assessment would not be imposed if a local rule of court or other federal law allowed a defendant to forfeit collateral for the offense. The enactment of Section 187 of S. 2485 would have resulted in a lack of uniformity, so that a defendant in one jurisdiction convicted of a certain offense would have to pay a special assessment, while a defendant in a different jurisdiction convicted of the same offense might not.

Section 7085 does not address the matter because the matter can be taken care of without legislation if the collateral required for an offense includes an amount to cover the special assessment. For example, if an offense is an infraction for which the fine customarily is $25, the collateral required would be $30—$25 for the fine and $5 for the special assessment. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13786 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7086

Section 7086, which is identical to Section 188 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 3563(a)(2), which provides that a court must impose payment of a fine, restitution, or community service as a condition of probation. Section 7086 would permit a court, in those rare cases where "extraordinary circumstances exist that would make such a condition plainly unreasonable", to impose instead at least one of the conditions from 18 U.S.C. 3563(b). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13786 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7087

Section 7087, which is identical to Section 189 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 3184, which provides that the government may obtain warrants for the arrest of a fugitive if the person is within the jurisdiction of the issuing court. Section 7087 amends 18 U.S.C. 3184 to permit a judge or magistrate of the District of Columbia to issue an arrest warrant if the location of the fugitive is unknown. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13785 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7088

Section 7088, which is identical to Section 190 of S. 2485, amends 42 U.S.C. 408, which establishes penalties for the misuse or misrepresentation of social security numbers. Section 7088(3) defines the terms "social security number" and "social security account number" for the purposes of the subsection. Paragraphs (1) and (2) of Section 7088 also amend 42 U.S. 408 to incorporate the fine levels provided by 18 U.S.C. 3571. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13785 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7089

Section 7089, which is identical to Section 191 of S. 2485, amends the definitions of the term "petty offense" in 18 U.S.C. 19, rule 9 of the rules of Procedure for the Trial of Misdemeanors before United States Magistrates, and Rule 54 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The significance of the label "petty offense" is that the constitutional right to a jury trial does not apply if a person is charged with a petty offense.[5] The term "petty offense" is presently defined by 18 U.S.C. 19 to be "a class B misdemeanor, a class C misdemeanor, or an infraction." The terms "class B misdemeanor", "class C misdemeanor", and "infraction" are in turn defined in 18 U.S.C. 3559(a) by the maximum term of imprisonment that can be imposed. Thus, it is possible for an offense carrying a maximum term of imprisonment of 5 days, an infraction under 18 U.S.C. 3559(a)(1)(I), to have a fine so substantial that the offense would not be a "petty offense" for the purpose of the exception to the right of a jury trial.

Section 7089(a) modifies the definition of "petty offense" in 18 U.S.C. 19 by providing that a petty offense cannot call for a fine in excess of $5,000 for an individual and $10,000 for an organization, the maximum fine levels set forth in 18 U.S.C. 3571(b)(6) and (7). Section 7089(b) amends Rule 9 of the Rules of Procedure so that its definition of "petty offense" is a cross-reference to 18 U.S.C. 19. Section 7089(c) makes similar amendment to Rule 54 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

SECTION 7090

Section 7090 is identical in substance to Section 192 of S. 2485. Section 7090(a) amends 39 U.S.C. ch. 30 by adding a new section (3002a) to penalize the mailing of locksmithing devices. Proposed 39 U.S.C. 3002a(a) makes a locksmithing device nonmailable unless the device is to be delivered to a lock manufacturer or distributor, a bona fide locksmith, a bona fide repossessor, or a motor vehicle manufacturer or dealer. Proposed 39 U.S.C. 3002a(b) defines the term "locksmithing device" to be a tool or device (other than a key) designed to manipulate lock tumblers into the unlocked position through the keyway of the lock; a tool or device (other than that just described) designed for opening or bypassing a lock or similar security device; and a tool or device designed for making an impression of a key or similar security device to duplicate such a key or device. Section 7090(b) amends the table of sections for 39 U.S.C. ch. 30 to add a reference to proposed section 3002a.

Section 7090(c) amends 18 U.S.C. 1716a, relating to nonmailable material. Section 7090(c)(1) makes present 18 U.S.C. 1716a subsection (a) and adds a new subsection (b) to provide criminal penalties for mailing locksmithing devices. Proposed new section 1716a(b) makes it an offense to knowingly mail, or to cause to be delivered by interstate delivery, a locksmithing device. The maximum penalty is imprisonment for one year and a fine under title 18.[6]

Section 7090(d) amends the table of sections for 18 U.S.C. ch. 83 to conform the caption of section 1716a to the new caption of that section.

SECTION 7091

Section 7091, which is identical to Section 195 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. 3143(b), which relates to the setting of bail pending appeal. See 134 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD 13787 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7092

Section 7092 which is identical to Section 196 of S. 2485, amends 18 U.S.C. ch. 206 by adding a new section (3125) to provide for emergency installation of a pen register or a trap and trace device. See 134 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD 13787 (daily ed June 8,1988).

TITLE VII, SUBTITLE C

SENTENCING AMENDMENTS

Subtitle C of title VII of the legislation makes several changes to sentencing provisions of titles 18 and 8 of the United States Code. These changes, like those in subtitle B of title VII, have been worked out in conjunction with the interested parties, including the U.S. Sentencing Commission, the U.S. Parole Commission, the Department of Justice, and the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts.

On behalf of the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, I want to thank Michael Abbell, Esq., a Washington, D.C. partner in the law firm of Kaplan, Russin, and Vecchi, for his assistance in the drafting of section 7101. Mr. Abbell is an expert on prisoner transfer treaty matters and was most helpful to the Subcommittee.

The provisions of subtitle C are explained in the following section-by-section analysis.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF TITLE VII, SUBTITLE C

SENTENCING AMENDMENTS

Sections 7101 through 7112 are derived from Sections 301 and 310 through 320 of S. 2485. There are no comparable provisions in H.R. 2182.

SECTION 7101

Section 7101 is essential to the continued implementation of prisoner transfer treaties that the United States presently has in force with 18 countries and to the implementation of prisoner transfer treaties that come into force in the future. The prisoner transfer treaties permit a United States national convicted in one of the countries with which such a treaty is in force to elect to return to the United States for service of the foreign sentence.[7]

The Sentencing Reform Act of 1984[8] established a new sentencing system that took effect on November 1, 1987. The new system requires federal courts to use sentencing guidelines to sentence persons convicted of federal crimes committed before October 31, 1987. The sentencing Reform Act also abolished parole for offenses committed after October 31, 1987, and calls for the abolition of the Parole Commission on November 1, 1992.[9]

The Sentencing Act of 1987 amended 18 U.S.C. 4106 (relating to transfer of offenders on parole; parole of offenders transferred) so that section 4106 applies only to a person convicted in a foreign court of an offense committed before November 1, 1987. Section 4106 directs the Parole Commission to determine for such a person the length of time to be served in prison and on parole. The Parole Commission makes this determination by applying the parole guidelines as if that person had been convicted of the offense in a federal court in the United States and had received the same sentence.

While section 4106 applies if a person is convicted of an offense committed before November 1, 1987 there is presently no provision of federal law covering a person who is convicted in a foreign country of an offense committed on or after November 1, 1987 and who seeks a transfer to the United States under a prisoner transfer treaty for service of the foreign sentence. No agency of the federal government is authorized to determine the period of imprisonment such a prisoner must serve in the United States; whether the prisoner should serve a period of supervised release in the United States; and, if the prisoner should serve a period of supervised release, what will be the length and conditions of the supervised release. If the prisoner transfer treaties are to be implemented for United States nationals who commit offenses in a foreign country after November 1, 1987, legislation is necessary.

The initial determination that must be made before a prisoner returns to the United States is whether the prisoner's return is voluntary and made with full knowledge of the consequences of the transfer. That determination, under 18 U.S.C. 4108(a), is made by a United States magistrate or a court-appointed verifying officer in a proceeding in the sentencing country. There are other determinations that must be made, however, after that prisoner transfers to the United States—the period of imprisonment the prisoner should serve; whether the prisoner should serve a period of supervised release; and the period and conditions of supervised release if supervised release is determined to be appropriate. It is impracticable for these determinations to be made by a United States magistrate or court-appointed verifying officer at the consent verification proceeding.

Section 7101 provides a short-term solution, one that will apply until the Parole Commission goes out of existence on November 1, 1992. There are serious constitutional problems created by the Parole Commission's going out of existence at that time, and Congress will have to deal with those problems before then. Section 7101, however, does not address those problems, nor does section 7101 extend the life of the Parole Commission beyond November 1, 1992.

Section 7101(a) adds a new section (4106A) to 18 U.S.C. ch. 306 (relating to transfer to or from foreign countries). Proposed section 4106A(a) requires the Parole Commission to supervise prisoners on parole in a foreign country who transfer to the United States. Proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(A) requires the Parole Commission, for a prisoner returned to this country to serve a term of imprisonment for an offense committed after October 31, 1987, to determine the length of the prisoner's period of imprisonment and whether to impose a period of supervised release. If the Parole Commission determines that a period of supervised release is appropriate, proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(A) requires the Parole Commission to set the period and conditions of that supervised release. Proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(A) requires the Parole Commission to make these determinations "as though the offender was convicted in a United States district court of a similar offense."

The phrase "as though the offender was convicted in a United States district court of a similar offense" puts the Parole Commission, with regard to a prisoner who transfers to the United States for the service of sentence, in the position of a United States district court relative to a convicted defendant. Thus, the Parole Commission must use the sentencing guidelines and make the findings necessary to determine the applicable guideline range. Like a United States district court, the Parole Commission is not required to stay within that range but can depart—upward or downward—on the same basis that a federal court can depart from the guidelines.[10]

Because the conditions in foreign prisons and the treatment of persons arrested by foreign authorities may vary considerably from the conditions in federal prisons and the treatment of persons arrested in this country, it can be expected that the Parole Commission will have to decide what impact harsh treatment in another country should have upon the Parole Commission's determinations on imprisonment and supervised release. If, for example, the Parole Commission finds that the prisoner was abused when interrogated, the Parole Commission could use that fact to justify a period of imprisonment at the bottom of the guideline range. If the Parole Commission finds that a prisoner who transfers to the United States had been tortured in the sentencing country, from which the prisoner transfers, then that finding could be a basis for the Parole Commission to depart below the applicable guideline range.

There are several limitations on the Parole Commission's authority. First, proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(B)(i) requires the Parole Commission to consider any recommendation of the United States Probation Service. Proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(D) requires the Probation Service to carry out the duties imposed upon a probation officer by 18 U.S.C. 3552. Thus, the Probation Service, after the offender's transfer to the United States, will prepare a report concerning the offender's background, the offense for which the offender has been convicted, the applicable guideline range, and other matters usually included in a report of a presentence investigation.[11]

A second limitation on the Parole Commission, imposed by proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(B)(ii), requires the Parole Commission to consider any documents provided by the transferring country. A third limitation, imposed by proposed section 4106A(b)(1)(C), requires that the combined periods of imprisonment and supervised release not exceed the term of imprisonment of the transferred foreign sentence.

Proposed section 4106A(b)(2)(A) gives the aggrieved party 45 days in which to appeal a Parole Commission determination. The appeal must be to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the prisoner is imprisoned at the time of the Parole Commission's determination concerning the prisoner. Proposed section 4106A(b)(2)(B) requires the court of appeals to decide the appeal "as though the determination appealed had been a sentence imposed by a United States district court."[12]

Proposed section 4106A(b)(3) requires that the United States district court for the district in which the prisoner resides to supervise the prisoner during any period of supervised release.

Proposed section 4106A(c) provides that section 4106A applies only to offenses committed on or after November 1, 1987.[13]

Section 7101(b) amends 18 U.S.C. 4108(a), which presently requires that a United States magistrate or court-appointed verifying officer, before a prisoner in a foreign country transfers to the United States, verify that the prisoner has "full knowledge" of the transfer's consequences, "including any term of imprisonment or term of supervised release specified in the applicable sentencing guidelines promulgated pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 994(a)(1)". It is not possible, however, for such a prisoner to be advised at that time of "any term of imprisonment or term of supervised release specified in the applicable sentencing guidelines". Indeed, if there are disputed facts that affect guideline determinations, it is not possible for the prisoner to know the applicable guideline range until after the Parole Commission has resolved the factual issues. Because of this, section 7101(b) deletes the requirement that the United States magistrate or court-appointed verifying officer verify that the prisoner is aware of the term of imprisonment and term of supervised release called for by the guidelines.

Section 7101(b), however, does not leave a prisoner without information concerning what sort of period of imprisonment and period of supervised release to expect. The prisoner is entitled, under 18 U.S.C. 4109, to consult with counsel. If the prisoner cannot afford counsel, 18 U.S.C. 4109 authorizes the appointment of counsel at government expense. The prisoner's counsel can be expected to advise the prisoner concerning the period of imprisonment and the period of supervised release likely to be set by the Parole Commission.

Section 7101(c) amends the table of sections for 18 U.S.C. ch. 306 to add a reference to new section 4106A.

Section 7101 also amends prisoner transfer treaty provisions in 18 U.S.C. ch. 306 concerning representation by counsel and the appointment of guardians ad litem. Section 7101(d) amends 18 U.S.C. 4109 to permit a prisoner to be represented by an attorney at a proceeding before the Parole Commission under 18 U.S.C. 4106A. Section 7101(d) also provides that, if the prisoner is unable to afford counsel, counsel will be appointed under 18 U.S.C. 3006A to represent the prisoner. Section 7101(f)(1) amends 18 U.S.C. 3006A(a)(1) to authorize payment of an attorney appointed to represent a prisoner at a Parole Commission proceeding under 18 U.S.C. 4106A, or in an appeal from a Parole Commission determination under 18 U.S.C. 4106A. Section 7101(f)(2) amends 18 U.S.C. 3006A(d)(2) to set the maximum amount that may be paid to an attorney representing a prisoner at a Parole Commission proceeding under 18 U.S.C. 4106 or in an appeal from a Parole Commission determination under 18 U.S.C. 4106A.

Section 7101(e)(1) amends 18 U.S.C. 4100 to authorize the appointment of a guardian ad litem to represent a financially eligible prisoner at a proceeding to determine if the prisoner knowingly and voluntarily consents to transfer to the United States, if the verifying officer deems the prisoner to be mentally incompetent or otherwise incapable of knowingly and voluntarily consenting. The amendment made by Section 7101(e)(2) makes clear that the guardian ad litem and counsel representing the prisoner may not be the same person. Section 7101(d) amends 18 U.S.C. 4109 to provide for the compensation and payment of expenses of a person appointed guardian ad litem under 18 U.S.C. 4100.

SECTION 7102

Section 7102 is identical to section 311 of S. 2485. The purpose of section 7102 is to give a sentencing court the discretion to decide in what form to provide the court's statement of reasons for the imposition of a particular sentence to the appropriate agencies. At present, 18 U.S.C. 3553(c) requires a sentencing court to transmit a transcription of the court's statement of reasons. Section 7102 amends 18 U.S.C. 3553(c) to permit the court to send the information to appropriate agencies in a transcription or "other appropriate public record". See 134 Cong. Rec. 13788 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7103

Section 7103 amends provisions of titles 18 and 28, United States Code, pertaining to appellate review of sentences.

Section 7103(a)(1) amends subsections (a)(2) and (b)(2) of 18 U.S.C. 3742, which refer to guidelines "issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 994(1)". Since the Sentencing Commission has the authority to issue emergency guidelines,[14] and since Congress has the inherent power to enact a guideline or an amendment to a guideline, subsections (a)(2) and (b)(2) raise the question whether a party can appeal from a sentence if the appeal involves a guideline issued under the Sentencing Commission's emergency guideline authority or enacted by Congress. A strict reading of 18 U.S.C. 3742 would not allow appeal in such a situation. Section 212(a)(1) deletes the phase "issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 994(1)", thereby precluding such a result.

Sections 7103(a) (2) and (8) amends 18 U.S.C. 3742 concerning when a defendant can appeal a sentence that is greater than the sentence called for by the applicable guideline range. Sections 7103(a) (2) and (8) amends 18 U.S.C. 3742 (a)(3) and (c) to authorize a defendant to appeal such a sentence if the sentence is greater than the sentence set forth in a plea agreement under Rule 11(e)(1)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Rule 11(e)(1)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure authorizes a plea agreement in which the parties specify that a particular sentence is "the appropriate disposition of the case". Rule 11(e)(4) permits the defendant to withdraw the plea if the court indicates that a sentence other than that set forth in the plea agreement will be imposed. If the defendant persists in the plea and the court imposes a sentence greater than the sentence called for by the applicable guideline range, the defendant can appeal if the sentence is greater than the sentence set forth in the Rule 11(e)(1)(C) plea agreement.

Sections 7103(a) (3) and (8) makes changes in 18 U.S.C. 3742 concerning appeal of sentence by the government that are parallel to the changes sections 7103(a) (2) and (8) makes in 18 U.S.C. 3742 concerning appeal of sentence by a defendant. Sections 7103(a) (3) and (8) amends 18 U.S.C. 3742 (b)(3) and (c) to authorize the government to appeal a sentence that is below the sentence called for by the applicable guideline range if the sentence is less than the sentence set forth in a plea agreement under Rule 11(e)(1)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Sections 7103(a) (4) and (8) in the nature of a substitute deal with appeal by a defendant of a sentence that was imposed for a sentence for which there is no sentencing guideline. Section 7103(a)(4) deletes a reference in 18 U.S.C. 3742(a)(4) to a guideline "issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 994(a)(1)". For reasons set forth above in the analysis of section 7103(a)(1), section 7103(a)(4) deletes that phrase. Section 7103(a)(4) also deletes language in 18 U.S.C. 3742(a)(4) concerning plea agreements because section 7103(a)(8) adds a new subsection to 18 U.S.C. 3742 dealing specifically with plea agreements.

Sections 7103(a) (5) and (8) makes changes in 18 U.S.C. 3742 concerning appeal of sentence by the government for which there is no sentencing guideline that are paralled to the changes sections 7103(a) (4) and (8) makes in 18 U.S.C. 3742 concerning appeal of sentence by a defendant.

Section 7103(a)(6) in the nature of a substitute makes a clerical amendment in 18 U.S.C. 3742 (d)(3) and (e)(2) so that there is consistency in the use of the phrase "applicable guideline range".

Section 7103(a)(7) amends 18 U.S.C. 3742(d), which requires the court of appeals, when reviewing a sentence on appeal, to give due regard to the opportunity of the district court to judge the credibility of witnesses and to accept a district court's finding of fact unless the finding is "clearly erroneous".[15] When an aggrieved party appeals a sentence alleging a misapplication of the guidelines (i.e., that the sentence is the result of an incorrect application of the guidelines),[16] the standard the court of appeals is to apply when reviewing that sentence depends upon the nature of the alleged misapplication of the guidelines. The appellate court must accept a district court finding of fact unless the finding is clearly erroneous.[17] The court of appeals will scrutinize more closely a district court determination of a legal question, applying a de novo standard.[18]

Not every alleged misapplication of the guidelines will involve a finding of fact, however. Application of the guidelines involves a number of subjective determinations. For example, section 3A1.1 of the sentencing guidelines requires the district court to increase a defendant's offense level by 2 levels if the defendant knew or should have known that the victim of the offense was "unusually valunerable due to age, [or] physical or mental condition". Although there may be a factual element to making such a determination, such as the victim's exact age or what (if any) physicial aliment the victim had, the overall determination is not an objective finding of fact. Making the subjective determination required by section 3A1.1 (whether the victim was "unusualy vulnerable"), unlike resolving purely factural questions, is not uniquely within the district court's expertise. The clearly erroneous standard, therefore, would be inappropriate.

On the other hand, because a determination under section 3A1.1 of the sentencing guidelines depends heavily on the unique factual pattern of the case, that determination cannot be considered simply a legal question. Section 3742 recognizes the importance of the district court's role in fact determinations by instructing the court of appeals to "give due regard to the opportunity of the district court to judge the credibility of the witnesses".[19] The de novo standard, therefore, is also inappropriate.

Section 7103(a)(7) amends 18 U.S.C. 3742(d) to require the court of appeals to give "due deference to the district court's application of the guidelines to the facts". This standard is intended to give the court of appeals flexibility in reviewing an application of a guideline standard that involves some subjectivity. The deference due a district court's determination will depend upon the relationship of the facts found to the guidelines standard being applied. If the particular determination involved closely resembles a finding of fact, the court of appeals would apply a clearly erroneous test. As the determination approaches a purely legal determination, however, the court of appeals would review the determination more closely.

Section 7103(a)(8) in the nature of a substitute inserts a new subsection (c) in 18 U.S.C. 3742 that deals with the impact of a plea agreement upon an appeal under subsections (a) (3) and (4) and (b) (3) and (4) of 18 U.S.C. 3742.[20] Proposed 18 U.S.C. 3742(c)(1) precludes a defendant's appeal under 18 U.S.C. 3742(a) (3) and (4) unless the sentence imposed is greater than the sentence set forth in a plea agreement under Rule 11(e)(1)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedrue. Proposed 18 U.S.C. 3742(c)(2) precludes the government's appeal under 18 U.S.C. 3742(b) (3) and (4) unless the sentence imposed is less than the sentence set forth in a plea agreement under Rule 11(e)(1)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.[21]

Section 7103(a)(9) in the nature of a substitute adds a new subsection (subsection (h)) to 18 U.S.C. 3742. Proposed subsection (h) provides that for the purposes of 18 U.S.C. 3742, the term "guideline range" includes a range having the same upper and lower limits. Proposed subsection (h) was added out of an abundance of caution and sets forth what would be the interpretation of the term "guideline range" even in the absence of proposed subsection (h). The term "range" means "the limits between which a thing may vary in amount or degree".[22] Thus, since "the limits between which a thing may vary in amount" (the range) can be zero months, a range can be a single point.[23]

Section 7103(b) in the nature of a substitute amends 28 U.S.C. 994(a)(1) to clarify that the Sentencing Commission is authorized to issue guidelines concerning two discrtionary conditions of probation set forth in 18 U.S.C. 3563(b).

SECTION 7104

Section 7104 is identical to section 313 of S. 2485, with one exception. The purpose of section 7104 is explicitly to authorize the Sentencing Commission to retain outside legal counsel. The Commission's authority to do so may already exist because 28 U.S.C. 995(a)(6) authorizes the Commission to "enter into and perform such contracts . . . as may be necessary in the conduct of the functions of the Commission . . . with any person, firm, association, corporation, educational institution, or nonprofit organization". Since 28 U.S.C. 995(a)(6) does not specifically refer to the retention of legal counsel, however, it would seem desirable to forestall any question about the Commission's authority to do so. Section 7104, therefore, amends 28 U.S.C. 995(a) specifically to authorize the Commission to hire private counsel and pay reasonable attorney's fees to counsel.

Section 7104 of S. 2485 amended section 995(a) to provide that counsel so retained by the Commission "may be considered special government employees as defined in section 202(a) of title 18". Section 7104 has changed that phrase to provide that such counsel "shall" be so considered.

SECTION 7105

Section 7105 is identical to section 314 of S. 2485. Section 7105 amends 28 U.S.C. 995(2) to increase the maximum salary that the Sentencing Commission is authorized to pay its staff director. The increase is from grade 18 of the general schedule (presently capped at $72,500) to level 6 of the senior executive service schedule (presently $77,500). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13788–89 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7106

Section 7106 is identical to section 315 of S. 2485 and gives the Sentencing Commission the authority to make incentive awards to Commission employees, a power that most other federal agencies have. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13789 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7107

Section 7107 is identical to section 316 of S. 2485 and corrects a cross-reference in 18 U.S.C. 3582(c). See 134 Cong. Rec. 13789 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

SECTION 7108

Section 7108 is derived from section 317 of S. 2485. Section 7108(a) is identical to section 317(a) of S. 2485. Section 7108(a) amends U.S.C. 3553(d), which sets forth conditions that the court may impose on a person sentenced to a term of supervised release, to require that any condition so imposed be reasonably related to, and involve no greater deprivation of liberty than is reasonably necessary for, protecting the public from "further crimes of the defendant".

Section 7108(b)(1) is identical to section 317 of S. 2485. Section 7108(b)(1) amends 18 U.S.C. 3583(e), which authorizes a court to modify conditions of supervised release or terminate a term of supervised release after considering certain factors. Section 7108(b)(1) amends 18 U.S.C. 3583(e) to require the court to consider the need to protect the public from "further crimes of the defendant".

Section 7108(b)(2) amends 18 U.S.C. 3583(e) by striking out paragraph (3), which provides that the court can treat a violation of a condition of supervised release as a contempt of court under 18 U.S.C. 401(3).

SECTION 7109

Section 7109 amends 28 U.S.C. 994(p), which deals with the authority of the Sentencing Commission to amend the sentencing guidelines. As amended by section 7109, 28 U.S.C. 994(p) authorizes the Sentencing Commission to issue amendments to guidelines. An amendment, together with a statement of the reasons for the amendment, must be submitted to Congress at or after the start of a Session of Congress, but no later than May 1. An amendment so submitted takes effect when the Commission prescribes, but in no event sooner than 180 days after submission to Congress or later than November 1 of the calendar year in which the amendment is submitted.

Section 994(p) as amended by section 7109 also authorizes the Sentencing Commission to modify an amendment submitted to Congress before the amendment takes effect. The amendment as modified takes effect when the Commission prescribes, but in no event sooner than 180 days after submission to Congress or later than November 1 of the calendar year in which the modification is submitted. Finally, section 994(p) as amended by section 7109, carrying forward in modified form language from the previous section 994(p), states a proposition that is true even in the absence of any express statutory language: Congress can modify the effective date of any amendment to the guidelines or any modification of an amendment to the guidelines, and can change or disapprove any amendment to the guidelines or any modification of an amendment to the guidelines.

SECTION 7110

Section 7110 is identical to section 319 of S. 2485 and removes an ambiguity in 18 U.S.C. 3563(b)(3). Section 3563(b)(3), which authorizes the court to order as a discretionary condition of probation that the offender "make restitution to a victim of the offense pursuant to the provision of section 3556" of title 18, may be read to limit the availability of restitution as a criminal sanction because 18 U.S.C. 3556 provides that, when imposing sentence, the court "may order restitution in accordance with sections 3663 and 3664."

Section 3663(a), however, limits the offenses to which the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 3663 and 3664 apply to title 18 offenses and certain offenses under the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (located in title 49 of the United States Code). If the phrase "in accordance with" as used in 18 U.S.C. 3556 is read to incorporate all of the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 3663, including the limitation of 18 U.S.C. 3663(a), then the effect of 18 U.S.C. 3556 is to permit the court to order restitution as a condition of probation only for title 18 offenses and the offenses under the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 set forth in 18 U.S.C. 3663(a).

Section 7110 eliminates the ambiguity by amending 18 U.S.C. 3563(b)(3) to provide that the court may order restitution as a condition of probation pursuant to the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 3663 and 3664 "(but not subject to the limitations of [section] 3663(a))".

SECTION 7111

Section 7111 is identical to section 320 of S. 2485 and amends Rule 4(b) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure in respect to calculating the time for filing a notice of appeal of a sentence. See 134 Cong. Rec. 13790 (daily ed. June 8, 1988).

7. The prisoner transfer treaties are reciprocal to the extent that an offender is convicted in a federal court or in a court in one of the approximately 30 states that have enacted legislation permitting offenders convicted in that state to transfer to a foreign country. Thus, a foreign citizen imprisoned for a federal offense in the United States may elect to return to the country of which that person is a national for service of sentence. Section 201 does not affect that aspect of the prisoner transfer treaties.

12. Thus, for example, if the defendant is claiming that the Parole Commission's determination was the result of an incorrect application of the sentencing guidelines, the defendant would file a notice of appeal under 18 U.S.C. 3742(a)(2). Likewise, if the government is claiming that the Parole Commission's determination was the result of an incorrect application of the sentencing guidelines, the government would file a notice of appeal under 18 U.S.C. 3742(b)(2). If the court of appeals finds under 18 U.S.C. 3742(d) that the Parole Commission determination was the result of an incorrect application of the guidelines, then the court of appeals must, under 18 U.S.C. 3742(e), remand the matter to the Parole Commission for further proceedings.

Because the Parole Commission is acting "as though" it were a United States district court imposing sentence on a defendant convicted of a federal offense, a prisoner with a determination under 18 U.S.C. 4106A pending before the Parole Commission is entitled to the benefit of all procedures relevant to sentencing to which such a defendant is entitled. Thus, the Parole Commission may have to hold a hearing to resolve disputes about facts relevant to determining the applicable guideline range.

13. The comparable provision of section 4106A in S. 2485 as passed by the Senate refers to offenses "completed" on or after November 1, 1987. The amendment in the nature of a substitute replaces the term "completed" with the term "committed," but there is probably no difference in the result produced by the two terms. See 133 Cong. Rec. H10017, H10019 n. 5 (daily ed. Nov. 16, 1987) (section-by-section analysis of Sentencing Act of 1987).

For example, A and B agree to rob a bank on October 31, 1987 and commit an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy on that date. A and B actually rob the bank the following day, November 1, 1987. A and B have committed conspiracy to commit robbery as of October 31 (i.e., have "completed" the offense), even if they do not later actually commit the robbery, for they had, as of October 31, committed (completed) all of the elements of the crime of conspiracy. Nothing A and B could do after October 31 would erase their liability for the conspiracy. A and B's liability for the actual robbery, however, attaches on November 1, the date the robbery took place, because that is when the elements of the substantive offense were committed (i.e., the offense was "completed"). A and B, at any time before November 1, could have prevented the attaching of criminal liability (the completion of the offense of robbery) simply by not carrying out the plan to rob the bank.

The ex post facto clause of the Constitution provides that an offender cannot be given punishment that is harsher than the punishment in effect on the date when the crime was committed. U.S. Const. art. I, §9, cl. 3. See Weaver V. Graham, 450 U.S. 24, 29 (1981); Beazell v. Ohio, 269 U.S. 167, 169–70 (1925). If the above example occurred in a country with which a prisoner transfer treaty is in force, whether the provisions of proposed section 4106A would apply if A and B transfer to the United States will depend upon whether they are convicted of the conspiracy or the substantive offense. If they are convicted of conspiracy, then proposed section 4106A will not apply because the crime of conspiracy to rob was not committed ("completed") on or after November 1, 1987. Instead, the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 4106 will apply because that section applies to offenses committed ("completed") before November 1, 1987. If they are convicted of the substantive offense, then proposed section 4106A applies because the substantive offense was committed ("completed") on November 1.

14. Sentencing Act of 1987, Pub. L. No. 100–182, § 21, 101 Stat. 1271.

15. The clearly erroneous test does not require the court of appeals to defer entirely to the lower court. In fact, the clearly erroneous test does not require as much deference to the lower court as a substantial evidence test, which requires the court of appeals to inquire whether the lower court could reasonably have made the particular finding. The clearly erroneous test does not require as much deference to the lower court, for "findings may be clearly erroneous without being unreasonable." K. Davis, Adminstrative Law Text 543 (3d ed. 1972).

18. See K. Davis, Administrative Law Text ch. 29 (3d ed. 1972).

19. 18 U.S.C. 3742(d).

20. Two of those provisions, as amended by this legislation, authorize the defendant to appeal a sentence that is greater than the sentence called for by the applicable guideline range, 18 U.S.C. 3742(a) (3), or that is imposed for a sentence for which no sentencing guideline has been issued and that is plainly unreasonable, 18 U.S.C. 3742(a) (4). The other two provisions, as amended by this legislation, authorize the government to appeal a sentence that is less than the sentence called for by the applicable guideline range, 18 U.S.C. 3742(b) (3), or that is imposed for a sentence for which no sentencing guideline has been issued and that is plainly unreasonable, 18 U.S.C. 3742(a) (4).

21. 18 U.S.C. 3742 presently authorizes an aggrieved party to file a notice of appeal if the sentence imposed is outside of the applicable guideline range—above that range in the case of a defendant, and below that range in the case of the government—and outside of a plea agreement under Rule 11(e) (1) (B) or 11(e) (1) (C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure—above the sentence specified in the plea agreement in the case of the defendant, and below that sentence in the case of the government. A Rule 11(e) (1) (B) plea agreement requires that government to make a sentence recommendation, or not oppose a sentence request of the defendant. Unlike a Rule 11(e) (1) (C) plea agreement, a Rule 11(e) (1) (B) plea agreement does not always set forth a specific sentence that is being recommended or not opposed. Rule 11(e) (1) (B) plea agreements are of widely varying degrees of specificity and may simply contain a general statement ("The government recommends leniency").

Section 212(a) (8) of the amendment deletes the reference to Rule 11(e) (1) (B). Thus, under 18 U.S.C. 3742 as amended by section 212(a) (8) of the amendment, an aggrieved party can file a notice of appeal even though the sentence imposed is not outside of the sentence set forth in a plea agreement under Rule 11(e) (1) (B). Such an appeal is unlikely to succeed, however, for it is difficult to characterize as "unreasonable", the standard set by 18 U.S.C. 3742(d) (3), a sentence that the party appealing had agreed to as part of a plea agreement.

TITLE VII, SUBTITLE D

VICTIMS OF CRIME

Title VII, subtitle D of the legislation deals with the Victims of Crime Act [VOCA], which was enacted in 1984 as part of the Comprehensive Crime Control Act. The comparable provisions in the Senate-passed bill have been significantly changed as the result of negotiations with the Senate. On the part of the House, the Judiciary Committee and the Education and Labor Committee were involved in working out a compromise, as was the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families.

The Victims of Crime Act establishes a crime victims fund consisting of fines and monetary penalties collected from persons convicted of Federal crimes. No tax dollars go into the fund.

The fund is used for four purposes, to aid State crime victim compensation programs, to aid crime victim assistance programs, to provide assistance to victims of Federal crimes, and to fund certain programs under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act. The legislation addresses all four of these areas, and in addition increases the cap on the fund and calls for the fund to sunset at the end of fiscal year 1994.

With regard to crime victim compensation, the legislation adds two new requirements that a State crime victim compensation program must meet in order to qualify for money from the fund. First, the program must compensate State residents who are crime victims in another State that does not have an eligible crime victim compensation program. Second, the program cannot deny compensation to a crime victim simply on the basis of the victim's family relationship to the offender or because the victim and offender share a residence. The program can, however, deny compensation in order to avoid unjust enrichment of the offender. In addition, the legislation requires that a State make victims of drunk driving and domestic violence eligible for crime victim compensation.

In order to give the States time to comply with these requirements, the legislation gives the States 2 years to amend their laws. In the meantime, a crime victim compensation program that is otherwise eligible will continue to receive money from the crime victims fund. The legislation also increases the rate at which crime victim compensation programs will be reimbursed, from 35 to 40 percent.

With regard to crime victim assistance, the legislation does not alter the main purpose of VOCA—to assist in providing, on a continuing basis, high-quality services that directly affect the health and well-being of victims, and to ensure that rape crisis centers, domestic violence shelters, and child abuse programs—all of which provide such services—receive priority in the distribution of crime victim assistance money from the fund.

Services to crime victims span a wide range, from insuring that victims receive timely notification about the various proceedings in the process of prosecuting the person accused, to counseling to help the victim overcome the emotional trauma of the victimization. While all victims services are worthwhile, some services are more directly related to the emotional healing and recovery of the victim than others.

Since there is not enough money in the crime victims fund to permit funding of all victims services, VOCA ensures that services that directly affect the health and well-being of victims receive priority in the use of crime victims fund money. Thus, VOCA requires States to give priority to rape victims, child abuse victims, and domestic violence victims. The legislation does not alter that priority requirement.

The legislation does require the State chief executive, in distributing crime victim fund money to crime victim assistance programs, to make available money to programs that serve "previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime." In so doing, the chief executive should bear in mind that, consistent with VOCA, programs offering counseling services that are vitally important to the emotional healing and recovery of the victims served should be given priority over programs offering other types of services.

The statutory provision requiring the chief executive to make money available to programs serving "previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime" does not, however, require the commitment of any specific percentage of the State's crime victims fund money. The comparable provision in the Senate-passed bill likewise did not require the commitment of any specific percentage of the State's crime victims fund money.

During the Senate debate, the intention was expressed that this language be interpreted to require each State to make available to programs serving "previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime" at least 10 percent its crime victims fund money. The Senate's provision, with the intention, was not acceptable. The compromise provision in the legislation is a modification of the provision in the Senate-passed bill, and was included with the understanding that since the clear language of the compromise provision does not require the allocation of a specific percentage, no such requirement is intended. Thus, a State chief executive has the discretion to determine to what extent programs serving "previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime" should receive money from the State's share of the crime victims fund.

With regard to services for victims of Federal crimes, VOCA makes money available for two purposes—training and technical assistance, and direct services to victims. The legislation makes additional money available for the latter purpose, by providing that the Justice Department may spend 5 percent of amounts in the fund in excess of $100 million for direct services to victims.

Finally, with regard to Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act programs, VOCA requires the Department of Health and Human Services to administer money in the fund that is to be spent on those programs. The legislation as passed by the Senate would have transferred administration to the Justice Department, and in that form was not acceptable. The Senate agreed to drop that provision.

The legislation does give the Justice Department the responsibility to administer a portion of the money in the fund that is to be spent on Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act programs. Up to 15 percent of the money in the fund available for that purpose must be spent by the Justice Department to assist native American Indian tribes in developing, establishing, and operating programs to improve the handling of child abuse cases, particularly child sexual abuse cases, and to improve the investigation and prosecution of child abuse cases, particularly child sexual abuse cases.

I want to thank my colleagues who were involved in the drafting of this part of the legislation—Representative GUS HAWKINS, the chairman of the Education and Labor Committee; Representative GEORGE MILLER, the chairman of the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families; Representative PAT WILLIAMS, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education of the Education and Labor Committee; Representative HAMILTON FISH, the ranking Republican member of the Judiciary Committee; Representative GEORGE GEKAS, the ranking Republican member of the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice; and last, but certainly not least, Representative PETER W. RODINO, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who can fairly be called the father of the Victims of Crime Act.

I also want to express my appreciation to staff who contributed to this part of the legislation, in particular Wendy Lader, the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice's research assistant, who has done an outstanding job. In addition, Diane Shust, Virginia duRivage, Lisa Naftaly, and Tim Gilligan of the staff of the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, and Alan Lovesee of the staff of the Education and Labor Committee provided important help in the crafting of this part of the legislation.

The provisions of subtitle D are explained in the following section-by-section analysis. The section-by-section analysis may incorrectly refer to the section numbers in the bill as finally introduced. As my colleagues are aware, the final version of the bill is constantly being worked on. I have been assured, however, that the references to sections of the bill in this analysis are correct, at least as of the time the analysis was being typed. If the references are imprecise, the caption of the section being analyzed should make it possible to find in the bill the actual section.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF SECTION VII, SUBTITLE D

BACKGROUND

The Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) was enacted as part of the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 (Pub. L. No. 98-473, tit. II, ch XIV, 98 stat. 2170) to provide federal money to help crime victim assistance and compensation programs to carry out their work. Hearings held by the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice have shown that VOCA has had a significant impact on State efforts to aid victims of crime and has provided a valuable source of funding for victim programs.[1] As the Department of Justice recently pointed out, VOCA "serves as the cornerstone of the federal government's commitment to make victims of criminal acts whole again and to restore faith in the justice system."[2]

VOCA establishes a separate, self-generating Crime Victims Fund in the Treasury consisting, not of tax dollars, but of collections of fines and special penalty assessments levied against convicted defendants, forfeited appearance bonds, and so-called "Son-of-Sam" forfeitures. The Fund is presently capped at $110 million, with money in excess of that amount deposited in the general fund of the Treasury. Deposits in the Crime Victims Fund have been increasing since 1984, totalling $77.4 million in FY 1987 and approximately $90 million for FY 1988.

Section 1402(d)(2) of VOCA directs how the Crime Victims Fund is distributed. Of the first $100 million in the Fund, 49.5% goes to eligible State crime victim compensation programs; 45% to States for grants to eligible crime victim assistance programs; 1% to the Department of Justice for assistance programs for victims of Federal crime; and 4.5% to the Secretary of Health and Human Services for grants under the Children's Justice Act (CJA) for programs that improve the handling, investigation, or prosecution of child abuse cases. Of amounts in the Fund above $100 million, the first $5.5 million goes to the Secretary of Health and Human Services for CJA programs, and the remaining money to States for grants to eligible crime victim assistance programs.[3]

The victim compensation money available in the Fund is used under present section 1403 of VOCA to reimburse eligible State crime victim compensation programs for 35% of what they spend to compensate victims. To be eligible for that reimbursement, a State crime victim compensation program must (1) compensate crime victims for medical expenses and loss of wages resulting from the crime and must reimburse the survivors of the victim for funeral expenses; (2) promote victim cooperation with the reasonable requests of law enforcement agencies; (3) not use VOCA funds to supplant State funds otherwise available to provide crime victim compensation; (4) compensate nonresidents of the State on the same basis as State residents; (5) compensate victims of federal crimes on the same basis as victims of State crimes; and (6) provide the Attorney General with any information reasonably required.

Present section 1404 of VOCA directs the Attorney General to make, from the 45 percent of the Crime Victims Fund available to States to aid eligible crime victim assistance programs, an annual grant to each State of $100,000 plus an additional amount on the basis of population. The chief executive of the State is responsible for making grants from that money. The chief executive, however, can make grants from money received under section 1404 only to an eligible crime victim assist program.

A victim assistance program is eligible for a grant under section 1404 of VOCA if the program meets five criteria. First, the program must be operated by a public agency or a non-profit organization (section 1404(b)(1)(A)). The second criterion, in section 1404(b)(1)(B) of VOCA, requires that the program demonstrate either a track record of "effective services" plus financial support from sources other than the Crime Vitims Fund, or else substantial financial support from sources other than the Crime Victim Fund.[4] The third criterion for an eligible program, in section 1404(b)(1)(C) of VOCA, requires the program to utilize volunteers. The fourth criterion (section 1404(b)(1)(D) requires the program to promote efforts in the community to aid crime victims, and the fifth (section 1404(b)(1)(E) that it assist victims in seeking compensation benefits.

These criteria, particularly the second and third, seek to ensure that a crime victim assistance program receiving a grant from Crime Victim Fund money will be well-established and firmly based in the community, and therefore capable of providing long-term, high quality services. Thus, a program that has received grants under section 1404 should not lose that grant simply in order to provide seed money for a new program. Providing grants to help start a new program is a secondary objective of VOCA.

Services to crime victims span a wide range, from insuring that victims receive timely notification about the various proceedings in the process of presecuting the person accused, to counselling to help the victim overcome the emotional trauma of the victimization. While all victims services are worthwhile, some services are more directly related to the emotional healing and recovery of the victim than others.[5]

Since there is not enough money in the Crime Victims Fund to permit funding of all victims services, VOCA ensures that services that directly affect the health and well-being of victims receive priority in the use of Crime Victims Fund money. Thus, while the State chief executive has considerable discretion under section 1402(d)(2) of VOCA in making grants to eligible programs, the chief executive must, under section 1404(a)(2)(A) of VOCA, give priority to certain types of programs—rape crisis centers, domestic violence shelters, and child abuse programs.[6] This requirement seeks to ensure that a substantial portion of each State's victim assistance grant under section 1404(a) will be used to sustain and maintain vitally important crisis intervention services, tailored to the specialized needs of a given victim population, that are provided on a 24-hour per day basis.

The vast majority of witnesses at the Criminal Justice Subcommittee's hearings testified to the special needs of women and children victimized by crime and the need to retain the current priority requirement of section 1404(a)(2), citing the "well documented needs" of such victims, the "proven track records" of programs in this area, and the fact that these victim populations are "the least empowered and the most susceptible to intimidation and fear." [7]

Under present section 1404(c) the Attorney General can make grants for (1) "training and technical assistance services to eligible crime victim assistance programs," and (2) "financial support of services to victims of Federal crime by eligible crime victim assistance programs." However, not more than 50 percent may be used for grants for the first purpose, and not less than 50 percent for the second.

Section 7121. Victims of Crime Act of 1984 Reauthorization

Section 7121(a) amends section 1402 of VOCA to (1) establish a new sunset date for VOCA, (2) make funds available to the judiciary to enable the judiciary to establish and operate a computerized fine receipt system, and (3) increase the cap on the Crime Victims Fund.

New subsection 1402(c)(2) calls for VOCA to sunset on September 30, 1994. New subsection 1402(c)(1)(B) raises the current cap of $110 million on money that may be deposited in the Crime Victims Fund. Under new subsection 1402(c)(1)(B), the cap will be $125 million for fiscal years 1989 through 1991, and $150 million for fiscal years 1992 through 1994.

New subsection 1402(c)(1)(A) makes money available to the judiciary so that the judiciary can carry out its functions under 18 U.S.C. 3611 and 3612. This money does not come from the Crime Victims Fund itself. New subsection (c)(1)(A) makes available to the judiciary the first $2.2 million received above the cap. Thus, for fiscal years 1989 through 1991, the judicial branch will receive the first $2.2 million from collections of penalties and fines above the cap of $125 million. For fiscal years 1992 through 1994, the judicial branch will receive the first $2.2 million from collections of penalties and fines above the cap of $150 million.

Section 7121(b)(1) amends section 1402(d)(2) of VOCA to provide for the distribution of money in the Crime Victims Fund in excess of $110 million. Of money deposited in the Fund above that amount, 47.5% will be made available to eligible State crime victim compensation programs under section 1403; 47.5% will be made available to States for grants to eligible crime victim assistance programs under section 1404(a); and 5% will be made available to the Department of Justice for providing services directly to victims of Federal crime under section 1404(c)(1)(B).[8]

Section 7121(b)(2) makes a technical amendment to section 1402(d)(2)(C).

Section 7122. Victims Assistance Amendment.

Section 7122 amends section 1404(a)(2) of VOCA to add a new requirement that a State chief executive certify that funds will be made available for grants to programs that serve "previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime." New section 1404(a)(2)(B) authorizes the Director of the Office for Victims of Crime, after consultation with State and local officials, to provide guidelines to implement this provision that allow flexibility to States to determine which programs to fund.

The term "underserved populations of victims of violent crime" is left undefined in order to give the chief executive of a State flexibility to determine, under the circumstances of the State, what populations of crime victim might be underserved. Such a determination cannot be made simply by looking at the numbers of victims of a given type of crime. The type of services required by the particular population of victims and the impact of those services upon their physical and mental well-being must also be considered. Programs which offer counseling and 24-hour crisis intervention provide services that can significantly affect the well-being of the victim being served. Such programs should receive funding before those that do not provide such services.

The Senate-passed bill contained a provision similar to new section 1404(a)(2)(B). During the debate on the Senate bill, it was indicated that it was intended that that provision be interpreted to require a chief executive to use at least 10% of the State's funds under section 1404 for those programs. The clear language of the provision in the Senate-passed bill did not require that, however.

Such an interpretation was unacceptable, and a provision with that interpretation would not have been agreed to. The language of new section 1404(a)(2)(B) imposes no requirement upon the chief executive of a State to allocate a specified minimum percentage of Crime Victims Fund money to programs serving "underserved populations of victims of violent crime". We agreed to new section 1404(a)(2)(B) with no intention that the provision be interpreted to impose such a minimum requirement. The chief executive is constrained, however, in the maximum that can be spent on such programs by the priority requirement of section 1404(a)(2)(A) of VOCA. The total of funds spent on "underserved" populations may not exceed funds spent on each of the priority populations.

Section 7123. Establishment of Office for Victims of Crime.

Section 7123 amends VOCA to add a new section (1411) to establish the Office for Victims of Crime as a bureau within the Justice Department, to be headed by a Director appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. New section 1411 gives the Director the authority to make VOCA grants. The Director reports to the Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Justice Programs to ensure coordination with other Office of Justice Program agencies.

Section 7124, Grants for Indian Country.

The Children's Justice Act of 1986 (CJA) made federal money available to States to establish programs to improve the handling, investigation, or prosecution of child abuse cases. To fund such programs, CJA provided for the use of money in the Crime Victims Fund.

Due to the significant problem of child abuse on Indian reservations, section 7124 amends section 1402 of VOCA to designate 15 percent of the Crime Victims Fund money allocated for CJA programs to assist Indian tribes (as defined by section 4(b) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, Pub. L. No. 93-638). This 15 percent must be used by the Department of Justice in consultation with the Department of Health and Human Services and the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Money for Indian tribes must be granted for exactly the same purposes as other CJA funds: to improve the investigation, prosecution, and handling of child abuse cases in the criminal justice system. The remaining 85 percent of the CJA fund continues to be administered by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Section 7125. Other Amendments to the Victims of Crime Act.

Section 7125 makes several amendments to the crime victim compensation part of VOCA.

Section 7125(a) adds new requirements that a State crime victim compensation must meet in order to be an eligible crime victim compensation program. First, section 7125(a) adds new paragraph (6) to section 1403(b) of VOCA to require that a State compensation program compensate State residents who are victims of eligible crimes that occur in another State that does not have a victim compensation program. Section 7125(a) also amends section 1403(b) of VOCA to add new paragraph (7) requiring that an eligible State crime victim compensation program not deny compensation to a victim because of (1) the victim's familial relationship to the offender, or (2) because the victim shares a residence with the offender. New paragraph (7) permits an eligible compensation program to establish reasonable regulations to prevent the unjust enrichment of the offender.

The language of new paragraph (7) differs from the similiar provision in the Senate bill, which prohibited a program from denying compensation to a victim who lived with the offender "at the time of the crime." The Senate agreed to drop the phrase "at the time of the crime" and thereby broaden the prohibition of new paragraph (7). Thus, an eligible crime victim compensation program cannot refuse to compensate a victim who may still be living with the offender, merely because of that fact. The program may, however, refuse to compensate the victim if compensating the victim would unjustly enrich the offender.

Section 7125(b) amends section 1403(a) of VOCA by raising from 35 percent to 40 percent the level at which a State with an eligible victim compensation program will be reimbursed for what it spent to compensate crime victims in the previous year.[9]

Section 7125(c) amends section 1403(b) of VOCA to require that an eligible compensation program compensate victims of drunk driving and domestic violence. This provision may require that a State revise its laws in order to make drunk driving and domestic violence compensable crimes.

Some 36 States already compensate many victims of drunk driving, although some of those States limit their awards to more serious cases. The costs of compensating victims of drunk driving should not pose a heavy burden on State compensation programs, since the vast majority of drunk driving victims are reimbursed for their losses through private automobile insurance, State uninsured motorist funds, or civil judgements against offenders.

Regarding domestic violence, some 34 States currently deny compensation to domestic violence victims simply because they are related to, or cohabitate with, the offender. As a result of such statutory and eligibility guidelines, victims of domestic violence may have received an inequitable distribution of victim compensation funds.

Section 1403(b)(1) and 1403(d)(3) as amended require the States to drop blanket "family exclusions", to treat domestic violence as a criminal act, and to evaluate domestic violence claims with the same standards and procedures applicable to claims based on other forms of criminal conduct. Thus, the victim of domestic violence must be required to cooperate with the reasonable requests of law enforcement agencies, and the program can deny the victim compensation if the offender would be unjustly enriched by the award. In drafting guidelines to prevent unjust enrichment in claims involving domestic violence, crime victim compensation programs are encouraged to consult with domestic violence programs which are especially skilled in understanding the complexities inherent in domestic violence.

Section 7125(d) clarifies the wording in section 1403(b)(5) of VOCA, which requires that a program compensate victims of Federal crime occurring within the State on the same basis as victims of State crime.

Section 7126(e) removes an obsolete provision.

Section 7126. Treatment of Eyeglasses.

Section 7126 amends section 1403(d) of VOCA to require that eligible victim compensation programs cover loss of eyeglasses and other corrective lenses at compensable medical expenses.

Section 7127. Virgin Islands as State.

Section 7127 amends section 1404(d)(1) of VOCA to include the United States Virgin Islands as a State for purposes of determining the size of the victim assistance grant under section 1404.

Section 7128. Allocation to States.

Section 7128 amends section 1404(a) of VOCA to alter the formula for determining a State's victim assistance grant under section 1404. Present section 1404 of VOCA directs the Attorney General to make, from the 45% of the Crime Victims Fund available to States to aid eligible crime victim assistance programs, an annual grant to each State of $100,000 plus an additional amount on the basis of population. Section 7128 raises the base amount to $150,000 for fiscal years 1989 through 1991, and to $200,000 for fiscal years 1992 through 1994.

Section 7129. Transition Rule.

Section 7129 establishes a transitional period for States to revise their laws to meet new requirements enacted in the legislation. Programs currently eligible will continue to be eligible for VOCA grants until October 1, 1990. After that date, programs must comply with the new eligibility requirements to receive VOCA funds.

Section 7130. Retroactive Transfer to Fund.

Section 7130 provides that funds collected from criminal fines and penalties between October 1, 1988 and the effective date of this Act will become part of the Crime Victims Fund.

FOOTNOTES

1. The Subcommittee on Criminal Justice held three hearings on VOCA during the 100th Congress, receiving testimony from more than twenty witnesses. The vast majority of the witnesses at these hearings supported a permanent reauthorization of VOCA and the removal of, or a substantial increase in, the cap on the Crime Victims Fund.

2. Acting Associate Attorney General Frank Keating, Department of Justice, press release, September 29, 1988.

3. This formula resulted from the Children's Justice Act of 1986 (Pub. L. No. 99-401, § 102.). VOCA, as originally established, provided for a cap of $100 million, with money in the Fund distributed as follows: 50% of the Fund was to go to eligible State crime victim compensation programs; 45% to States for grants to eligible crime victim assistance programs; and 5% to the Department of Justice for assistance programs for victims of federal crime. The Children's Justice Act raised the cap on the Crime Victims Fund to $110 million and revised the distribution formula.

4. See 130 Cong. Rec. H12085 (daily ed. Oct. 10, 1984).

5. Not all activities by organizations that style themselves as helping victims are "services" for the purpose of VOCA. For example, an organization that exists "to mobilize victims and their allies to establish public conviction that [a given type of crime] is unacceptable and criminal" may engage in such activities as coalition formation, Congressional testimony, demonstrations, and grassroots organizing. Such activities would not be services to victims within the meaning of VOCA and could not be supported with VOCA money.

6. The Department of Justice currently defines the programs that are to receive priority more broadly, considering any program which serves a wide variety of victim populations, including one of the priority populations, as a program that is to receive priority. As a result of that definition, Justice Department statistics may overstate the number of programs that are receiving money from the Crime Victims Fund under section 1404 that serve principally the three priority groups of victims.

The Subcommittee on Criminal Justice has received information that some programs serving the priority groups have been told that, in order to receive a grant from a chief executive under section 1404, those programs must expand to provide service to all crime victims. This would be inconsistent with VOCA, which does not explicitly or implicitly impose such a condition. Indeed, that condition would serve to undercut the policy behind section 1404(a)(2), which recognizes that the rape, child abuse, and spouse abuse victims require specialized services and requires that programs serving those victims receive priority in the distribution of Crime Victim Fund money under section 1404.

7. See Hearings on Victims of Crime Act before the Subcomm. on Crim. Justice of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 100th Cong., 2d Sess. (publication forthcoming) (testimony of David T. Austern, on behalf of the American Bar Association, September 30, 1987; Susan Mooney, National Coalition Against Sexual Assault, October 6, 1987; Patricia Cuza, Michigan Office of Crim. Justice, December 11, 1987; Kathleen Quigley, Office of the Prosecuting Attorney, Detroit, MI, December 11, 1987; and Debbie Frederick, Sexual Assault Information Network of Mich., December 11, 1987).

8. Grants under section 1404(c)(1)(B) of VOCA are for "the financial support of services to victims of Federal crime victim assistance programs."

9. Section 1403(a)(2) of VOCA requires, if funds do not allow for each eligible program to receive the full 40%, the percentage is reduced, but each program receives the same lower percentage.

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the adoption of the conference report on the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act, and I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this historic legislation.

Mr. Speaker, illegal drugs are inundating our country, corrupting our youth and destroying the very fabric of our society. The approval of this new comprehensive measure will mark a turning point in our war against this threat to our country, because this bill will give our law enforcement officials the necessary support to stem the rising tide of illicit narcotics flooding our Nation.

As a former New York City police officer, I am deeply saddened and angered over the cold blooded killings of two more of New York City's finest this past Tuesday night. Both killings apparently were drug related. My heart goes out to their families and loved ones. Officers Christopher Hoban and Michael Buczek are the latest victims in our Nation's battle against the sleazy drug lords and their filthy trade. The heinous actions of last Tuesday are very painful reminders that we are in a war, and we must have the resolve to take the necessary steps to win this war. If we fail to do so we will lose control of our future and destroy the fabric of our society.

The legislation before us today provides the needed ammunition in our fight. I am particularly pleased the conferees have agreed to maintain what I believe is one of the most vital aspects of this legislation: The death penalty for drug-related killings. This provision is similar to a measure I sponsored during the 100th Congress, and which I wholeheartedly support.

Mr. Speaker, it saddens me that some have made a blatant partisan issue out of the drug problem and the tragic deaths of our law enforcement personnel who are out in the streets protecting our way of life. I hope we can push aside these political concerns and refrain from making this most serious of issues simply another campaign topic. The tragedy of illegal narcotics is not a Democratic issue or a Republican issue, it is a national concern. We must unite in support of this effort to rid our Nation of illicit drugs once and for all.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support for H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. Although there is no one approach that will solve our drug problems or win the crusade against drug abuse, I am confident that H.R. 5210 is another significant step in the right direction.

Today, with national attention focused on the issue of drug abuse, public awareness and concern about this problem is at an all time high. Consequently, many eyes throughout this country will be focused on the actions that we take here today.

The Omnibus Drug Initiative Act is a good bill with many important elements. However, we here in this body must never forget that no one aspect of this fight is more essential to success, than the long-term commitment from Congress to put its money where its mouth is by fully funding the programs authorized in H.R. 5210!

I am proud to represent the 12th Congressional District in Congress. But, south Florida is the entry point for a significant portion of the drugs coming into the United States, including 70 percent of the cocaine. Certainly, we cannot hope to stem this flow without giving our local law enforcement people the help they so desperately need. This financial commitment will make a big difference in their ability to interdict effectively.

We can win the fight against drugs, and giving adequate resources to our men and women on the front line is an important part of this effort. I urge passage of H.R. 5210.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, the drug epidemic is taking a terrible toll in our communities. I am strongly committed to the fight against drugs, and have supported strong antidrug abuse legislation. I join my colleagues today in supporting, but with reservations, the House and Senate compromise on the major antidrug abuse initiative (H.R. 5210) of the 100th Congress.

The final compromise package tackles the drug problem by beginning to shift the emphasis on the war on drugs from law enforcement, to education and rehabilitation. It funds a number of programs that are of particular interest to Los Angeles: Provides desperately needed funds to combat gang-related drug trafficking and abuse; enhances customs, border patrol, and Coast Guard interdiction activities; provides money to train teachers who conduct drug abuse education and prevention programs; establishes a goal of providing treatment to all substance abusers wishing to cure their addiction, and provides a substantial increase in funds for treatment; and creates a Cabinet level "drug czar" position to coordinate a national drug control program.

When the House bill was originally considered on the floor in September, it did not have my support. Several provisions which would have gravely damaged our constitutional freedoms were included in this bill. The House and Senate compromise however, either removes the constitutionally suspect provisions entirely, or provides for additional legislative or judicial review before they are implemented.

Unfortunately, a Federal death penalty provision, which remains in the compromise bill, is not an antidrug abuse measure and will not deter drug-related crime. I am strongly opposed to the death penalty on both moral and practical grounds. However, the drug crisis is so great and the need for tougher laws and more Federal aid to combat drug abuse in our neighborhoods so important, that I am voting for this bill.

The compromise legislation is not a complete solution for the enormous problems associated with drug addiction. No one bill will banish illegal drugs from our schools, homes, and offices. Additional Federal funds are critically needed if this legislation is to work. But this bill is a step in the right direction. It establishes a national antidrug strategy, and constitutes a solid commitment by Congress to fight the pervasive problem of drug abuse.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I will not be present to vote on the drug bill, H.R. 5210. Were I present I would vote "aye."

Mr. LELAND. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my great satisfaction that the legislation we are considering tonight will remedy a historical inequity in the allocation of Federal funds for substance abuse and mental health programs.

Since 1981, when the alcohol, drug abuse, and mental health block grant was created, a full one-third of our States, including my own State of Texas, have been denied their fair share of Federal dollars for prevention and treatment programs. In 1982, the Department of Health and Human Services issued a study concluding that the allocation of Federal funds did not reflect the needs of the populations to be served or the fiscal capacity of States to provide critically needed assistance programs. We have known about this inequity since 1982, yet until tonight, we have never been so close to reaching our goal of providing funds on the basis of need.

In June of this year, the Energy and Commerce Committee reported legislation, which I was proud to sponsor. This legislation, H.R. 4907, revised the allocation of Federal dollars for substance abuse and mental health services. The allocation formula, known as the fairness formula, was carefully crafted by the General Accounting Office and reflected both the population in need and the fiscal capacity of the States.

The language of H.R. 4907 was approved by the House of Representatives as a provision of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. The legislation we are considering tonight, includes a formula consistent with the language of H.R. 4907.

I want to thank Chairman DINGELL and Chairman WAXMAN for their leadership and support of this long overdue reform. In addition, I commend the members of the Sunbelt Caucus, under the leadership of my colleague from Houston [Mr. ANDREWS] for their assistance in generating widespread support for the "fairness formula" in the Congress.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my strong support for this final version of the drug bill. This measure stands as one of the most important accomplishments of the 100th Congress. As I indicated in my comments on September 7 in this House, the bill adds important new weapons in the fight against drug smuggling and drug abuse.

The drug epidemic is a scourge on our country, and it is our most pressing domestic problem.

The bill is the product of many Members of this House and the other body. I am proud of the contribution that both of my committees made. The House Banking Committee added important new powers for our law enforcement agencies in tracking the flow of drug-tainted money, which finances the extensive smuggling and sales networks that take these illegal substances from remote parts of the world and deliver them to our communities, to corrupt our youth. By requiring the reporting of large cash transactions, law enforcement will be able to identify the hidden conspirators in the financial world who abet the crimes committed by drug kingpins.

Our Foreign Affairs Committee drafted provisions to attack the international drug cartels. By setting up a new multinational antinarcotics force, we will combine our resources with those of other nations who share our commitment to fighting drugs. This assistance will include armaments for drug task forces, new passport controls to catch drug couriers, and stepped up research on chemicals to be used to eradicate drug crops.

Today, we send this bill to the President. It is a good step. Now it is up to the executive branch, working with the State governments, to take these tools and put them to work in defending the American people against the spread of drugs.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the International Narcotics Control Act of 1988. I want to salute my colleague, BEN GILMAN, for his successful efforts in helping to make this legislative initiative a reality.

This bill represents the hard labor of over 10 committees of Congress. All of us should be proud of this comprehensive and effective piece of legislation.

A number of months ago, Chairman FASCELL, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, joined me in launching a bipartisan effort to craft an effective Foreign Affairs Committee section to the drug bill which later passed the House.

Through commendable staff work and close cooperation with the Senate in efforts to reconcile the two versions of the drug bill, the bill before us retains many of the bipartisan antinarcotics provisions introduced by our committee. Many Republican drug bill initiatives have also been included, in whole or in part, in this bill.

On the international side, this legislation encourages the President to study the possibility of creating a multinational force to conduct operations against international illegal drug smuggling organizations in this hemisphere.

The bill also earmarks nearly $1 million to arm antidrug aircraft and also provides $3.5 million for weapons and ammunition for Latin American and Caribbean antinarcotics police units. Other significant provisions permit DOD training of Latin American antinarcotics police units to help them better combat the increasingly violent narco-terrorists in many South American countries. Military assistance is also authorized for equipment that will be used in antinarcotics efforts in Colombia.

The bill also permits Export-Import Bank financing of military sales for antinarcotics purposes. Many of our out-gunned allies in South America desperately need this type of help.

On the domestic front, this omnibus legislation provides increased funding for key agencies in our Government's war on drugs, including the Drug Enforcement Agency, Coast Guard, Customs Service, Immigration and Naturalization Service, and Federal Bureau of Investigation.

My own original amendment to the bill called upon our intelligence community to more actively use covert action in the war against drugs. Although slightly modified in its final form, the Broomfield amendment tells the executive branch that if America is to win the battle against illegal drugs, we must use all available tools to aggressively shut down the international drug traffickers.

While I am concerned about the availability of funding for this impressive bill, I believe that this legislative initiative adds more arrows to America's quiver to battle the international illicit drug traffickers and the drug menace here in America.

I urge all of my colleagues in the Congress to support this bill.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Anti-Substance Abuse Act of 1988, includes a reauthorization of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984.

The Victims of Crime Act [VOCA] takes funds recovered from people who have broken the law and gives them to crime victims. Crime victims receive these funds in the form of grants from victim compensation programs, and services from victim assistance programs. In the 4 years since its enactment, VOCA has returned to victims of violent crimes over $100 million derived from criminal fines, penalty assessments, and forfeitures.

The Victims of Crime Act also provides funds for the Children's Justice and Assistance Act of 1986 [CJAA], of which I was a principal cosponsor. The CJAA was designed to improve the handling and investigation of child abuse cases. This act is especially important in view of the Department of Health and Human Services' recent report that, nationwide, the annual number of confirmed incidents of the sexual abuse of children tripled between 1980 and 1986. This finding confirmed an earlier report by the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, which I chair, that child abuse reports rose 55 percent between 1981 and 1985. The select committee also found that States reported increasingly serious and complex cases.

Although 2 years have passed since the CJAA was enacted, the administration only recently awarded the first grants under the law. Thus, we have yet to learn anything about the act's effectiveness. The reauthorization of VOCA serves to continue funding for the CJAA and thus ensures that we will at last be able to receive the benefits of the act and to review its results.

The VOCA reauthorization language in H.R. 5210 does not simply continue the CJAA and the victim assistance and compensation programs. The VOCA reauthorization also includes several excellent amendments, thanks to the forceful leadership provided by my friend Congressman JOHN CONYERS, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Criminal Justice. I also commend Congressman PETER RODINO, the esteemed chairman of the full committee, for his leadership not only on VOCA's reauthorization but also on its original enactment in 1984.

I am pleased that the bill sets aside CJAA funds for grants to Native American tribes to improve the handling and investigation of child abuse cases on reservations. Reports of child abuse on reservations are rapidly increasing, just as they are across the United States as a whole; H.R. 5210 will ensure that tribes will now be able to use CJAA grants to establish the same types of multidisciplinary programs that the CJAA is now beginning to fund at the State level. This is an important first step, but I want to stress that the problem of the abuse of Native American children is enormous and will have to be revisited more comprehensively addressed by the next Congress. In particular, we must respond to the pressing need for direct services for Native American child abuse victims, an area not covered by CJAA programs.

A second amendment contained in the VOCA reauthorization, which will become section 1404(a)(2)(B) of the act, requires that State programs make funds available for grants to programs which serve previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime. As explained when the other body passed the drug bill, that provision was intended to require a chief executive to use at least 10 percent of the State's funds under section 1404 for these programs.

As one who was involved in the negotiations between the House and the other body, I would like to make clear for the record that, in that form, this provision was not acceptable. The representatives of the other body verbally agreed, however, that such a requirement was not mandated by the statutory language, and that it would not insist upon such a requirement. The House concurrence in this provision—with some changes in language—was with the explicit understanding that the provision did not bind the chief executive to allocate any given percentage of crime victims fund money to programs serving "previously underserved populations of victims of violent crime." The chief executive is constrained, however, by the priority requirement of section 1404(a)(2)(A).

Furthermore, the new section 1404(a)(2)(B) authorizes the Director of the Federal Office of Victims of Crime, after consultation with State and local officials, to provide guidelines to implement this provision that allow flexibility to States to determine which programs to fund. This new section of VOCA does not define the term "underserved populations of victims of violent crime" in order to give the chief executive flexibility to determine, under the circumstances of the State, what populations of crime victims might be underserved. Such a determination cannot be made simply by looking at the numbers of victims. The type of services required by the particular population of victims and the impact of more services upon their physical and mental well-being must be considered. Programs that offer counseling and 24-hour crisis intervention provide services that can affect significantly the mental health of the victims who receive that service.

A program serving a priority population such as victims of rape or child abuse, can be considered a program serving an "underserved" population for the purposes of this section. For example, if programs for such a population have been inadequately funded through VOCA grants and if the chief executive determines that there are a high number of priority victims who need the services of that program, the chief executive could consider such a program as serving an "underserved" population.

Another important element of the VOCA reauthorization in H.R. 5210 is that, whereas the original Senate language reauthorized the act for only 4 years and did not raise the spending ceiling, the amended bill reauthorizes VOCA for 6 years and increases the ceiling substantially.

And finally, perhaps the high point of the VOCA reauthorization, H.R. 5210 includes an additional important amendment to VOCA that will end the virtual exclusion of victims of spouse abuse and drunk driving from receiving victim compensation funds.

Currently, roughly 34 States apply special, burdensome qualifications and exclusions to victims of spouse abuse when considering applications for victim compensation funds. The result of these exclusionary policies has been that in both 1986 to 1987, victims of spouse abuse received less than 1 percent of the Federal funds awarded for victim compensation. Further, the Department of Justice reports that those spouse abuse victims who did receive compensation grants were compensated at a lower dollar-per-claim rate than that of any other specific victim category.

The VOCA reauthorization language requires States receiving funds under the act to compensate victims of domestic violence and drunk driving; and it prohibits such States from denying compensation on the basis of the victim's cohabitation or familial relationship with the offender.

Some victim compensation programs have expressed concern that compensating victims of domestic violence who continue to live with the offender might serve to benefit or enrich the offender. Therefore, the VOCA reauthorization permits victim compensation programs to issue guidelines that would prevent the unjust enrichment of the offender.

As one of the parties who helped draft this language, I would like to state for the record that such guidelines should avoid penalizing a battered woman for reconciling with the abuser. Rather, they should follow the example of States, such as Michigan, that have utilized third-party payments in order to balance successfully the goals of making compensation benefits available to battered women and preventing the unjust enrichment of the offender. By paying medical and other compensable bills directly, the programs need not worry that the offender will benefit from the compensation award to the victim.

Third-party payments are a constructive way of eliminating the threat of unjust enrichment to the offender where the victim has either reconciled with the abuser or continues to share a residence with him. When the victim has ceased to cohabit with the offender, no third-party payment is necessary, as the threat of unjust enrichment has been removed. Indeed, when the victim has ceased to cohabit with the offender, no restrictions on compensation are to be applied to victims of spouse abuse and other forms of domestic violence that do not apply to victims of other violent crimes.

I commend Congressman HAMILTON FISH, JR., the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, for his inspired leadership in writing this important, humane, and just amendment to the Victims of Crime Act.

Yet, while the Victims of Crime Act [VOCA] deserves our praise and support, I would like to use the occasion of its reauthorization to draw the attention of my colleagues to some problems that have arisen in the administration of the act.

VOCA specifies that, when awarding victim assistance grants, States must give priority to specialized programs serving victims of sexual assault, spouse abuse, and child abuse. In the debate over VOCA in the other body back in 1984, the author of this priority language explained that "victims of sexual assault and child abuse often have special needs that require treatment by persons with special training." Congressman RODINO, the floor manager of the conference bill in the House, described the specialized, priority programs as offering "the provision on a 24-hour-per-day basis, of vitally important crisis intervention services by rape crisis centers and child and spouse abuse counseling services."

In drafting administrative guidelines for victim assistance programs, however, the Office of Justice Programs ignored the congressional intent represented by the VOCA priorty language. The resulting guidelines, issued October 23, 1985, undermine the intent of Congress by redefining "priority programs" to include generic victim assistance programs that do not primarily serve one of the priority victim populations.

As a result, many programs serving the priority victims have consistently experienced difficulty in obtaining victim assistance subgrants. That problem has now been compounded by the growing efforts of States to comply with revisions in the guidelines, issued April 1, 1987, by forcing rape crisis centers, child abuse programs, and shelters for battered women either to provide generic crime victim assistance or to forfeit their Federal funding.

Thus, the latest Office of Justice Programs guidelines have the effect, though perhaps not intentionally, of permitting States to bar from receiving VOCA funds exactly the type of specialized programs that Congress was most interested in supporting.

In order to explain more specifically the connection between the Federal guidelines and the problems being encountered by these specialized programs in obtaining adequate Federal subgrant support, I am submitting for the RECORD the following analysis prepared by the National Network for Victims of Sexual Assault. This analysis clearly demonstrates that the VOCA guidelines issued by the Office of Justice Programs should be revised as soon as possible—certainly before the end of the 1989 crime victim assistance grant cycle—to bring them into line with the intentions of Congress.

The revisions should include:

First. A definition of priority programs that reflects more accurately the congressional intent and legislative history behind the Victims of Crime Act priority language (§ 1404(a)(2)(A));

Second. A clear statement that it is not the intent of Congress that these priority programs be required to provide generic victim assistance in order to remain eligible for crime victim assistance subgrants; and Third. A clear statement that it is not the intent of the Congress that subgrants to rape crisis centers, domestic violence shelters, and child abuse programs be withheld by States because of other funding options which may be available to these programs.

I urge my colleagues on the Judiciary Committee to give their attention to this important problem.

AN ANALYSIS OF DOJ/OJP GUIDELINES: CRIME VICTIM ASSISTANCE GRANTS

BACKGROUND

During Congressional passage of the 1984 Victims of Crime Act, language was added by Senate floor amendment requiring states to give priority in the awarding of crime victim assistance grants to programs serving victims of sexual assault, spouse abuse, and child abuse. Although the amendment was opposed by the Administration, it was accepted and approved by Members of both Houses of Congress.

The Congressional record regarding this amendment clearly defined the reasons for the prioritization, the nature of the programs intended to receive priority, the services which should be provided the priority victims, and gave direction as to how priority was to be given (i.e., in funding decisions). Nonetheless, in the development of the subsequent administrative guidelines, the Office of Justice Programs (OJP) ignored much of that record and focused on perceived ambiguities. This resulted in the 1985 publication of guidelines which redefined priority programs and created minimum spending levels; levels which have been widely interpreted by states as mandatory. Prior to the issuance of the guidelines, public comment was solicited. Comments regarding these features of the proposed guidelines were critical, but the rules were adopted anyway.

In 1987, OJP revised and reissued the VCA guidelines without soliciting public comment. The revised guidelines also undermine the priority language in several ways: 1) by urging states to reduce or eliminate VIC spending on services to the priority victim populations, 2) by promoting new selection criteria unfavorable to programs specializing in services to victims of sexual assault, domestic violence, and child abuse, and 3) by resurrecting language from an Administration bill introduced, but not enacted by Congress, and setting it forth as the primary objective of the Congress. These features of the guidelines are unsupported by the legislative record; and, in many instances, in direct contradiction of Congressional intent.

As a result of the Department's 1985 action, programs specializing in services to priority victims have consistently experienced difficulty in obtaining federal crime victim assistance grants. Now, the problem has been compounded by the growing efforts of states to comply with the 1987 directives by forcing rape crisis centers, domestic violence shelters, and child abuse programs to give up their specialization and provide generic victim assistance services, or forfeit their eligibility to receive federal funding.

The analysis which follows identifies the specific provisions of the 1985 and 1987 guidelines which are in conflict with federal law and/or Congressional intent. Attached to this analysis are copies of the pertinent legislative record, the original and revised OJP guidelines, and memoranda illustrating the problems arising as a result of the OJP guidelines.

GUIDELINES ANALYSIS

Priority Programs Defined:

The Victims of Crime Act sets forth states' requirements regarding compliance with the statutory provisions of § 1404[a][2][A] as follows:

"[The chief executive shall] certify that priority shall be given to eligible recipient organizations for programs providing assistance to victims of sexual assault, spousal abuse or child abuse."

What constitutes an "eligible recipient organization" was defined by the author of this statutory language as organizations which provide specialized services by specially trained service providers:

"Victims of sexual assault and child abuse often have special needs that require treatment by persons with special training. Rape victims, for example, must face twisted social attitudes that shift blame to the victim. Counseling these victims requires sensitivity to the psychological and social problems that victims experience as a consequence of these attitudes. Similarly, treatment of abused children demands an understanding of children's psychological and social development . . . severe problems often arise when abused children are treated by adults who do not understand the perspective of a child." [Sen. Arlen Specter, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, S10541, August 10, 1984]

The floor manager of the Conference Bill enacted by Congress was even more explicit in identifying who these specialized programs are; and, what specialized services they provide:

". . . the provision on a 24 hour per day basis, of vitally important crisis intervention services by rape crisis centers and child and spouse abuse counseling services." [Mr. Rodino, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, H12087, October 10, 1984]

In guidelines published in the Federal Register on October 23, 1985 the DOJ Office of Justice Programs (OJP) defined eligible recipient organizations as follows:

"A program should be included in a priority category only if a principle mission of the program is to serve that particular category of priority victims, unless and to the extent the State determines that other programs are providing adequate services of a similar nature to priority victims in the community in question." [43016 Fed. Reg., Oct. 23, 1985 and 10424 Fed. Reg., April 1, 1987].

From the above, the differences between the OJP definition of an eligible recipient organization and that of Congress can be seen. Congress defines such an organization as one wich provides specialized services, while OJP permits generic victim assistance programs to be categorized as "priority programs" for purposes of grant prioritization and accounting. This amounts to a redefinition of the term "priority program". Further, under the OJP definition, it would not even be necessary for a program to provide the requisite crisis intervention services in order to be considered a priority program. According to OJP, for example, "A prosecutor's office could demonstrate that rape victims were among the victims it planned to serve through its new 'court assistance' program [and] establish a special liaison with rape crisis centers to qualify as a priority program." [43014 Fed. Reg., Oct. 23, 1985]. In other words, under the OJP definition of a "priority program" the federally funded program may provide only minimal services to the priority victim categories and refer them to unfunded programs to actually receive crisis counseling.

The consequence of OJP's redefinition of eligible recipient organizations, is that states have been encouraged to disregard the quality of services provided priority victim categories in favor of quantifying the number of grants awarded as "priority." For example, rules promulgated by the State of Texas specifically do not require grantees to provide the requisite 24 hour crisis intervention services. Therefore, the special needs of priority victims are not being met as intended by Congress.

Further, the OJP redefinition has created an artificial accounting system for priority grants, whereby states may appear to be heavily funding "priority programs" when, in fact, it is not possible to track actual spending on priority victim categories within a generic victim assistance context. Nonetheless, this accounting has provided the rationale for the Administration's call for repeal of the priority language, and its exhortation to states to "consider other funding options that may be available or in place for these priority population areas." [10422, Fed. Reg., Apr. 1, 1987.] That is, reduce or eliminate crime victim assistance grants to serve the priority victims. (North Carolina, for example, has complied by restricting grants for services to sexual assault, domestic violence, and child abuse to two grant years.)

CONCLUSIONS/RECOMMENDATIONS

By permitting generic victim assistance programs to be categorized as "priority programs", and by exempting these programs from providing the services most needed by the priority victims, the guidelines violate the spirit and intent of Congress regarding implementation of § 1404[a][A] of the VCA.

The OJP guideline language regarding program selection criteria should be repealed and amended to reflect the specialized services criteria established by Congress. This would not impede the ability of generic victim assistance programs to obtain grants; but, would ensure that (a) the services needs of the priority victims are met; and (b) permit an accurate assessment of federal funds spent on services to the priority victims.

"Comprehensive Services" Established as a Project Selection Criteria.

In the revised 1987 guidelines OJP adds a new section entitled "Discussion of the Intent and Purpose of the Act." In this section a "primary objective" of the federal law is described as "to promote the development of comprehensive services to all victims of crime. . . " [10422, Fed. Reg., Apr. 1, 1987]. The meaning of "comprehensive services" is not defined in this section. The language does not exist in the conference bill enacted by the Congress. It is lifted from S.2423, the Administration-backed bill which preceded the Conference bill. As such, the language is null and void as a matter of law and cannot be presumed to be a primary objective of the act. Nonetheless, OJP guidelines expand upon the "comprehensive services" concept in the new project selection criteria as follows:

"A third factor which may be considered in establishing [grant award] selection criteria in a State is the availability of a comprehensive "system" of services for crime victims, i.e., the coordinated cooperative efforts of several agencies and/or organizations to provide a continuum of services and support to all crime victims from the time the crime occurs throughout the criminal justice process." [10423, Fed. Reg., Apr. 1, 1987]

This criteria suggests that eligible programs must provide generic victim services and be a part of an interactive system of victims services. It reflects the old Law Enforcement Assistance Administration's victim assistance model wherein federal grants went to a local criminal justice agency which, in turn, established a "system" (i.e. some form of interagency communication) and referred victims out to other programs which provided services the grantee did not.

If implemented by the states, this criteria would render specialized victim assistance programs ineligible for federal funds unless they are able, and willing, to give up their specialization. In addition, this could also result in favoritism toward programs serving major urban areas, where routine interagency networking is most likely to occur, over programs serving rural and less-populated areas where distance and cost limit the amount of interagency coordination which can occur. Further, if grants are limited to programs serving communities where a "comprehensive 'system' of services" is in place for all victims of crime, few programs nationwide serve communities meeting this criteria.

The grant eligibility criteria established by Congress in § 1404[b][1][D] simply requires the "promotion, within the community served by program, coordinated public and private efforts to aid crime victims." This language is clear and simple, and expresses Congressional interest in having grant recipients seek to improve, to the extent possible, the community's response to the victims it serves. It does not suggest favoritism toward generic victim services nor services to urban areas as implied by the guidelines.

CONCLUSION/RECOMMENDATION

The OJP guidelines go beyond the letter and intent of the law in several ways. First language not enacted by the Congress is adopted to promote a victim services concept which is at variance with Congressional intent that States "be free to fund organizations of their choice" [S10541, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Aug. 10, 1984]. Second, they disregard the Congressional interest in encouraging States to expand upon the victim assistance models now in place by increased support for those programs. And, finally, they impose upon the States program eligibility criteria not found in federal law.

Because the "comprehensive services" language used by OJP in the "Discussion of The Intent and Purpose of the Act" and "Project Selection" sections of the revised guidelines is not found in law, all references to a "comprehensive 'system' of services" or "comprehensive services" should be stricken from the guidelines. [See Sutherland, Statutory Construction, 4th ed.].

Because States have begun complying with these guideline provisions by forcing specialized victim assistance programs to assume responsibility for generic victim services to remain eligible for federal grant assistance, the legislative record of the VCA reauthorization should show that this was not the intent of the Congress.

Mandatory spending levels

Both the original and revised OJP guidelines set forth the following option for complying with § 1404[a][2][A] of the VCA:

"[the chief executive may] Allocate at least ten percent of the total crime victim assistance funds granted to the State to each of the three priority categories . . ." [43015, Fed. Reg., Oct. 23, 1985].

This compliance option has been interpreted widely by states as being a "ten percent mandatory spending requirement" (see 13 TexReg 539, Jan. 29, 1988 for example) on funding for each of the three priority victim categories. The intent of OJP to keep funding of priority services to a minimum is further demonstrated by guideline language encouraging states to consider "Other funding options" for the priority areas. [10422, Fed. Reg., Apr. 1, 1987].

A review of the legislative record shows that Congress did not establish restriction on funding of priority programs. It specifically did not establish percentages:

[the priority language] "is to ensure that at least some funds will be used to address these crucial problems, but does not require any specific percent of the funds to be spent." [Sen. Strom Thurmond, S10537, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Aug. 10, 1984].

"Nor does the bill establish a definite percentage of funding that must be given to these programs. . ." [Sen. Arlen Specter, S10541, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Aug. 10, 1984].

The record does show, however, that Congress intended the funding to be "substantial" rather than minimal:

"The requirement that the chief executive give 'priority' to these programs thus will ensure that a substantial portion of the State's grant under section 1404[a][2] will be used to support the provision, on a 24 hour per day basis, of vitally important crisis intervention services by rape crisis centers and child and spouse abuse counseling services." [Rep. Peter Rodino, H12087, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Oct. 10, 1984].

CONCLUSION/RECOMMENDATION

By establishing mandatory minimm spending levels as an option for compliance with § 1404[a][2][A], OJP has encouraged states to minimize spending on services to women and children; and, issued guidelines which are in violation of Congressional intent that States be free to fund in the amounts of their choice.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. Several sections of this bill are particularly important to the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. They are: Subtitle L, which deals with the U.S. Coast Guard; sections 6075, 6076, 6079, and 6080, which create legal defenses for the innocent owners of conveyances seized for drug violations and expedited procedures for them to get their conveyances back; chapter IV of title X, which appropriates funds for the Coast Guard; and section 7364, which improves the Coast Guard's access to the customs forfeiture fund. I would like to take a few moments to outline and expand upon the major points of these sections.

First, subtitle L contains the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee's contribution to the drug bill. This subtitle contains provisions which are designed to improve the Coast Guard's drug interdiction efforts by: one, providing protection from suits for naval commanding officers for drug law enforcement actions taken while Coast Guard law enforcement detachments [LEDETS] are aboard; two, amending the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act to provide for improved drug law enforcement; three, clarifying the Coast Guard's role in maritime air surveillance and interdiction; four, directing the Secretaries of the Treasury and Transportation to enter into an agreement concerning Great Lakes drug interdiction, and also by encouraging the Secretary of State to negotiate an agreement with Canada on Great Lakes law enforcement; and five, authorizes appropriations. A more complete discussion of the background and congressional intent behind these provisions can be found in House Report 100-814, part 1.

Second, chapter IV of title X makes supplemental appropriations for the Coast Guard in the sum of $16 million for operating expenses and $100 million for acquisition, construction, and improvements [AC&I]. I am disappointed that the Appropriations Committee chose to earmark the funds appropriated for AC&I. This may have the undesirable effect of forcing the Coast Guard to spend money on lower priority projects. I would also like to point out that the amount appropriated for each of these accounts is significantly less than the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee has authorized.

This fact is particularly important with regard to the Coast Guard's operating expenses account, because the money which is appropriated is earmarked for fuel, spare parts, supplies and materials, and related logistics, but not personnel. Since subsection (B) authorizes an increase of 500 military personnel for drug interdiction missions and the funds are not appropriated for that purpose, I am concerned that the Coast Guard may interpret this to mean that I must move personnel from other areas to comply. This is absolutely not what the committee intended when this language was developed. In fact, the committee specifically stated in subsection (c) that the Coast Guard was not authorized to deploy any additional personnel for drug interdiction unless additional appropriations are made. The committee's concern is that personnel will be transferred from areas of the Coast Guard, for example, search and rescue, marine safety, marine environmental protection, and aids to navigation, which are not directly related to drug interdiction. Unfortunately, this is exactly what happened this year when the Coast Guard closed several search and rescue stations while it was expanding its drug interdiction operations in the Bahamas. Let me say very clearly that the language of subsection (c) is intended to prohibit any future actions of this type.

Third, section 2935 amends the customs forfeiture fund to improve the Coast Guard's access to it. Language similar to this was reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in H.R. 4658, and I strongly support this section. Basically, this section will require the Customs Service to reimburse the Coast Guard for expenses related to vessel seizures and also to have access equal to that of the Customs Service for other qualified expenditures—for example, equipping vessels or aircraft for law enforcement functions.

Sections 6075, 6076, 6079, and 6080 provide important legal defenses for the innocent owners of conveyances seized for drug violations and two expedited procedures for those owners to get a quick decision on whether the Government will forfeit the conveyance. These provisions are in direct response to the administration's zero tolerance policy. First, let me say that I support the general premise of this policy, that is, that drug use should not be tolerated. However, I believe that this policy has had little effect on drug users, but has had a significant effect on many innocent vessel owners. In many of the zero tolerance seizures that I am aware of, the owner of the vessel had no knowledge of the drugs on board, but he was liable to lose his vessel, while the person in possession of the drugs often received a small fine or had the charges dropped. Moreover, after the subcommittee on Coast Guard and navigation's hearing on the zero tolerance policy, I learned that an innocent person did not have a legal right to get his property back or an expedited procedure to get his case heard. Since that hearing, I have been working to provide innocent people with these important protections.

Section 6079 directs the Secretary of the Treasury and the attorney general to prescribe regulations for an expedited administrative procedure for seizures under sections 511(a) (4), (6), and (7) of the Controlled Substances Act, section 595 of the Tariff Act of 1930, and section 2 of the Act of August 9, 1939, for violations involving the possession of personal use amounts of drugs. My good friend ROBERT DAVIS, the ranking member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, will discuss the provisions of this provision in detail and I would like to say that I concur with his interpretation of these provisions. I would, however, like to highlight several of the provisions of this section.

First, the provisions of this section prevent an owner from having his conveyance forfeited "if the owner at any time had or should have had, knowledge or reason to believe that the property in which he claims an interest was being or would be used in a violation of the law, that he did what reasonably could be expected to prevent the violation." This section does not require an owner to take extraordinary steps to prevent the illegal use of his conveyance. I am aware that, as a result of the zero tolerance policy, the customs service is attempting to force commercial fishing organizations to sign agreements which require owners to, among other things, search their vessels prior to departure and return to port, drug test employees, and establish a written policy in support of zero tolerance. I consider these types of requirements to be extraordinary and not reasonable steps.

Second, this procedure requires that an owner must have acted in a normal and customary manner to ascertain how the property was going to be used before he can get the property back. Again, normal and customary does not include the types of steps that the customs service has included in the fisheries agreements. Normal and customary means what a reasonable person would do to determine the use of his property, or what is the normal business practice.

This subsection (d) directs the attorney general and the Secretaries of the Treasury and Transportation to develop regulations which implement a summons in lieu of seizure for commercial fishing vessels. This is designed to lessen the economic harm of the seizure of a fishing vessel for personal use amounts of drugs. I would like to point out that the application of this section is not limited to only commercial fishing vessels. There are several other types of commercial vessels which I believe could be covered, including small charter sport fishing vessels.

Section 6080 establishes an expedited procedure where an owner of a conveyance seized for a drug violation can file a cost bond and petition the attorney general for a determination on the owner's innocence. The attorney general may release the conveyance, retain it, or decide that there is not enough evidence and release the conveyance. If the attorney general decides to keep the conveyance, a claim in district court must be filed within 60 days. This basic language was in the House passed drug bill and I strongly support it.

Finally, sections 6075 and 6076 create legal defenses for innocent owners in each of the three statutes under which conveyances are seized for violations of the drug laws. The langauge of these defenses is virtually identical to the existing defenses for the innocent owners of real property, and moneys, negotiable instruments, securities, or other things of value, except that the concept of willful blindness is incorporated. This is intended to prevent the owner of a conveyance from closing his eyes to a violation. I believe that these provisions will provide significant legal rights for the innocent, but still ensure that the guilty will still be punished.

Mr. Speaker, this is generally a good bill and I urge all members to support it.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, the Government Operations Committee has maintained constant vigilance over our Government's antidrug policies, programs, and operations.

As a result of the committee's hearings, the need for a full-time drug czar became clear. The House decided in favor of a full-time law enforcement director when it adopted the Brooks amendment to H.R. 5210.

The conference report blends the best of the House and Senate drug czar provisions.

First, in addition to being full-time, the czar will be a cabinet-level official. This rank will provide the institutional clout necessary to lead the wide-ranging Federal antidrug efforts.

Second, the conference report maintains the unity of supply and demand reduction. The drug war must be fought on both these fronts. Drug availability must be reduced while demand is reduced. Only in this way will we win the war.

Finally, the drug czar will develop a comprehensive antidrug strategy. This strategy will concentrate the power of the U.S. Government behind a full-fledged effort to vanquish this drug scourge from our land.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank Chairman JACK BROOKS for his leadership on this issue. Along with Senator JOE BIDEN and Senator BILL ROTH, we were able to negotiate a drug czar provision that the entire Congress can support.

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge my colleagues to pass H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. The drug situation in the United States today has reached intolerable proportions. The war against drugs must not only be fought in the trenches but in the board rooms of the American banking institutions as well. Recent Federal indictments in Tampa, FL, of some 80 individuals and a U.S. bank on money laundering charges only reemphasizes the need for strong legislation directed at curtailing the problem of drug trafficking in America today. Mr. Speaker, I would direct my colleagues' attention to title VI of the bill—the Money Laundering Control Amendments of 1988.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly believe that title VI of this act addresses the problem of drug trafficking and the massive sums of cash upon which that industry thrives. To win this "war on drugs," we must cut off all avenues in which drug traffickers slip their cash into the mainstream of American commerce. We cannot allow financial institutions, insured by the U.S. Government to be used—whether by design or accident—as a laundromat to clean the tainted money of drug dealers. When it comes to drug related money, title VI of this bill goes a long way in saying to the dope dealers "American banks are closed to your business"!

Title VI shuts down the accessibility of the U.S. banks to the fraudulent practices and contrivances of those trafficking in illegal drugs in America today. It accomplishes this in three major ways. First, financial institutions in certain geographic areas will be targeted, at the directive of the Secretary of the Treasury, for monitoring where money laundering is suspected and where it is occurring in transactions below the $10,000 reporting threshold. Second, it prohibits all financial institutions from issuing a negotiable instrument to any individual in connection with a transaction that involves cash of $3,000 or more unless that individual fulfills the necessary identification and the banks comply with recordkeeping requirements.

Third, it attacks insider fraud and abuse. The Right to Financial Privacy Act was never intended to be a protective shield for self-dealing insiders to hide behind. This legislation is directed to show zero tolerance of any abuses from an insider or anyone acting in concert with an insider of a financial institution when it is related to the manipulation of banking resources for the criminal laundering of drug money.

Mr. Speaker, the members of the Banking Committee strongly believe that these and numerous other provisions contained in title VI of this bill will shut tight the leaking faucet in which tainted drug money has been profusely seeping into the American stream of commerce.

In addition to title VI, title IV of this bill, the section on restricting laundering of U.S. currency, is also designed to combat the drug money issue on an international level. That title authorizes specific sanctions against those foreign institutions which are identified as a conduit for drug-related U.S. currency. While I have some reservations about how the provision will be administered, I believe title IV does address a most serious problem involving the use of U.S. currency worldwide in the financing and trafficking of illegal drugs.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the ranking minority member of the committee, Mr. WYLIE and other members of the committee—both majority and minority—particularly Mr. BARNARD and Mr. TORRES for their full cooperation for the work the committee has done under title VI.

Only with this kind of participation and full cooperation can we truly combat effectively the drug epidemic that unfortunately engulfs this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I want to include for the RECORD an exchange of letters between Chairman FASCELL and me regarding our understanding concerning a provision of this legislation.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, October 20, 1988.

Hon. Fernand J. St Germain,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am informed of your concerns regarding Section 4502 of S. 2852, the Senate-passed version of the omnibus anti-drug legislation for 1988. In keeping with present practice generally and with the Rules of the House of Representatives, I wish to confirm that the existence of this provision, and its possible enactment into law, will not alter the jurisdiction of our respective committees over legislation relating to international currency transactions.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,
DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON BANKING, FINANCE AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, October 21, 1988.
Hon. DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Affairs, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As you know, section 4502 of S. 2852 urges the Secretary of Treasury to negotiate for the creation of an international agency to combat money laundering. The Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs has substantial concerns about ths section.

The Committee will not object to the inclusion of section 4502 in the Omnibus Anti-Drug Legislation on the condition that there is agreement between our two committees that the existence of this provision and its possible enactment into law will not alter the jurisdiction of our respective committees over legislation relating to international currency transactions.

Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

Sincerely,
FERNAND J. ST GERMAIN,
Chairman.

Mr. WORTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the omnibus drug bill. Many of my colleagues have spoken eloquently on the many important provisions of this bill, and I believe the harsh reality of the drug menace deserves the attention that we are lavishing upon it.

I am pleased that a particular concern of mine is addressed in the bill—that of the laundering of drug money. For too long, the drug kingpins have been able to stand off from afar and pull the strings—reaping the profits while others pay the price in blood and ruined lives. Worse yet, this money is often "cleaned up" and then recirculated into otherwse legal enterprises. Thus, the drug lords continue to build their empires—like a large pyramid, built on the lives of countless unfortunates.

It is the height of injustice that these crooks have long gone undetected, while we intercept drugs at the border and arrest drug pushers. I'm glad that we are interdicting record amounts of drugs at our borders. The improvements in interdiction are commendable and will pay dividends. Likewise, we need to keep after the drug pushers.

But, if we do not go to the source, to the drug lords who are pulling the strings and raking in the profits—we will fail in the battle we are fighting.

Until recently, it has been nearly impossible to nail the "big guys." The one very promising avenue we can pursue is to catch them as they try to launder their profits. Recently, we have seen that it can work. The money laundering provisions passed in 1986 have already begun to bear fruit. They have enabled us to go right to the source. Operation C-Chase is the most recent example of how enhanced enforcement procedures can lead to a big payoff in fighting the drug cartels. In this case, agents were able to go after the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, in an effort which netted 87 persons, including several high-ranking members of the Medellin cartel. This is the most significant money laundering case ever brought by our Government, but it is only a small part of what we can accomplish if we give the enforcement agents and prosecutors the right tools.

There are several new money laundering provisions included in this bill, which will toughen up the law so that we can keep the pressure on the guys at the top. One important improvement is that banks will now be required to transfer information on transactions of over $3,000 to the appropriate Federal agencies, instead of the previous level of $10,000. Up to this point, drug dealers have been able to launder large amounts of money by depositing and withdrawing cash just below the $10,000 level.

In addition, two amendments which I sponsored have been included in the bill, and will provide commonsense improvements to the process of investigating and prosecuting money laundering drug kingpins.

In the first case, the requirement that notice be given to a subject of an investigation will be waived. Currently, a Federal agency can obtain relevant data on a suspected drug dealer from a financial institution without notifying the suspect. However, if those records are simply transferred to the Attorney General, the suspect must then be notified. This unwarranted notification, enables drug dealers to obstruct the investigation in limitless ways * * * or, as we have often seen * * * simply flee the United States, never to return.

Second, an amendment was adopted to modify a time-consuming and expensive requirement that prosecutors must physically present all documentary evidence to the grand jury. Sometimes, this means actually busing the grand jury to the location at which the records are kept, since the volume of the records is simply too large to transport. The new provision will still require that such records be presented, but if they are too large, the prosecutor may provide the jury with a description of the contents. This will greatly help our overworked prosecutors and will also save the Government money.

I would like to note for the record that under the section entitled "restrictions on laundering to United States currency," that the criteria included in subsection (e) are intended to identify countries that may be characterized as drug money laundering havens.

These new money-laundering provisions are commonsense changes, which will be potent weapons in our battle against the "merchants of death." Of course, this bill is not the end of the drug story. It is only another step forward in our battle against the menace of drugs. It is a battle that we can win however, and I wholeheartedly endorse this approach.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, when the drug bill, H.R. 5210, passed the House, I almost voted against it. My reluctant affirmative vote was only a vote to keep the bill alive for future improvement. As the bill now comes to us for final passage, I believe it is improved, and I am more comfortable in voting for it now.

However, it would be a real mistake to overvalue the effect of this bill. Control of drugs is an enormous, complex task. Just coordinating the many Federal agencies, and the State and local agencies involved, is a major endeavor.

It is also expensive to stop drug use. Because of budget restrictions and because this bill was an election year afterthought, passed after all the money had been spent, there are precious few funds—only a half a billion dollars—to fund the ambitious provisions of H.R. 5210. This bill has real substantive values, but it can also be fairly described as an over promise.

One of the positive nongermane Senate amendments is the child pornography section. It represents another improvement in the Federal laws to stamp out child pornography.

Another area of improvement is in the handgun control provision. I found the McCallum amendment which replaced the so-called Brady amendment in the House bill unsatisfactory. I also found the Brady amendment unsatisfactory. The final version, improved by the conference committee, seems to me to be a reasonable way to proceed. I am pleased that this provision has rescued me from a Hobson's choice.

In summary, even though this is a $2½ billion bill with $500 million in financing, it is a positive step forward. In the next Congress, I hope we start our drug bill sooner than 3 months before election, but whenever we do start, it will be from a higher base because of the passage of H.R. 5210.

Mr. DAVIS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5210 and urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate that we are concluding the 100th Congress with passage of the omnibus drug bill, H.R. 5210. This is a significant piece of legislation reflecting many hours of hard work and dedication. I am especially proud of the sections of the bill that increase the Coast Guard's authority to enforce our country's drug laws. Included among these is a section to increase the effectiveness of law enforcement on the Great Lakes.

In this bill, $100 million is appropriated for the Coast Guard to purchase much needed helicopters, cutters and radar equipment to increase the Coast Guard's effectiveness in the drug interdicting effort. An additional $16 million is appropriated for Coast Guard operating expenses to purchase additional fuel, supplies, and maintenance. With these additional dollars the Coast Guard will be able to increase its drug interdiction effort without cutting back on other essential Coast Guard missions, such as search and rescue, fisheries law enforcement, and environmental protection. Last year, the Coast Guard cut over $40 million in facilities and services to increase drug interdiction. This is an unacceptable situation to the people who depend on the Coast Guard. I am glad that the funding in this bill will prevent any further cuts in Coast Guard services.

Mr. Speaker, as we conclude the business of this Congress we should reflect on all that has transpired during those 2 years on the issue. "Drugmanship" is very popular. It is, however, nothing more than political "one-upmanship" to see who can out-tough, outspend, or otherwise out-do a political opponent. It means that many have been trying to blackmail those in public service on generalities and classic "guilt trips" because we are soft on drugs. Frankly, I was elected to my position by the people and I will not be blackmailed by anyone for any reason. I will not forsake my public responsibilities to them and work to insure that the rule of law and not the rule of rhetoric prevails. Although tempting, we cannot hide behind campaign slogans. Extremism in pursuit of even the loftiest goal cannot supersede our overriding duty to practice fundamental fairness. Blind disregard of those principles that our forefathers carefully preserved in our Constitution and the Bill of Rights is simply un-American.

Some Members of Congress and administration officials have adopted the attitude that if you question any of their positions, you are, by definition, opposed to the goals of the antidrug program. I believe that all of us are vitally concerned about the problem of drugs in America. Clearly, some of us are especially interested in the interdiction of drugs being brought into this country on or over the high seas. No doubt, there will be disagreements on which approach provides better authority or results. However, there is no question that all who are involved in these efforts are motivated soley by the desire to address the problems as effectively as possible.

However, with the extremely high level of controversy which has surrounded the administration's so-called "zero tolerance" policy we have lost the support of a significant portion of the population who also question its effectiveness and fairness. Lets face it, that's why we are enacting these provisions today because, in the minds of the public, this is a Government policy gone awry. It symbolizes unfairness. It punishes the innocent and lets the guilty go free. It gives the Government a license to steal, rather than guidance to carry out an effective program. Drug abuse is too great a problem to be sidetracked by these issues.

Now, lest I be misunderstood, let me just say that we do not want to send the wrong signal. We want to send a signal to law enforcement that we support their efforts within the context of the rule of law. We want to send a signal to those who use or traffic in drugs that we think it is wrong and must stop. But most important, we want to send the signal to the American people that their Government is under control and will treat them fairly.

I would like to further explain three sections of this bill that concern forfeiture proceedings. Section 6079 of this bill requires the Attorney General and the Secretary of Treasury to prescribe joint regulations to provide an expedited administrative forfeiture proceeding for certain property seized by Federal authorities for violations of the drug laws involving possession of personal use quantities. Owners of property sezied under section 511(a)(4), (6), and (7) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 881(a)(4), (6) and (7)); section 596 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1595a(a)); and section 2 of the act of August 9, 1939 (53 Stat. 1291; 49 U.S.C. App. 782) may petition the Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury for release of the property. The procedure must minimize the adverse impact upon owners of conveyances caused by prolonged detention. The procedure must provide for a final administrative determination within 21 days of seizure of the property or provide a procedure by which a property owner may obtain release of the property pending a final determination.

Under the procedure provided in this section, the agency official making a final determination in the forfeiture proceeding shall immediately return the property to the owner or interested party if the owner establishes a valid, good faith interest in the seized property; that the owner did not know of or consent to the violation; that the owner had no knowledge or reason to believe that the owner's property was or would be used in a drug violation. If the owner had or should have had knowledge or reason to believe that the property was being or would be used in a violation, the owner must establish that the owner did what reasonably could be expected to prevent the violation. Paragraph (D) of this subsection requires that the property owner act in a normal, customary manner to ascertain how the property will be used in order to have the property returned under this subsection.

To establish that the owner did what reasonably could be expected to prevent the violation, an owner need only show that he acted reasonably under the circumstances. The phrase "what reasonably could be expected" does not require that the owner take any type of "step" or "precaution" established by regulation. In fact, setting up a checklist of steps to be taken would only serve as a roadmap to evade the law. Recently, the U.S. Customs Service and the Department of Transportation have published lists and attempted to negotiate agreements containing "reasonable steps" or precautions that commercial and recreational vessel operators should take in order to obtain favorable consideration by the Customs Service in forfeiture remission and mitigation proceedings. These "precautions" include ensuring that all business advertising contains a zero tolerance statement, providing drug education for the crew, establishing a written company policy in support of the administration's "zero tolerance program," and reporting, via radio telephone, to the Coast Guard any possession or use of illegal drugs discovered on board the vessel.

The U.S. Customs Service draft "agreements" for commercial fishing vessel operators and personnel contain clauses requiring a search of the vessel prior to leaving any port, which may include the use of dogs trained for narcotics searches. If contraband is found, the agreements would require that the Customs Service be notified and the contraband be turned over to the appropriate authorities. A similar exercise would be required prior to arrival at a U.S. port. The agreements would also require that vessel operators turn over to Customs agents conducting investigations "relevant identifying data" regarding crewmembers and applicants for employment.

None of the so-called positive steps, reasonable steps, or reasonable precautions contained in these documents may be required by the regulations issued under this section. The Attorney General and Secretary of the Treasury may not use the phrase "reasonably expected" in this subsection to impose any type of action on property owners in order to generally deter others from drug use. While we welcome voluntary action on the part of private individuals to deter drug abuse and violations of the law and encourage it in fact, this amendment may not and should not be used to require them to take these actions as a condition of obtaining release of their property. While law-abiding citizens should not condone drug abuses, enforcement of the drug laws is a governmental law enforcement responsibility, which should not be shifted to private, law-abiding citizens through this civil forfeiture procedure.

Paragraph (D) of this subsection requires that owners of property act in a normal and customary manner to ascertain how their property will be used. Normal and customary practice is that which is reasonable in the industry involved. In some instances, such as with the commercial fishing industry, there may be no nationwide practice. Again, this language may not be used to require any particular type of action on the part of property owners designed to generally deter drug use as circumstances vary in each case. It does not allow the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to establish standards for an industry or group. Nor does it allow the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to use this language to force businessmen or other individuals through regulations issued under this section to adopt a set of "steps" or "precautions" to deter drug use as a condition to obtaining release of the property from the Government.

Simply put, we are saying through these provisions that the Government expects individuals to use basic common sense and that they will be held accountable accordingly.

Subsection (d) of this section requires the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe regulations requiring the issuance of a summons to appear in lieu of seizure of a commercial fishing industry vessel for violations involving the possession of personal use quantities of a controlled substance. This summons is required when the violation is committed during times connected with fishing operations.

This section is not intended to limit the authority of the Attorney General, and the Secretaries of the Treasury and Transportation to employ this procedure in other situations when immediate seizure has an unreasonable impact upon the owner of property.

The administrative procedures in section 6079 apply to those forfeiture cases in which the owner of the property eligible for the procedure does not post a claim and cost bond. Another administrative procedure for owners of conveyance seized for drug-related offenses who file a claim and cost bond is established under sectional. Under this section, the Attorney General must make a decision on the owner's forfeiture proceeding within 20 days of the date on which the owner's petition is filed.

Sections 6075 and 6076 of this bill establish a defense in forfeiture proceeding for innocent owners of conveyances seized by the Federal agencies for drug-related offenses.

Under this defense an innocent owner of a conveyance must establish that the offense was committed without the knowledge, consent, or willful blindness of the owner. Willful blindness addresses the cases of individuals who have demonstrated a conscious purpose to avoid the truth. The concept of willful blindness is essentially part of the proof of lack of knowledge. For this reason, the defense for innocent owners of conveyances seized for drug-related offense is virtually identical to the existing defenses for innocent owners of real property, and money, negotiable instruments, securities, or other things of value under paragraphs (6) and (7) of section 511(a) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 811(a) (6) and (7)).

Mr. Speaker, we have a drug bill that is tough but fair and I urge prompt passage of H.R. 5210.

Mr. KYLE. Mr. Speaker, it is now a full 2 weeks past our target adjournment date, and we still have no final agreement on two of the most important pieces of legislation this Congress has had before it: The omnibus drug bill and the technical corrections tax bill. Many of us returned to Washington this week, breaking numerous longstanding commitments in our districts, to vote on those measures.

It now appears that we will not have a vote on the drug bill until much later tonight. Commitments in Arizona, which I simply cannot miss, require that I catch a plane before that vote occurs, and I regret that very, very much.

I voted in favor of the drug bill on September 22, and it was much tougher than anything we can expect from the conference committee. For example, the House-passed bill would ease the exclusionary rule and allow evidence obtained without a search warrant to be used in court under a "good faith" exception. That important provision was dropped. Another provision, over which the conferees are haggling, is one which would deny certain Federal benefits to drug users. That should remain intact.

A key provision, which I understand will remain in the bill, is a Federal death penalty for drug kingpins. I've cosponsored separate legislation to establish a death penalty, and I am pleased it will be included, and that we will finally see it enacted. Were I able to be here to vote on the conference report, I would strongly support it.

This legislation is vital to winning the war on drugs. Mr. Speaker, I urge you to bring it to a vote now, and give the American people a fighting chance against the drug problem.

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, drug abuse is probably the most serious social problem in the Nation's territories and commonwealths.

It causes crime so vicious and pervasive that it has changed the very nature of once-safe island societies.

Violent crime rates in the insular areas actually range to many times the national average. And police officials estimate that one-half to three-quarters of these crimes may be drug related.

But the insular drug problem is not just a local problem; it is a national problem.

Lethal drugs are abused in the insular areas largely as a byproduct of international trafficking. Drugs come across an ocean to a U.S. island primarily to be transhipped across the ocean again to the United States.

The territories and commonwealths are the Nation's insular borders in the Caribbean and the Pacific. They are also the least protected of the Nation's borders.

Federal surveillance is spotty even where it is required. Local surveillance is often nonexistent where insular governments have the responsibility.

Drug traffickers know this. They use the insular areas to smuggle their deadly goods into the large and lucrative U.S. market.

This is too big a problem for insular governments to handle on their own. They lack the resources, capability, and international approach needed to fight it.

An administration report to Congress on the insular drug-abuse problem required by the U.S. Insular Areas Drug Abuse Act of 1986 that we have just received clearly identifies problems.

Over the past several years, there has been a dramatic transshipment through the insular areas.

Local enforcement officials lack the training and equipment to deal with the growing smuggling.

Federal enforcement staffing has not kept pace with the increasing smuggling. This fact is particularly apparent in the Virgin Islands where an explicit threat exists.

Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are the most ideal geographical areas for narcotics smuggling into the States by both air and sea.

Specific intelligence of narcotics trafficking in the Pacific basin is limited because there are few enforcement personnel in these areas.

Along with our other colleagues from the insular areas, I sponsored the U.S. Insular Areas Drug Abuse Act of 1986 to help insular drug-control efforts and to take needed Federal action.

But so far implementation has been spotty. In the case of the islands I represent, the Virgin Islands, the administration made me fight hard to get the authorized $4 million for drug-control efforts. It hasn't stationed the intended patrol vessel in St. Croix, although it has finally agreed to station the aerostat radar intended for our region.

In fact, it was only this week that the administration gave us the first required annual report on the insular drug problem even though it is time for the second.

So, as chairman of the Insular and International Affairs Subcommittee, I sponsored the Insular Areas Drug Amendments of 1988, again with our other insular colleagues.

The amendments would continue what was begun in the 1986 law by tightening it up and building upon it.

They would allocate more money, training, and equipment for insular efforts and dedicate these resources on a long-term basis. Assistance for prevention and treatment as well as law enforcement would be provided for locally developed—but federally approved—comprehensive plans.

With bipartisan support, these provisions were included as subtitle C of title V of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988 as passed by the House.

Although Chairman JOHNSTON of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee recognized the need for these provisions, the other body did not include them in its amendment. Instead, the Senate amendment merely recognizes the need for assistance proposed in the House bill.

The substitute would correct this deficiency. Subtitle D of title IX includes the House provisions with a few minor modifications proposed by Chairman JOHNSTON.

I am grateful for the support I have received for this compromise from the distinguished majority leader, Mr. FOLEY; the distinguished minority leader, Mr. MICHEL; the distinguished chairman of the full Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, Mr. UDALL; and the subcommittee's distinguished ranking minority member, Mr. LAGOMARSINO.

I also appreciate the cooperation of our other insular colleagues, the distinguished Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico, Mr. FUSTER, and the distinguished Delegate of Guam, Mr. BLAZ, in developing this legislation.

Let me now explain the intent of the substitute in detail.

SHORT TITLE

Section 9301 would be the act's short title: The Insular Areas Drug Abuse Amendments of 1988.

AMERICAN SAMOA

Section 9302 would require the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services to provide appropriate training, technical assistance, and equipment to American Samoa for the enforcement of substance abuse laws and prevention and treatment programs.

It would also authorize $350,000 annually for substance abuse programs in American Samoa to be spent according to a plan approved by the Secretary of the Interior in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services. It would replace a one-time $700,000 authorization.

It would further require the Secretary of the Treasury in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior to provide American Samoa with a vessel to be used in law enforcement. It would authorize $500,000 for this purpose.

GUAM

Section 9303 would require the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services to provide appropriate training, technical assistance, and equipment to Guam for the enforcement of substance abuse laws and prevention and treatment programs.

It would also authorize $500,000 annually for substance abuse programs in Guam to be spent according to a plan approved by the Secretary of the Interior in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services. It would replace a one-time $1 million authorization.

It would further authorize $500,000 for law enforcement equipment for Guam.

NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS

Section 9304 would require the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services to provide appropriate training, technical assistance, and equipment to the Northern Mariana Islands for the enforcement of substance abuse laws and prevention and treatment programs.

It would also authorize $125,000 annually for substance abuse programs in the Northern Mariana Islands to be spent according to a plan approved by the Secretary of the Interior in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services. It would replace a one-time $250,000 authorization.

PUERTO RICO

Section 9305 would authorize $7,000,000 in fiscal year 1989 and $2,000,000 annually thereafter for substance abuse programs to be spent according to a plan approved by the Executive Director of the White House Task Force on Puerto Rico in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services.

It would also require the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services to provide appropriate training, technical assistance, and equipment to Puerto Rico for the enforcement of substance abuse laws and prevention and treatment programs.

VIRGIN ISLANDS

Section 9306(a) would amend the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 to authorize the residents of American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Virgin Islands to be eligible to receive the compensation currently authorized for residents of the States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico under the Victims of Crime Program.

Section 9306(b) would authorize $2,000,000 annually for substance abuse programs in the Virgin Islands to be spent according to a plan approved by the Secretary of the Interior in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services, effective fiscal year 1990.

It would also require the Coast Guard to station a patrol vessel in St. Croix, VI.

It would further require the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services to provide appropriate training, technical assistance, and equipment to the Virgin Islands for the enforcement of substance abuse laws and prevention and treatment programs.

It would finally require the Attorney General to assign necessary personnel in the Virgin Islands for drug law prosecution; and it would authorize $2,500,000 for a substance rehabilitation center in the Virgin Islands.

PALAU

Section 9307 would require the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services to provide appropriate training, technical assistance, and equipment to Palau for the enforcement of substance abuse laws and prevention and treatment programs.

It would authorize $500,000 annually for substance abuse programs in Palau to be spent according to a plan approved by the Secretary of the Interior in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Education, State, and Health and Human Services.

It would authorize the Drug Enforcement Administration, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Secret Service, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the Customs Service to investigate U.S. laws applicable in Palau in cooperation with insular authorities upon request of Palau.

PURPOSES

Section 9308 would amend the purposes of the United States Insular Areas Drug Abuse Act of 1986 to include the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and the freely associated states in addition to the U.S. insular areas; and other abused substances in addition to drugs.

REPORTS

Section 9309 would amend the requirement for annual reports on Federal efforts to prevent trafficking of abused substances in and through the U.S. insular areas to: add the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands; and require the reports to be submitted to Congress not later than October 1 each year.

PERSONNEL

Section 9310 would require the Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration to assign necessary personnel and other resources to the Virgin Islands and Guam for enforcement of narcotics laws in the eastern Caribbean and central and western Pacific regions.

I urge my colleagues to pass the substitute and hope that the other body will accept it. The actions it would authorize and require are essential for tackling the drug-abuse problems that we in the insular areas and our fellow Americans in the States face.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] and clarify further the relationship between the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 and the drug-free workplace provisions which have been included in five bills which passed the House this year which were reported by the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. The acts with Drug-Free Workplace provisions are H.R. 4417, the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act for Fiscal Year 1989; S. 2209, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Authorization for Fiscal Year 1989 and 1990; H.R. 4418, the National Science Foundation Act of 1988; S. 1081, the National Nutrition Monitoring and Related Research Act of 1988; and S. 2470, the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conseration and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988.

Mr. BROOKS and I agree that there be only one drug-free workplace policy governing the agencies and departments of the Federal Government and the contractors and grantees of those organizations. Congress is overwhelmingly in support of the principles set out in the Drug-Free Workplace Act. We in no way intend for this program to be delayed, compromised, or complicated by agencies trying to follow competing or conflicting statutes dealing with drugs in the workplace.

I wish to make it clear that the committee or origin of these provisions, the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, agrees with Mr. BROOKS' conclusion that if the provisions of the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 are met by an agency and its contractors, then that agency and its contractors are to be deemed to be in compliance for all purposes with all drug-free workplace provisions that apply to the agency. The use of this legislative standard means that failure to comply with any additional requirements found in the above acts, which are not found in the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988, shall not be grounds for contesting the award of any contract or grant.

Furthermore, although the passage of a comprehensive policy in the Drug-Free Workplace Act creates a strong presumption favoring a uniform interpretation, I would like to address concerns which have been raised regarding the scope of the miscellaneous drug-free workplace provisions mentioned above. Each provision, as passed, was to be construed narrowly as applying only to the programs covered by the act in which it was included. For instance, the National Nutrition Monitoring and Related Research Act drug-free workplace provisions applied only to the contract and grant programs mentioned in that act; a drug-free workplace provision in the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988 applied only to those programs of the Department of Commerce and the Department of Energy which are specifically authorized by that act. Even these provisions will be superseded and concerns over their breadth will be irrelevant at the time the Drug-Free Workplace Act becomes law.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, section 6182 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 amends section 1957 of title 18, United States Code, which authorizes 10 years imprisonment for engaging in monetary transactions involving criminally derived property. The amendment states that the term "transaction" does not include any transaction "necessary to preserve a person's right to representation as guaranteed by the sixth amendment to the constitution."

As the author of the provision in section 6113 of H.R. 5210, as passed by the House on September 22, I wish to set forth my understanding of why we agreed to a different formulation than that contained in the House-passed drug bill.

Section 6113 would have provided an exception from section 1957 for "monetary transactions involving the bona fide fees an attorney accepts for representing a client in a criminal investigation or any proceeding arising therefrom."

This was a provision in the House version of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986. We concluded that a statute which places attorneys in fear of being prosecuted and imprisoned for learning too much about a client's case, and which thus discourages attorneys not only from taking on clients but also from communicating with them, places an intolerable burden on the constitutional right to counsel and the attorney-client relationship. Moreover this provision was dropped from the final House-Senate compromise in 1986.

In the 1988 bill some members suggested changing the House provision because they were concerned that the House language appeared to speak more in terms of the interests of attorneys than the constitutional rights of citizens. I wish to emphasize my understanding that the language was designed simply to clarify the source of our concern, assuring the protection of constitutional rights, without altering the substantive effect of the House provision.

The original House provision applied to all representation and not just the trial phase. The term "right to representation as guaranteed by the sixth amendment" goes beyond the bare right to counsel at trial and applies at the investigative or grand jury phases of a criminal proceeding—phases which, particularly in RICO, CCE or money laundering cases, can be far more lengthy, complex, and critical than the trial itself.

Finally, I would note my intention that a transaction is "necessary" to protect sixth amendment rights, within the terms of the amendment, when it involves a bona fide fee paid in good faith for legitimate legal representation. This concept of "bona fide fees," as developed recently by the Justice Department in its guidelines governing section 1957, does not include a fraudulent or sham transaction designed to shield the property from forfeiture or hide its existence from governmental investigative agencies. Generally, a transaction is a sham or fraud if there is a scheme or plan to maintain the client's interest (or that of any other person or corporation associated with the client) in the asset or the ability to use it beneficially. U.S. Attorneys' Manual 9-105.410.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, may I simply conclude again by doffing my hat to the distinguished majority leader. As the Members well know, when we came to the final hours of coming to resolution on this matter, it was left to the four leaders in both bodies together with key members from the different committees to put the final product together, and it would never have been done on time and with such great effect as it was without having that group chaired by the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY]. I thank him especially.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

I urge an aye vote for the bill.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 5210, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to make an announcement. Immediately following the vote which will ensue, the Chair expects to entertain the adjournment resolution.

Permit the Chair to express his thanks to all the Members, Democratic and Republican, for their cooperation, their understanding, their friendship. This has been a very productive Congress.

The 100th Congress concludes the first two centuries of this Government with all its faults and its flaws and its mortal imperfections. It has endured, and may it forever endure.

Thanks to you for your help. I hope to see all of you back here again who want to be back here next January.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY].

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

Th yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 346, nays 11, not voting 74, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote.

Mrs. Boxer for, with Mr. Frank against.

Mr. Barnard for, with Mr. Edwards of California against.

Mr. Lantos for, with Mr. Stark against.

So, the motion was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DESIGNATION OF THE HONORABLE THOMAS S. FOLEY TO ACT AS SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE AND TO SIGN ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS THROUGH NOVEMBER 4, 1988

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication:

WASHINGTON, DC.
October 21, 1988.

I hereby designate the Honorable Thomas S. Foley to act as Speaker pro tempore and to sign enrolled bills and joint resolutions through November 4, 1988.

JIM WRIGHT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the designation is agreed to.

There was no objection.

PROVIDING FOR PRINTING AS HOUSE DOCUMENT REVISED ADDITION OF RULES AND MANUAL OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FOR THE 101ST CONGRESS

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 605) providing that a revised addition of the rules and manual of the House of Representatives for the 101st Congress be printed as a House document, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 605

Resolved, That a revised edition of the Rules and Manual of the House of Representatives for the One Hundred First Congress be printed as a House document, and that two thousand additional copies shall be printed and bound for the use of the House of Representatives, of which seven hundred copies shall be bound in leather with thumb index and delivered as may be directed by the Parliamentarian of the House for distribution to officers and Members of Congress.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEE OF TWO MEMBERS TO INFORM THE PRESIDENT THAT THE TWO HOUSES HAVE COMPLETED THEIR BUSINESS OF THE SESSION

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 606) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 606

Resolved, That a committee of two Members be appointed by the House to join a similar committee appointed by the Senate, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses have completed their business of the session and are ready to adjourn, unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as members of the committee on the part of the House to join a committee on the part of the Senate to notify the President that the two Houses have completed their business of the session, unless the President has some other communication to make to them, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

AUTHORIZING SPEAKER TO ACCEPT RESIGNATIONS, APPOINT COMMISSIONS, BOARDS, AND COMMITTEES NOTWITHSTANDING SINE DIE ADJOURNMENT

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the sine die adjournment of the second session of the 100th Congress, the Speaker be authorized to accept resignations, and to appoint commissions, boards, and committees authorized by law or by the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING CHAIRMAN AND RANKING MINORITY MEMBER OF EACH STANDING COMMITTEE TO EXTEND REMARKS IN THE RECORD

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the chairman and ranking minority member of each standing committee and each subcommittee be permitted to extend their remarks in the RECORD, up to and including the RECORD's last publications, and to include a summary of the work of that committee or subcommittee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

GRANTING MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE PRIVILEGE TO EXTEND AND REVISE REMARKS IN CONGRESSIONAL RECORD UNTIL LAST ADDITION IS PUBLISHED

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House shall have the privilege, until the last edition authorized by the Joint Committee on Printing is published, to extend and revise their own remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on more than one subject, if they so desire, and may also include therein such short quotations as may be necessary to explain or complete such extensions of remarks. But this order shall not apply to any subject matter which may have occurred, or to any speech delivered subsequent to the adjournment of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING PRINTING OF REPORTS FILED WITH CLERK FOLLOWING SINE DIE ADJOURNMENT

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, following the adjournment sine die, committees authorized to conduct investigations may be permitted to file reports with the Clerk; and that such reports, and reports on the activities of committees pursuant to clause 1(d), rule XI, may be printed by the Clerk as reports of the 100th Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the Report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4333) "An Act to make technical corrections relating to the Tax Reform Act of 1986, and for other purposes".

PROVIDING FOR ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1988

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 398) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 398

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That when the House and Senate adjourn on Saturday, October 22, 1988, they stand adjourned sine die.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PER DIEM ALLOWANCE FOR NEWLY ELECTED MEMBERS

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I recall a conversation the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] and I had with respect to our returning after the election for organizing of the new Congress, and that under normal circumstances we would be coming back the first part of December; was it not necessary for us to pass a resolution giving us authority paying allowances for the last day or two of November?

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct, and we have been informed by the Committee on House Administration that they intend to provide authority for per diem allowance of the newly elected Members of Congress of both parties beginning, I believe, on the 30th or 31st of November rather than the 1st of December. That matter will be authorized retroactive by the Committee on House Administration.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, do they have authority to make that adjustment in dates without a passage of a resolution?

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that they do.

In any case, we have agreement on this side to whatever is necessary to authorize such payment.

Mr. MICHEL. If the gentleman would refresh my memory, did we pass the resolution that would change the dates for our ceremony with respect to the electoral college?

Mr. FOLEY. The House has acted on that legislation and I believe the Senate has acted or expects to act tonight.

I am informed by the Chair the Senate has acted, and the day is now the 4th of January rather than the 6th of January for a meeting of the two Houses to certify the ballots of the electoral college.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE MAJORITY LEADER

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I would just take a moment to announce to the House that it is our intention to convene the 101st Congress on January 3, 1989. January 4, as just stated, we will be conducting the electoral ballot count. From January 5 to 18 the House will be in January district work period. On January 9 the House will receive the President's budget. January 16 is Martin Luther King's Birthday. January 20 is the Inauguration Day and we expect to return on the 19th, the day before Inauguration Day, for a meeting of the House, and we will announce a further schedule later, but that takes us up to the point of the inauguration of the next President of the United States on which the gentleman and I have some slight disagreement, but in any consequence, that is the day; January 19 is the day we will meet following January 3, 1989.

□ 0130

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, might I inquire as to whether or not we have informed the Members of our mutual agreement with respect to next year's entire schedule?

SCHEDULE FOR 1989

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include the entire schedule in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the schedule will appear in the RECORD at this point.

There was no objection.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO INFORM THE PRESIDENT

The SPEAKER. Does the distinguished committee appointed by the Chair to wait upon the President have a report to render to the House? Has the President been waited upon?

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, your committee appointed to join a committee of the Senate to inform the President that the Congress is ready to adjourn, and to ask him if he has any further communications to make to the Congress, has performed that duty.

The SPEAKER. Does the President have anything else that he suggests we should do?

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, the President has directed us to say that he has no further communications to make to the 100th Congress.

He has also stated to us that he wishes to communicate to Members of both parties that he feels it has been an extremely productive and useful Congress which has had a wide range of achievements, from international trade to welfare reform. Those are the President's words. He said that although there have been differences in the past, he views the efforts of both parties this year to be a matter of outstanding success. He commends the Members on that and wishes them well in the coming year.

The SPEAKER. Does the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois, have anything to add?

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I concur with the majority leader's report. There will be no minority report.

The SPEAKER. I am quite sure that all Members of the House join in wishing to the President of the United States and to Mrs. Reagan a most happy and joyous remainder of this year and a happy and joyous and productive life in their retirement from this enormous office.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, with those words, we are pleased to convey your message to the President, and that completes our message from the President of the United States to you.

EARLY ORGANIZATION OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FOR THE 101ST CONGRESS

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a resolution, House Resolution 607, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 607

Resolved, That any organizational caucus or conference in the House of Representatives for the One Hundred and First Congress may begin on or after November 30, 1988.

SEC. 2. As used in this resolution, the term "organizational caucus or conference" means a party caucus or conference authorized to be called under section 202(a) of House Resolution 988, Ninety-third Congress, agreed to on October 8, 1974, and enacted into permanent law by chapter III of title I of the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1975 (2 U.S.C. 29a(a)).

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECESS

The SPEAKER. Does any Member have anything in the way of business to come before the House at this time? If not, the House will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly, (at 1 o'clock and 34 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

□ 0254

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY) at 2:54 a.m.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S.J. Res. 340. Joint resolution designating November 27 through December 3, 1988, as "National Sir Winston Churchill Recognition Week", to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

S.J. Res. 381. Joint resolution to designate October 30, 1988, as "Fire Safety at Home Day—Change Your Clock, Change Your Battery"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. ANNUNZIO, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that Committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 1133. An act for the relief of Thomas Nelson Flanagan;

H.R. 1490. An act for the relief of Jean DeYoung;
